In time of war or national emergency, the Secretary may order any commissioned officer on the retired list to active duty. While on active duty, a retired commissioned officer shall receive full pay, allowances, and benefits authorized by law, including longevity credit for the time retired. When relieved of active service after recall from the retired list, such commissioned officer shall, unless entitled to be advanced on the retired list with a higher grade or pay under other provisions of law, be retained on the retired list with the grade held at the time of retirement and with retired pay computed on the active-duty pay and increase received at the time of relief from active duty.

§ 241. Recall to active duty with consent of officer

Any commissioned officer on the retired list may, with his consent, be assigned to such duties as he may be able to perform, but no commissioned officer on the retired list who has reached the age of 62 years shall be recalled in time of peace. While on active duty, such commissioned officer shall receive full pay, allowances, and benefits authorized by law, including longevity credit for the time retired. When relieved of active service after recall from the retired list, such commissioned officer shall, unless entitled to be advanced on the retired list with a higher grade or pay under other provisions of law, be retained on the retired list with the grade held at the time of retirement and with retired pay computed on the active-duty pay and increase received at the time of relief from active duty.

§ 242. Relief of retired officer promoted while on active duty

Any commissioned officer on the retired list recalled to active duty who during such active duty is advanced to a higher grade under a temporary appointment shall, upon relief from active duty, if his performance of duty under such temporary appointment has been satisfactory, be advanced on the retired list to the highest grade held while on active duty, with retired pay of such highest grade.

§ 243. Retirement in cases where higher grade has been held

Any commissioned officer who is retired under any provision of sections 230, 231, 232, 233, or 234 of this title, or that provision of section 235 of this title which provides for retirement of officers after 30 years' service, shall be retired from active service with the highest grade held by him while on active duty in which, as determined by the Secretary, his performance of duty was satisfactory, but not lower than his permanent grade, with retired pay of the grade with which retired.

§ 244. Resignation when out of line of promotion

Any commissioned officer who, in accordance with applicable regulations, is placed out of line of promotion may, with the approval of the Secretary, if his commissioned service is less than 10 years, resign from the Coast Guard with 1 year's pay computed at the rate of pay he was receiving on the date of his resignation.

§ 245. Retiring or dropping for disabilities not incident to service

Any commissioned officer found by a retiring board to be incapacitated for active service for reasons not incident to service shall, if the findings of the retiring board are approved by the Secretary, be dropped from the service with or without 1 year's pay, as determined by the Secretary.

§ 246. Dropping for disabilities due to vicious habits

Any commissioned officer found by a retiring board to be incapacitated for active service because of his own vicious habits shall, if the findings of the retiring board are approved by the President, be dropped from the service.

WARRANT OFFICERS

§ 301. Permanent appointments

(a) The Secretary may appoint permanent warrant officers, as the needs of the Coast Guard require, from among the following categories:

(1) temporary commissioned warrant officers and temporary warrant officers of the Coast Guard;

(2) enlisted men of the Coast Guard;

(3) members of the Coast Guard Reserve; and

(4) licensed officers of the United States Merchant Marine.

(b) No person shall be appointed a warrant officer until his mental, moral, physical, and professional fitness to perform the duties of a warrant officer has been established as the result of such examinations as the Secretary shall prescribe.

(c) Appointees under this section shall take precedence with other warrant officers in accordance with the dates of their appointments. Appointees whose dates of appointment are the same shall take precedence with each other as the Secretary may determine.

§ 302. Temporary appointments

(a) The Secretary may appoint temporary warrant officers appropriate to their qualifications and experience. Such temporary warrant officers, while in service, shall receive the same pay, allowance, and benefits as permanent warrant officers of corresponding length of service, except that no temporary warrant officer as such shall be entitled to retirement while serving under his temporary appointment. All temporary appointments as warrant officers shall be made only after the candidates have satisfactorily passed such examinations as the Secretary shall prescribe.

(b) Any enlisted man in the regular Coast Guard may be appointed as a temporary warrant officer. Notwithstanding such temporary appointment, any such enlisted man shall be entitled to retirement in his permanent rating in the same manner as though he had continued to hold his permanent rating, and upon the termination of such temporary appointment shall be entitled to revert to such rating. Service under any such temporary appointment shall be included in determining length of service as an enlisted man.

Any warrant officer who has reached the age of 62 years shall be retired from active service, with retired pay of the grade with which retired.

§ 304. Voluntary retirement after 30 years' service

Any warrant officer who has completed 30 years' service may, upon his own application, in the discretion of the Secretary, be retired from active service, with retired pay of the grade with which retired.

§ 305. Voluntary retirement after 20 years' service

Any warrant officer who has completed 20 years' active service in the Coast Guard, Navy, or Marine Corps, or the Reserve components thereof, may, upon his own application, in the discretion of the Secretary be retired from active service, with retired pay of the grade with which retired.

§ 306. Retirement for disabilities incident to service

Any warrant officer found by a retiring board to be incapacitated for active service because of infirmities of age or physical or mental disability, which is incident to service, shall, if the findings of the retiring board are approved by the Secretary, be retired from active service, with retired pay of the grade with which retired.

§ 307. Retirement upon recommendation of personnel board

The Coast Guard Personnel Board may recommend for retirement such warrant officers who have 30 years of service as it determines upon the basis of the needs of the service should be retired from active service. The procedures for the retirement of commissioned officers pursuant to the action of a personnel board, after 30 years' service, shall govern the retirement of warrant officers under this section, except that in the case of warrant officers the final review and action shall be by the Secretary instead of by the President.

§ 308. Pay upon involuntary retirement after 30 years' service

Any warrant officer who has completed 30 years' service and who has been retired from active duty by the Secretary, pursuant to the action of a personnel board, shall, unless entitled to retire at a higher grade or pay under other provisions of law, receive the retired pay of the grade with which retired.

§ 309. Retirement in case of special commendation

Any warrant officer who has been specially commended for his performance of duty in actual combat prior to December 31, 1946, by the head of the executive department under whose jurisdiction the duty was performed shall, whether serving under a permanent or temporary appointment, upon retirement, be placed upon the retired list with the grade of commissioned warrant officer and with 75 percent of the active-duty pay of warrant officer.

§ 310. Recall to active duty during war or national emergency

In times of war or national emergency, the Secretary may order any warrant officer on the retired list to active duty. While on active duty, a retired warrant officer shall receive full, pay, allowances, and benefits authorized by law, including longevity credit for the time retired. When relieved of active service after recall from the retired list such warrant officer shall, unless entitled to be advanced on the retired list with a higher grade or pay under other provisions of law, be retained on the retired list with the grade of warrant officer, and with retired pay computed on the active-duty pay and increase received at the time of relief from active duty.

§ 311. Recall to active duty with consent of officer

Any warrant officer on the retired list may, with his consent, be assigned to such duties as he may be able to perform, but no warrant officer on the retired list who has reached the age of 62 years shall be recalled in time of peace. While on active duty, such warrant officer shall receive full pay, allowances, and benefits authorized by law, including longevity credit for the time retired. When relieved from active service after recall from the retired list, such warrant officer shall, unless entitled to be advanced on the retired list with a higher grade or pay under other provisions of law, be retained on the retired list with the grade of warrant officer and with retired pay computed on the active-duty pay and increase received at the time of relief from active duty.

§ 312. Relief of retired warrant officer promoted while on active duty

Any warrant officer on the retired list recalled to active duty who during such active duty is advanced to a higher grade under a temporary appointment shall, upon relief from active duty, if his performance of duty under such temporary appointment has been satisfactory, be advanced on the retired list to the highest grade held while on active duty, with retired pay of such highest grade.

§ 313. Retirement in cases where higher grade has been held

Any warrant officer who is retired under any provision of sections 303, 304, 305, 306, or 307 of this title shall be retired from active service with the highest grade held by him while on active duty in which, as determined by the Secretary, his performance of duty was satisfactory, but not lower than his permanent grade, with retired pay of the grade with which retired.

§ 314. Retiring or dropping for disabilities not incident to service

Any warrant officer found by a retiring board to be incapacitated for active service for reasons not incident to service shall, if the findings of the retiring board are approved by the Secretary, be dropped from the service with or without one year's pay, as determined by the Secretary.

§ 315. Dropping for disabilities due to vicious habits

Any warrant officer found by a retiring board to be incapacitated for active service because of his own vicious habits, shall, if the findings of the retiring board are approved by the Secretary, be dropped from the service.

ENLISTED MEN

§ 351. Enlistments

Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, the Commandant may enlist men for minority or terms of full years not exceeding six years. Enlistment contracts shall be of two types, regular and temporary. A man enlisted and serving under a regular enlistment contract shall be entitled to all applicable retirement benefits provided by law. A man enlisted and serving under a temporary enlistment contract shall not be entitled to retirement benefits. All original enlistments shall be temporary, and succeeding enlistments may be temporary under regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

§ 352. Promotion

Enlisted men shall be advanced in rating by the Commandant under regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

§ 353. Compulsory retirement at age 62

Any enlisted man who has reached the age of 62 shall be retired from active service, with retired pay of the grade or rating with which retired.

§ 354. Voluntary retirement after 30 years' service

Any enlisted man who has completed 30 years' service may, upon his own application, in the discretion of the Commandant, be retired from active service, with retired pay of the grade or rating with which retired.

§ 355. Voluntary retirement after 20 years' service

Any enlisted man who has completed 20 years' service may, upon his own application, in the discretion of the Commandant, be retired from active service, with retired pay of the grade or rating with which retired.

§ 356. Retirement for disabilities incident to service

Any enlisted man found by a retiring board to be incapacitated for active service because of infirmities of age or physical or mental disability, which is incident to service, shall, if the findings of the retiring board are approved by the Secretary, be retired from active service, with retired pay of the grade or rating with which retired.

§ 357. Enlisted Personnel Board

(a) The Commandant shall assemble annually a Coast Guard Enlisted Personnel Board, of not less than three commissioned officers on the active list, who shall recommend for retirement such enlisted men who have 20 years of service, as the Board determines, in its discretion, should be retired from active service. The recommendations of the Board shall be transmitted to the Commandant for final action. If the Commandant approves the recommendations of the Board, the enlisted men concerned shall be notified thereof in writing, and any enlisted man who, within 30 days after receipt of such notification, files with the Commandant a written protest of the action taken by the Board in his case, shall not be retired involuntarily under this section unless a subsequent annual Board again determines, in its discretion, and recommends that such enlisted man should be retired, in which case such enlisted man may, upon approval by the Commandant, be retired from active service. At the expiration of 30 days after receipt by an enlisted man of notice as aforesaid, in the event that no such protest is filed by him within the period prescribed, such enlisted man may, upon approval by the Commandant, be retired from active service. If the Commandant disapproves any recommendation of the Board the enlisted man concerned shall retain his status to the same extent as if his case had not been considered.

(b) Any enlisted man who has completed 20 years' service and who has been retired from active duty by the Commandant pursuant to the action of an Enlisted Personnel Board shall receive the retired pay of the grade or rating with which retired.

(c) Any enlisted man retired by reason of 20 years' service, whether voluntarily or involuntarily, who has been cited for extraordinary heroism in line of duty, as determined by the Secretary, whose determination shall be final and conclusive, or any enlisted man so retired whose average marks in conduct during his service in the Coast Guard were not less than 97½ percent of the maximum, or any enlisted man so retired who shall have been both so cited and shall have received such average marks, shall be entitled to have his retired pay increased by an amount equal to 10 percent of the active-duty pay and permanent additions thereto of the grade or rating with which retired.

§ 358. Limitation of retirements

The total number of enlisted men who may be retired in any one calendar year by reason of having completed 20 years of service shall not exceed the whole number nearest to 1 percent of the total enlisted force of the Coast Guard on the active list as of January 1 of such year, to be divided in such proportions between voluntary retirements and involuntary retirements as may be determined by the Commandant. In case the number of enlisted men authorized to be retired annually by this section are not retired during a calendar year, the remainder of the authorized number may be retired during any subsequent calendar year providing that the total retired in that year does not exceed 3 percent of the total enlisted force as of January 1 of such calendar year.

§ 359. Recall to active duty during war or national emergency

In times of war or national emergency, the Commandant may order any enlisted man on the retired list to active duty. While on active duty, a retired enlisted man shall receive full pay, allowances, and benefits authorized by law including longevity credit for the time retired. When relieved of active service after recall from the retired list such enlisted man shall, unless entitled to be advanced on the retired list with a higher grade, rating, or pay under other provisions of law, be retained on the retired list with the rating held at the time of retirement, and with retired pay computed on the active-duty pay and increase received at the time of release from active duty.

§ 360. Recall to active duty with consent of man

Any enlisted man on the retired list may, with his consent, be assigned to such duties as he may be able to perform, except that no enlisted man on the retired list who has reached the age of 62 years shall be recalled in time of peace. While on active duty such enlisted man shall receive full pay, allowances, and benefits authorized by law, including longevity credit for the time retired. When relieved of active service after recall from the retired list such enlisted man shall, unless entitled to be advanced on the retired list with a higher grade, rating, or pay under other provisions of law, be retained on the retired list with the rating held at the time of retirement and with retired pay computed on the active-duty pay and increase received at the time of release from active duty.

§ 361. Relief of retired man promoted while on active duty

Any enlisted man on the retired list recalled to active duty who during such active duty is advanced to a higher grade or rating under a permanent or temporary appointment or promotion shall, upon relief from active duty be advanced on the retired list to the highest grade or rating held while on active duty with retired pay of such highest grade or rating. In case the appointment or promotion was temporary the advancement on the retired list shall be made only to such grade or rating in which the man served satisfactorily on active duty.

§ 362. Retirement in cases where higher grade or rating has been held

Any enlisted man who is retired under any provision of section 353, 354, 355, 356, or 357 of this chapter shall be retired from active service with the highest grade or rating held by him while on active duty in which, as determined by the Secretary, his performance of duty was satisfactory, but not lower than his permanent grade or rating, with retired pay of the grade or rating with which retired.

§ 363. Retiring or dropping for disabilities not incident to service

Any enlisted man found by a retiring board to be incapacitated for active service for reasons not incident to service shall, if the findings of the retiring board are approved by the Secretary, be dropped from the service with or without one year's pay, as determined by the Secretary.

§ 364. Dropping for disabilities due to vicious habits

Any enlisted man found by a retiring board to be incapacitated for active service because of his own vicious habits, shall, if the findings of the retiring board are approved by the Secretary, be dropped from the service.

§ 365. Extension of enlistments

Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, the term of enlistment of any enlisted man may, by voluntary written agreement, be extended for a period not exceeding four full years from the date of expiration of the then-existing term of enlistment, and subsequent to such date an enlisted man who so extends his terms of enlistment shall receive the same pay and allowances in all respects as though regularly discharged and reenlisted immediately upon expiration of his term of enlistment. No such extension shall operate to deprive the enlisted man concerned, upon discharge at the termination thereof, of any right, privilege, or benefit to which he would have been entitled if his term of enlistment had not been so extended.

§ 366. Retention beyond term of enlistment in case of disability

Any enlisted man of the Coast Guard in the active service whose term of enlistment expires while he is suffering disease or injury incident to service and not due to misconduct, and who is in need of medical care or hospitalization, may, with his consent, be retained in such service beyond the expiration of his term of enlistment. Any such enlisted man shall be entitled to receive at Government expense medical care or hospitalization and his pay and allowances, including credit for longevity, until he shall have recovered to such extent as would enable him to meet the physical requirements for reenlistment, or until it shall have been ascertained by competent authority of the Coast Guard that the disease or injury is of a character that recovery to such an extent would be impossible. Any enlisted man whose enlistment is so extended shall be subject to forfeitures in the same manner and to the same extent as if his term of enlistment had not expired. Nothing contained in this section shall prevent any enlisted man from being held in the service without his consent under section 367 of this title.

§ 367. Detention beyond term of enlistment

(a) Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, an enlisted man may be detained in the Coast Guard beyond the term of his enlistment:

(1) until the first arrival of the vessel on which he is serving at its permanent station, or at a port in a State of the United States or in the District of Columbia; or

(2) if attached to a shore station beyond the continental limits of the United States or in Alaska, until his first arrival at a port in any State of the United States or in the District of Columbia where his reenlistment or discharge may be effected, or until he can be discharged or reenlisted at his station beyond the continental limits of the United States or in Alaska, whichever is earlier, but in no event to exceed 3 months; or

(3) while awaiting disciplinary action or trial and disposition of his case; or

(4) during a period of war or national emergency as proclaimed by the President, and, in the interest of national defense, for a period not to exceed 6 months after the end of the war or the termination of the emergency; or

(5) for a period of not exceeding 30 days in other cases whether or not specifically covered by this section, when essential to the public interests, and the determination that such detention is essential to the public interests, made in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, shall be final and conclusive.

Any person detained in the Coast Guard as provided in this section shall be entitled to receive pay and allowances and benefits under the same conditions as though his enlistment period had not expired, and shall be subject in all respects to the laws and regulations for the government of the Coast Guard until his discharge therefrom. Enlisted men detained under the provisions of (1) of this subsection shall be entitled to the pay and allowances provided for enlisted personnel of the Navy detained under similar circumstances. Enlisted men detained under the provisions of (3) of this subsection shall not receive pay or allowances for any period beyond the term of enlistment, if the trial results in conviction.

(b) Any enlisted man who, without proper authority, absents himself from his ship, station, or duty for more than 1 day, or who is confined for more than 1 day under sentence, or while awaiting trial and disposition of his case, if the trial results in conviction, may be permitted to serve, after his return to a full-duty status, for such period as shall, with the time he may have served prior to such unauthorized absence or confinement, amount to the full term of his enlistment.

§ 368. Discharge in case of under-age enlistment

Upon presentation of satisfactory evidence as to his age and upon application for discharge by his parent or guardian presented to the Coast Guard within 90 days after the date of his enlistment, any man enlisted in the Coast Guard under 21 years of age who was enlisted without the written consent of his parent or guardian, if any, shall be discharged by reason of minority.

§ 369. Inclusion of certain conditions in enlistment contract

The enlistment contract shall contain the substance of sections 365 to 368, inclusive, of this title.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

§ 421. Retirement

(a) Every commissioned officer, warrant officer, or enlisted man who is retired under any provision of this title shall be retired with the permanent grade or rating held at the time of retirement unless entitled to retire with a higher grade or rating under any provision of this title or any other law.

(b) Where an officer is entitled, under any provision of law, to retire with one grade higher than the grade in which serving at the time of retirement, the next higher grade in the case of captain shall be rear admiral, and the next higher grade in the case of commissioned warrant officer shall be lieutenant (junior grade).

§ 422. Status of recalled personnel

All retired personnel when recalled to active duty shall serve in the grade or rating in which they were serving at the time of retirement.

§ 423. Computation of retired pay

The retired pay of a grade or rating shall be computed at the rate of 2½ percent of the sum of the active-duty pay of that grade or rating, and all permanent additions thereto including longevity credit, to which the officer or enlisted man concerned was entitled at the time of retirement, multiplied by the number of years of service for which he was entitled to credit in the computation of his pay when last on active duty. In the case of an officer or enlisted man retired for disability or an officer retired in a higher grade because of a special commendation the retired pay shall be 75 percent of the sum of the active-duty pay and all permanent additions thereto, including longevity credit to which the officer or enlisted man concerned is entitled, of the grade on which the retired pay is computed. In the case of an officer whose retired pay is computed on the pay of a grade for which active-duty pay is not based upon years of service the retired pay shall be 2½ percent of his active-duty pay in the grade in which serving at the time of retirement multiplied by the number of years of service for which he would be entitled to credit in the computation of pay on the active list had he been serving in the grade of captain at the time of his retirement. A fractional year of 6 months or more shall be considered a full year in computing the number of years of service by which the rate of 2½ percent is multiplied.

§ 424. Limitations on retirement and retired pay

The provisions of any section of this title shall not be construed so as to prevent any officer or enlisted man from being placed on the retired list with the highest grade or rating and the highest retired pay to which such officer or enlisted man may be entitled under the provisions of any other section of this title or under the provisions of any other law. In no case shall the retired pay of an officer or enlisted man exceed 75 percent of the sum of active-duty pay and all permanent additions thereto, including longevity credit to which the officer or enlisted man concerned is entitled, of the grade or rating on which his pay is computed.

§ 425. Retiring boards

(a) The Secretary shall designate and assemble from time to time a Coast Guard retiring board, composed of officers of the Coast Guard and medical officers of the Public Health Service, consisting of not less than five commissioned officers, two-fifths of whom shall be medical officers of the Public Health Service, for the purpose of examining and reporting on such commissioned officers, warrant officers, and enlisted men of the Coast Guard as appear to be incapable of performing the duties of their office and are ordered by the Secretary to appear before it.

(b) A retiring board shall inquire into and determine the facts touching the nature and occasion of the disability of any commissioned officer, warrant officer, or enlisted man ordered to appear before such board, and shall have such powers as may be necessary for that purpose. When the board finds a commissioned officer, warrant officer, or enlisted man incapacitated for active service it shall also find and report the cause which in its judgment has produced his incapacity, whether due to infirmities of age or physical or mental disability, and whether incident to service, or whether due to his own vicious habits.

(c) In the case of a commissioned officer, the proceedings of the retiring board shall be transmitted to the Secretary and shall by him be laid before the President for his approval or disapproval and his orders in the case. In the case of a warrant officer or enlisted man the proceedings shall be transmitted to the Secretary for his approval or disapproval and his orders in the case.

§ 461. Pay and allowances

Commissioned officers, commissioned warrant officers, cadets, warrant officers, and enlisted persons shall, except as otherwise provided by law, receive the same pay, allowances, increases, additions, and gratuities as prescribed for corresponding ranks, grades, or ratings for personnel of the Navy, including any extra pay and allowances for special duty.

§ 462. Pay and allowances of rear admirals

The number of rear admirals on the active list entitled to the pay and allowances provided by law for rear admirals of the upper half, exclusive of those whose pay and allowances are specifically provided by this or any other law to be the pay and allowances of the upper half, shall be one-half of the number of officers on the active list of that rank. Where the division results in an odd number the odd number shall be placed in the upper half. No officer who has or may become entitled to the pay and allowances of a rear admiral of the upper half shall suffer a reduction of his pay and allowances solely by reason of the fact that the number of rear admirals may for any reason be reduced.

§ 463. Continuation of additional pay

Officers and enlisted men of the Coast Guard who are awarded any Navy medal or insignia of honor which carries with it any additional pay shall not be deprived of such additional pay when the Coast Guard is in the Treasury Department, whether or not their service has been continuous subsequent to such award.

§ 464. Allotment of pay

Officers and enlisted men, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, may make allotments from their pay and allowances.

§ 465. Advances to officers ordered to and from sea or shore duty beyond the seas

Advances of pay not to exceed 3 months' pay in any one case may be made to officers ordered to and from sea duty and to and from shore duty beyond the seas, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary. The Commandant may direct such advances as he deems necessary and proper to persons in the Coast Guard employed on distant stations where the discharge of the pay and emoluments to which they are entitled cannot be regularly effected.

§ 466. Settlement of accounts of deceased officers and men

In the settlement of the accounts of deceased officers or enlisted persons, where no demand is presented by a duly appointed legal representative of the estate, the accounting officers may allow the amount found due to the decedent's widow, widower, or legal heirs in the following order of precedence: First, to the widow or widower; second, if decedent left no widow or widower, or the widow or widower is dead at the time of settlement, then to the children or their issue per stirpes; third, if no widow, widower, or descendants, then to the father and mother in equal parts; fourth, if either the father or mother is dead, then to the one surviving; fifth, if there is no widow, widower, child, father, or mother, at the date of settlement, then to the brothers and sister and children of deceased brothers and sisters, per stirpes. This section shall not be so construed as to prevent payment from the amount due the decedent's estate of funeral expenses, provided a claim therefor is presented by the person or persons who actually paid the same before settlement by the accounting officers.

§ 467. Computation of length of service

In computing length of service of officers and enlisted personnel for any purpose all creditable service in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Force, Coast Guard, Revenue Cutter Service, and Life Saving Service shall be included in addition to any other creditable service authorized by any other law.

§ 468. Procurement of personnel

The Coast Guard may make expenditures as necessary in order to obtain recruits for the Service and cadet applicants, including advertising.

§ 469. Training

The Coast Guard may make expenditures for the training of personnel, including books, school supplies, correspondence courses, motion-picture equipment, and other equipment for instructional purposes.

§ 470. Special instruction at universities

Coast Guard personnel may be assigned for special instruction at private or State colleges or universities, and their expenses, including tuition, books, laboratory equipment and fees, and school supplies, may be defrayed by the Coast Guard.

§ 471. Attendance at professional meetings

Coast Guard personnel may be directed to attend meetings of technical, professional, scientific, and other similar organizations and may be reimbursed for expenses thereby incurred at the rates authorized by law.

§ 472. Travel allowance to enlisted men on discharge

The provisions of law authorizing travel allowances to enlisted men of the Navy upon discharge shall apply to enlisted men of the Coast Guard upon discharge, in the same manner, to the same extent, and under the same conditions.

§ 473. Allowances to under-age discharged persons

The Secretary, under regulations prescribed by him, may discharge from the Coast Guard, with pay and allowances and discharge certificate found appropriate for their service after enlistment, enlisted persons who have secured enlistment by reason of false statement of age on their applications for enlistment and have therefore been enlisted while under the minimum statutory or administrative age limit. When so discharged or released such enlisted persons shall be furnished transportation in kind and subsistence from the place of discharge to their home.

§ 474. Compensation for travel tolls and fares

Coast Guard personnel may be directed to secure transportation necessary in conducting official governmental business within the limits of their duty stations, and expenses incurred thereby for train, bus, streetcar, ferry, bridge, and similar fares and tolls may be defrayed by the Coast Guard, or the personnel so directed may be reimbursed for such expenses.

§ 475. Hiring of quarters for personnel

Where sufficient quarters are not possessed by the United States, the Commandant may hire quarters for personnel, including personnel on sea duty at such times as they may be deprived of their quarters on board ship due to repairs or other conditions which may render them uninhabitable. Such accommodations shall not be available for occupancy by the dependents of such personnel.

§ 476. Contingent expenses

The Commmandant may expend for contingencies of the Coast Guard a sum not to exceed $7,500 in any one fiscal year. The Commandant may authorize the Superintendent of the Academy to extend not to exceed $2,500 of this amount for contingencies of the Academy.

§ 477. Equipment to prevent accidents

The Coast Guard may make such expenditures as are deemed appropriate for promotion and maintenance of the safety and occupational health of, and the prevention of accidents affecting, personnel of the Coast Guard, including the purchase of clothing, equipment, and other materials necessary thereto.

§ 478. Rations or commutation therefor in money

(a) Enlisted men of the Coast Guard, civilian officers and civilian crews of vessels, and working parties in the field shall be allowed a ration or commutation thereof in money, in such amount and under limitations and regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

(b) Money for commuted rations shall be paid, under such regulations as the Secretary shall prescribe, on proper vouchers or pay rolls, to persons entitled to receive it, or to the officers designated by the Commandant to administer the financial affairs of the messes in which such persons may be subsisted.

(c) Money paid for commuted rations to the designated officer may be deposited in general or limited depositories of public money or in any bank in which deposits are insured. Such funds shall be expended and accounted for under such regulations as the Secretary shall prescribe.

(d) Nothing contained in this section shall be construed as modifying or changing in any manner the provisions of law pertaining to subsistence allowances for enlisted men, but no ration or commutation thereof shall be allowed a person receiving a subsistence allowance.

§ 479. Sales of ration supplies to messes

Ration supplies may be purchased by the cabin, wardroom, warrant officers', and other authorized messes and payment therefor made in cash to the commissary officer. The prices to be charged for such supplies shall not be less than the invoice prices, and the cash received from such sales shall be accounted for on the ration return and may be expended for the general mess.

§ 480. Flight rations

There may be furnished to officers, enlisted men, and civilian employees, while actually engaged in flight operations, an aircraft flight ration in kind, chargeable to the proper Coast Guard appropriation, which flight ration shall be supplementary to any ration or subsistence allowance now granted to such personnel. No part of an aircraft flight ration shall be furnished without cost to any person in a travel status or to any person to whom a per diem allowance is granted in lieu of actual subsistence.

§ 481. Payments at time of discharge for good of service

Enlisted men discharged by dishonorable discharge, bad-conduct discharge, or any other discharge for the good of the service, may, upon discharge, be paid a sum not to exceed $25. The sum paid shall be fixed by and in the discretion of the Commandant, and shall be paid only in cases where the person so discharged would otherwise be without funds to meet his immediate needs.

§ 482. Clothing at time of discharge for good of service

Enlisted men discharged for bad conduct, undesirability, unsuitability, or inaptitude may be furnished civilian clothing, including an overcoat when necessary, the cost of such furnished clothing not to exceed $30 per person.

§ 483. Right to wear uniform

When authorized by and in accordance with applicable regulations:

(a) any commissioned officer, warrant officer, or enlisted man who has served honorably in the Coast Guard during war shall, when not in active service, whether or not on the retired list, be entitled to bear the official title and upon occasions of ceremony to wear the uniform of the highest rank or rating held by him during his war service, and

(b) any commissioned officer, warrant officer, or enlisted man on the retired list shall be entitled to wear the uniform of his rank or rating.

§ 484. Protection of uniform

The provisions of law relating to the protection of the uniform of the United States Army, Navy, or Marine Corps shall apply to the protection of the uniform of the Coast Guard, in the same manner, to the same extent, and under the same conditions.

§ 485. Clothing for officers and enlisted personnel

(a) The Coast Guard may purchase uniforms, accouterments, and related equipment for sale to officer personnel and cadets of the Coast Guard.

(b) The Coast Guard may purchase uniform clothing for sale to enlisted personnel of the Coast Guard. The actual cost of the clothing thus sold to enlisted personnel may be withheld from their pay.

(c) The Coast Guard may purchase uniform clothing for distribution to enlisted personnel of the Coast Guard pursuant to law, or to pay to such enlisted personnel a cash-clothing allowance pursuant to law.

§ 486. Clothing for destitute shipwrecked persons

The Coast Guard may furnish clothing and subsistence to destitute shipwrecked persons, and the Coast Guard may reimburse, in cash or in kind, Coast Guard personnel who furnish clothing and subsistence to destitute shipwrecked persons.

§ 487. Procurement and sale of stores to officers, enlisted men, and civilian employees

Such stores as the Secretary may designate may be procured and sold to officers and enlisted men of the Coast Guard, and to the widows of such officers and enlisted men. Such designated stores may also be procured and sold to civilian officers and employees of the United States, and to such other persons as may be specifically authorized by the Secretary, at Coast Guard stations and other units beyond the continental limits of the United States or in Alaska.

§ 488. Advancement of public funds to personnel

The Commandant, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, may advance public funds to personnel when required to meet expenses of officers and men detailed on emergency shore duty. Funds so advanced shall not exceed a reasonable estimate of the actual expenditures to be made and for which reimbursement is authorized by law.

§ 489. Death gratuity

The provisions of law relating to the payment of an additional amount of pay to the widow, children, or other dependent relative of an officer or enlisted person of the Regular Navy or Marine Corps upon official notification of the death of such officer or enlisted man shall apply in the same manner, to the same extent, and under the same conditions to officers and enlisted men of the Regular Coast Guard. The authority and duty vested in the Secretary of the Navy by such provisions of law shall be exercised by the Secretary of the Treasury in the application and administration of such laws to the Coast Guard when it is in the Treasury Department.

§ 490. Settlement of claims of military and civilian personnel.

(a) The Secretary, and such other officer as he designates for such purposes and under regulations prescribed by him, may consider, ascertain, adjust, determine, settle, and pay any claim against the United States, including claims not heretofore satisfied arising on or after December 7, 1939, of military personnel and civilian employees of the Coast Guard, when such claim is substantiated, and the property determined to be reasonable, useful, necessary or proper under the attendant circumstances, in such manner as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe, for damage to or loss, destruction, capture, or abandonment of personal property occurring incident to their service, or to replace such personal property in kind, if the damage to or loss, destruction, capture, or abandonment of property shall not have been caused in whole or in part by any negligence or wrongful act on the part of the claimant, his agent, or employee, and shall not have occurred at quarters occupied by the claimant within the continental United States, excluding Alaska, which are not assigned to him or otherwise provided in kind by the Government.

(b) No claim shall be settled under this section unless presented in writing within 1 year after the accident or incident out of which such claim arises shall have occurred, if such accident or incident occurs in time of war, or if war intervenes within 1 year after its occurrence, any claim may, on good cause shown, be presented within 1 year after termination of the war.

(c) Any such settlement made by the Secretary, or his designee, under the authority of this section and such regulations as he may prescribe hereunder, shall be final and conclusive for all purposes, notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary.

(d) Such appropriations as may be required for the settlement of claims under the provisions of this section are authorized. Coast Guard appropriations shall be available for the settlement of claims by the Secretary or his designee under the provisions of this section.

§ 491. Medal of honor

The President may present, in the name of Congress, a medal of honor to any person who, while in the service of the Coast Guard, in action involving actual conflict with the enemy, or in the line of his profession, distinguishes himself conspicuously by gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty and without detriment to the mission of his command or to the command to which attached. The design of this medal shall be the same as that of the Navy medal of honor.

§ 492. Distinguished service medal

The President may present, but not in the name of Congress, a distinguished service medal of appropriate design, with accompanying ribbon, together with a rosette or other device, to be worn in lieu thereof, to any person who, while serving in any capacity with the Coast Guard, distinguishes himself by exceptionally meritorious service to the Government in a duty of great responsibility.

§ 493. Coast Guard medal

The President may present, but not in the name of Congress, a medal to be known as the Coast Guard medal, of appropriate design, with accompanying ribbon, together with a rosette or other device to be worn in lieu thereof, to any person who, while serving in any capacity with the Coast Guard, distinguishes himself by heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy.

§ 494. Insignia for additional awards

No more than one medal of honor, distinguished service medal, or one Coast Guard medal shall be issued to any one person; but for each succeeding deed or service sufficient to justify the awarding of a medal of honor, distinguished service medal, or Coast Guard medal, the President may award a suitable emblem or insignia to be worn with the decoration and a corresponding rosette or other device. No more than one Coast Guard commendation ribbon shall be issued to one person; but for each succeeding deed or service sufficient to justify the awarding of a Coast Guard commendation ribbon the Commandant may award a suitable emblem or insignia to be worn with the ribbon.

§ 495. Additional pay for holders of medals

Each enlisted man in the Coast Guard who is awarded a medal of honor, a distinguished service medal, or a Coast Guard medal shall be entitled to additional pay at the rate of $2 per month from the date of the deed or service for which the award is made, and each emblem or insignia in lieu of a medal of honor, a distinguished service medal, or a Coast Guard medal shall entitle him to further additional pay at the rate of $2 per month from the date of the deed or service for which such award is made, and such additional pay shall continue throughout his active service, whether such service shall or shall not be continuous.

§ 496. Time limit on award; report concerning deed

No medal of honor, distinguished service medal, Coast Guard medal, Coast Guard commendation ribbon, or emblem or insignia in lieu thereof shall be issued to any person after more than 5 years from the date of the deed or service justifying the awarding thereof, nor unless a specific statement or report distinctly setting forth the deed or service and suggesting or recommending official recognition thereof shall have been made by his superior through official channels at the time of the deed or service or within 1 year after the deed or termination of the service.

§ 497. Honorable subsequent service as condition to award

No medal of honor, distinguished service medal, Coast Guard medal, Coast Guard commendation ribbon, or emblem, or insignia in lieu thereof shall be awarded or presented to any individual, or to the representative of any individual, whose entire service subsequent to the time he distinguished himself shall not in the opinion of the Commandant have been honorable.

In case an individual who distinguishes himself dies before the making of any award to which he may be entitled, as authorized in this chapter, the award may be made and presented within 5 years from the date of the act or service justifying the award to such next of kin as may have been designated by the individual, or in the absence of such designation, or if the designated person is not alive at the time of the award, or the relationship between such person and the serviceman shall have been terminated before his death, then to such representative as the President designates. In the event of a posthumous award when the award will be made to the parents of the deceased and the parents have been divorced or separated, a duplicate award may be made to each parent.

§ 499. Delegation of powers to make awards; rules and regulations

The President may delegate to the Secretary, under such conditions, regulations, and limitations as he prescribes, the powers conferred upon him to make the awards designated in this chapter, and the President may make any and all rules, regulations, and orders which he deems necessary in the conferring of such awards.

§ 500. Life-saving medals

(a) The Secretary of the Treasury may, under regulations prescribed by him, award a Life-saving medal of gold or silver to any person, including personnel of the Coast Guard, who rescues or endeavors to rescue any other person from drowning, shipwreck, or other peril of the water in accordance with the following provisions:

(1) If such rescue or attempted rescue is made at the risk of one's own life and evidences extreme and heroic daring, the medal shall be of gold;

(2) If such rescue or attempted rescue is not sufficiently distinguished to deserve the medal of gold, but evidences the exercise of such signal exertion as to merit recognition, the medal shall be of silver.

(b) In order for a person to be eligible for the Life-saving medals the rescue or attempted rescue must take place in waters within the United States or subject to the jurisdiction thereof, or if the rescue or attempted rescue takes place outside such waters, one or the other of the parties must be a citizen of the United States or from a vessel or aircraft owned or operated by citizens of the United States.

(c) No persons shall receive more than one gold medal and one silver medal; but any person who has received or may hereafter receive a gold or silver medal and who again performs an act which would entitle him to receive another medal of the same class may be awarded, in lieu of a second medal of the same class, a gold or silver bar, as the case may be, to be worn with the medal already bestowed, and for every such additional act, an additional bar may be awarded. Medals and bars in lieu thereof, authorized by this subsection, may be awarded posthumously.

§ 501. Replacement of medals

In those cases where a medal, or a bar, emblem, or insignia in lieu thereof, awarded pursuant to this chapter has been lost, destroyed, or rendered unfit for use without fault or neglect on the part of the person to whom it was awarded, such medal, or bar, emblem, or insignia in lieu thereof, shall be replaced without charge, or, in the discretion of the Secretary, upon condition that the Government is reimbursed for the cost thereof.

§ 502. Award of other medals

Coast Guard personnel, notwithstanding the provisions of this chapter, may be awarded medals, bars, emblems, or insignia to which such personnel may be entitled under other provisions of law.

§ 503. Awards and insignia for excellence in service or conduct

The Coast Guard may award trophies, badges, and cash prizes to Coast Guard personnel or groups thereof, including personnel of the Reserve components thereof whether or not on active duty, for excellence in accomplishments related to Coast Guard service, to incur such expenses as may be necessary to enter such personnel in competitions, and to provide badges or buttons in recognition of special service, good conduct, and discharge under conditions other than dishonorable.

§ 504. Disposition of remains of personnel

The provisions of law relating to the disposition of the remains of military personnel of the Navy and Marine Corps and certain civilian employees of the Navy shall apply to military personnel and certain civilian employees of the Coast Guard in the same manner, to the same extent, and under the same conditions. The authority and duty vested in the Secretary of the Navy by such provisions of law shall be exercised by the Secretary of the Treasury in the application and administration of such laws to the Coast Guard when it is in the Treasury Department.

§ 505. Escorts for deceased officers and enlisted men

The Secretary may furnish one person as an escort to the place of burial for the body of an officer or enlisted man who has lost his life in the Coast Guard.

§ 506. Issue of national flag free of cost

The Commandant may issue free of cost the national flag (United States ensign No. 7), used for draping the coffin of any officer or enlisted man whose death occurs while in the service of the Coast Guard, upon request, to the relatives of the deceased officer or enlisted man, or, upon request, to a school, patriotic order, or society of which the deceased officer or enlisted man was a member.

§ 507. Disposition of effects of decedents

All moneys, articles of value, papers, keepsakes, and other similar effects belonging to deceased persons in the Coast Guard, not claimed by their legal heirs or next of kin, shall be deposited in safe custody, and if any such moneys, articles of value, papers, keepsakes, or other similar effects so deposited have been, or shall hereafter be, unclaimed for a period of 2 years from the date of the death of such person, such articles and effects shall be sold and the proceeds thereof, together with the moneys above-mentioned, shall be deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts. The Secretary shall make diligent inquiry in every instance after the death of such person to ascertain the whereabouts of his heirs or next of kin, and prescribe necessary regulations to carry out the foregoing provisions. Claims may be presented hereunder at any time within 5 years after such moneys or proceeds have been so deposited in the Treasury, and, when supported by competent proof in any case after such deposit in the Treasury, shall be certified to Congress for consideration.

574. Subpenas; penalties.
575. Deserters: arrest of by civil authorities; penalties.
576. Prisoners: allowances to; transportation.

§ 561. Commanding officer's punishments

No commanding officer shall inflict upon a commissioned or warrant officer under his command any other punishment than private reprimand, suspension from duty, arrest, or confinement; and such suspension, arrest, or confinement shall not continue longer than 10 days, unless a further period is necessary to bring the offender to trial; nor shall he inflict or cause to be inflicted upon any other person under his command for a single offense, or at any one time, any other punishment than one of the following punishments, namely:

(a) reduction of any rating established by himself;

(b) confinement, not exceeding 10 days, unless further confinement be necessary in the case of a prisoner to be tried by a court-martial;

(c) solitary confinement on bread and water not exceeding 5 days;

(d) solitary confinement not exceeding 7 days;

(e) deprivation of liberty on shore for a period not exceeding 30 days;

(f) forfeiture of 2 days' pay for each day of unauthorized absence not in excess of 5 days; and

(g) extra police duties.

No other punishment shall be imposed except by sentence of a court-martial. All punishments inflicted by a commanding officer or by his order, except reprimand, shall be entered upon the log of the vessel or unit concerned.

§ 562. Deck courts: authority to convene; composition; punishments; effective date of sentence

(a) Deck courts, consisting of one commissioned officer, may be ordered upon enlisted persons in the service under his command by the commanding officer of any vessel or unit, if the commanding officer is a commissioned officer, for the trial of minor offenses; and said courts shall, under regulations approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, be governed in their organization and procedure substantially in accordance with deck courts of the Navy.

(b) Deck courts may sentence enlisted persons to either a part or the whole as may be appropriate, of any one of the following punishments, namely:

(1) confinement not exceeding 20 days;

(2) solitary confinement not exceeding 20 days;

(3) solitary confinement not exceeding 20 days, on bread and water, or on diminished rations;

(4) reduction to next inferior rating;

(5) deprivation of liberty on shore for a period not exceeding 2 months; and

(6) extra police duties not to exceed 3 months and loss of pay not to exceed 20 days.

Extra police duties and loss of pay within the limits prescribed may be added to any one of the first five punishments enumerated above.

(c) No sentence of a deck court shall be carried into effect until approved by the officer ordering the court or his successor in office.

§ 563. Summary courts-martial: authority to convene; composition; punishments; effective date of sentence

(a) Summary courts-martial, consisting of three commissioned officers not below the grade of ensign as members and of a recorder, may be ordered upon enlisted persons in the service under his command by the commanding officer of any vessel or unit, if the commanding officer is a commissioned officer, for the trial of offenses which such commanding officer deems deserving of greater punishment than he or a deck court may inflict, but not sufficient to require trial by general courts-martial. Such courts-martial shall, under regulations approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, be governed in their organization and procedure substantially in accordance with summary courts-martial of the Navy.

(b) Summary courts-martial may sentence enlisted persons to either a part or the whole, as may be appropriate, of any one of the following punishments, namely:

(1) discharge from the service with a bad conduct discharge, but the sentence shall not be carried into effect in a foreign country;

(2) confinement not exceeding 2 months;

(3) solitary confinement not exceeding 30 days;

(4) solitary confinement, not exceeding 30 days, on bread and water or on diminished rations;

(5) reduction to the next inferior rating;

(6) deprivation of liberty on shore for a period not exceeding 3 months; and

(7) extra police duty and loss of pay not to exceed 3 months.

Extra police duties and loss of pay within the limitations prescribed may be added to any one of the first six punishments enumerated above.

(c) No sentence of a summary court-martial shall be carried into execution until the proceedings and sentence are approved by the Secretary.

§ 554. General courts-martial: authority to convene; composition; punishment; effective date of sentence

(a) General courts-martial may be convened by the Secretary of the Treasury, by the Commandant, or by such officers as may be specifically empowered by the Secretary of the Treasury or by the Commandant. Such courts shall consist of not less than five nor more than nine commissioned officers and of a judge advocate and shall, under regulations approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, be governed in their organization and procedure substantially in accordance with general courts-martial of the Navy.

(b) General courts-martial may sentence a commissioned or warrant officer to any of the following punishments, namely:

(1) dismissal from the service;

(2) suspension from duty for a period of 2 years or any part thereof upon reduced pay which shall in no case be less than one-half nor more than three-fourths of the duty pay of such officer;

(3) reduction of grade;

(4) loss of numbers;

(5) imprisonment for a period not to exceed 5 years; and

(6) official reprimand.

(c) General courts-martial may sentence any person in the Coast Guard other than a commissioned or warrant officer either to a part or the whole, as may be appropriate, of any one of the following punishments, namely:

(1) dishonorable discharge;

(2) imprisonment for a period not to exceed 5 years and forfeiture of any pay that may accrue during the period of imprisonment, and any sentence of imprisonment shall include reduction to the rating of apprentice seaman; and

(3) any sentence which a summary court-martial is authorized to inflict.

(d) No sentence of a general court-martial shall be carried into execution until the proceedings and sentence are approved by the Secretary, and no sentence of a court-martial extending to the dismissal of a commissioned officer shall be carried into execution until the proceedings and sentence are approved by the President of the United States.

§ 565. Public Health Service officers as court members

Any commissioned officer of the Public Health Service on active duty with the Coast Guard may serve on Coast Guard courts-martial, but in no circumstance shall more than one-third of the membership of a court-martial consist of officers of the Public Health Service.

§ 566. Reviewing authorities

(a) The officer ordering a court, and his immediate superior in command, if any, in the case of a summary court-martial, or his successor in office, may set aside the proceedings or remit or mitigate, in whole or in part, but not commute, the sentence of such court.

(b) The Secretary of the Treasury may set aside the proceedings, or remit or mitigate in whole or in part, but not commute, the sentence imposed by any court convened by his order or by that of any officer.

§ 567. Jurisdiction of offenses

The jurisdiction of Coast Guard courts shall extend to the following offenses, namely: absence after leave has expired; absence without leave; aiding or inducing others to desert; aiding the escape of a person under arrest; assaulting another person in the Coast Guard; breaking arrest; bribery; conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline; conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman; conspiracy; cruelty toward, or oppression or maltreatment of, a subordinate person in the Coast Guard; culpable inefficiency in the performance of duty; desertion; destroying or damaging public or private property; disobeying the lawful order of a superior officer; disorderly conduct; disrespect to a superior officer; drunkenness; embezzlement; endangering the lives of others through carelessness; extortion; failure to apprehend offenders; falsehood; false imprisonment; forgery; fraudulent enlistment; gambling; leaving station before being regularly relieved; making a false muster; making a mutiny; malingering; maltreatment of a person in the Coast Guard; manslaughter; misappropriating mess or welfare funds; misappropriating or applying to his own use property or money of the United States intended for the Coast Guard; neglect of duty; negligent handling of firearms; negligent operation of a vehicle; perjury; presenting, or causing to be presented, for approval or payment, a claim against the United States, knowing such claim to be false or fraudulent; receiving stolen property; resisting arrest; scandalous conduct tending to the destruction of good morals; sleeping on watch; smuggling liquor on board a vessel of the Government; striking another person in the Coast Guard; striking or assaulting a superior officer; suffering a vessel of the Coast Guard to be stranded or run upon a rock or shoal or improperly hazarded through inattention or negligence; theft; unauthorized use of a vehicle; using profane, abusive, obscene, or threatening language; and violation of a lawful order or regulation issued by the Secretary of the Treasury, or the Commandant.

§568. Limitations

(a) Except as provided in this section, no person shall be tried by a Coast Guard court or otherwise punished for any offense which appears to have been committed more than 2 years before the issuance of the order for such trial or punishment, unless by reason of having absented himself or of some other manifest impediment he shall not have been amenable to justice within that period.

(b) No person shall be tried by a Coast Guard court or otherwise punished for desertion in time of peace committed more than 2 years before the issuance of the order for such trial or punishment, unless he shall meanwhile have absented himself from the United States or by reason of some other manifest impediment shall not have been amenable to justice within that period, in which case the time of his absence shall be excluded in computing the period of the limitation. In no event shall the period of limitation begin until the end of the term for which such person was enlisted in the service.

§ 569. Trial by civil authorities; offenses against United States

(a) For offenses against the laws of the United States other than those specified in section 567 of this title, offenders shall be turned over to the civil authorities for trial.

(b) The jurisdiction conferred by this chapter for the punishment of offenses shall not be regarded as exclusive, but offenders may, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury, be turned over to the civil authorities for trial by any court having jurisdiction of the offense.

§ 570. Designation of Federal prison

The Secretary of the Treasury may designate, as the place of execution of the sentence of a Coast Guard court involving imprisonment, any prison or penitentiary that receives Federal prisoners.

§ 571. Treasury and Navy Department jurisdiction

In the initiation, prosecution, and completion of disciplinary action, including remission and mitigation of punishments for any offense committed by any officer or enlisted person of the Coast Guard, the department having jurisdiction of the person of the offender at the time the first report of a violation is made shall have jurisdiction to carry the prosecution through to completion, and the proceedings, punishment, review, and serving of the sentence, shall be in accordance with the laws and regulations of that department, notwithstanding the fact that the Coast Guard may be transferred from one department to another after commission of the offense and before ultimate completion of any sentence imposed as the result of such violation.

§ 572. Courts of inquiry: authority to convene; composition; subpenas; proceedings as evidence

(a) Courts of inquiry may be convened by the Secretary of the Treasury, by the Commandant, and by any officer of the Coast Guard authorized to convene general courts-martial. A court of inquiry shall consist of not more than three commissioned officers as members and of a judge advocate.

(b) Courts of inquiry may summon witnesses, administer oaths, and punish contempts in the same manner as general courts-martial, but they shall only state facts and shall not give their opinion unless expressly required so to do in the convening order.

(c) The proceedings of courts of inquiry shall be authenticated by the signature of the president of the court and of the judge advocate, and shall, in all cases not extending to the dismissal of a commissioned or warrant officer, be evidence before a general court-martial, provided oral testimony cannot be obtained.

§ 573. Contempts of court

Whenever any person refuses to give his evidence before a general court-martial or court of inquiry, or prevaricates, or behaves with contempt to the court, the court may imprison him for not more than 2 months. The person charged shall, at his own request, but not otherwise, be a competent witness before a general court or court of inquiry, and his failure to make such request shall not create any presumption against him.

§ 574. Subpenas; penalties

(a) A general court martial or court of inquiry may issue process to compel witnesses to appear and testify in the same manner as United States courts of criminal jurisdiction within the State, Territory, or District where such court martial or court of inquiry is ordered to sit.

(b) Any person duly subpenaed to appear as a witness before a general court martial or court of inquiry, who willfully neglects or refuses to appear, or refuses to qualify as a witness or to testify or produce documentary evidence which such person may have been legally subpenaed to produce, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, for which such person shall be punished on information in the district court of the United States; and the United States attorney shall, on the certification of the facts to him by such Coast Guard court martial, file an information against, and prosecute the person so offending, and the punishment of such person, on conviction, shall be a fine of not more than $500, or imprisonment not to exceed 6 months, or both, at the discretion of the court. This subsection shall not apply to persons residing beyond the State, Territory, or District in which such Coast Guard court martial is held, and the fees of such witness and his mileage at the rates provided for witnesses in the United States district court for said State, Territory, or District shall be duly paid or tendered said witness, such amounts to be paid by the Coast Guard. No witness shall be compelled to incriminate himself or to answer any question which may tend to incriminate or degrade him.

(a) Any civil officer having authority to arrest offenders under the laws of the United States or of any State, Territory, or District may arrest summarily a deserter from the Coast Guard and deliver him into the custody of Coast Guard authorities. The Commandant may, pursuant to applicable regulations, provide for reimbursement for the transportation and other necessary expenses to effectuate such delivery.

(b) No person who is convicted by court martial for desertion from the Coast Guard in time of war, and as the result of such conviction is dismissed or dishonorably discharged from the Coast Guard, shall afterwards be enlisted, appointed, or commissioned in any military or naval service under the United States, unless the disability resulting from desertion, as established by this section, is removed by a board of commissioned officers of the Coast Guard convened for consideration of the case, and the action of the board is approved by the Secretary; or unless he is restored to duty in time of war.

(a) Persons confined in prisons in pursuance of the sentence of a Coast Guard court shall, during such confinement, be allowed a reasonable sum, not to exceed $3 per month, for necessary prison expenses, and shall upon discharge be furnished with suitable civilian clothing and paid a gratuity, not to exceed $25. Such allowance shall be made in amounts to be fixed by, and in the discretion of, the Secretary and only in cases where the prisoners so discharged would otherwise be unprovided with suitable clothing or without funds to meet their immediate needs.

(b) The Commandant may transport to their homes or places of enlistment, as he may designate, all discharged prisoners; the expense of such transportation shall be paid out of any money to the credit of prisoners when discharged.

653. Employment of draftsmen and engineers.

§ 631. Delegation of powers by the Secretary

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to confer or impose upon the Commandant of the Coast Guard any of the rights, privileges, powers, or duties, in respect to the administration of the Coast Guard, vested in or imposed upon the Secretary of the Treasury by this title or other provisions of law.

§ 632. Functions and powers vested in the Commandant

All powers and functions conferred upon the Coast Guard, or the Commandant, by or pursuant to this title or any other law shall, unless otherwise specifically stated, be executed by the Commandant subject to the general supervision of the Secretary. In order to execute the powers and functions vested in him, the Commandant may assign personnel of the Coast Guard to duty in the District of Columbia, elsewhere in the United States, in any Territory of the United States, and in any foreign country, but such personnel shall not be assigned to duties in any foreign country without the consent of the government of that country; assign to such personnel such duties and authority as he deems necessary; and issue rules, orders, and instructions, not inconsistent with law, relating to the organization, internal administration and personnel of the Coast Guard.

§ 633. Regulations

In addition to the authority conferred by other provisions of this title, the Secretary may promulgate such regulations and orders as he deems appropriate to carry out the provisions of this title or any other law applicable to the Coast Guard.

§ 634. Officers holding certain offices

(a) Any officer, including any petty officer, may be designated by the Commandant as captain of the port or ports or adjacent high seas or waters over which the United States has jurisdiction, as the Commandant deems necessary to facilitate execution of Coast Guard duties.

(b) Commissioned officers may be appointed as United States Commissioners or United States Deputy Marshals in and for the Territory of Alaska. Any such officer appointed as United States Commissioner in and for the Territory of Alaska shall not be required to execute a bond for the faithful performance of his official duties as such Commissioner.

§ 635. Oaths required for boards

The members of a retiring board, selection board, examining board, and any other board authorized to be assembled pursuant to this title shall be sworn to discharge their duties honestly and impartially, the oath to be administered to the members by the president or other presiding officer of the board, and to him by the junior member or recorder.

§ 636. Administration of oaths

(a) Such commissioned and warrant officers of the Coast Guard as may be designated by the Commandant may, pursuant to rules prescribed by the Commandant, exercise the general powers of a notary public in the administration of oaths for the following purposes:

(1) execution, acknowledgment, and attestation of instruments and papers, oaths of allegiance in connection with recruiting, oaths in connection with courts and boards, and all other notarial acts in connection with the proper execution of Coast Guard functions;

(2) execution, acknowledgment, and attestation of instruments and papers, and all other notarial acts in time of war or national emergency; and

(3) execution, acknowledgment, and attestation of instruments and papers, and all other notarial acts in Alaska and places beyond the continental limits of the United States where the Coast Guard is serving.

(b) No fee of any character shall be charged by any commissioned or warrant officer for performing notarial acts. The signature and indication of grade of any commissioned or warrant officer performing any notarial act shall be prima facie evidence of his authority.

§ 637. Stopping vessels; immunity of Coast Guard officer

(a) Whenever any vessel liable to seizure or examination does not bring-to, on being ordered to do so or on being chased by any Coast Guard vessel or aircraft which has displayed the ensign, pennant, or other identifying insignia prescribed for vessels or aircraft of the Coast Guard, the person in command or in charge of such Coast Guard vessel or such Coast Guard aircraft may, after a gun has been fired by the Coast Guard vessel or aircraft as a warning signal, fire at or into such vessel which does not bring-to.

(b) The person in command of such Coast Guard vessel or such Coast Guard aircraft and all persons acting by or under his direction shall be indemnified from all penalties or actions for damages for so doing. If any person is killed or wounded by such firing, and the person in command of the Coast Guard vessel or aircraft or any person acting pursuant to his orders is prosecuted or arrested thereto, he shall be forthwith admitted to bail.

§ 638. Coast Guard ensigns and pennants

(a) Coast Guard vessels and aircraft shall be distinguished from other vessels and aircraft by an ensign, pennant, or other identifying insignia of such design as prescribed by the Secretary. Such ensign, pennant or other identifying insignia shall be displayed in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

(b) No vessel or aircraft without authority shall carry, hoist, or display any ensign, pennant, or other identifying insignia prescribed for, or intended to resemble, any ensign, pennant, or other identifying insignia prescribed for Coast Guard vessels or aircraft.

Every person violating this subsection shall be fined not more than $5,000, or imprisoned for not more than two years, or both.

§ 639. Penalty for unauthorized use of words "Coast Guard"

No individual, association, partnership, or corporation shall use the combination of letters "USCG" or "USCGR", the words "Coast Guard," "United States Coast Guard," "Coast Guard Reserve," "United States Coast Guard Reserve," "Coast Guard Auxiliary," "United States Coast Guard Auxiliary," "Lighthouse Service," "Life Saving Service," or any combination or variation of such letters or words alone or with other letters or words, as the name under which he or it shall do business, for the purpose of trade, or by way of advertisement to induce the effect of leading the public to believe that any such individual, association, partnership, or corporation has any connection with the Coast Guard. No individual, association, partnership, or corporation shall falsely advertise, or otherwise represent falsely by any device whatsoever, that any project or business in which he or it is engaged, or product which he or it manufactures, deals in, or sells, has been in any way endorsed, authorized, or approved by the Coast Guard. Every person violating this section shall be fined not more than $1,000, or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.

§ 640. Interchange of supplies between Army, Navy, and Coast Guard

The interchange, without compensation therefor, of military stores, supplies, and equipment of every character, including real estate owned by the Government, is authorized between the Army, Navy, and Coast Guard upon the request of the head of one service and with the approval of the head of the other service.

§ 641. Disposal of certain material

(a) The Commandant may dispose of, with or without charge, to the sea-scout service of the Boy Scouts of America, to any regularly organized flotilla or other organized unit of the Coast Guard Auxiliary, and to any public body or private organization not organized for profit having an interest therein for historical or other special reasons, such obsolete or other material as may not be needed for the Coast Guard.

(b) The Commandant may, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, sell apparatus or equipment manufactured by or in use in the Coast Guard, which is not readily procurable in the open market. The money received from such sale shall be deposited in the Treasury to the credit of the current appropriation from which purchase of similar apparatus or equipment is authorized.

§ 642. Deposit of damage payments

Whenever an aid to navigation or other property belonging to the Coast Guard is damaged or destroyed by a private person, and such private person or his agent shall pay to the satisfaction of the proper official of the Coast Guard for the cost of repair or replacement of such property, the Commandant may accept and deposit such payments, through proper officers of the Fiscal Service, Treasury Department, in special deposit accounts in the Treasury, for payment therefrom to the person or persons repairing or replacing the damaged property and refundment of amounts collected in excess of the cost of the repairs or replacements concerned. In the event that repair or replacement of the damaged property is effected by the Coast Guard, the appropriations bearing the cost thereof and current at the time collection is made shall be reimbursed from the special deposit account.

§ 643. Rewards for apprehension of persons interfering with aids to navigation

The Coast Guard may offer and pay rewards for the apprehension and conviction, or for information helpful therein, of persons found interfering in violation of law with aids to navigation maintained by the Coast Guard; or for information leading to the discovery of missing Coast Guard property or to recovery thereof.

§ 644. Payment for the apprehension of stragglers

The Coast Guard may offer and pay rewards for the apprehension and delivery of deserters, stragglers, and prisoners.

§ 645. Settlement of claims incident to activities of the Coast Guard

(a) The Secretary and, subject to appeal to the Secretary, such other officer as he may designate for such purposes and under regulations prescribed by him, may consider, ascertain, adjust, determine, settle, and pay in an amount not in excess of $1,000, where accepted by a claimant in full satisfaction and final settlement, any claim against the United States arising on or after May 27, 1941, when such claim is substantiated in such a manner as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe, for damage to or loss or destruction of property, real or personal, or for personal injury or death, caused by military personnel or civilian employees of the Coast Guard while acting within the scope of their employment (excluding claims cognizable under chapter 20 of title 28), or otherwise incident to noncombat activities of the Coast Guard, including claims for damage to or loss or destruction by criminal acts of registered or insured mail while in the possession of Coast Guard authorities, claims for damage to or loss or destruction of personal property bailed to the Government, and claims for damages to real property incident to the use and occupancy thereof, whether under a lease, express or implied, or otherwise. The provisions of this section shall not apply to claims for personal injury or death of military personnel or civilian employees of the Coast Guard if such injury or death occurs incident to their services. The provisions of this section shall not apply where the damage to or loss or destruction of property, or the personal injury or death, has been caused in whole or in part by any negligence or wrongful act on the part of the claimant, his agent, or employee. The amount allowed on account of personal injury or death shall be limited to reasonable medical, hospital, and burial expenses actually incurred, except that no payment shall be made to any claimant in reimbursement for medical or hospital services furnished at the expense of the United States nor, in the case of burial, of such portion of the expense thereof as may be otherwise paid by the United States.

(b) No claim shall be settled under this section unless presented in writing within 1 year after the occurrence of the accident or incident out of which such claim arises unless it occurs in time of war, or war intervenes within 1 year after its occurrence, in which event any claim may on good cause shown be presented within 1 year after the war is terminated.

(c) Any such settlement made by the Secretary, or his designee, under the authority of this section and such regulations as he may prescribe hereunder, shall be final and conclusive for all purposes, notwithstanding any other provisions of law to the contrary.

(d) Such appropriations as may be required for the settlement of claims under the provisions of this section are authorized. Coast Guard appropriations shall be available for the settlement of claims by the Secretary or his designee under the provisions of this section.

§ 646. Claims for damages occasioned by vessels

(a) The Secretary of the Treasury may consider, ascertain, adjust, determine, compromise, or settle claims for damages caused by vessels in the Coast Guard service, and for compensation for towage and salvage services, including contract salvage, rendered to such vessels, and pay the amount of any claim so determined, compromised, or settled, and upon acceptance of such payment by the claimant, and not until then, such determination, settlement, or compromise of such claim shall be final and conclusive for all purposes, any law to the contrary notwithstanding. This section, as respects the determination, compromise, settlement, and payment of claims, shall be supplementary to, and not in lieu of, all other provisions of law authorizing consideration, adjustment, determination, settlement, and payment of claims. No claim in excess of $3,000, which accrued prior to September 8, 1939, shall be considered hereunder. All payments of claims made under this section shall be paid out of Coast Guard appropriations. The payment of any claim on which a net amount exceeding $25,000 is determined to be due from the United States, or which is compromised or settled at a net amount exceeding $25,000 payable by the United States, is not authorized by this section, and all claims determined, compromised, or settled hereunder at a net amount exceeding $25,000 payable by the United States shall be certified by the Secretary of the Treasury to the Congress.

(b) On payment of any claim determined, compromised, or settled under this section at a net amount exceeding $3,000, but not exceeding $25,000, payable by the United States, the Secretary of the Treasury within 20 days of payment shall report to the Congress setting forth the nature of the claim, the vessel involved, the amount paid with respect thereto, the basis of the determination, compromise, or settlement, and other pertinent facts. The Secretary of the Treasury shall report to the Congress, at each session thereof, all claims which have been paid under this section. During any war the reports required under this section may omit any fact or facts disclosure of which, in the opinion of the Secretary, would be prejudicial to the national security.

§ 647. Claims for damage to property of the United States

(a) The Secretary of the Treasury may consider, ascertain, adjust, determine, compromise, or settle claims for damage cognizable in admiralty in a district court of the United States and all claims for damage caused by a vessel or floating object, to property of the United States under the jurisdiction of the Coast Guard or property for which the Coast Guard may have assumed, by contract or otherwise, any obligation to respond for damage thereto. The Secretary of the Treasury is further authorized to receive in payment of any such claim the amount due the United States pursuant to determination, compromise, or settlement as herein authorized and, upon acceptance of such payment but not until then, such determination, settlement, or compromise of such claim shall be final and conclusive for all purposes, any law to the contrary notwithstanding. All such payments shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States as miscellaneous receipts. The Secretary of the Treasury is further authorized to execute on behalf of the United States and to deliver in exchange for such payment a full release of such claim. This section, as respects the determination, compromise, settlement, and payment of claims, shall be supplementary to, and not in lieu of, all other provisions of law authorizing the determination, compromise, or settlement of claims for damage to property hereinabove described. No settlement or compromise where there is involved a payment in the net amount of over $25,000 is authorized by this title.

(b) Within 20 days after receipt of a payment in a net amount exceeding $3,000 due the United States pursuant to determination, compromise, or settlement of any claim under this section, the Secretary of the Treasury shall report to the Congress setting forth the nature of the claim; the vessel or vessels involved; the amount received; the basis of determination, compromise, or settlement; and other pertinent facts. During any war the reports required under this section may omit any fact or facts, disclosure of which, in the opinion of the Secretary, would be prejudicial to the national security.

§ 648. Accounting for industrial work

The Secretary may prescribe regulations governing accounting for industrial work, including charges for overhead for civilian labor and for maintenance of industrial plant and equipment, performed at the Coast Guard Yard or such similar Coast Guard industrial establishments as he may designate. Any orders placed for such industrial work shall be covered by a transfer or advance of funds to cover the estimated cost thereof, and shall be credited to such accounts as may be necessary and established by the Secretary to carry out the provisions of this section. Accounts so established shall be available for materials, supplies, or equipment, and civilian labor, including overhead and maintenance, required in performing the work ordered. Upon completion of an order an adjustment will be made to make the amount transferred or advanced equal to the actual cost as computed in accordance with the accounting regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

§ 649. Supplies and equipment from stock

Supplies and equipment for special work of the Coast Guard may be furnished from general stock and the applicable appropriation reimbursed therefor from the respective appropriations for such special work.

§ 650. Coast Guard supply fund and supply account

A Coast Guard supply fund is authorized. The capital of the Coast Guard Supply Fund shall be increased by the value of commissary provisions and uniform clothing on hand on July 1, 1949, and thereafter, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, the Coast Guard Supply Fund shall be charged with the cost of procurement and credited with the value of provisions consumed or sold, and the value of issues and sales of clothing, such values to be determined on a basis which will not increase the capital of the fund.

§ 651. Annual report

In January of each year, the Commandant, through the Secretary, shall report to Congress the operations and expenditures of the Coast Guard during the preceding fiscal year.

§ 652. Removing restrictions

Any law removing for the duration of a war or national emergency proclaimed by the President any restriction contained in any then-existing law as applied to the Navy, including, but not limited to, restrictions relating to the manner in which purchases may be made and contracts awarded, fiscal operations, and personnel, shall, in the same manner and to the same extent, remove such restrictions as applied to the Coast Guard.

§ 653. Employment of draftsmen and engineers

The Coast Guard may employ temporarily, at the seat of government, draftsmen and engineers for the preparation of plans and specifications for vessels, lighthouses, aids to navigation, and other projects for the Coast Guard that may be authorized or appropriated for by Congress, to be paid from the appropriations applicable to such projects.

757. Exemption from military training and draft.
758. Discipline.
759. Uniform allowance.
760. Disability or death benefits for temporary members.
761. Engaging in civil occupation; leave for training duty.
762. Women's Reserve.

§ 751. Purpose and administration of Reserve

The Coast Guard Reserve, as established on June 23, 1939, is a military organization and a component part of the Coast Guard for the purpose of providing a trained force of officers and enlisted persons which, added to the personnel of the regular Coast Guard, will be adequate to enable the Coast Guard to perform its functions and duties at all times. The Reserve shall be administered by the Commandant under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury, with the concurrence of the Secretary of the Navy, may prescribe.

§ 752. Eligibility

The Reserve shall be composed of citizens of the United States and of its Territories and possessions, between the ages of 17 and 62, who are physically and otherwise qualified for the performance of duty, and who, through appointment or enlistment therein, obligate themselves to serve in the Coast Guard in time of war or during any period of national emergency declared by the President to exist.

§ 753. Term; duty; training

(a) The term of appointment or enlistment in the Reserve shall be for 3 years. In time of war or national emergency declared by the President to exist any member of the Reserve may be ordered to active duty for the duration of the war or until the termination of the emergency as declared by the President, and may be continued on such active duty for such duration and 6 months thereafter notwithstanding that the term of appointment or enlistment may have expired. In time of peace, except for disciplinary purposes as provided in section 758 of this title, no member of the Reserve may be ordered to or continued on active duty without his consent except that any member of the Reserve may be continued on active duty in the interest of national defense for a period not to exceed 6 months after the termination of a war or national emergency as proclaimed by the President. The Commandant may release any member of the Reserve from active duty at any time. In time of peace, members of the Reserve may, with their consent, be given training or other duty either with or without pay as authorized by the Secretary. When authorized training or other duty without pay is performed by members of the Reserve, they may, in the discretion of the Secretary, be furnished with transportation to and from such duty, with subsistence and transfers en route, and, during the performance of such duty, with subsistence in kind or commutation thereof at a rate to be fixed by the Secretary.

§ 754. Grades and ratings; military authority

The grades and ratings, including cadets, in the Reserve shall be the various grades and ratings not above rear admiral, prescribed by law for the Coast Guard. Members of the Reserve, while engaged on active duty, shall be vested with the same power, authority, rights, and privileges in the execution of their duty and shall wear the same uniforms as members of the Regular Coast Guard of corresponding grades or ratings.

§ 755. Pay, allowances, and other benefits

(a) Personnel of the Reserve when engaged on active duty, on active duty while undergoing training, on training duty with pay, or when engaged in authorized travel to or from such duty, shall receive the same pay, allowances, and benefits as provided for personnel of the Naval Reserve of corresponding grade, rating, and length of service. In determining length of service for the purpose of this section, there shall be included all service for which credit is given by law to members of the Regular Coast Guard.

(b) The provisions of chapter 13 of this title, except for sections 461, 462, and 485 (c), shall apply to members of the Reserve under the same conditions and limitations as are applicable to officers and enlisted men of the Regular Coast Guard.

(c) Members of the Reserve who suffer sickness, disease, disability, or death shall be entitled to the same benefits as prescribed by law for members of the Naval Reserve who suffer sickness, disease, disability, or death under similar conditions.

(d) Members of the Reserve, when on active duty, shall be entitled to the benefits of section 253 (a) of title 42, and, except for training duty, to the benefits of section 253 (b) of title 42.

(e) Members of the Coast Guard Reserve shall be entitled to the same retirement benefits as prescribed by law for personnel of the Naval Reserve, and wherever any such law confers authority upon the Secretary of the Navy, similar authority shall be deemed given to the Secretary of the Treasury to be exercised with respect to the Coast Guard when the Coast Guard is operating under the Treasury Department.

§ 756. Temporary membership; eligibility; compensation

The Commandant may enroll as temporary members of the Reserve, for duty under such conditions as he prescribes, including but not limited to part-time and intermittent active duty with or without pay, and without regard to age, citizens of the United States, its territories and possessions who are members of the Auxiliary, officers and members of the crew of any motorboat or yacht placed at the disposal of the Coast Guard, or persons (including Government employees without pay other than compensation of their civilian positions) who by reason of their special training and experience are deemed by the Commandant to be qualified for such duty. The Commandant is authorized to define the powers and duties of temporary members of the Reserve, and to confer upon them, appropriate to their qualifications and experience, the same grades and ratings as are provided for the personnel of the Reserve. When performing active duty with pay, as authorized by this section, temporary members of the Reserve shall be entitled to receive the pay and allowances of their respective ranks, grades, or ratings, authorized for members of the Reserve.

§ 757. Exemption from military training and draft

Members of the Reserve, other than temporary members, shall be exempt from registration and liability for military training and service under any other law, and no member of the Reserve, other than a temporary member, shall be a member of any other naval or military organization. Temporary members of the Reserve who are members of any other naval or military reserve, if ordered to active duty therein, shall be forthwith released from all active duty with the Coast Guard, and their status as temporary members of the Reserve terminated.

§ 758. Discipline

All members of the Reserve when engaged on active duty or in authorized travel to or from such duty, or while wearing a uniform prescribed for the Reserve, shall be subject to the laws, regulations, and orders governing the discipline of officers and enlisted men of the Coast Guard. Disciplinary action for an offense committed while subject to such laws, regulations, and orders shall not be barred by release from duty status of any person charged with the commission thereof, and, for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this section, members of the Reserve may be retained on or returned to duty status without their consent, but not for a longer period of time than may be required for disciplinary action.

§ 759. Uniform allowance

(a) Upon first reporting for active duty or training duty at a location where uniforms are required to be worn, a commissioned or warrant officer of the Reserve may be paid a sum, not to exceed $100, as reimbursement for the purchase of the required uniforms, and thereafter such officer may be paid an additional sum of $50 for the same purpose upon the completion of each period of not less than 4 years in the Reserve. This latter amount of $50 shall not become due any officer until called to active or training duty after the expiration of the previous 4-year period. In times of war or national emergency a further sum of $150 for the purchase of required uniforms may be paid to officers of the Reserve upon first reporting for active duty. Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this section, the Commandant may prescribe a lesser amount as a uniform allowance to commissioned and warrant officers of the Reserve who are not required to purchase or have in their possession the complete outfit of uniform clothing prescribed for other commissioned and warrant officers of the Reserve.

(b) Cadets and enlisted personnel of the Reserve may be allowed the cost of or issued such uniforms, bedding, and equipment as may be prescribed by the Commandant, the value of such allowances or of items so issued to any person during any 3-year period not to exceed $100. Notwithstanding the foregoing limitations, enlisted personnel of the Reserve, upon first reporting for active duty in time of war or national emergency, may be issued such additional articles as are required to give them the same outfit authorized for enlisted personnel of the regular Coast Guard upon first enlistment.

§ 760. Disability or death benefits for temporary members

(a) In case of physical injury, or death resulting from physical injury, to any temporary member of the Reserve incurred incident to service while performing active Coast Guard duty, or engaged in authorized travel to or from such duty, the provisions of law authorizing compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, subject to this section, shall apply, and shall be administered by the Bureau of Employees' Compensation, Federal Security Agency, in the same manner and to the same extent as if such person were a civil employee of the United States and were injured in the performance of his duty. For benefit computation, regardless of pay or pay status, such person shall be deemed to have had monthly pay of $150.

(b) This section does not apply in any case coming within the purview of the workmen's compensation law of any State, Territory, or other jurisdiction because of a concurrent employment status of such temporary member; and where such temporary member or dependent would be entitled to a benefit under the provisions of law authorizing compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties and also to any concurrent benefit from the United States on account of the same disability or death, such temporary member or dependent shall elect which benefit he shall receive.

(c) Whenever, pursuant to this section a claim is filed with the Bureau for benefits because of an alleged injury or death, the Bureau shall notify the Commandant who shall cause an investigation to be made into the facts surrounding such alleged injury and make certification with respect thereto, including certification as to such injured or deceased person's temporary membership in the Reserve and his military status, and whether the injury or death occurred incident to service.

(d) Temporary members of the Reserve who incur physical disability or contract sickness or disease while performing any specific duty to which they have been assigned by competent Coast Guard authority shall be entitled to the same hospital treatment afforded officers and enlisted men of the Coast Guard.

§ 761. Engaging in civil occupation; leave for training duty

No existing law shall be construed to prevent any member of the Reserve solely by reason of membership therein from accepting employment in any civil branch of the Federal Government or of the District of Columbia nor from receiving the pay and allowances incident to such employment in addition to the pay and allowances to which he may be entitled as a member of the Reserve, nor as prohibiting him from practicing his civilian profession or occupation before or in connection with any department of the Federal Government. Officers and employees of the United States or of the District of Columbia who are members of the Reserve shall be entitled to leave of absence from their respective duties, without loss of pay, time, or efficiency ratings when on training duty in the Reserve, not to exceed 15 calendar days in any one calendar year. All members of the Reserve who are in the employ of the United States Government or of the District of Columbia and who are ordered to duty by proper authority shall, when relieved from duty, be restored to the positions held by them when ordered to duty.

§ 762. Women's Reserve

(a) The Women's Reserve shall be a branch of the Coast Guard Reserve and shall be administered in the same manner as provided for the Reserve in all respects, except as may be necessary to adapt such provisions to the Women's Reserve, or as may be otherwise provided by act of Congress.

(b) Members of the Women's Reserve may be commissioned, appointed, or enlisted in grades and ratings as prescribed by the Secretary, but not above the grade of captain.

(c) Military authority of members of the Women's Reserve may be exercised over other members of the Women's Reserve only.

(d) Members of the Women's Reserve shall not be assigned duty on board combat vessels, or in combat aircraft, nor shall they be otherwise assigned to combat duty. They shall not be assigned to duty other than in the United States, its territories and possessions, and shall not be assigned to duty outside the continental limits of the United States, unless they have requested such duty.

821. Administration.
822. Purpose.
823. Eligibility, enrollments.
824. Disenrollment.
825. Membership in other organizations.
826. Use of member's facilities.
827. Vessel deemed public vessel.
828. Aircraft deemed public aircraft.
829. Radio station deemed government station.
830. Availability of appropriations.
831. Assignment and performance of duties.
832. Injury or death in line of duty.

§ 821. Administration

The Coast Guard Auxiliary established on February 19, 1941, is a nonmilitary organization administered by the Commandant under the direction of the Secretary.

§ 822. Purpose

The purpose of the Auxiliary is to assist the Coast Guard—

(a) to promote safety and to effect rescues on and over the high seas and on navigable waters;

(b) to promote efficiency in the operation of motorboats and yachts;

(c) to foster a wider knowledge of, and better compliance with, the laws, rules, and regulations governing the operation of motorboats and yachts; and

(d) to facilitate other operations of the Coast Guard.

§ 823. Eligibility, enrollments

The Auxiliary shall be composed of citizens of the United States and its territories and possessions, who are owners, sole or part, of motorboats, yachts, aircraft, or radio stations or who by reason of their special training or experience are deemed by the Commandant to be qualified for duty in the Auxiliary, and who may be enrolled therein pursuant to applicable regulations.

§ 824. Disenrollment

Members of the Auxiliary may be disenrolled pursuant to applicable regulations.

§ 825. Membership in other organizations.

Members of the Auxiliary may be appointed or enlisted in the Reserve, pursuant to applicable regulations, and membership in the Auxiliary shall not be a bar to membership in any other naval or military organization.

§ 826. Use of member's facilities

The Coast Guard may utilize for any purpose incident to carrying out its functions and duties as authorized by the Secretary, any motorboat, yacht, aircraft, or radio station placed at its disposition for any of such purposes by any member of the Auxiliary, by any corporation, partnership, or association, or by any State or political subdivision thereof.

§ 827. Vessel deemed public vessel

Any motorboat or yacht while assigned to authorized Coast Guard duty shall be deemed to be a public vessel of the United States, and within the meaning of section 646 of this title shall be deemed to be a vessel of the Coast Guard.

§ 828. Aircraft deemed public aircraft

Any aircraft while assigned to authorized Coast Guard duty shall be deemed to be a vessel of the Coast Guard within the meaning of section 646 of this title.

§ 829. Radio station deemed government station

Any radio station while assigned to authorized Coast Guard duty shall be deemed to be a radio station of the Coast Guard and a Government station within the meaning of chapter 5 of title 47.

§ 830. Availability of appropriations

Appropriations of the Coast Guard shall be available for the payment of actual necessary traveling expense and subsistence, or commutation of ration allowance in lieu of subsistence, of members of the Auxiliary assigned to authorized specific duties and for actual necessary expenses of operation of any motorboat, yacht, aircraft, or radio station when assigned to Coast Guard duty, but shall not be available for the payment of compensation for personal services, incident to such operation, other than to personnel of the Coast Guard or the Reserve. The term "actual necessary expenses of operation," as used in this section, shall include payment for fuel, oil, power, water, supplies, provisions, replacement or repair of equipment, repair of any damaged motorboat, yacht, aircraft, or radio station and for the constructive or actual loss of any motorboat, yacht, aircraft or radio station where it is determined, under applicable regulations, that responsibility for the loss or damage necessitating such replacement or repair of equipment, or for the damages or loss, constructive or actual, of such motorboat, yacht, aircraft, or radio station rests with the Coast Guard.

§ 831. Assignment and performance of duties

No member of the Auxiliary, solely by reason of such membership, shall be vested with or exercise, any right, privilege, power, or duty vested in or imposed upon the personnel of the Coast Guard or the Reserve, except that any such member may, under applicable regulations, be assigned specific duties, which, after appropriate training and examination, he has been found competent to perform, to effectuate the purposes of the Auxiliary. No member of the Auxiliary shall be placed in charge of a motorboat, yacht, aircraft, or radio station assigned to Coast Guard duty unless he has been specifically designated by authority of the Commandant to perform such duty. Members of the Auxiliary, when assigned to specific duties as herein authorized shall, unless otherwise limited by the Commandant, be vested with the same power and authority in the execution of such duties, as members of the regular Coast Guard assigned to similar duty. When any member of the Auxiliary is assigned to such duty he may, pursuant to regulations issued by the Secretary, be paid actual necessary traveling expenses, including a per diem allowance in conformity with standardized Government travel regulations in lieu of subsistence, while traveling and while on duty away from his home. No per diem shall be paid for any period during which quarters and subsistence in kind are furnished by the Government, and no per diem shall be paid for any period while such member is performing duty on a vessel.

§ 832. Injury or death in line of duty

When any member of the Auxiliary is physically injured or dies as a result of physical injury incurred while performing any specific duty to which he has been assigned by competent Coast Guard authority, such member or his beneficiary shall be entitled to the same benefits provided for temporary members of the Reserve who suffer physical injury or death resulting from physical injury incurred incident to service. Members of the Auxiliary who incur physical injury or contract sickness or disease while performing any specific duty to which they have been assigned by competent Coast Guard authority shall be entitled to the same hospital treatment afforded officers and entlisted men of the Coast Guard.

Chapter 25—General provisions for Coast Guard Reserve and Auxiliary

Sec.
891. Flags; pennants; uniforms and insignia.
892. Penalty.
893. Limitation on rights of members of the Auxiliary and temporary members of the Reserve.
894. Availability of facilities and appropriations.

§ 891. Flags; pennants; uniforms and insignia

The Secretary may prescribe one or more suitable distinguishing flags, pennants, or other identifying insignia to be displayed by the motorboats, yachts, aircraft, and radio stations owned by members of the Auxiliary and one or more suitable insignia which may be worn by members of the Reserve or the Auxiliary, and may prescribe one or more suitable uniforms which may be worn by members of the Auxiliary. Such flags, pennants, uniforms, and insignia may be furnished by the Coast Guard at actual cost, and the proceeds received therefor shall be credited to current appropriations from which purchase of these articles is authorized.

§ 892. Penalty

Whoever, without proper authority, flies from any building, aircraft, motorboat, yacht, or other vessel, any flag or pennant or displays any identifying insignia or wears any uniform or insignia of the Reserve or the Auxiliary shall be fined not more than $500.

§ 893. Limitation on rights of members of the Auxiliary and temporary members of the Reserve

Members of the Auxiliary and temporary members of the Reserve shall be entitled only to such rights, privileges, and benefits as are specifically set forth for them in this title or as may be specifically provided for them in any other act of Congress. Any act of Congress which grants rights, privileges, or benefits generally to military personnel, or among others, to personnel of the Coast Guard and the Coast Guard Reserve, without specifically granting such rights, privileges, or benefits to members of the Auxiliary or temporary members of the Reserve, shall not be deemed applicable to members of the Auxiliary or to temporary members of the Reserve.

§ 894. Availability of facilities and appropriations

The services and facilities of and appropriations for the Coast Guard shall be available to effectuate the purposes of the Reserve and the Auxiliary.

SEC. 2. If any part of Title 14, United States Code, as enacted by section 1 of this act, shall be held invalid the remainder of such title shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 3. No inference of a legislative construction is to be drawn by reason of the chapter in Title 14, Coast Guard, as set out in section 1 of this act, in which any section is placed, nor by reason of the catch lines used in such title.

SEC. 4. All orders, rules, and regulations of the Coast Guard in effect under provisions of law superseded or amended by this act shall, to the extent they would have been authorized under this act, remain in force and effect as the regulations and orders under the provisions of this act and shall be administered and enforced under this act as nearly as may be until specifically repealed, amended, or revised.

SEC. 5. Nothing contained in this act shall operate to abolish or reduce the grade, rank, rating, pay, allowances, or other benefits to which any person in the Coast Guard is entitled on the effective date of this act.

SEC. 6. Section 1442 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, is further amended to read, as follows:

"The Secretary of the Navy shall have authority to place on furlough any officer on the active list of the Navy and Marine Corps. This section shall not apply to reserve officers of such organizations."

SEC. 7. Section 126 of the act approved June 3, 1916, chapter 134 (39 Stat. 217; 10 U. S. C., sec. 752; 14 U. S. C., sec. 138; 34 U. S. C., sec. 895), is further amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 126. An enlisted person of the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps, including reserve components thereof, upon discharge except by way of punishment for an offense, retirement, or relief from active duty shall, under such regulations as the head of the department concerned may prescribe for personnel under his jurisdiction, receive a money allowance of 5 cents per mile for the distance from the place of discharge or release from active duty to his home, or place of acceptance for active duty, or place from which ordered to active duty, or such other place as may be determined to be most appropriate by the head of the department concerned. For sea travel involved in travel between place of discharge or release from active duty and place to which travel is authorized only transportation in kind and subsistence en route shall be allowed."

SEC. 8. The fifth and sixth paragraphs of section 7 of the act approved July 1, 1918, chapter 114 (40 Stat. 717; 14 U. S. C., secs. 164, 165), are amended to read, as follows:

"That hereafter, during the existence of war or of a national emergency declared by the President to exist, any commissioned or warrant officer of the Navy or Marine Corps of the United States on the retired list may in the discretion of the Secretary of the Navy, be ordered to active duty at sea or on shore; and any retired officer performing such active duty in time of war or national emergency, declared as aforesaid, shall be entitled to promotion on the retired list to the grade or rank, not above that of lieutenant commander in the Navy or major in the Marine Corps, and shall thereafter receive the pay and allowances thereof, which his total active service as an officer both prior and subsequent to retirement, in the manner rendered by him, would have enabled him to attain in due course of promotion had such service been rendered continuously on the active list during the period of time last past.

"That during the existence of war or of a national emergency, declared as aforesaid, any commissioned or warrant officer of the Navy or Marine Corps of the United States on the retired list, while on active duty, may be temporarily advanced to and commissioned in such higher grade or rank on the retired list, not above that of lieutenant commander in the Navy or major in the Marine Corps, as the President may determine, and any officer so advanced shall, while on active duty, be entitled to the same pay and allowances as officers of like grade or rank on the active list: Provided, That any such commissioned or warrant officer who has been so temporarily advanced in grade or rank shall, upon his relief from active duty, or in any case not later than 6 months after the termination of the war or of the national emergency, declared as aforesaid, revert to the grade or rank on the retired list and to the pay and allowance status which he would have held had he not been so temporarily advanced: Provided further, That nothing in this act shall operate to reduce the pay and allowances now allowed by law to retired officers."

SEC. 9. The act of January 12, 1919, ch. 8 (40 Stat. 1054; 34 U. S. C., sec. 537) is amended to read, as follows:

"That hereafter uniforms, accouterments, and equipment shall, upon the request of any officer of the Navy or any officer of the Marine Corps or any officer of the Coast Guard while operating with the Navy or any midshipman at the Naval Academy, be furnished by the Government at cost, subject to such restrictions and regulations as the Secretary of the Navy may prescribe."

SEC. 10. The last paragraph under the heading, "Pay, Miscellaneous," of the act approved July 11, 1919, as amended (41 Stat. 132; 10 U. S. C., sec. 1274; 14 U. S. C., sec. 50b; 34 U. S. C., sec. 540a), is further amended to read, as follows:

"The interchange, without compensation therefor, of military stores, supplies, and equipment of every character, including real estate owned by the Government, is hereby authorized between the Army and Navy upon the request of the head of one service and with the approval of the head of the other service."

SEC. 11. The sixth paragraph under the heading Miscellaneous in the act approved March 2, 1923, ch. 178 (42 Stat. 1385), is amended to read as follows:

"Nothing contained in any existing laws, or regulations or orders promulgated in pursuance of law, shall authorize on or after July 1, 1922, the issue of heat or light in kind to any person in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Public Health Service while such person is receiving an allowance for rental of quarters under the provisions of the act entitled 'An act to readjust the pay and allowances of the commissioned and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Public Health Service,' approved June 10, 1922."

SEC. 12. Section 2 of the act approved June 21, 1930, chapter 563 (46 Stat. 793; 10 U. S. C.

1028b; 14 U. S. C. 167b–2; 34 U. S. C. 399d), is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 2. All persons who have served honorably in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States during war shall, when in the active military and/or naval service of the United States, be entitled to bear the official title and upon occasions of ceremony to wear the uniform of the highest grade held by them during their war service."

SEC. 13. The act approved May 25, 1933 chapter 37 (48 Stat. 73; 10 U. S. C., sec. 486a; 14, U. S. C., sec. 15a; 34 U. S. C., sec. 1057a), is amended to read as follows:

"That the superintendents of the United States Naval Academy and the United States Military Academy may, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of War may prescribe, confer the degree of bachelor of science upon all graduates of their respective academies, from and after the date of the accrediting of said academies by the Association of American Universities."

SEC. 14. The act approved June 6, 1941, chapter 177 (55 Stat. 247; 14 U. S. C., sec. 31b; 34 U. S. C., sec. 532a), is amended to read as follows:

"That the Secretary of the Navy, insofar as Navy property is concerned, is authorized to exchange motor-propelled vehicles, airplanes, engines, and parts thereof, and obsolete, unsuitable, and unserviceable machines and tools, and parts thereof, in part payment for new equipment of the same or similar character as those proposed to be exchanged."

SEC. 15. The act approved December 12, 1941, chapter 566 (55 Stat. 797; 10 U. S. C., sec. 628a; 14 U. S. C., sec. 35b; 34 U. S. C., sec. 185), is amended to read as follows:

"That hereafter any enlisted man of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps of the United States in the active service, whose term of enlistment shall expire while he is suffering disease or injury incident to service and not due to misconduct, and who is in need of medical care or hospitalization, may, with his consent, be retained in such service beyond the expiration of his term of enlistment, and any such enlisted man shall be entitled to receive at Government expense medical care or hospitalization and his pay and allowances (including expense money authorized by law and credit for longevity) until he shall have recovered to such extent as would enable him to meet the physical requirements for reenlistment, or until it shall be ascertained by competent authority of the service concerned that the disease or injury is of a character that recovery to such an extent would be impossible, whichever is earlier: Provided, That any enlisted man whose enlistment is extended as provided herein shall be subject to forfeiture in the same manner and to the same extent as if his term of enlistment had not expired, and nothing contained in this act shall prevent any enlisted man of the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps from being held in the service without his consent under, respectively, the provisions of the one hundred and seventh article of war, the act of August 29, 1916, as amended. (40 Stat. 717), and section 1, subsection (a), of the act of May 26, 1906, as amended (50 Stat. 547)."

SEC. 16. The act approved June 6, 1942, ch. 383 (56 Stat. 328) is amended to read as follows:

"That all officers of the Coast and Geodetic Survey who have been specially commended for their performance of duty in actual combat by the head of the executive department under whose jurisdiction such duty was performed, shall, upon retirement, be placed upon the retired list with the rank of the next higher grade and with three-fourths of the active-duty pay of the grade in which serving at the time of retirement."

SEC. 17. Section 8 of the act approved June 27, 1942, ch. 451 (56 Stat. 423), is amended to read as follows:

"The provisions of this act, except as may be necessary to adapt the same thereto, shall apply to the Marine Corps in like manner and to the same extent and with same relative conditions in all respects as are provided for in the Regular Navy."

SEC. 18. The last paragraph under the subheading "General Provisions" under the heading "Navy Department" of the act approved December 23, 1943, chapter 380 (57 Stat. 628; 14 U. S. C., sec. 148; 34 U. S. C., sec. 197a and 722), is amended to read as follows:

"On and after July 1, 1943, the limitation on the cost of civilian clothing per person, including an overcoat when necessary, for enlisted personnel of the Navy and Marine Corps given discharges for bad conduct, undesirability, unsuitability, or inaptitude is hereby increased to $30."

SEC. 19. Section 1 of the act approved February 25, 1946, ch. 35 (60 Stat. 30) is amended to read as follows:

"That, hereafter, in the settlement of the accounts of deceased officers or enlisted persons of the Navy and Marine Corps, where no demand is presented by a duly appointed legal representative of the estate, the accounting officers may allow the amount found due to the decedent's widow, widower, or legal heirs in the following order of precedence: First, to the widow or widower; second, if decedent left no widow or widower, or the widow or widower be dead at time of settlement, then to the children or their issue, per stirpes; third, if no widow, widower, or descendants, then to the father and mother in equal parts; fourth, if either the father or mother be dead, then to the one surviving; fifth, if there be no widow, widower, child, father, or mother at the date of settlement, then to the brothers and sisters and children of deceased brothers and sisters, per stirpes: Provided, That this act shall not be so construed as to prevent payment from the amount due the decedent's estate of funeral expenses, provided a claim therefor is presented by the person or persons who actually paid the same before settlement by the accounting officers."

SEC. 20. This act shall take effect on the first day of the third month after approval by the President but shall not affect any proceedings commenced by or against any person prior to the effective date of this act.

SEC. 21. The sections or parts thereof of the Revised Statutes or Statutes at Large enumerated in the following schedule are hereby repealed. Any rights or liabilities now existing under such sctions or parts thereof shall not be affected by this repeal.

Mr. BRYSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. BRYSON. Mr. Speaker, this bill is a clean bill which has been reported unanimously by the Committee on the Judiciary after consideration of the bill, H. R. 273.

This bill is part of the comprehensive plan to enact each title of the United States Code into law. It follows the style of the eight other titles which were enacted into law in the Eightieth Congress. This is the first of the titles of the code relating to a subject matter which is not ordinarily within the jurisdiction of the Committee on the Judiciary. Accordingly, the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, which has jurisdiction over legislation relating to the Coast Guard, was invited to study the bill in conjunction with Subcommittee No. 4 of the Committee on the Judiciary. A subcommittee of three members of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries met with a subcommittee of three members of our committee on several occasions at which time the bill was considered in detail, section by section, and each proposed change in substantive law was called to the attention of that committee by our law revision counsel. In addition, the Commandant of the Coast Guard and two other officers of the Coast Guard were present and assisted in explaining the reasons for the proposed changes. After full consideration the subcommittee of Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee reported favorably to the full committee and the approval of that committee was expressed in the following letter dated May 3, 1949, from the distinguished chairman of that committee, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLAND] to the chairman of the Judiciary Committee:

MAY 3, 1949.

Hon. EMANUEL CELLER,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. CELLER: The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries has completed its study of the bill (H. R. 273) to revise, codify, and enact into law title 14, of the United States Code, entitled "Coast Guard."

The committee appreciates the opportunity afforded to it to engage in this study, through the policy of the Committee on the Judiciary to submit its codification bills to the standing committee of the House having jurisdiction over the subject matter contained in such bills.

A subcommittee of this committee together with its counsel studied all the changes in substantive law proposed by the bill. It met on three occasions with a subcommittee of your committee and its counsel at which time it had the benefit of statements from representatives of the Coast Guard, and all proposed changes were explained in detail.

We believe your committee has done excellent and commendable work in this field. It is accordingly the belief and judgment of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries that the bill H. R. 273, with the minor changes agreed upon during the course of the meetings referred to above, merits the favorable action of the Congress. We recommend such action.

Sincerely yours,

S. O. BLAND, Chairman.

The Bureau of the Budget has also approved the bill after reference of it to all departments concerned, particularly the Navy, Treasury, and Commerce.

CONVEYANCE OF LAND IN MISSOULA COUNTY, MONT.

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 1720) to provide for the conveyance of certain land in Missoula County, Mont., to the State of Montana for the use and benefit of Montana State University.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to donate and convey, to the State of Montana for the use and benefit of Montana State University, Missoula, Mont., all the right, title, and interest of the United States in and to certain land situated in Missoula County, Mont., more particularly described as follows:

The southwest quarter of the northeast quarter, the south half of the northwest quarter, and the north half of the southwest quarter, section 30, township 13 north, range 19 west, Montana principle meridian, containing approximately 200 acres.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, line 4, after the comma, insert "at one-half the value thereof fixed by the Secretary of the Interior."

"SEC. 2. The patent issued under this act shall contain a reservation to the United States of all mineral deposits in the lands and of the right to prospect for, mine, and remove the same under applicable laws and under regulations to be established by the Secretary."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

COTTON STATISTICS

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 3444) to provide for the collection and publication of cotton statistics.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2 of the act of April 2, 1924 (43 Stat. 31), be amended to read as follows: "That the statistics of the quantity of cotton ginned shall show the quantity ginned from each crop prior to August 1, August 16, September 1, September 16, October 1, October 16, November 1, November 14, December 1, December 13, January 16, and March 1: Provided, That the Director of the Census may limit the canvasses of August 1 and August 16 to those sections of the cotton-growing States in which cotton has been ginned. The quantity of cotton consumed in manufacturing establishments, the quantity of baled cotton on hand, the number of active consuming cotton spindles, the number of active spindle-hours, and the statistics of cotton imported and exported shall relate to each month, and shall be published as soon as possible after the close of the month. The Director of the Census shall furnish to the Department of Agriculture, immediately prior to the publication of each report of that Department regarding the cotton crop, the latest available statistics hereinbefore mentioned, and the said Department of Agriculture shall publish the same in connection with each of its reports concerning cotton."

SEC. 2. That the last sentence of section 6 of the act of April 2, 1924 (43 Stat. 31), be amended to read as follows: "When such date of release falls on Sunday, a legal holiday, or other day which pursuant to statute or Executive order is a nonworkday in the Department of Commerce at Washington generally, the reports shall be issued at 11 o'clock antemeridian of the next succeeding workday."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

COUNTY OF MISSOULA, MONT.

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 2197) to authorize acquisition by the county of Missoula, State of Montana, of certain lands for public-use purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and hereby is, authorized, in his discretion, to transfer without consideration title to the county of Missoula, State of Montana, to certain lands described as follows: Southeast quarter northeast quarter, southeast quarter southeast quarter, southwest quarter southwest quarter, section 30, township 13 north, range 19 west, Montana principal meridian; south half northeast quarter, southeast quarter, section 25, township 13 north, range 20 west, Montana principal meridian. Such transfer shall be subject to a reservation to the United States of all mineral deposits in the land conveyed and of the right to mine and remove same, subject to such regulations as may be established by the Secretary.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following: "That the Secretary of the Interior be, and hereby is, authorized, in his discretion, to sell and convey, at one-half the value thereof fixed by the Secretary, certain lands to the county of Missoula, State of Montana, described as follows: Southeast quarter northeast quarter, southeast quarter southeast quarter, section 30, township 13 north, range 19 west, Montana principal meridian; south half northeast quarter, southeast quarter, section 25, township 13 north, range 20 west, Montana principal meridian.

"SEC. 2. The patent issued under this act shall contain a reservation to the United States of all mineral deposits in the lands and of the right to prospect for, mine, and remove the same under applicable laws and under regulations to be established by the Secretary."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF CIVIL SERVICE RETIREMENT ACT

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 3512) to amend the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended, to authorize the exemption of certain employees of the Library of Congress whose employment is temporary or of uncertain duration.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subsection 3 (c) of the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(c) The provisions of this act shall not aply to employees of the Senate or the House of Representatives whose employment is temporary or of uncertain duration; and the Architect of the Capitol and the Librarian of Congress are authorized to exclude from the operation of this act any employees under the Office of the Architect of the Capitol and the Library of Congress, respectively, whose tenure of employment is temporary or of uncertain duration."

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 7, after "duration" insert "or to temporary employees of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts or of the courts specified in section 610 of title 28 of the United States Code."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to amend the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended, to authorize the exemption of certain employees of the Library of Congress and of the judicial branch of the Government whose employment is temporary or of uncertain duration."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ADMINISTRATION OF THE CIVIL AERONAUTICS ACT OF 1938

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 4032) to improve the administration of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1001 of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938, as amended, is hereby further amended by adding after the word "Proceedings" in the heading a semicolon and the words "Assignment of Functions"; by inserting after such heading a subheading as follows: "Proceedings of the Board"; by inserting "(a)" after 1001; by striking out the word "may" in the first sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the word "shall"; and by adding at the end of such section a new subsection as follows:

"ASSIGNMENT OF WORK, BUSINESS, OR FUNCTIONS

"(b) (1) The Board may direct that any of its work, business, or functions under any provision of this act (except final orders predicated upon notice and hearing under sections 401 (d), 401 (h), 401 (i), 401 (k), 401 (n), 402 (b), 402 (g), 402 (h), 406 (a), 1002 (d), 1002 (f), 1002 (g), 1002 (h), 1003, and this subsection) be assigned to an individual member or members of the Board, or to an eligible employee or employees of the Board designated by such order for action thereon. The Board may by order at any time amend, modify, supplement, or rescind any assignment.

"(2) Eligible employees for purposes of this subsection shall include the general counsel, the Secretary, any bureau director, any division or section chief, and any employee having responsibilities of comparable importance. When any member or any employee is unable to act upon any matter so assigned because of absence or other cause, the Chairman of the Board may designate another member or employee, as the case may be, to serve temporarily until the Board otherwise orders.

"(3) Individuals to whom assignments are so made shall have authority to perform the work, business, or functions assigned to them under this subsection and for such purpose shall have all the jurisdiction and powers conferred by this act upon the Board, and be subject to the same duties and obligations. The Secretary and seal of the Board shall be the Secretary and the seal for each such individual. Except as otherwise provided in this subsection (b), any order or other action of any such individual or individuals with respect to any matter assigned to him or them shall have the same force and effect and may be made, evidenced, and enforced, and shall be subject to judicial review, in the same manner as if taken by the Board.

"(4) Any party affected by an order or other action taken by any such individual or individuals with respect to any matter assigned to him or them under this subsection may apply for consideration by the Board of such order or other action, subject to such reasonable limitations as may be established by the Board. Such application shall be passed upon by the Board, and the Board may grant such application and reconsider such order or other action if it has reason to believe that such order or other action was issued or taken in error. The Board, upon its own initiative, may reconsider the order or other action of such individual or individuals either before or after it has become effective. If upon reconsideration by the Board it shall appear that the order or other action in question is in any respect unjust or unwarranted, the Board shall reverse, change, or modify the same accordingly; otherwise the Board shall affirm such order or other action. The making of such an application for reconsideration shall not excuse any person from complying with or obeying the order or other action or operate to stay or postpone the enforcement thereof unless the Board shall otherwise have provided by rule or order."

With the following committee amendments.

Page 2, line 10, strike out "by such order."
Line 11, strike out "by order."

Page 3, line 16, after "and" strike out the remainder of line 16 and all of lines 17, 18, and 19, down to and including "error", and insert "reconsideration may be granted if sufficient reason therefor be made to appear."

Page 3, line 23, after "effective." strike out the remainder of line 23 and all of lines 24 and 25, and on page 4, lines 1 and 2, down to and including "action.", and insert "Upon reconsideration, the Board may reverse, change, modify, or affirm such order or other action in whole or in part."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDING SECTION 10 OF THE RECLAMATION PROJECT ACT OF 1939

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return for immediate consideration to Consent Calendar No. 107, the bill (H. R. 1922) to amend section 10 of the Reclamation Project Act of 1939.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

Mr. JENSEN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I previously objected to the consideration of this bill but have since conferred with the gentleman from Montana [Mr. D'EWART] who has explained the bill to my satisfaction. Therefore, I withdraw my objection to the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I would like at this time to make a statement regarding the bill H. R. 2984. I objected to that. I have no objection to tying Parker Dam and Davis Dam together, but I do fear that this is an attempt to tie Hoover Dam power with Davis Dam and Parker Dam, which is against the law.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MONRONEY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. CUNNINGHAM]?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in section 10 of the Reclamation Project Act of 1939 (53 Stat. 1187, 1197), the words ", for periods not to exceed 50 years," are hereby repealed.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, strike out all after the enacting clause and insert "That clause (b) of section 10 of the Reclamation Project Act of 1939 (53 Stat. 1187, 1197) is hereby amended to read as follows: 'grant leases and licenses for periods not to exceed 50 years, and easements or rights-of-way with or without limitation as to period of time affecting lands or interest in lands withdrawn or acquired and being administered under the Federal reclamation laws in connection with the construction or operation and maintenance of any project.'"

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BERLIN AIRLIFT MEDAL

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 2737) to establish the decoration Medal for Humane Action for award to persons serving in or with the armed forces of the United States participating in the current military effort to supply necessities of life to the people of Berlin, Germany.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

Mr. O'HARA of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain the bill?

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, I am sure that no Member of the House will object to this bill. I appreciate the opportunity to briefly pay tribute to those who rendered such outstanding service in the Berlin airlift. This bill provides a medal for those who participated in the Berlin airlift. Mr. Speaker, I am going to make a full statement if there is no objection to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. O'HARA of Minnesota. In that event, Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby created a decoration to be known as the Medal for Humane Action, with suitable appurtenances and devices, which the President, under such rules and regulations as he shall prescribe, may award to any person who while serving in or with the armed forces of the United States at any time during the period commencing with and terminating on such appropriate dates as the President may determine shall have distinguished himself by meritorious participation in the humane military effort to supply necessities of life to the people of Berlin, Germany.

SEC. 2. No more than one Medal for Humane Action shall be issued to any one person, but for succeeding actions justifying the award of such medal the President may award a suitable bar or other device to be worn as he shall direct.

SEC. 3. Any individual who shall have qualified for an award under this act who shall have died before the making thereof may nevertheless be granted such award posthumously, in which event the award shall be presented to such representative of the deceased as the President may designate.

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the proposed bill, which has the unanimous support of the Armed Services Committee, is to provide additional and specific congressional recognition for the magnificent achievement of personnel who have participated in the Berlin airlift. The recognition proposed in the bill is a Medal for Humane Action which the President is authorized to award to personnel participating in the airlift.

The proposed bill is not a departmental measure. It is initiated by the Committee on Armed Services for the reason that the accomplishments of the Berlin airlift personnel have been so tremendous and have already had such far-reaching effects internationally that, the committee feels, specific congressional recognition should be given.

The combined airlift task force of the western allies has been the greatest aircargo undertaking in the history of the world. It substantially exceeds the tremendous wartime effort made in flying food, fuel, personnel, and machinery between India and China across the Himalayan Mountains. So vast has been this effort and so striking its success that your committee believes the entire free world should pay homage to those who carried the effort through to completion.

The airlift was initiated on June 25, 1948, after the land route to Berlin had been blockaded by the Russians. It was on that date that our European commander in chief in Berlin requested the Air Force commander in Wiesbaden, Germany, to deliver 45 tons of supplies to Berlin by air. Eighty tons were delivered the next day. Meanwhile the British had commenced their efforts, and the historic undertaking was begun in earnest.

Quickly thereafter all available aircraft in western Europe were placed in operation in the airlift. Within 2 weeks 54 of the giant C–54's had been assembled from Texas, Alaska, the Caribbean, and Hawaii, and the British brought into use 16 additional of their cargo aircraft. This was soon augmented by 82 more British aircraft, so that by the end of July over 1,000 long tons of supplies were being moved into Berlin by the British.

By late July, Maj. Gen. William H. Tunner, operations chief of the Military Air Transport Service and the wartime commander of the famous "Hump" flights from India into China, had arrived in Wiesbaden, Germany, the headquarters of this vast operation.

What was now underway, and to which American, British, and French genius was to be devoted for many months, was the supplying by air 2,500,000 people living in western Berlin, an effort far beyond any comparable undertaking in history. It was estimated that 4,500 tons of food and supplies daily would be required to meet minimum needs, and to accomplish this, the United States would need to supply at least 225 C–54 aircraft.

However, only 180 such aircraft could be quickly assembled for the airlift, so the problem at the outset was one of making the available aircraft perform with such efficiency as to compensate for the deficiency in number. To obtain even the minimum number, the aircraft had to be assembled from Japan, Panama, Alaska, Hawaii, and from Air Force and Navy stations throughout the United States.

From this point on the airlift becomes a saga of accomplishment, of teamwork, of ingenuity, and of heroic effort which almost surpassed the realm of possibility. The effort itself seemed utterly fantastic. That it succeeded despite Russian interference, despite adverse weather, despite aircraft shortages, despite the magnitude of the task, will surely result in its being recorded in history as one of the great human accomplishments of all time.

Twenty-seven Americans and 22 British pilots lost their lives in this undertaking. But their efforts and the efforts of the thousands of others engaged in the airlift resulted in the bringing to Berlin, entirely by air, more than 1,500,000 tons of food, fuel, and other supplies. In one 24-hour period nearly 13,000 tons of supplies were brought to Berlin.

The daily food requirements alone imposed a huge burden upon the airlift. To meet the very minimum daily needs of the people of Berlin, British and American aircraft had to provide 3 tons of yeast, 5 tons of dried whole milk, 10 tons of cheese, 11 tons of coffee, 19 tons of salt, 38 tons of dry skimmed milk, 64 tons of fats, 85 tons of sugar, 109 tons of meat and fish, 125 tons of cereals, 144 tons of vegetables, 180 tons of potatoes, and 646 tons of flour and wheat, for a total of 1,439 tons of food daily. In addition, coal, mail, consumers goods, medical and industrial supplies, and personnel had to be brought in, with the daily minimum requirement averaging approximately 4,500 tons.

Not only was this requirement met, but it was substantially exceeded. The food ration was even increased while the airlift was in operation.

In the face of such astounding achievements, it is not surprising that the Russians started seeking a means of removing themselves from their predicament. Very recently the blockade has been lifted, the western sectors of Berlin have been saved, the firm determination of the United States, England, and France to maintain their position in the face of hostile pressure has been demonstrated, and freedom-loving people throughout the world have taken renewed assurance as to the security of their way of life.

As of May 10, there were 16,468 Air Force personnel participating in the direct support of the Berlin Airlift. There were 820 Navy personnel and 7,000 Army personnel, with an aggregate of approximately 70,000 American military personnel involved in this great undertaking. Also as of May 10, United States aircraft had made 130,411 flights into Berlin carrying cargo and 969 flights carrying passengers. American aircraft had carried 1,207,801 tons of food, equipment, supplies, and personnel into Berlin as of May 10.

As regards the Air Force aircraft participating in the airlift, there were 5 C–82 Fairchild flying boxcars and 204 C–54 four-motor Douglas aircraft, for a total of 209. In addition, 21 R5D naval aircraft—four-motor Douglas—participated, making a total of 230 American aircraft serving the airlift. These aircraft were organized into 5 groups composed of 16 troop-carrier squadrons, 2 Navy squadrons, 2 medical groups, 2 air-base groups, 2 matériel and supply groups, 2 air-base groups at Burtonwood, England.

As for the cumulative cost of the airlift, it was as follows:

Total operating costs	$56,355,300
Total support costs	62,596,500
Reserves	40,541,100
Aircraft wrecked	7,522,000
Depreciation of aircraft	10,852,200
Total through May 9, 1949	177,867,100

Represents cost of Air Force and Navy operations with Navy cost computed by using comparable Air Force factors.

Operating costs: Includes crew and base support personnel in USAFE, fuel and oil, USAFE maintenance, subsistence, and clothing.

Support costs: Includes accrued AMC depot maintenance, civilian performed 1,000 overhaul, movement of units to operation, commercial air lift, commercial truck military-water transportation, engineers, supplies for new runways and per diem in transit.

Reserves: For costs of terminating the operation and inventories.

Aircraft wrecked: Eighteen C–54's and two R5D's at $310,000; eight C–47's at $110,000; one C–82 at $442,000.

Depreciation of aircraft: Based on 10,321 hours life, no salvage value.

Total cost: From June 26, 1948, to date of report and reflects actual operating costs through February 28, 1948; estimated operating costs March 1, 1949 to date, and estimates for all other costs.

This tremendous effort, though costly, has had far-reaching results of considerable and lasting value. It is estimated that the experience gained in the airlift has advanced the science of air-cargo transport by 10 to 20 years. Certainly the airlift was a convincing demonstration of the ability of free people to work together as a team. Further, it was evidence of magnificent cooperation between the American Army, Navy, and Air Force and the many American civilian organizations and technicians without whose efforts the airlift could not have succeeded. Moreover, the close cooperation with the British and French in this allied undertaking was powerful evidence of the integration of the western democracies in the face of hostile pressures which, only a few years ago, might have been met by vain efforts to counter the menace single-handedly.

The political consequences, internationally, of the airlift are enormous. Unquestionably the accomplishments of these aviators have markedly raised American standing throughout the world. The economic consequences are likewise vast, for currency in the western sector of Berlin has been stabilized and the firmness of American determination to work toward the building of a sound European economy has been convincingly demonstrated. The airlift, moreover, has become a symbol of hope throughout the world—so much so that the determination of free people throughout all Europe to resist Russian expansion has been increased manyfold.

The airlift has saved this Nation and the western democracies from a terrible loss in prestige; conversely, its success has raised that prestige to new heights. The airlift has saved western Berlin from starvation—doubtless from communism. It has had many other far-reaching effects, to such an extent that the Armed Services Committee unanimously recommends immediate passage of the proposed bill as a measure of congressional recognition of this vast accomplishment and the appreciation of the American people for the courage and capacity that the airlift personnel have so splendidly demonstrated to the world.

The proposed bill has the endorsement of the National Military Establishment and the approval of the Bureau of the Budget.

Mr. DEANE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VINSON. I yield.

Mr. DEANE. I join with my colleague, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. VINSON], chairman of the Committee on Armed Services, in recognizing the wonderful feat performed by American and British airmen, in carrying out the Berlin airlift. I was very much interested to note recently their March efficiency ratings of these air units. Both the units from the Air Force as well as the two Navy squadrons have performed wonderful feats.

Mr. O'HARA of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VINSON. I yield.

Mr. O'HARA of Minnesota. I wish to say to the gentleman that I agree with everything he has said about the importance of the Berlin airlift. But, of course, day after day many of our fliers are doing the same kind of service in peacetime that is not connected with the airlift, and for which they are getting no medal or decoration.

Mr. VINSON. That may be true, but, at the same time, this was such an outstanding feat and it had such significant international complications that the committee felt it should be recognized in this way.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. VINSON] has expired.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

COLLIER'S ANNUAL CONGRESSIONAL AWARD FOR DISTINGUISHED SERVICE TO THE NATION

Mr. WORLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. WORLEY. At a ceremony at the White House on May 7, President Truman presented Collier's annual congressional award for distinguished service to the Nation to our beloved Speaker and my fellow Texan, SAM RAYBURN of Bonham, with these words:

He hasn't had to die to be a statesman.

The award was given to Speaker RAYBURN for his service to the country in 1948, at which time, he was Democratic leader in the Republican controlled Eightieth Congress.

Mr. Truman presented to Senator ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG, of Grand Rapids, Mich., a like award on behalf of Collier's magazine. It was the second time Senator VANDENBERG had received the award. President Truman recalled that during the 1948 presidential campaign he spoke in the Senator's home town saying that city contained a statesman I am very fond of and his name is VANDENBERG.

Subsequently at a luncheon at the Carlton Hotel, attended by Vice President Alben W. Barkley, Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson, members of the Cabinet, our Majority Leader John W. McCormack, Eric Johnston, award committee chairman, and others who attended the White House ceremony, Mr. Truman spoke informally, saying:

I sometimes have disagreements with the Congress—the Eightieth. I haven't had any disagreements with the Eighty-first. It is the privilege of the President to disagree with Congress; it is the privilege of the Congress to disagree with the President; and the people have to decide who is right.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert into the record at this point the text of the President's remarks on the occasion and an article written by James C. Derieux and published by Collier's in the May 14 issue, explaining the awards to Speaker RAYBURN and Senator VANDENBERG.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

(The matter referred to follows:)

INFORMAL REMARKS OF THE PRESIDENT AT THE COLLIER'S AWARD LUNCHEON, CARLTON HOTEL, WASHINGTON, D. C., MAY 7, 1949

Mr. Chairman, Mr. Vice President, Senator Vandenberg, Mr. Speaker, Mr. Chief Justice, and publishers and president of Collier's. I am at a very serious disadvantage. You have been sitting here for the last hour and a half listening to the cream of the crop in storytellers and oratory. Your President is not gifted in that direction at all. I can't tell a story. When they passed around the gift of gab, they left me out. But I am very much interested in what Collier's has been doing the last 4 years, to give the people of the country a viewpoint as to what their responsibility is toward that greatest of all legislative bodies—the Congress of the United States.

I was a Member of that Conrgess for 10 years. I know their difficulties, and I know that mail situation, Van. I know that the people who are in disagreement with you are very anxious to let you know about it, and those who agree with you don't care whether you know it or not. And that is a difficult situation for a man to find himself in, for the simple reason that a Congressman and a Senator—a Senator is a Congressman, but a Congressmen is not always a Senator—a man must, when he is a Member of that great legislative body, remember that he is an elected representative of the people of his State and district, and that the people who elect him expect him to find out what the facts are, and then make up his mind on what he thinks is right. Sometimes that is not always in agreement with the constituents.

It is the business of the Congressman and the Senator, then, to inform his constituents as to what the facts are and, if he is right, they will stay with him—polls or no polls, Dr. Gallup. And that, I think, is what this award is intended to do, to bring home the fact that we are a Republic, that we have a representative form of government, and that the representatives of the people are elected by the people because they think—the people think—those representatives have brains enough to get the facts and make up their minds on what is right. And so long as that condition prevails, our form of government is absolut ly safe—and I am here to tell you, that I think it is the greatest form of government in the history of the world.

The men—they were not old, but rather young men—who met in 1787 and wrote the Constitution of the United States were plowing new ground, they were taking a chance on whether the system of government which they set up would work or not. And it took us 80 years to make it work. Now we are getting the fruits of what those forefathers of ours foresaw.

I am pleased to death that Collier's is bringing it home to the people in a way they can understand. I sometimes have disagreements with the Congress—the Eightieth. I haven't had any disagreements with the Eighty-first. It is the privilege of the President to disagree with Congress, it is the privilege of the Congress to disagree with the President; and the people have to decide who is right.

I hope that Collier's will continue this program. It has been my privilege—it was my privilege in the beginning—to consult with the editors and publishers of Collier's when they had this idea in mind, and when it was first inaugurated. I was Vice President of the United States when they talked to me about it, and it happened to be my privilege to make the first award, the second award, the third award, and today the fourth award. And I hope it will be my privilege to make one next year, and the year after that, and the year after that.

I want it distinctly understood that the President of the United States never made a suggestion to the committee as to who should get an award, but I will say this to you, that if I had made a suggestion I would probably have made the ones they picked.

I hope that the situation will continue, and that out of it will grow a responsibility of the constituents to the Members of Congress, and a stronger responsibility of the Congressmen and Senators to do what they think is right, regardless of how, sometimes, it may not please a great many people. In the long run, I have always believed and I still believe, that right does and will prevail.

Thank you.

COLLIER'S CONGRESSIONAL AWARDS

(By James C. Derieux)

ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG, Republican Senator from Michigan, serving his twenty-first year in the United States Senate, and SAM RAYBURN, Representative from Texas, Democratic veteran of 36 years in the House, are the 1948 winners of Collier's congressional awards for distinguished service to the Nation.

At a special ceremony at the White House on May 7, President Truman will present each of these two distinguished legislators with a beautiful engraved silver plaque. And to show its good faith, Collier's will also make two gifts of $10,000 each to be given to whatever public purposes the winners designate. The beneficiaries will be announced at the ceremony.

Collier's believes that these annual awards—one to a Senator and one to a Representative—help to point up the fundamental role that Congress plays in our system of government. When this award program was initiated in 1945, an alarming number of men in wide areas of the world had turned from representative government, and even in this country there was noisy impatience with the necessarily slow process of the legislative body. Collier's felt that by putting the spotlight on legislators who had done outstanding jobs, the public's faith in our democratic institutions would be stimulated and maintained.

The committees making these selections have been composed of noted citizens who, in reaching their decisions, always have acted independently of Collier's. The committees have served under the chairmanships of Owen D. Young, Chester Davis and Eric Johnston, the latter serving as chairman for 1947 and for 1948, the year for which the latest awards are made.

In previous years, under the rules of the committee, a winner was not eligible to compete again. But this year's committee threw the competition wide open to all members of the Senate and House, and Senator VANDENBERG won the Collier's award for a second time. In 1945 he was chosen because of his key role in establishing a national, as distinguished from a partisan, foreign policy for the United States.

Recall the uneasy position of world peace last spring and the role Senator VANDENBERG took in shoring it up and you will see why the committee chose him again:

The World Bank had not brought economic stability to the world. The British loan had not proved, as promised, all that was needed to win the peace. The United Nations was stymied behind many Russian vetoes. America was rapidly losing her faith in the United Nations.

Working closely with the Department of State, Senator VANDENBERG, as chairman of the Senate's Committee on Foreign Relations, drew up what has become known as the Vandenberg resolution, which passed the Senate June 11, 1948, by a vote of 64 to 4; and this resolution gave headway to thinking and planning for regional pacts, such as the one recently announced by the North Atlantic nations.

At this moment in history Senator VANDENBERG's dynamic resolution was offered to support the United Nations and strengthen the security of democratic countries.

Though described as the successor to the Monroe Doctrine and as a possible turning point in the affairs of America and the world, the resolution was not extensively commented on when before the Senate. Only a few newspapers appeared to get its full significance. One of these, the New York Times, described it as undertaking "to accomplish in the military field what the European recovery program is designed to accomplish on the economic plane * * *."

Though escaping wide popular attention at the time of its passage, it did not escape the notice of the 25 men and women who make up Collier's congressional awards committee. Senator VANDENBERG's support of the European recovery program strengthened the committee's judgment concerning him. So the 65-year-old Michigan Republican, a former isolationist, became the first man to win two Collier's congressional awards—both times by his work in the field of international affairs.

Runners-up for the award in the Senate were EUGENE D. MILLIKIN, Republican, of Colorado; WAYNE MORSE, Republican, of Oregon; JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY, Democrat, of Wyoming; ROBERT A. TAFT, Republican, of Ohio. The listing is alphabetical.

Representative RAYBURN (he became Speaker again in 1949) was selected winner in the House mainly because of his high performance as minority leader in 1948 and for his party loyalty, a fundamental quality if our two-party system is to survive.

In 1946, when the Republicans had swept into power in Congress, Mr. RAYBURN, who had enjoyed a long and distinguished career as Speaker in a Democratic House, was asked by his party colleagues to serve as minority leader.

He didn't want to. But his party called, and SAM RAYBURN answered: "Our representative Government is based on the two-party system; and that system is based on party organizations. It takes a mighty big man to be bigger than his party. I know I am not that big. So I serve my party, as the best way open to me to serve my country."

It was this attitude that made him work as conscientiously at being minority leader as if he were a man on his way up, instead of a man who already had been to the top.

A less distinguished legislator in Representative RAYBURN's position might have become merely a perfunctory critic of the Republican majority, making a hot speech now and then.

In the course of 1948 Mr. RAYBURN was a real leader, and never hesitated to risk his own political neck when faithfulness to party policy called on him to do so. He took a stand on every issue. The party line in domestic affairs, the national line in foreign affairs—that was his record in 1948, and it was consistent with his record of the 36 years he has served in the House.

Eight other Members of the House—given below in alphabetical order—received one or more votes for the award: ROBERT CROSSER, Democrat of Ohio; HELEN GAHAGAN DOUGLAS, Democrat of California; CHARLES A. EATON, Republican of New Jersey; HERMAN P. EBERHARTER, Democrat of Pennsylvania; CHRISTIAN A. HERTER, Republican of Massachusetts (received the House award last year); ESTES KEFAUVER, Democrat of Tennessee (now a Senator); JOHN M. VORYS, Republican of Ohio; JAMES W. WADSWORTH, Republican of New York.

Before casting their ballots for both House and Senate winners members of the awards committee made extensive studies of the candidates' voting records, their legislative proposals and speeches. They got behind the news stories, behind the popular conceptions, to learn who really did the big jobs in Congress in 1948.

AMENDMENT OF UNITED STATES CODE, TITLE 18, CRIMES AND CRIMINAL PROCEDURE; AND TITLE 28, JUDICIARY AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURE

Mr. BRYSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3762) to amend title 18, entitled "Crimes and Criminal Procedure," and title 28, entitled "Judiciary and Judicial Procedure," of the United States Code, and for other purposes.

Since the bill was called up earlier today I have talked with the majority leader and with the minority leader. These gentlemen are now in accord with the situation and concur in my action.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I understand the objection earlier today was based on the ground that the gentleman from South Carolina, chairman of the subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary having charge of this particular work, did not state that he had cleared his request through the Speaker, the majority leader, and the minority leader.

It has been a standing custom of the House for many years that when a Member desires to call up a bill for immediate consideration by unanimous consent he may not do so until he has cleared his request through the Speaker, the majority leader, and the minority leader. We on this side always had to comply with that rule and I admired the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MCCORMACK], and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN], for compelling that compliance; I think it is a good practice. I hope that no bills will be permitted to be considered in the House by unanimous consent until the member submitting the request states to the House that there has been such compliance.

The gentleman from North Carolina has now complied with the custom. I am familiar with this bill; it was before the Committee on the Judiciary. It is technical; it is long; the committee has done a vast amount of work on it, and I think it is in as good shape as we can get it. The House passed it by unanimous consent; it went to the Senate. The Senate made a few amendments which the subcommittee thinks are clarifying. Under the circumstances I hope that the unanimous-consent request will be granted and the Senate amendments agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the Senate amendments?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

The Senate amendments were agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

STANDING ROCK SIOUX TRIBE OF INDIANS

Mr. PETERSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 3974) to promote the rehabilitation of the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe of Indians and better utilization of the resources of the Standing Rock Indian Reservation, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman from Florida explain this bill?

Mr. PETERSON. Mr. Speaker, this bill contemplates a series of loans in order to rehabilitate the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe of Indians. This Indian tribe has a very remarkable record where loans have been heretofore made. They have paid back 99 percent of these loans. It is felt that this particular method will enable them to rehabilitate themselves and, in turn, pay the loans back without actually becoming a charge on the Federal Government.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. This is a loan to the Sioux Indians?

Mr. PETERSON. Yes, the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. How much?

Mr. PETERSON. It contemplates $250,000, then an additional $250,000 to be in land purchases, which also will be a loan. This could, over a period years, run up to as much as $10,000,000, but it is a revolving fund.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. The Sioux Tribe has paid back 99 percent of their previous loans?

Mr. PETERSON. Yes. These particular ones have a 99-percent record. In the report we set out the exact details. The gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. LEMKE] has followed this matter very closely and is heartily in accord with it. He asks for the immediate consideration of the bill because of the problems out there.

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PETERSON. I yield to the gentleman from North Dakota.

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, I may say for the information of the minority leader that in the case of 260 individual Indians to whom they furnished cattle on the theory they would pay back what the Government put in all but 16 paid up. The Government did not lose on the 16 either because as soon as the committee discovered they were not putting up hay enough for these cattle, the 16 herds were taken away and given to other Indians. So we have had no loss.

Mr. PETERSON. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I commend the Sioux Tribe of Indians for their action and I hope it will spread to other debtors that the United States may have.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to provide facilities, employment, and services essential for a self-supporting economy for the Standing Rock Sioux Indians, and to lay a stable foundation on which these Indians can engage in diversified economic activities, ultimately attain standards of living comparable with those enjoyed by other citizens, and looking forward to the withdrawal of Federal services and supervision from these Indians, the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to undertake, within the limits of the funds from time to time appropriated pursuant to this act, a program of basic improvements for the conservation and development of the physical and human resources of the Standing Rock Sioux Reservation, including development of off-reservation employment and assistance in adjustments related to such employment.

SEC. 2. In order to assist in carrying out the purposes of this act, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $10,000,000, from which the Secretary of the Interior, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, may make loans to the tribe or to members of the tribe for the purposes hereinafter set forth.

SEC. 3. Not to exceed $2,000,000 may be used for loans for the purchase of lands and interests therein, including water rights and improvements. All lands and interest therein, water rights and improvements, including restricted, trust, or tribal property, may be exchanged for other lands of equal value. Title to the lands and rights acquired may be taken in the name of the United States in trust for the tribe or members thereof, and shall be exempt from taxation so long as title shall be held by the United States. The maximum maturity on such loans shall be 40 years. Upon repayment of loans, the interests of the United States in such lands shall be released, and the lands shall then become subject to taxation. Of the amount authorized, the sum of $250,000 is hereby authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1950 out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

SEC. 4. Not to exceed $7,000,000 may be used for the purchase of livestock, which shall be loaned to the tribe or members thereof on a repayment-in-kind basis. Title to the livestock may be taken in the United States in trust for the tribe or members thereof, and shall be exempt from taxation so long as the title shall be held by the United States. The maximum maturity on such loans shall be 25 years. Upon repayment of loans, the interests of the United States in such livestock shall be released, and the livestock shall then become subject to taxation. Of the amount authorized, the sum of $250,000 is hereby authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1950 out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

SEC. 5. Not to exceed $1,000,000 shall be used for the establishment of a revolving fund for loans to the tribe or members thereof for any purpose which will promote the economic development of the tribe and its members and for educational purposes: Provided, That reimbursement of the capital fund to the United States shall be made within 40 years.

SEC. 6. Not to exceed 10 percent of amounts appropriated for loans may be used to make grants to borrowers for assistance during initial periods of operations.

SEC. 7. Notwithstanding any other provision of existing law, the tribal funds now on deposit, or hereafter placed to the credit of the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe of Indians in the United States Treasury, shall be available for such purposes as may be designated by the Standing Rock Sioux Tribal Business Council and approved by the Secretary of the Interior or his authorized representative.

SEC. 8. Title to lands and interests in lands, together with improvements thereon, which have been acquired by the United States on or adjacent to the Standing Rock Indian Reservation in the States of North and South Dakota, under authority of title II of the National Recovery Act of June 16, 1933 (48 Stat. 200), the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of April 8, 1935 (49 Stat. 115), and section 55 of title I of the act of August 24, 1935 (49 Stat. 750, 781), administrative jurisdiction over which has heretofore been transferred by the President from the Secretary of Agriculture to the Secretary of the Interior by Executive order, is hereby declared to be in the United States in trust for the use and benefit of the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe. For the purposes of land consolidation, the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to sell or exchange such lands, and improvements thereon, with the consent of the Standing Rock Sioux Tribal Business Council.

SEC. 9. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, sums necessary for administrative and technical services and facilities necessary for carrying out the purposes of this act. The sum of $50,000 is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the salaries and expenses of credit and land personnel required to initiate and carry out the purposes of this act during the fiscal year 1950.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. KLEIN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances and include extraneous matter.

COOPERATIVE FORESTRY PROGRAMS

Mr. GRANGER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 2296) to amend and supplement the act of June 7, 1924 (43 Stat. 653).

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated annually not more than $20,000,000 to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to carry out the provisions of sections 1, 2, and 3 of the act of June 7, 1924 (43 Stat. 653), as amended: Provided, That the appropriation under this authorization shall not exceed $11,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950; $13,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1951; $15,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1952; $17,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1953; and $19,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1954.

SEC. 2. Section 4 of the act of June 7, 1924 (43 Stat. 654), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4. The Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized and directed to cooperate with the various States in the procurement, production, and distribution of forest-tree seeds and plants, for the purpose of establishing forests, windbreaks, shelter belts, and farm wood lots upon denuded or nonforested lands within such cooperating States, under such conditions and requirements as he may prescribe to the end that forest-tree seeds or plants so procured, produced, or distributed shall be used effectively for planting denuded or nonforested lands in the cooperating States and growing timber thereon. The amount expended by the Federal Government in cooperation with any State during any fiscal year for such purposes shall not exceed the amount expended by the State for the same purposes during the same fiscal year, and the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to make expenditures on the certificate of the State official having charge of the cooperative work for the State that State expenditures as provided for in this section have been made. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to carry out the provisions of this section not more than $1,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950; $1,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1951; $2,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1952; and $2,500,000 for each subsequent fiscal year."

SEC. 3. Section 5 of the act of June 7, 1924 (43 Stat. 654), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 5. The Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized and directed, in cooperation with the land-grant colleges and universities of the various States or, in his discretion, with other suitable agencies, to aid farmers through advice, education, demonstrations, and other similar means in establishing, renewing, protecting, and managing wood lots, shelter belts, windbreaks, and other valuable forest growth, and in harvesting, utilizing, and marketing the products thereof. Except for preliminary investigations, the amount expended by the Federal Government under this section in cooperation with any State or other cooperating agency during any fiscal year shall not exceed the amount expended by the State or other cooperating agency for the same purpose during the same fiscal year, and the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to make expenditures on the certificate of the appropriate State official that the State expenditures, as provided for in this section, have been made. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated annually out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, not more than $500,000 to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to carry out the provisions of this section."

SEC. 4. It is hereby declared to be the policy of the Congress to encourage the development and maintenance of adequate forest resources as essential to national defense, full employment, and national prosperity. It is recognized that to attain these objectives, the management of privately owned forest lands which constitute the bulk of the Nation's forest-land resources, must be in accordance with sound forestry practices, that wastage in processing and utilization of forest products must be reduced to a minimum, and that in addition to the educational and demonstrational activities contemplated by section 5 of the act of June 7, 1924 (43 Stat. 654), as amended, it is essential that adequate provision be made for the furnishing of technical services and assistance to owners of forest lands and processors of forest products. It is the intent of the Congress that the facilities for such technical services and assistance be provided mainly through cooperation with State forestry agencies. It is intended that the powers and authority of the Secretary of Agriculture under this section shall be supplementary to the powers and authority conferred on him under any other act. To carry out the purposes of this section, the act of June 7, 1924 (43 Stat. 653), is amended by adding thereto the following section:

"SEC. 10. (a) The Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized and directed to establish and maintain services and facilities for furnishing technical services respecting the proper management of privately owned forest lands and federally owned lands administered by the States; for giving technical services to forest-land owners concerning the value of their forest products and the efficient production and marketing thereof; for assisting forest owners and processors in reducing timber harvesting and processing costs, utilizing inferior species and grades, improving the quality and expanding the uses of forest products, establishing markets, and developing rural forest industries; for giving technical services to consumers with respect to the selection and use of forest products; and for otherwise effecting improvements in the growing, harvesting, marketing, and utilization of forest products.

"(b) The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized under such terms and conditions as he deems appropriate to cooperate with State forestry agencies in carrying out the purposes of this section and in promoting its objectives. The amount expended in any State by the Federal Government through such cooperative action shall not exceed during any fiscal year the amount expended by the cooperating State for the same purpose during the same fiscal year, and the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to make expenditures on the certificate of the appropriate State official having charge of the cooperative work for the State that State expenditures as provided in this section have been made.

"(c) The Secretary of Agriculture is further authorized, under such terms and conditions as he may deem appropriate, to cooperate with public and private agencies and persons to obtain assistance in carrying out the purposes of this section. Money contributions received from cooperators shall be covered into the Treasury and shall constitute a special fund, which is hereby appropriated and made available until expended as the Secretary may direct for conducting activities authorized by this section and for making refunds to contributors of amounts paid by them in excess of their share of the cost of cooperative work.

"(d) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to carry out the provisions of this section the following sums: $1,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950; $3,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1951; $4,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1952; and $6,000,000 for each subsequent fiscal year."

SEC. 5. The act of May 18, 1937 (50 Stat. 188), known as the Cooperative Farm Forestry Act, is hereby repealed effective June 30, 1950.

SEC. 6. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no funds heretofore or hereafter authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Agriculture or available under any other than the act of June 7, 1924 (43 Stat. 653), shall be used for carrying out the programs or activities authorized by sections 1, 2, and 3 of said act, as amended: Provided, That whenever the programs and activities being carried out under the provisions of sections 1, 2, and 3 of said act are inadequate to the needs and purpcses of programs and activities authorized by other law the use of funds specifically authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Agriculture or made available under other law shall not be prohibited to the extent that the programs and activities under said sections of the act of June 7, 1924, are inadequate to accomplish the purposes of such other programs or activities.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. GRANGER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Utah?

There was no objection.

Mr. GRANGER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 8 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, the bill, H. R. 2296, is a measure that was thoroughly considered by the Committee on Agriculture and, so far as I know, there is no objection to the passage of it by any member of the committee. It is legislation that in my opinion is long past due. At this time when we are being magnanimous to all the nations of the earth it seems to me that we should take time enough to look at our own resources and take steps to keep them in order so that we might have something left with which to be magnanimous. Our Nations' forests are among our greatest natural resources, and this bill is aimed to preserve what we have left of them and also to plant trees and to replenish the trees that have been used, or misused, as the case may be.

There is nothing new in this bill except the amount of the authorization, which is a considerable amount, but it seems to me that it is entirely justified because of the subject matter with which it deals. There were about 20 bills introduced that dealt with this subject, and nearly 100 Members of the Congress appeared before the committee advocating the passage of this bill.

In a word, the bill authorizes an increase in the appropriation to fight fires and to further develop our fire-fighting apparatus and to furnish the necessary personnel to do the job in fire fighting. It also provides for nurseries to be established to increase the number of trees that we might plant. About 70,000,000 acres of trees have been taken out and nothing has been planted in their stead. This bill provides for money to establish the nurseries that will develop the trees that will be planted on these barren acres. Other sections in the bill are simply clarifying and are for the purpose of getting together all the appropriations so that they will come under the provisions of this act and will be more orderly administered.

I do not think there is any need for long debate on this bill. In my opinion it is very important and should receive the unanimous approval of the Congress.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRANGER. I yield to the gentleman from Arizona.

Mr. MURDOCK. I want to congratulate the gentleman and his committee in bringing this legislation before the House. It is very meritorious, and I hope it will be passed unanimously.

The gentleman has been quite energetic all during the time I have known him in Congress in the direction of protecting our forests and establishing new forests through reforestation. The bill now before us is a splendid effort, which I heartily approve.

Mr. GRANGER. I thank the gentleman from Arizona.

May I say that this legislation refers entirely to private forests. The national forests are not concerned. This is a program that has been previously authorized. It is carried out on a cooperative basis between the Federal Government and the various States. Up to this time the States have contributed considerably more than the Federal Government in carrying ont this worthy program.

Mr. CHELF. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRANGER. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. CHELF. I am very much in favor of this legislation. Over 90 percent of the forest land in my State of Kentucky is privately owned. This will be a great help to a State such as Kentucky. We rank 29th in forestry. The production of wood is quite an industry, and means a lot not only to Kentucky but throughout the Nation. I thank the gentleman and the committee for the time, effort, and patience they have put into the development of this legislation, and I wholeheartedly endorse and support it.

Mr. GRANGER. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. COLE of New York. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRANGER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. COLE of New York. As I understand, the bill authorizes an annual appropriation of $20,000,000 for the purpose of cooperative action between the Federal Government and the States. What amount would be spent in the aggregate by the States, comparable to the $20,000,000?

Mr. GRANGER. That is a question into which the committee went very thoroughly. The Federal Government requires the State to make its contribution first. When it has spent a certain amount of money it can requisition from the Federal Government only the equivalent of the exact amount it has spent.

Mr. COLE of New York. Must the States spend at least $20,000,000?

Mr. GRANGER. The States must spend at least the amount the Federal Government is contributing.

Mr. COLE of New York. So the national expenditure, both Federal and State, would be at least $40,000,000?

Mr. GRANGER. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRANGER. I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. BROOKS. Let me commend the committee and the gentleman personally on his efforts in bringing in this bill. Forestry is becoming a greater industry in this country every year. In my section we have the headquarters of much of the forestry industry. We are deeply concerned with the development of the forestry resources of the United States.

Mr. GRANGER. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRANGER. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. JUDD. As I understand it, this bill has a double-barreled function. One is, better to preserve from fire or improper cutting the forests we still have; and the other is to try to build up and improve those forests which have been slashed or improperly cut, and to regrow usable forests in the many areas where the original timber has been destroyed, leaving land that is of little or no use for agricultural purposes, in fact it is practically waste land for anything except reforesting.

Mr. GRANGER. That is well said. That is the purpose of the legislation.

Mr. JUDD. I commend the gentleman and the committee. I come from a State where in the early days probably our greatest resource was our virgin timber. Many of those forests were so destroyed that the land is practically worthless at the present time. I believe there is no State that needs more this assistance on a cooperative basis in order to restore over a period of decades that great natural and indispensable resource.

Mr. GRANGER. I thank the gentleman, and commend him on the assistance he has been willing to give in the passage of this legislation.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRANGER. I yield to the gentleman from Oregon.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. As I understand this bill, it is an extension of the authorization contained in what we call the Clarke-McNary Act.

Mr. GRANGER. That is right.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. For the benefit of the House, may I say that this cooperative program is extremely important in the preservation against fire of the forests of the Northwest. The Federal contribution is on an entirely sound basis for the reason that fires occurring on privately owned forests, which are often intermingled with Federal forests, can quickly spread to Federal forests. Therefore, this cooperative type of protection is ideal for intermingled lands. I congratulate the committee on bringing in a very good bill dealing with this problem.

Mr. GRANGER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman.

JOINT COMMITTEE ON LOBBYING ACTIVITIES

Mr. SABATH, from the Committee on Rules, reported the following privileged resolution (H. J. Res. 196, Rept. No. 586), which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed:

Whereas there has developed much doubt and confusion concerning the application of the laws relating to the registration and reporting of lobbyists; and

Whereas there is widespread public belief that lobbying activities are being carried on by persons not making reports thereof, as prescribed by law, in some instances because they do not believe the law applies to them and their activities; and

Whereas Members of the Congress and citizens petitioning their Congress in behalf of measures are not able to ascertain through the disclosures now being made under the law the affiliations of many of those persons who are lobbying; and

Whereas it is desirable in strengthening the democratic process to have complete identification of all individuals and organizations lobbying before Congress, the nature, sources, and amounts of their support; and

Whereas there is every evidence of general public support for enactment of legislation to strengthen the Lobbying Registration Act of 1946: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, etc., That there is hereby established a joint congressional committee to be known as the Joint Committee on Lobbying Activities (hereinafter referred to as the committee), which shall be composed of seven Members of the Senate to be appointed by the President of the Senate and seven Members of the House of Representatives to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

SEC. 2. A vacancy in the membership of the committee shall not affect the power of the remaining members to execute the functions of the committee, and shall be filled in the same manner as in the case of the original appointment. The members of the committee shall select a chairman from among their number. The members of the committee shall serve without compensation in addition to that received for their services as Members of Congress; but they shall be reimbursed for travel, subsistence, and other necessary expenses incurred by them in the performance of their duties as members of the committee, other than expenses in connection with meetings of the committee held in the District of Columbia during such times as the Congress is in session.

SEC. 3. It shall be the duty of the committee—

(1) to make a full and complete investigation of all lobbying activities, and all efforts to influence, encourage, promote, or retard legislation, directly or indirectly;

(2) to report from time to time to the Senate (or to the Secretary of the Senate if the Senate is not in session) and to the House of Representatives (or to the Clerk of the House if the House is not in session) the results of its study and investigation, together with such recommendations as it deems advisable.

SEC. 4. The committee, or any subcommittee thereof, shall have power to hold hearings and to sit and act at such places and times, to require by subpena or otherwise the attendance of such witnesses, and the production of such books, papers, documents, and tangible things, to administer such oaths, to take such testimony, to procure such binding and printing, and to make such expenditures, as it deems advisable. Subpenas shall be issued under the signature of the chairman of the committee, and shall be served by any person designated by him. The cost of stenographic services in reporting such hearings as the committee may hold shall not be in excess of 25 cents per hundred words.

SEC. 5. The committee is authorized to appoint and fix the compensation of such experts and such clerical, stenographic, and other assistants as it deems advisable.

SEC. 6. The expenses of the committee shall be paid one-half from the contingent fund of the Senate and one-half from the contingent fund of the House of Representatives upon vouchers approved by the chairman of the committee.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 3, strike out lines 3 to 6 inclusive, and insert in lieu thereof the following language:

"(1) To make a full and complete investigation of all lobbying activities intended to influence, encourage, promote or retard legislation.

"(2) To make a full and complete investigation of all activities of agencies of the Federal Government intended to influence, encourage, promote, or retard legislation."

COOPERATIVE FORESTRY PROGRAMS

Mr. CHELF. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOPE. I yield.

Mr. CHELF. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

Mr. CHELF. Mr. Speaker, Kentucky's forests have been a major factor in the development of our State. Since the days of our earliest settlement we Kentuckians have drawn heavily on our forests for lumber, poles, posts, mine props, and many other raw materials needed for the State's growth and development.

Kentucky needs its forest. We have some 1,800 sawmills and 1,900 veneer mills, cooperage plants, handle plants, and other wood-processing industries. Some 40,000 of our people derive their entire livelihood from the forests. Our products from the forestry industry is worth in the neighborhood of $50,000,000 a year to the State.

We stand twenty-ninth among all the States in the Union in lumber production—but more wood is used by nonlumber plants than is used for lumber; for example, poles, hewn cross ties, fuel wood, fence posts, firewood to cure tobacco, and so forth.

In Kentucky, we are very proud of our Cumberland National Forest and we want to support this fine work. It may be interesting to the House to learn that 90 percent of the forest land in all of Kentucky is privately owned, and that there are 189,000 small forest owners in our State. If we are going to restore and build up our forest resources, we must work with this large number of small landowners.

Kentucky is attempting to help these small landowners build up their forest properties, but we have hardly made much more than a beginning. For instance, we have only one extension forester. We have a few farm foresters where we should have dozens. Our State is anxious to expand these aids and is attempting to do so now. This work would go on much faster with assistance and encouragement from the Federal Government. We need a very considerable expansion of our tree-planting program, and the State has made plans to triple present tree production; provided, reasonable assistance can be obtained through the farm and other private forestry cooperation item.

The Kentucky legislature has recently doubled the appropriation for the control of forest fires, but, unfortunately, three-fourths of our total forest land still lacks organized forest-fire protection. I understand that the Federal appropriation for cooperation with the several States in fire protection is now at the maximum amount authorized. We Kentuckians want the House to know that our people are doing their share—fact is, more than their share in this important work and we are so anxious that Federal financial participation be increased as soon as possible.

I support this measure wholeheartedly and trust it will pass the House by an overwhelming vote.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, in my opinion, this is one of the most important bills that will come before Congress this session. The measure does not take us into any new fields, but it provides for a much-needed expansion of activity on the part of the Federal Government in connection with the cooperative Federal-State forestry program which was begun under the Clarke-McNary Act of 1924. That act has been supplemented by other legislation in succeeding years, including the Norris-Doxey Act of 1937, which dealt particularly with cooperative work in farm forestry.

This bill expands the present cooperative Federal-State program in four ways: First, it increases the authorization for appropriations for forest-fire prevention; second, it authorizes increased appropriations for the production and distribution of forest trees for planting; third, it expands educational work in forestry through the Extension Service; and, fourth, it provides for increased technical aid and assistance in forestry to private landowners.

In order to fully understand the importance of this legislation one must keep in mind the fact that over three-fourths of the timberland of this country is privately owned. We have our great national forests as well as millions of acres in State forests. Many times we think of these great forests as comprising most of our future source of timber. That however is not the case. The great bulk of the land upon which our timber will be produced in the years ahead is under private ownership and the greater part of it is in the hands of a large number of small owners. Perhaps these statistics which were brought out in the course of the hearings before the Committee on Agriculture may be of interest: Out of 461,000,000 acres of commercial forest area in the United States, 344,973,000 acres are under private ownership; 50,672,000 acres of this privately owned land is in large tracts. Medium-sized tracts—that is, those from 5,000 to 50,000 acres—aggregate 32,916,000 acres. The remainder, 261,385,000 acres, is in small tracts of less than 5,000 acres each, the average size of which is only 62 acres. They are owned by 4,225,000 different private owners.

In the past we have depended upon our large stands of virgin timber, but we now have left only about 45,000,000 acres of virgin timber. Our supply of lumber, wood pulp, and other forest products in the future is going to depend upon how well we handle our second-growth forests, particularly those in private ownership. The fact that such a large proportion of this privately owned acreage consists of small tracts in the hands of owners who have neither the technical knowledge nor the capital to manage them to the best advantage makes it imperative that this legislation be enacted.

The programs which have been inaugurated under the Clarke-McNary Act have worked well, but we cannot continue to expand them unless larger appropriations on the part of the Federal Government are authorized. In addition to providing greater protection against fire, it is necessary, if we are to have a sound forestry program, that increasing areas be planted or replanted. That is the purpose of section 2 of the bill, which increases the authorization of Federal funds for the procurement, production, and distribution of forest trees, seeds, and plants to an eventual total of $2,500,000.

It is not expected that all of this expansion will take place at once, but if the Committee on Appropriations will increase appropriations over a period of years to the extent now authorized in this bill we can have a tremendous expension of planting on farms and other privately owned lands. This bill goes further than the Norris-Doxey Act in that it covers all privately owned forest lands whereas the Norris-Doxey Act covered only farm forestry.

Sections 3 and 4 of the bill will permit an expansion of education and technical services now being carried out by the Federal Government in cooperation with the States. If we are to get the best use out of our widely owned small forest tracts it will be necessary that much more be done along this line. I have had an opportunity to see something of the work which is being done in some of the farm woodland management projects. It is excellent but at present reaches only a small part of the farm forest owners who desire and need such aid.

This bill was unanimously reported by the Committee on Agriculture after extensive hearings on the part of a subcommittee. Many Members of Congress have introduced similar bills and a large number of Members made statements before the subcommittee in support of this legislation. This great interest is, of course, a recognition of the need which exists for this type of legislation. I believe that without any doubt the passage of this legislation will be one of the most constructive steps in the field of conservation which has been taken for many years. To me it is in the category of must legislation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. HOPE] has expired.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself two additional minutes.

Mr. HOLMES. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOPE. I yield.

Mr. HOLMES. I have listened very carefully to the remarks of the ranking minority member of the committee, and I congratulate the committee upon bringing out this bill. I hope it will be passed unanimously. The two important factors of raising young trees for planting and increasing the matching funds for forest protection are basic in any heavily forested area of the country. I appreciate the importance of this bill and appreciate the work of the committee in bringing it out.

Mr. HOPE. I thank the gentleman from Washington [Mr. HOLMES], who has been a consistent and active supporter of this type of conservation legislation.

I reserve the remainder of my time, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. GRANGER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CHRISTOPHER].

Mr. CHRISTOPHER. Mr. Speaker, I am just taking this time to register my approval of this legislation. In 1 minute I do not have time to do what I intended to do, so I will not begin it. However, sometime I intend to tell this House the story of a 25-acre field. The first time I saw it was about the beginning of this century. It stood in wonderful hardwood timber. Today that particular field is not only devoid of timber, but the soil is gone also. There is not a vestige of top soil left in that particular field, and there are ditches in it that are 10 feet deep. Nothing is left but the subsoil. So I am very much in favor of this bill if it will help save the trees on our land and help save the soil of our land.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has expired.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HARVEY].

Mr. HARVEY. Mr. Speaker, with respect to the remarks of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CHRISTOPHER] regarding the depreciation and the destruction that has taken place not only in our timber but our soil resources, I want to say the same thing has been found true in Indiana.

On our farm we have two plots of ground that are in what we call a forest preserve, in which we are attempting to replace the timber that has been lost due to careless management. A great amount of our timber resources have been lost through misuse rather than use. I think the provision of this bill which will make technical assistance available to the small wood-lot owner is a most appropriate one. The fact was brought out by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. HOPE] that nearly four-fifths of our existing timber supply is still in the hands of private owners, and that a great deal of that, in turn, is in relatively small tracts. Without the provision in here for reforestation and technical assistance plus the greater advantage of greater fire protection we certainly will find ourselves entirely destitute as far as timber resources are concerned in the very near future. I wish to commend the committee for this progressive and constructive piece of legislation.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may require to the gentleman from Maine [Mr. NELSON].

Mr. NELSON. Mr. Speaker, I want to compliment the committee most highly on bringing out this legislation. I hope it is but the beginning of a continued and increasing campaign to conserve and improve our forestry resources. Increasingly in my State, as in the Nation, forest resources are being destroyed by pests and fires faster than by cutting. While we spend billions for foreign aid and contemplate millions for undeveloped areas in other lands, our own resources are being wasted or neglected. We must learn in America that our resources are not inexhaustible and that unless we are prudently charitable we will kill ourselves with kindness. I hope, as I have said, that this will mark an ever-increasing effort for the protection, conservation, and improvement of our own resources before we develop foreign areas. The money appropriated is little enough in comparison. Yet upon this and similar appropriations for fire protection, planting, and replanting of trees, and securing adequate timber growth on small, privately owned tracts, depends the entire future timber supply in the United States. I certainly urge passage of this bill.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GAVIN].

Mr. GAVIN. Mr. Speaker, I wish to take this opportunity to compliment the committee on bringing out this much-needed legislation. I know that it will be a great and contributing factor to the protection, development, and preservation of our great forest areas. One point that has not been brought to the attention of the committee is the fact that this will also be a contributing factor to flood control. We spend millions of dollars in flood-protection measures, yet at the same time we fail to recognize the part forests play in flood control and the great help they can be to the flood-control program.

The guidance of research is essential if Federal programs of flood control are to be intelligently designed.

These and many other problems require a stepped-up program of forest research. The meager research results that have been obtained are already being applied in the Allegheny National Forest of one-half million acres, in my State. Private land owners attempting to practice forestry are also using these results. However, too many managers of forest lands cannot find the answers to their technical problems and an expansion of this program is essential to provide guidance and leadership in both public and private management efforts.

I am glad to see the interest that is being taken by the Members in these forestry programs. It is a matter which has been neglected for many years, and it is heartening to see the great interest now being taken in my State of Pennsylvania in the development and protection of the forests we still have. The Forest Service has turned in a very fine performance, and the results achieved on the appropriations that have been available for the past several years are remarkable. It is a wise expenditure of the taxpayers' money. I hope this legislation will meet with the unanimous approval of every Member of the House.

When I ride through my district and see these great denuded areas where the forests have been slaughtered with no thought of rehabilitation, no thought of protection of what we have left, with but little attempt being made to develop these great areas that have been a productive resource in my State for many years. I fully realize how helpful this legislation will be in protection and development of these great forest areas and I want the committee to know that I heartily support the bill.

Mr. GRANGER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California [Mr. MILLER].

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, the forests, a natural resource of our country, are indispensable to its welfare; they protect the watersheds of the West and they must be preserved for that purpose if for no other. We have been prodigal with our forests; we have not kept pace with their rehabilitation and replacement. One of the great lumber producers of the West has adopted the slogan: "The timber is a crop." It is time that we begin to look upon our forests as a replaceable commodity. We must preserve them for future generations if we are to have the supply of lumber and wood products which is so necessary in our economy.

This bill aids in a reforestation program long overdue.

The forests harbor our important wildlife resources and are indispensable to the recreation of the people of this country.

This recognition of a plan that will preserve and return our forests to their former grandeur is important to all of us.

Mr. GRANGER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. ABBITT].

Mr. ABBITT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the pending bill, H. R. 2296, which has for its purpose the protection and restocking of one of our greatest natural resources, our forests. Our country has depended to a large extent upon our natural resources. Our forests down through the years have provided one of the greatest industries and means of employment for thousands of people. During the depression, it meant much to the small farmers to be able to harvest their timber crops and in many instances save their homes. Many people found employment working in the timber industry.

It is also vital to our economy that we preserve, protect, and restock our timberlands. Down through the years, our timber has been harvested but no adequately planned program for protection, restocking, reforestation, or planned harvesting has been carried out to assure the continuous supply to meet the future demands and necessities.

Recently, many of our States have taken a number of progressive steps and measures in an effort to alleviate the butchering of our timber, to start replenishment of our forests, to prevent its destruction by fire, to foster the proper management of timberland and to stimulate the regular and planned harvesting of the timber crops. It is impossible, however, for the several States to carry on this work as adequately as it can be carried on through the aid and assistance of the Federal Government, which is in a better position to coordinate and correlate the various programs that can be of such great help in carrying out an adequate forestry program to meet the needs of this important resource.

This bill supplements and amends the act of June 7, 1924, as amended, which act is the legislation establishing Federal-State cooperation in forestry activities and the measure before us deals exclusively with the Federal-State cooperative forestry program, in which the Federal expenditure is limited to an amount not exceeding that of each State or territory. No Federal lands are included in the program dealt with in this bill. It authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to cooperate with the proper officials of each State in the fire-protection program. The Federal contribution for this purpose is limited to an amount not to exceed the amount expended by the State for the same purpose during the same fiscal year. It increases from $9,000,000 to an eventual total of $20,000,000 the authorization for Federal appropriation for the fire-protection program.

The protection available now is not adequate. The degree of protection aimed at under this program is that which provides basic public protection but leaves part of the responsibility on the private owner. The maximum Federal participation in the program is hoped to be reached by 1959.

Protection against fire is one of the basic requirements of our forests. It is a public responsibility to be shared equally by the Federal Government, the States, and private industries. It is hoped that through this bill the Federal Government's efforts will reach that of the States.

The other main features of the bill deal with Federal cooperation with the States in the production and distribution of forest-tree seeds and plants. The present authorization of $100,000 is increased to an eventual total of $2,500,000.

Of prime importance to a sound forestry and soil-conservation program is the planting or replanting of trees on acres which should be in forest growth but are now diluted and are so poorly stocked that they will not reseed themselves.

Heretofore, always the entire burden of this part of the Federal-State forestry program has fallen upon the States, which has fallen far short of meeting the demands and requirements, there being approximately 62,000,000 acres of privately owned forest lands that need restocking.

The State production ceiling in 1948 was such as to plant only about 165,000 acres. One of the objects of this bill is to make available to forests and farm owners such seedlings that will make possible the planting of about 160,000,000 acres a year, which will require approximately 1,000,000,000 seedling trees each year. The production costs of which are approximately $38 per thousand.

The bill further provides and authorizes direct technical assistance to farmers and forest owners in the planting and harvesting of timber crops to be carried out through the State foresters. This is one of the important phases of the program so far as the future timber supplies of this country are concerned, because of the valuable assistance that can be rendered the small forestry owners of the Nation.

All in all, this is a most beneficial bill and one that will redound to the benefit of all segments of the country and I heartily recommend that this bill be passed unanimously by the House.

Mr. GRANGER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. ALLEN].

Mr. ALLEN of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, I am very happy to support this legislation. On January 6, 1949, I introduced H. R. 977, which is the same as section 1 of the pending bill. I had a bill last year similar to H. R. 977.

The growing of timber is a matter of extreme importance to Louisiana. This is particularly true in the Eighth Congressional District, which I have the honor to represent. The Keatchie National Forest, the only national forest in Louisiana, is all situated in the Eighth District. The fine cooperative spirit on the part of both the Federal and the State governments has gone far in the direction of conserving our forests and growing new timber. But much remains to be done. Considerable progress has been made all over the Nation, but we must put much more money into this fine work if we are to rehabilitate our forests for future generations. This bill providing for further cooperative effort between the Federal Government and the States will greatly help in this progressive work.

I am particularly interested in replanting denuded forest land. All phases of forestry are important, but unless we replant land which has been practically denuded, little can be expected. I consider it a great investment to spend money for this purpose. Our natural resources are fast being depleted and our virgin timber is virtually gone, and unless we take adequate steps to reforest both public and private lands, we will fail in our obligation. Of course, this bill applies to private lands. It is a matter of extreme importance to help private landowners reforest their lands. I have found recently that there is considerable interest on the part of small landowners in my section in the reforestation program. The work of the Federal and State Governments has served to teach us that the growing of timber is good business and one of the finest crops that we can grow. That is particularly true of most of Louisiana, where the slash pine grows so fast and on even the poorest soil.

The growing of timber is also important in the prevention of floods. I have seen this demonstrated in my own section. The growing of timber is one of the best means of protecting land from erosion. Erosion fills up streams.

I am pleased that the committee has reported out this bill. I congratulate the committee, and I hope this bill passes unanimously.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE].

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, this bill to extend good forestry practices on a basis of cooperation with the States and with farmers and other owners of timber and wood lots is desirable legislation.

I am particularly glad to see that it places emphasis upon each side in the cooperative agreements doing its fair share.

Often we feel it is a failure on the part of the States to do their fair share in mutual undertakings. In some instances, however, in this tree work the States have been doing more than their equal share.

For instance, on forest-fire cooperation as table I on page 4 of the committee report shows, the total expenditure by the States is in the ratio of 14 to 8 by the Federal Government. My State of South Dakota, on the other hand, has spent for this purpose in the ratio of 24 to 7 by the Federal Government.

Mr. Speaker, this bill has several good features and should be passed. I trust that its enactment will lead to a thoroughgoing program of cooperation in all phases of the work it authorizes. Trees are national wealth. Their propagation and care are in the national interest.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. ANGELL] such time as he may desire.

Mr. ANGELL. Mr. Speaker, I commend the committee for bringing in this legislation. We in the West are very much interested in this legislation, particularly the great State of Oregon. The State of Oregon has the largest stand of commercial timber of any State in the Union. The United States has been rather dilatory in preserving this great natural resource, which is one of our great assets. It is an asset that needs protective care, and, as I stated, I am glad the committee is looking toward the future preservation of the forests of our country.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. JENNINGS].

Mr. JENNINGS. Mr. Speaker, I shall support this measure. It is a much-needed step in the conservation of our forests and their restoration and will result in great good to the people of the entire country.

The bill, H. R. 2296, reported to the House by the Committee on Agriculture, authorizes cooperative forestry programs between the Federal Government and the various States in the procurement, production, and distribution of forest-tree seed and plants to establish forests, windbreaks, shelter belts, and farm wood lots upon denuded or nonforested lands in States which cooperate with the Federal Government on a 50–50 basis under the program established by this act. One million dollars to carry out the provisions of the act is appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950; $1,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1951; $2,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1952; $2,500,000 for each subsequent fiscal year.

The proposed act declares it to be the policy of Congress to encourage the development and maintenance of adequate forest resources essential to national defense, employment, and national prosperity.

The Secretary of Agriculture under the terms of this act is authorized to cooperate with public and private agencies and persons in obtaining assistance to carry out the purposes of the act.

The people of this country are beginning to realize as never before that we must conserve our soil, our water, our timber and all other natural resources that make human life on this earth possible. I can remember when the greater portion of my native county of Campbell's heavily timbered tracts of land were virgin forests, when the surface of her coal fields had not been scratched, when if a field had become eroded and was no longer productive, the usual procedure was to abandon this field and clear new ground. That day is past. Our virgin forests have been cut and sawed into lumber. Many of our coal mines have been exhausted, and fields that were once fertile and productive have been in many instances abandoned. In the face of these conditions, no other people in all Tennessee have matched the efforts of the public-spirited citizens of Campbell County in reforesting her cut-over lands. I have read with interest of the recent celebration at which public officials and public-spirited citizens of Campbell County planted the eight millionth tree on the courthouse lawn at Jacksboro. A young white pine was planted on the lawn of the courthouse by William Perkins, a World War II veteran who was chosen because he had helped to plant some of the first trees in the county as a member of one of the numerous CCC camps when the work was started some 12 years ago. The total land area of this county is 286,000 acres and 8 out of every 10 of these acres are forest lands.

Because of the great abundance of minerals, food, wood, water and wildlife which originally existed on this earth, men have taken them for granted without any thought that the time might come when these great sources of human life were reduced through the waste and destruction of man until their disappearance would threaten human life on this earth. Most of the continents of the world are face to face with a serious depletion of natural resources. More than one country is bankrupt. Bankruptcy in the natural resources of productive soil, forests, water, and wildlife has heretofore wiped out civilizations and millions of people. We cannot escape such a fate unless we begin with might and main and with intelligence to restore our waste places and to conserve the soil and water, the timber, and the animal life which we have left.

The fertility of much of the earth, through the ignorance and mistreatment of mankind, has fallen to such an extent that what 1 man in an hour of labor could formerly produce now requires 10, 50, or even 100 man-hours of labor. You need only to travel through any part of this country to see scattered saw timber where once were virgin forests and exhausted, abandoned old fields which once were fertile and capable of producing crops. This is true of the grazing lands of the West.

It is not enough to improve political and economic systems; we must improve, conserve, and wisely use the land out of which everything we use is derived. From the land and from the sea we obtain our food, our clothing and our shelter. Men in every walk of life, on the farm, in the office, in the shop, behind the counter, in our armed forces, in our schools, in government, must realize the dependence of man on his environment. These facts have been stressed by one of the wisest men in this country, Bernard M. Baruch, in a word of introduction to a book entitled "The Road to Survival," which recently came to my desk. The truths set forth in this book are based upon human history and the experience of mankind for 3,000 years.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. HORAN].

Mr. HORAN. Mr. Speaker, I know the Members realize my own great interest in all things connected with forestry. I want to join at this time with my colleagues, and particularly the gentleman from the neighboring State of Oregon, in their commendation of the committee for reporting this bill. I hope that the bill passes unanimously.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all members may have 5 legislative days in which to extend their remarks in the RECORD on the pending bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to amend and supplement the act of June 7, 1924 (43 Stat. 653), and for other purposes."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate, by Mr. Carrell, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate disagrees to the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 900) entitled "An act to amend the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act, and for other purposes", requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma, Mr. ELLENDER, Mr. ANDERSON, Mr. AIKEN, and Mr. YOUNG to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

CONTINUING AUTHORITY OF MARITIME COMMISSION TO SELL, CHARTER, AND OPERATE VESSELS

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 235) to continue the authority of the Maritime Commission to sell, charter, and operate vessels, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, has the gentleman cleared this matter through the majority leader and the minority leader?

Mr. BLAND. I have cleared it with everybody I know anything about.

Mr. MICHENER. I just want the record to show that.

Mr. BLAND. Yes. I cleared it with everybody, including the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WEICHEL], the ranking minority member of the committee, who has also agreed.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, will the gentleman state what this means as far as appropriations to the Maritime Commission are concerned?

Mr. BLAND. I do not know that it means anything so far as appropriations are concerned, or the amount of them. I understand that the Committee on Appropriations has under consideration funds that were requested for the further extension of chartering, but it is absolutely necessary now that the charter powers, which expires on the 30th day of June 1949, be extended and be carried on, as we ask here, for 1 year, and in that time I will say that the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries has scheduled a long-range program to take care of the whole situation before 1950.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. The gentleman from Virginia, of course, is well aware of the fact that during the past year the Maritime Commission used this power to sell several vessels on which it was later discovered that there was valuable scrap which, in some instances, exceeded the amount for which the vessel was sold.

Mr. BLAND. I will say that our accounting man, who is employed by the committee, is now investigating the matter, and I hope to have a report soon. He told me no later than last Saturday that it looked as though considerable funds are going to be recovered.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Does the gentleman have any assurance that the Maritime Commission will follow any better practice in inventorying these vessels to determine the value of this scrap before they are sold?

Mr. BLAND. I will say to the gentleman that the committee will try to have a correction made of all practices of that nature. As a matter of fact, we are making that investigation now.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. That is not very assuring. During the hearings on the appropriation bill this year for the Maritime Commission we went into the matter at some length, and we were furnished by the committee's investigating staff with a list of two or three pages of vessels sold, and in numerous instances the amount of scrap later discovered approximated and in some cases exceeded the amount that was gotten for the vessel. We were unable to get from the Maritime Commission any firm commitment that they would adopt any better policy. About all was that hereafter, when a vessel was sold, a representative from the Commission would accompany the purchaser in an inspection, and the purchaser would be required to report the presence of any scrap.

Mr. BLAND. Every effort to correct that situation is being made by the committee. And, I will say also that I understand there is to be a new head of the Commission. General Fleming has been named. I hope he will accept it. He does not know anything about a ship, but he does know about administration, and I believe that he will make a very effective man. I am not only going into that, but I have also asked the committee to investigate the reports of the Hoover Commission and see if anything can be done toward a better reorganization. But, that is not going to help us now, because we have to have these ships in order to send this ECA material over. The cost of chartering, of transporting, is going up, and I am told that the extension of charter powers is essential to get the program carried out.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I am well aware of the importance of this ECA material being transported as cheaply as possible, and I am not disposed to interfere with that. At the same time, in view of the failure of the Maritime Commission to give the Committee on Appropriations any assurance whatsoever that they would adopt any real corrective changes in their practices of selling these ships, I am constrained to object at this time, unless the gentleman will consider withdrawing the bill so that we may have an opportunity to consider whether or not it is possible to get some restrictions or corrective measures written into the law.

Mr. BLAND. That will interfere materially with the transportation of the material. I can assure the gentleman that so long as I am Chairman of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries—and I expect to be until certainly this Congress expires, the Lord helping me to live that long—I will do everything I can to have these things corrected.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I appreciate that, and I hope that the gentleman is chairman of the committee as long as there is a Democratic Congress. But, I do know that the Committee on Appropriations endeavored to get definite and adequate assurances from the Commission. The assurances were not forthcoming at our hearings. I must object unless the gentleman will consent to withdraw his bill at this time, so that we may confer further on the matter.

Mr. BLAND. I do not feel that I ought to withdraw it at this time, because I think it is too important, but I will do everything I can to comply with the gentleman's request. I hope he will not object.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I object, Mr. Speaker.

FIRST DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL, 1949

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the conference report on the bill (H. R. 2632) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers on the part of the House be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2632) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 20, 24, 25, 26, 34, 48, and 59.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 3, 4, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 18, 19, 30, 32, 35, 37, 41, 42, 44, 45, 55, 62, 63, 64, 65, and 67, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 22: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 22, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 7 of the matter inserted by said amendment strike out "$175,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$137,500"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 28: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 28, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"UNITED STATES MARITIME COMMISSION

"VESSEL OPERATING FUNCTIONS

"Funds appropriated under this head in the Supplemental Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1949, shall be available during the entire fiscal year: Provided, That the total obligations under this head for the fiscal year 1949 shall not exceed $23,000,000."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 31: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 31, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES

"For expenses necessary for the War Claims Commission, including personal services in the District of Columbia; travel expenses; printing and binding; services as authorized by section 15 of the act of August 2, 1946 (5 U. S. C. 55a); and advances or reimbursements to other Government agencies for use of their facilities and services in carrying out the functions of the Commission; $75,000, to be derived from the war claims fund created by section 13 (a) of the War Claims Act of 1948 (Public Law 896, approved July 3, 1948)."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 33: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 33, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed by said amendment insert "$1,250,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 39: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 39, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed by said amendment insert "$1,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 43: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 43, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed by said amendment insert "$400,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 54: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 54, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out and inserted by said amendment insert the following: ": Provided, That the limitation of $7,600,000 contained in the first proviso under this head in the Interior Department Appropriation Act, 1949, is hereby increased to $9,250,000: Provided further, That the limitation of $48,000,000 contained in the fourth proviso under this head in said Act is hereby increased to $54,500,000: Provided further, That the limitation of three thousand five hundred contained in the fifth proviso under this head in said Act is hereby increased to three thousand six hundred and twenty-five"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 58: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 58, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 6 of the matter inserted by said amendment strike out "1942" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "1940"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 61: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 61, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$500,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

The committee of conference report in disagreement amendments numbered 1, 2, 5, 6, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 21, 27, 36, 47, and 66.

Amendment No. 66 is reported in disagreement.

Amendment No. 67 corrects a section number as proposed by the Senate.

AMENDMENTS IN DISAGREEMENT

The managers on the part of the House have authorized a motion to recede from disagreement and concur in the amendments remaining in disagreement.

CLARENCE CANNON,
JOHN H. KERR,
LOUIS C. RABAUT,
JOHN TABER,
R. B. WIGGLESWORTH,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the conference report.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I think the gentleman should explain the conference report.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my motion and yield myself 3 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, for the information of the membership of the House, I wish to summarize the action of the conferees on the first deficiency appropriation bill. The Senate receded on 5 amendments involving $5,409,000, and the House receded on 37 amendments involving something over $42,000,000. Of this latter amount, however, claims and judgments, which were included in the Senate version of the bill, accounted for something over $31,000,000. The total of the items agreed upon by the conferees is approximately $52,800,000. When the amount of $31,000,000, included for claims and judgments, is excluded, the bill as finally agreed to by the conferees reflects an increase of $21,769,725 above the House figure and $18,079,000 under the Senate figure. I want to point out, however, that a considerable portion of the increase over the House figure is represented by deficiency estimates which were received in the Senate and were not previously considered by the House committee.

The House conferees were determined to limit the Senate increases as much as possible and, as a matter of fact, it took four conferences before a conclusion could be reached.

Such amendments as are reported in disagreement are done so for technical reasons and not because of actual disagreement between the House and Senate conferees.

On the whole, I feel that the House conferees have done an excellent job, and I hope that the conference report will be agreed to.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KERR. I yield.

Mr. HINSHAW. On page 14 of the bill as marked up by the conferees, provision is made for administrative expenses of the War Claims Commission. Would the gentleman be willing to state the final figure agreed upon between the House and Senate as to the appropriation for the balance of the fiscal year 1949 for the War Claims Commission?

Mr. KERR. The amount of $75,000 was finally agreed upon.

Mr. HINSHAW. May I ask if the proviso at the end of the paragraph was deleted, or whether it still remains in the bill.

Mr. KERR. This was necessary under the rule. The Senate has passed a bill which covers this.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KERR. I yield.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. I think I understood it to read that there was an item of something over $3,000,000 for the development of the schools for Navajo Indians at Salt Lake City. It is amendment No. 45, I am advised.

My question is this: These Indians are now being sent to school in Arlington, near Riverside, Calif., which is adequately equipped, and so far has been adequate for them. Therefore, does this not represent an unnecessary expenditure of $3,500,000 or more, or is it necessary that both schools shall be used for that purpose?

Mr. KERR. This amount is required by law. We agreed with the Senate in the amount we put in.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. The question is, Is it not a waste of money as long as the school presently in use at Arlington, near Riverside, Calif., is adequate? Is that school not to be used or is it to be discontinued?

Mr. KERR. The distribution of the funds did not enter into the picture at all.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. Does the gentleman mean the committee just put $3,500,000 in the bill without any discussion of it?

Mr. KERR. That was the need determined from the evidence and that is the amount that we gave them.

Mr PHILLIPS of California. The gentleman has not yet answered my question. Perhaps he did not understand me. The gentleman is saying, in effect, that this item was put in without any discussion as to the need of it. Ordinarily, that is not the way we spend $3 500,000.

Mr. RABAUT. No; and that is not the way we spend it here, either.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. I am glad to hear that.

Mr. RABAUT. The first thing is, the gentleman is talking about something that is not in this bill. What we are talking about is what is listed on line 19, page 21. For this item we gave $3,750,000. We gave it under provision of law which was recently passed by both Houses. What the gentleman is talking about does not come in this bill, and we know nothing about that.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. No. The gentleman still has not answered my question.

Mr. RABAUT. I have answered as much as I can understand what you are talking about.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. May I make it a little clearer. It is probably my fault. This says that $3,750,000 is to be expended to convert Bushnell Hospital in Utah for school purposes.

Mr. RABAUT. That is right.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. I am advised that the school purpose is for the education of Navajo Indian children.

Mr. RABAUT. That is correct.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. Therefore, I am asking what has happened to the program which presently educates these Navajo Indian children at the school near Riverside, Calif., which up to this time has been adequate for their education, and which would therefore seem to me to be a wasteful appropriation.

Mr. RABAUT. There is no reference at all to this other project that the gentleman is talking about in this bill. This comes with the budget estimate that was approved by the budget and was recognized by both bodies of Congress. Both bodies of Congress passed it and this is the appropriation for the project. What happened to the other project evidently did not concern the budget at the time. Whether they need additional facilities and are going to discontinue the other facilities, I do not know. Something will be done with it, but this project was proven to everybody concerned—proven in the House, proven in the Senate, proven before the Bureau of the Budget, and finally passed and brought up in the form of this appropriation at this time.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. Then I respectfully point out to the gentleman that I am right when I say that the conferees put into the bill an item of $3,750,000 without knowing what it was all about.

Mr. RABAUT. Well, I would say to the gentleman that variety of opinions makes horse races.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. Well, it is a fairly expensive horse race.

Mr. RABAUT. Well, it may be a fairly expensive horse race, but there is evidently an attempt here to embarrass—to talk about something that is not in this bill. There are numerous Indian schools, but only one in this bill.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. There is no attempt to embarrass.

Mr. RABAUT. There cannot be any other attempt.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. There is a very definite attempt, if the gentleman please, to find why there is $3,750,000 added to this bill without knowing, apparently, that other money was being spent for that purpose, adequately, in another school. If that be embarrassment, then I hope for the sake of the taxpayers there will be more embarrassment of that kind every day we are in session.

Mr. RABAUT. That is the answer.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. RABAUT. Further for the gentleman's information, if he wishes——

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. Yes; I would thank the gentleman for it.

Mr. RABAUT. There are 5,000 of these Indians now in school, yet 20,000 should be in school. From those facts the gentleman might figure that it is an additional needed facility and accordingly provided.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. I thank the gentleman. It is a very interesting explanation.

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present. The people are against excessive expenditure, I found out during the week; and I make the point of no quorum if we are going to talk about a $3,750,000 item with no chance to vote against it.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is out of order. He has already made the point that a quorum is not present. If he takes himself off the floor, that is his business.

Evidently no quorum is present.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 95]

The SPEAKER. Three hundred and nine Members have answered to their names; a quorum is present.

By unanimous consent, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

MINORITY VIEWS

Mr. COLE of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of my colleague, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SMITH], I ask unanimous consent that he may file minority views on the bill H. R. 4009.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MICHENER (at the request of Mr. TABER) was granted permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial.

Mr. ROONEY asked and was granted permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix and include a speech he delivered on yesterday.

Mr. SHEPPARD asked and was granted permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a newspaper article.

Mr. SHEPPARD asked and was granted permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include the remarks of Mr. Tony Siminoff.

Mr. O'HARA of Minnesota (at the request of Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts) was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial.

Mr. VAN ZANDT asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances—one, on the subject United Mine Workers of America Oppose the St. Lawrence Seaway Project, and the other, Marine Corps Demonstration at Quantico.

Mr. REED of New York asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in three instances and include extraneous matter in each instance.

FEDERAL CROP INSURANCE ACT

Mr. McSWEENEY, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following resolution (H. Res. 212) on the bill (H. R. 3825) to amend the Federal Crop Insurance Act, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered printed:

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3825) to amend the Federal Crop Insurance Act. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 2 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Committee on Agriculture, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

FIRST DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL, 1949

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, does the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] desire some time on this conference report?

Mr. TABER. Yes; I would like 10 minutes, if I may have it.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, in this report there are two or three things that I feel I should call attention to.

The language with reference to the Mike Straus and Boke proposition which the House carried was stricken out by the Senate, and the conferees yielded to the Senate and left it out. So that the Interior Department appropriation bill which was passed a year ago still stands, and the prohibition against paying a salary after January 31 to anyone who is not a licensed engineer in the capacity of Commissioner of Reclamation or in the capacity of chief engineer of the Central Valley Authority continues as it was.

There is another item that I think I should call attention to. The amendment is in disagreement, but it will be offered for agreement in a motion made by the committee increasing the appropriation for the Unemployment Insurance Administration from $10,000,000 to $14,000,000. It will be remembered that the House voted on a motion to recommit on just that proposition offered by the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr.

SADLAK] and the House refused to do so. It was manifest at that time that it was necessary that we do it.

There is an item that has been referred to by the gentleman from California [Mr. PHILLIPS], providing $3,750,000 for the conversion of a hospital at Brigham City, Utah, into an Indian school for Navajos. Frankly, no one in the conference committee, in my opinion, knew anything about the school at Riverside, Calif., at the time that item was under consideration. For my own part, I felt it was a very liberal amount to provide for the conversion of a hospital into a school; in other words, it was a hospital with 4,000 beds and they wanted $3,750,000 to convert it into a school for 2,000 boarding pupils. That sounded like a very liberal amount, and I felt that it was too much money; but, be that as it may, the conferees did not have before them the question as to whether or not there was an adequate facility at Riverside, Calif. There was a story of a boarding school on the Navajo reservation that did not meet the situation, and that is all we were presented with.

The situation does not turn out to be the way it was presented to the committee. What the House wants to do about it I do not know. What the situation is with reference to the Riverside school, I do not know. It would be up to the House, however, to pass on it.

There are a lot of other items in disagreement that will have to be acted on by a separate vote of the House.

The committee is in agreement as to what shall be done with those individual items. I think that is all I care to say at this time.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. I thank the gentleman from New York. This was the situation which brought about, apparently, the request for a quorum call, as the gentleman from New York knows: Here we have a bill of considerable magnitude confronting the taxpayers of the country and in it are several items which should have careful consideration.

My attitude about the Indian school item is simply that when you have $3,750,000 in a bill somebody ought to be able to say what it is for and whether there is any conflict with any money being spent elewhere; so I raised the question, as the gentleman from New York knows, and has said. We have at Riverside, Calif., a school called the Sherman Institution which presently is taking care of Navajo children, educating Navajo children; and I asked whether, in reequipping the Bushnell Hospital and making it a boarding school for approximately 2,000 children, the Riverside school was to be closed or if we were to use both schools. I thought that was a very simple question, but I was unable to get an answer. I have, during the course of the roll call, been able to call the Indian Service and find out that it is not the intention to close the school in California but to use both schools. That should have been a simple reply to a question put to the majority members of the committee whom I was asking. I thought that was a desirable thing to do when we were dealing with three and three-quarters millions. The taxpayers are entitled to know.

I raise this additional question with the gentleman from New York: If we have a hospital that has 4,000 beds and we are making it over into a school to take care of 2,000 Navajo Indian children and the amount involved is $3,750,000 which we are spending for it, it means that for every child we are spending $1,875. Does it not seem to the gentleman from New York that that is a rather large amount to spend on a hospital, already equipped, to make it over into a school for Indian children? That is almost $2,000 a child for the cost of reconverting from a hospital, already equipped with facilities such as kitchens and other most expensive things in the school. This is simply the conversion of a building. It is already built. It is already equipped. Does it not seem to the gentleman from New York that that is a rather large amount? May I ask also, what discussion was there of this amount in the conference committee?

Mr. TABER. I felt that amount was too elaborate and I said so. I feel that way now, but I did not know about this other school at Riverside.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman two additional minutes.

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. JENSEN. Has this matter ever gone through a legislative committee? Have we ever had any hearings on it?

Mr. TABER. There has been a legislative bill authorizing an appropriation of this $3,750,000; yes.

Mr. JENSEN. The fact is we need hospitals for Indians in that particular Navajo area, we also need schools; but, certainly, when we convert a hospital to a school at this terrific amount, it just does not make sense.

Mr. TABER. Frankly, I thought it was too big a figure and I think so now.

Mr. JENSEN. I would say that if we were spending this amount possibly to increase the size of the hospital for Indian people it might be justified because of the fact that we do need hospitals for the Indians out in that area.

Mr. TABER. The hospital has been closed for 2 years now and has been out of use. It is proposed now to take it and convert it into a school.

Mr. JENSEN. It would be much more to the point to take this money and build a school close to the Navajo and Hopi Reservations than to build hospital facilities away from the Indian reservation, a long distance away from the reservation. There is no railroad running from the reservation to this point where they want to build the hospital. It appears to me it is foolhardy and a waste of money and we will get exactly nothing in return.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from New York has again expired.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. RABAUT].

Mr. RABAUT. Mr. Speaker, this is another case of where you are always wrong, no matter what you do, according to the opposition.

In the first place, this building is too far away to be established for an Indian hospital. That is point No. 1. It was an Army hospital before, and, as we all know, they establish Army hospitals for different purposes in various parts of the country. It is too far away to be established as an Indian hospital. It will be an Indian boarding school. I hope you get that now; it will be an Indian boarding school. This sum of $3,750,000 is going to be expended to do certain renovating of the buildings, and procuring of equipment for the school, including books, desks, and everything else that goes with a school system. This measure was approved by the Bureau of the Budget and passed in the committee and approved by both Houses.

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RABAUT. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. JENSEN. Of course, the gentleman understands that after we convert this building into a boarding school that it will be necessary to have a complete faculty and to have everything that goes with it. If you would spend this money to build an addition to a school in Albuquerque, N. Mex., or Gallup, or someplace like that close to the reservation, then we could have the same staff to take care of them.

Mr. RABAUT. I have just explained the situation to the gentleman, and he still continues to insist upon his views. Everything for the operation of a first-class boarding school to serve the Indians is proposed here, and that is what the conference passed upon. I am somewhat surprised at the argument that infers that we abandon these facilities and finds fault for doing something with what we have on hand. So, with that, I hope to drop this subject.

The following is a letter from the Comptroller General:

COMPTROLLER GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, May 11, 1949.

Hon. KENNETH MCKELLAR,
Chairman, Committee on Appropriations, United States Senate.

Hon. CLARENCE CANNON,
Chairman, Committee on Appropriations, House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MESSRS. CHAIRMEN: I have your letter of May 10, 1949, in which you request my views on three questions pertaining to the proviso in the Interior Department Appropriation Act, 1949, Public Law 841, Eightieth Congress, which stipulated that "after January 31, 1949, no part of any appropriation for the Bureau of Reclamation contained in this act shall be used for the salaries and expenses of a person in any of the following positions in the Bureau of Reclamation, or of any person who performs the duties of any such position, who is not a qualified engineer with at least 5 years' engineering and administrative experience: (1)

Commissioner of Reclamation; (2) Assistant Commissioner of Reclamation; and (3) regional director of reclamation." It appears that the Commissioner of Reclamation and a regional director of reclamation have been unable to meet these qualifications, but have retained their positions serving without pay since January 31, 1949.

While the matters presented in your letter do not involve proposed payments or otherwise amount to a presentation as to which I am required by law to render an advance decision, in view of the provisions of 31 United States Code 53 (b)—providing that, at the request of any committee of either House of Congress having jurisdiction over revenues, appropriations, or expenditures, the Comptroller General shall furnish such aid and information as the committee may request—the following comments are submitted. Your questions are quoted in order and discussed below:

"(1) Would the proviso prevent the use of funds other than those appropriated in the Interior Department Appropriation Act, 1949, for the payment of the salaries of these individuals?"

The proviso applies, by its terms, to any appropriation for the Bureau of Reclamation contained in this act (Interior Department Appropriation Act, 1949). Hence, the question is considered as applying to supplemental or deficiency appropriations for the Bureau of Reclamation for the fiscal year 1949. The general rule followed by the accounting officers with respect to the applicability to supplemental or deficiency appropriations of restrictive language contained in the original appropriation act is that a supplemental or deficiency appropriation supplements the original appropriation, partakes of its nature and is available to the same extent and for the same period as the original appropriation in the absence of a clear indication otherwise (4 Comp. Dec. 61; 20 Comp. Gen. 769; 25 id. 61; 27 id. 96). Accordingly, assuming that the question pertains to a supplemental or deficiency appropriation act for the fiscal year 1949, which by its terms would merely add additional money to the appropriations contained in the regular annual appropriation act, it would appear that the restriction of the proviso here involved would be equally applicable to funds appropriated by acts so making supplemental or deficiency appropriations for the Bureau of Reclamation for the fiscal year 1949, even though the restrictive proviso in question is not specifically repeated in such supplemental or deficiency appropriation acts; unless, of course, the restrictive proviso be repealed in such acts.

"(2) Is the continued employment of the two persons above referred to by the Department of the Interior in contravention of that portion of section 665 of title 31 of the United States Code which reads 'nor shall any department or any officer of the Government accept voluntary service for the Government or employ personal service in excess of that authorized by law?' "

For the purposes of this letter, it is assumed the present incumbents of the positions here involved were legally and properly appointed thereto prior to the date of enactment of the proviso in question and have continuously occupied the positions and rendered service therein to the present time. On that assumption, I have no doubt they are de jure employees of the United States. The pertinent proviso in the Interior Department Appropriation Act, 1949, does not by its terms vacate their positions, but merely renders certain appropriations in that act unavailable for the payment of salaries and expenses thereof; and obviously the Congress could later make an appropriation available for such salaries and expenses. The voluntary service referred to in 31 U. S. C. 665 is not necessarily synonymous with gratuitous service but contemplates service furnished on the initiative of the party rendering the same, without request from, or agreement with, the United States therefor (7 Comp. Gen. 810). Accordingly, since, as pointed out above, the incumbents are holding the positions involved under valid appointments by the United States, the continued employment of said individuals in my opinion, would not violate the quoted provision of 31 U. S. C. 665:

"(3) In the event the persons above referred to, who have continued in employment without receiving compensation therefor, should institute suit against the United States for compensation for their services what, in your opinion, consideration should be given to the decisions in the so-called Watson, Lovett, and Dodd cases in determining the matter?"

While it is not possible, of course, for me to forecast the outcome of any suits that might be filed by the incumbents of the positions here involved, or the weight which would be given in such suits to the decisions of the Court of Claims and of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Robert Morss Lovett et al. v. United States (104 C. Cls. 557, 328 U. S. 303), it is my view that the majority opinion in the Court of Claims, and the concurring opinion of Mr. Justice Frankfurter in the Supreme Court, well might lead to a conclusion that the suits were for the payment of unpaid salaries, that the obligation to pay the salaries had not been destroyed and that the prohibition contained in the proviso in the Interior Department Appropriation Act of 1949 does not preclude the courts from rendering a judgment in favor of the incumbents for their unpaid compensation.

Of course, I express no view regarding the question whether the proviso herein considered should be continued or repealed as that is a question of legislative policy for determination by the Congress.

Sincerely yours,

LINDSAY WARREN,
Comptroller General of the United States.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the adoption of the conference report.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. CHURCH), there were—ayes 70, noes 30.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 292, nays 17, not voting 122, as follows:

Mr. Buckley of New York with Mr. Nicholson.

Mr. HARVEY changed his vote from "nay" to "yea."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The doors were opened.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the first amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 1: Page 1, line 9, insert:

"For payment to Vera C. Bushfield, widow of Harlan J. Bushfield, late a Senator from the State of South Dakota, $12,500."

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that Senate amendments Nos. 1 to 16 inclusive be considered and voted on en bloc.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 2: Page 2, line 1, insert:

"For payment to Alice W. Broughton, widow of J. Melville Broughton, late a Senator from the State of North Carolina, $12,500."

Senate amendment No. 5: Page 2, line 17, insert:

"Hereafter the basic annual rates of compensation for two clerks at $3,480 each contained in the Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1949, shall be one at $4,260 and one at $2,700."

Senate amendment No. 6: Page 2, line 21, insert:

"Commencing March 1, 1949, the appropriation for 'Salaries of officers and employees of the Senate' contained in the Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1949, shall be available for the compensation of laborer in charge of private passage at $2,280 basic per annum in lieu of laborer in charge of private passage at $2,120."

Senate amendment No. 12: Page 3, line 4, insert:

"Commencing January 20, 1949, the provisions of existing law relating to long-distance telephone calls for Senators shall be equally applicable to the Vice President of the United States."

Senate amendment No. 13: Page 3, line 18, insert:

"The basic salary of the research assistant to the minority leader authorized by Senate Resolution No. 158, agreed to December 9, 1941, hereby is increased from $5,000 to $7,320 per annum."

Senate amendment No. 14: Page 3, line 22, insert:

"Notwithstanding the provisions of the Treasury-Post Office Appropriation Act, 1949, the appropriation 'Miscellaneous items, contingent expenses of the Senate', shall be available for purchase of new or used typewriters at prices which do not exceed prices established under the provisions of the Treasury-Post Office Appropriation Act, 1949."

Senate amendment No. 15: Page 4, line 10, insert:

"For payment to Vera Bloom, daughter of Sol Bloom, late a Representative from the State of New York, $12,500."

Senate amendment No. 16: Page 4, line 21, insert:

"JOINT COMMITTEE ON NONESSENTIAL FEDERAL EXPENDITURES

"For an amount which is hereby authorized to enable the Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures to carry out the duties imposed upon it by section 601 of the Revenue Act of 1941 (55 Stat. 726), to remain available during the existence of the committee, $20,000, to be disbursed by the Secretary of the Senate."

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in Senate amendments Nos. 1 to 16, inclusive.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 17: Page 8, line 12, strike out "$10,000,000" and insert "$14,000,000, of which $4,000,000 shall be available only upon determination by the Federal Security Administrator, with the approval of the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, that increased costs have resulted either from (1) increases in work load, or (2) increases in salaries of State employees, occurring after February 1, 1949."

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 21: Page 9, line 18, insert:

"GENERAL ACCOUNTING OFFICE BUILDING, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

"The contract authority provided under this head in the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, 1948, for the construction of a building for the use of the General Accounting Office, is increased in an amount not to exceed $2,550,000 under the revised limit of cost of $25,400,000."

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 27: Page 11, line 5, insert:

"MOTOR CARRIER CLAIMS COMMISSION

"Salaries and expenses

"For expenses necessary for the Motor Carrier Claims Commission established by the act of July 2, 1948 (Public Law 880), including personal services in the District of Columbia, travel expenses, printing and binding, and services as authorized by section 15 of the act of August 2, 1946 (5 U. S. C. 55a), $50,000: Provided, That section 6 of the aforesaid act of July 2, 1948, as amended, is further amended by striking out the words '9 months' and inserting in lieu thereof the words '15 months', and section 13 of said act, as amended, is further amended by striking out the words '9 months' period' and inserting in lieu thereof the words '15 months' period.'"

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 36: Page 17, line 4, insert:

"FARMERS' HOME ADMINISTRATION

"Loans to farmers, property damage

"The funds ppropriated under the head 'Loans to farmers, 1948 flood damage,' in the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, 1948, shall remain available until June 30, 1950, in accordance with the terms and conditions specified under said head, to provide assistance to farmers whose property is destroyed or damaged as a result of floods, storms, or other natural calamity during the calendar years 1948 and 1949."

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 47: Page 22, line 8, insert:

"Payment to Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations of Indians, Oklahoma

"For payment to the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations of Indians in fulfillment of the terms of a contract between the United States of America and the said nations as authorized by the act of June 28, 1944 (58 Stat. 483), and as ratified by the act of June 24, 1948 (Public Law 754), $8,359,000, of which not to exceed $50,000 shall be available until expended for defraying the expenses, including printing and binding, of making the per capita payment authorized by the above acts: Provided, That in addition to the per capita payment, the Secretary of the Interior, in his discretion, is authorized to distribute per capita to the enrolled members of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations, entitled under existing law to share in the funds of such tribes, or to their lawful heirs or devisees determined in the manner prescribed in section 4 of the aforesaid act of June 24, 1948, any or all of the funds held by the Government of the United States for the benefit of said tribes."

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 66: Page 33, line 8, insert:

"SEC. 302. The appropriations and authority with respect to appropriations in this act in whole or in part for the fiscal year 1949 shall be available from and including March 1, 1949, for the purposes respectively provided in such appropriations and authority. All obligations incurred during the period between March 1, 1949, and the date of the enactment of this act in anticipation of such appropriations and authority are hereby ratified and confirmed if in accordance with the terms thereof."

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider the votes by which action was taken on the several motions was laid on the table.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 24 hours in which to extend their remarks on the conference report just agreed to.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

CONTINUING AUTHORITY OF THE MARITIME COMMISSION TO SELL, CHARTER, AND OPERATE VESSELS

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 235) to continue the authority of the Maritime Commission to sell, charter, and operate vessels, and for other purposes.

When this joint resolution was brought up earlier in the day the gentleman from South Dakota objected to its consideration, but he now has an amendment to offer and I understand will withdraw his objection.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. If the gentleman will yield, I raised a question about one point with regard to the extension of authority. I have since conferred with the gentleman from Virginia and have prepared an amendment. With the understanding that that amendment will be agreed to, I have no objection to the consideration of the joint resolution at this time.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution to continue until June 30, 1949, the authority of the Maritime Commission to sell, charter, and operate vessels, and for other purposes," approved February 28, 1949 (Public Law 12, 81st Cong.), is amended by striking out the date "June 30, 1949" wherever it appears therein and inserting in lieu thereof the date "June 30, 1950."

With the following committee amendment:

At the end of the bill add the following:

"SEC. 2. Any charter in effect at the time of the enactment of this joint resolution shall be terminated by the Commission at the earliest date permitted under the terms thereof after June 30, 1949, unless the charterer enters into an agreement with the Commission that each vessel delivered or retained under such charter shall not be redelivered to the Commission, at the option of the charterer, within less than 6 months for liner services, except coastwise services, or 4 months for bulk services and coastwise services, or for the remainder of the period ending June 30, 1950, if such period is less than said periods of 6 or 4 months, respectively. No charter shall be made by the Commission under authority of this joint resolution or after the date of enactment thereof unless the charterer enters into an agreement with the Commission that each vessel delivered or retained under the terms of such charter shall not be redelivered to the Commission, at the option of the charterer, within less than 6 months for liner services except coastwise services, or 4 months for bulk services and coastwise services, or for the remainder of the period ending June 30, 1950, if such period is less than said periods of said 6 and 4 months, respectively: Provided, however, That no vessel so chartered may begin a new voyage after June 30, 1950.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CASE of South Dakota: On page 1, line 9, strike out the period, insert a colon and the following: "Provided, That hereafter no sale of a vessel by the Maritime Commission shall be completed until its ballast and equipment shall have been inventoried and their value taken into consideration by the Commission in determining the selling price."

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

COMMODITY CREDIT CORPORATION CHARTER ACT

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (S. 900) to amend the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act, and for other purposes, with a House amendment thereto, insist on the House amendment, and agree to the conference requested by the Senate.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. SPENCE, BROWN of Georgia, PATMAN, MONRONEY, WOLCOTT, GAMBLE, and KUNKEL.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. RABAUT asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a letter from the Comptroller General of the United States.

UNITED STATES-WASHINGTON AND LEE UNIVERSITY BICENTENNIAL COMMISSION

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the provisions of Public Law 636, Eigtieth Congress, the Chair appoints as members of the United States-Washington and Lee University Bicentennial Commission the following Members on the part of the House to serve with himself: Messrs. HARRISON, ALBERT, BROWN of Ohio, and WADSWORTH.

The SPEAKER. Under previous order of the House the gentleman from Delaware [Mr. BOGGS] is recognized for 15 minutes.

SOME FACTS ON PUBLIC HEALTH AND CHEMICAL FOOD ADJUNCTS

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. Mr. Speaker, on March 2 and again on May 9, our colleague and my good friend, the distinguished and able Representative from Wisconsin [Mr. KEEFE], addressed the House on the subject of public health and the use of chemicals in the Nation's food industry.

In the course of his discussions the gentleman from Wisconsin made several remarks pertaining to one of the Nation's foremost chemical research and manufacturing concerns. The company referred to in his remarks is the Atlas Powder Co., of Wilmington, Del.

I am well acquainted with the reputation of the Atlas Powder Co. Its home office, as well as some of its manufacturing facilities, are located in the State which it is my very great privilege and honor to represent. Many of the officers and employees of the Atlas Powder Co. are my personal acquaintances and friends. The Atlas Powder Co. was organized in 1912. It has nine manufacturing plants scattered from coast to coast. It is my opinion that the Atlas Powder Co. enjoys a reputation for excellence of products unsurpassed in the American chemical and industrial fields.

In view of the remarks by my friend from Wisconsin and in view of my personal knowledge of the exeellent reputation of the Atlas Powder Co., I have undertaken to look into the problem to which the gentleman from Wisconsin has directed his remarks. I would like, therefore, to present at this time a few observations, so that the remarks of the gentleman from Wisconsin concerning the Atlas Powder Co. will no longer be misunderstood or unchallenged.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. I would like to yield to the gentleman, and I will yield to him at the conclusion of my remarks.

Mr. KEEFE. I think the gentleman should yield now, in view of the fact that he has referred to me in the manner in which he has. I would like to ask the gentleman to point out, in any speech that I have made, where I have unjustly criticized or cast aspersions of any kind whatsoever upon the Atlas Powder Co. Rather than stating bare conclusions, I would suggest that the gentleman refer to my statements.

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. I thank the gentleman for his observation. I am coming to that directly.

Mr. Speaker, the Atlas Powder Co. is an organization of undisputed, excellent reputation. It means very much to the citizens of the State of Delaware by way of employment and otherwise; and to the entire Nation because of its useful and unsurpassed products. It has contributed greatly to the proud reputation which the State of Delaware holds as "The Chemical Capital of the World."

Certainly the gentleman from Wisconsin desires to be fair in this matter. Therefore, I cannot understand how he permitted himself to make remarks reflecting upon the excellent reputation of the Atlas Powder Co.

The gentleman from Wisconsin, as we all know, is sincerely interested in improving the public health of our Nation. This interest, he has told us, prompted the two speeches in which unfavorable reference was made to Atlas Powder Co. Let me make it clear then, that it is my firm conviction that Atlas Powder Co. is as sincerely interested in improving the public health of our Nation and protecting each individual's health as anyone could be. Furthermore, the company has made ample demonstration of this sincere interest and objective.

There is another point I believe the facts will clarify. We all know the gentleman from Wisconsin represents a great dairy and agricultural area. He naturally is on the alert to protect these interests. He fears, therefore, any competition by way of substitutes for agricultural products, because such substitutes could possibly diminish the market and use of those agricultural products.

His fears are not well grounded as far as Atlas Powder Co. products are concerned. In fact, I find that the Atlas Powder Co.'s products, to which reference has been made, are not food substitutes, nor are they substitutes for any agricultural product. The truth is that all Atlas Powder Co. emulsifiers are made from farm-produced fats and oils. Moreover, I have found that Atlas, in making most of these emulsifiers, is primarily dependent upon corn grown on our farms and uses this farm product in enormous quantities. The use of farm-produced corn fats and oils in the making of Atlas emulsifiers exemplifies an expanding field of uses and an enlarged market for farm-grown products. Therefore, I say that as between the agricultural interests and the chemical field there is no conflict whatsoever, as far as the Atlas products are concerned.

In talking informally, I often get this simple question: What are the Atlas food emulsifiers and what are they used for?

The simple answer is that they are merely food adjuncts. They are not food substitutes, nor a substitute for shortening or any other food ingredient. They are used in very small proportional quantities in the preparation of certain foods, such as in the baking industry, in order to develop a better dispersion of the fats and oils with the other mix of the foods, thus enhancing the natural flavor, quality, and appearance of the foods.

Now there is another question: Are the Atlas emulsifiers safe to put in food? Are they safe for human consumption?

The answer, Mr. Speaker, is that there is no evidence anywhere to show that they are not safe for human consumption. As a matter of fact, extensive feeding studies, including human feeding studies, have been conducted by eminently qualified experts, and have demonstrated that Atlas emulsifiers are safe for use in food products and for human consumption.

Now the next question is: Why all this discussion here on the floor of the House of Representatives?

In answer to that question let me point out that the Pure Food and Drug Administration, an agency of the United States Government, is at the present time conducting hearings for the development of standards of identity for bread products. At this hearing, which is in the nature of a judicial hearing where evidence is submitted pertaining to all ingredients in bread products, the Atlas Powder Co. has in regular course been offering its evidence concerning its food emulsifier products. These hearings before the Food and Drug Administration have not been concluded, nor has the Food and Drug Administration or the Federal Security Agency, of which it is a part, reached a decision as a result of these hearings. The Atlas Powder Co., having every confidence in its products and the evidence which is being submitted in support of these products, has naturally and properly refrained from public controversy.

However, it may be stated that there are those who make competitive emulsifiers. In fact, they have had a monopoly in this field. They are represented at the hearings before the Pure Food and Drug Administration and are bitterly opposing the Atlas emulsifiers for competitive reasons. These interests, for their own selfish reasons, of course, are endeavoring to use to their advantage those genuinely interested in improving our public health. And, therefore, statements have thus been made here on the floor of the House, prompted by a sincere interest in public health, but nevertheless untimely because of the hearings which are still in progress.

That is the simple explanation, in my opinion, for the references which have been made here on the floor of the House concerning Atlas Powder Co. and its emulsifier products.

May I also say at this point, Mr. Speaker, that the Pure Food and Drug Administration has a staff of able and qualified personnel, technically trained to study this problem. It is my definite opinion that this agency of the Government should be given every opportunity to reach its conclusions after a full consideration of all the evidence. It should be permitted to do so without being subjected to any indirect influences from any source which does not have all of the evidence and which may not be fully qualified to interpret that evidence.

Now, in conclusion, may I say that it is my hope that these hearings before the Pure Food and Drug Administration will be given an opportunity to run their natural course so that the Pure Food and Drug Administration may reach logical conclusions based on the facts. However, I shall continue to study this matter personally, not only because of my own interest in improving the public health of our Nation, but in order to advise the membership of this House of the further facts if a continued public discussion makes that necessary. And furthermore, I want to assure my good friend from Wisconsin that his expressed desire for a thoroughgoing investigation of the harmlessness and suitability for use in foods of any new ingredient is a most commendable objective. In this connection I want to point out that the research and investigation and study on the Atlas Powder Co. emulsifiers, unquestionably are outstanding and may be considered to be exemplary in this field.

I now yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. KEEFE. I assume that the gentleman, of course, is reiterating what the Atlas Powder Co. has in their propaganda that is now being circulated throughout the country, but I wish to ask the gentleman if he is familiar with this situation at all. Whether or not it is not a fact established without a question of doubt that the Atlas Powder Co. and the Glycol Products Co., and the Patterson Co. are presently selling millions and millions of pounds of these chemicals for inclusion in the food supply of the Nation before it has been clinically determined whether or not they are harmful upon the health of the people of America; that they have not waited for a determination on the part of the Pure Food and Drug Administration, but are flooding the market and the food supplies of this Nation this very hour with these chemicals while they are carrying on these hearings which have for their purpose the determination of whether or not they are to be included in bread standards?

I would say to the gentleman in response to the question he has raised with respect to my attitude that I could not as a Member of Congress having knowledge of those facts stand idly by and see these hearings carried on month after month after month while at the same time these chemicals are finding their way into the food supply, and no one has the ability to stand up and say what the effect upon the human beings who consume the food products containing these chemicals is to be. I will say to the gentleman that if he will read my speeches—and I assume that he has—he will find that I have not put the finger upon Atlas Powder Co. or any other company except to take the position that until they can demonstrate the harmlessness of their product they ought not to be permitted to put it into the food stream of the Nation. They are taking the position that it is incumbent upon the Pure Food and Drug Administration to show that it is harmful before they will stop. Everyone knows that 30 years ago when they started the agenizing process in the milling of flour, the same pathologists and toxicologists said that agenizing the flour of this Nation through this agenizing process where they use sodium trichloride never could be deleterious to the public health, and for 30 years we have been subjecting wheat flour deprived of its essential vitamins and all its germ content to this chemical. Thirty years have passed before the toxicologists and the men in the research field have finally determined that the process is so dangerous that last year Canada prohibited its use and England is doing likewise. Our own millers have voluntarily quit using the process in this country because at long last they have concluded after years of research that there is some relationship between the degenerative diseases and the constant ingestion of even small, minute quantities of poison into the food supply of the Nation.

So far as the Atlas Powder Co. is concerned, I have the highest regard for its officials and its personnel. The gentleman will recall that the president of that company, his general counsel and the gentleman who is now speaking on this subject, sat in my office and we went over the situation. The gentleman knows, and the president of that company knows, the attitude of the gentleman from Wisconsin on this matter. I stated to him, and I have repeatedly stated on this floor, that if and when the chemical companies can demonstrate clinically and otherwise that their products injected into the food supply of this country is in the interest and the welfare of the Nation I will not stand against them; but until they can so demonstrate I am going to use my voice and every talent I have to stop this ever-increasing flow of synthetics that is coming into the food supply of the Nation and that are poisoning people without their knowing it.

In view of the fact that the chairman of the Rules Committee is present on the floor, I hope that the Rules Committee will grant a rule on the resolution which is now pending. Let us have this investigation. I promise the gentleman from Delaware if that investigation is made, that the people of America and the Members of this Congress will be simply amazed and alarmed at the showing that will be made in this field. I do not want anything the gentleman has said to indicate, by even the remotest connection, that I have any interest in this matter, because I happen to come from Wisconsin, a dairy State, except to see that the food supply of this Nation is kept free of contamination.

The best indication of that is the fact that the gentleman from Wisconsin has stood right behind Dr. Dunbar, of the Pure Food and Drug Administration, in the efforts which that agency is making to keep DDT out of the milk supply of the Nation. It is an important question. I am glad the gentleman has raised it, but it cannot be approached from the narrow ground of partisan interest, because the gentleman comes from Delaware, the seat of the chemical industry in the country, and I happen to come from Wisconsin. That does not mean that he and I are not alive to the situation that confronts the people in this field of public health.

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. I thank the gentleman for his clarifying remarks.

THE WAC

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, on Saturday the Wacs celebrated their seventh birthday anniversary. First, legislation was passed making them the Women's Auxiliary Corps, then legislation was passed taking them into the Army and finally legislation was passed making them a part of the Army.

These women have survived many attacks, yet they have performed a wonderfully hard, successful service both at home and abroad during the war and have won the respect and admiration of the American people. The War Department last year requested that they be made a part of the Army and today they are fine, outstanding, and successful members of the Army. I know that the House wishes to join with me in extending to them a happy birthday. I would like to say to the House that I talked with many of the Wacs there. I asked them why they liked being in the Army rather than serving under the previous titles. Their reply was, "The chief reason we like it is because we now are assigned to duties that we are especially qualified to perform." I had the privilege of cutting their birthday cake, and every Wac there said to me, "Thank you and the Members of the House of Representatives and the Congress for allowing us the privilege of serving in the military forces." Could there be a finer feeling than that? The following is a brief story which appeared in the Washington Star of May 15:

THREE HUNDRED AND FIFTY WACS HERE JOIN IN PARTY OBSERVING CORPS' SEVENTH BIRTHDAY

More than 350 Wacs from the military district of Washington were busy wishing each other happy birthday yesterday at a WAC party at Fort Myer.

Representative EDITH NOURSE ROGERS, Republican, of Massachusetts, mother of the WAC, who fostered the bill in Congress for their organization, cut the elaborately decorated birthday cake with seven candles marking the WAC's 7 years of existence. Brig. Gen. Don C. Faith, United States Army, retired, professor of veterans' education at George Washington University, who first commanded the Wacs at their first training center at Fort Des Moines, got the first slice of cake.

FOUR THOUSAND CELEBRATE

While the reception was going on here, 4,000 Wacs in every State and in commands in the Far East, Caribbean and European areas were also celebrating their creation on May 14, 1942, as the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps. On September 1, 1943, the corps became a part of the Army and the name was changed to the Women's Army Corps. Since June 12, 1948, the corps has been a permanent part of the Regular Army and Organized Reserve Corps.

Lt. Col. Mary L. Milligan, deputy director of the WAC, represented Col. Mary A. Hollaren, WAC director, who is in Germany on an inspection tour of the Wacs overseas. Representing the other women's services were Maj. Julia Hamblet, deputy director of the women Marines; Comdrs. Louise Wilde and Bess Dunn, assistant directors of the WAVES; Col. Geraldine May, director of the WAFS, and Air Commandant F. H. Hanbury, director of the Women's Royal Air Force.

GAY HEADS RECEIVING LINE

Maj. Gen. Hobart Gay, commanding general of the Military District of Washington, headed the receiving line at the reception. Others in the receiving line were Maj. Cloe E. Doyle, WAC staff adviser of the military district of Washington; Capt. Mercedes Ormston, commanding officer of the WAC detachment at Fort Myer north post, and Col. John T. Cole, chief of staff of the military district of Washington.

CIVIL AIR PATROL CADETS

Now, Mr. Speaker, I would like to talk of the Civil Air Patrol demonstration, the drills at Bolling Field by the Civil Air Patrol Cadets yesterday afternoon. A number of the States sent their young cadets by air including my own Commonwealth of Massachusetts to take part in the competitive drill. Gen. Beau, head of the Air Patrol, invited them. He also guides all of the work of the Civil Air Patrol. Those young men from our different States paid their own expenses here. They bought their own uniforms. They have no Federal appropriation. All that they asked for was legislation which authorized them to come into being.

Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that there could be nothing finer today against subversive activities, nothing finer for making these young men splendid citizens than this work that they do in the Civil Air Patrol. If you could have seen their faces as I did when they drilled, when they came on the field, when they marched off, when they took part in the parade afterwards, you would agree that the Congress did an extremely fine thing when it brought them into being. I hope that they will increase all over the country. The officers have told me that they have felt that it was tremendously useful in making these young men good Americans, in preventing them from getting into difficulties, from associating, perhaps, with groups that are subversive in character; groups that today, I believe, are more dangerous to the safety of the United States than the foreigners from without our shores. It is most appropriate to hold the drill on I Am An American Day. Truly these young civil air patrol cadets can say I am an American.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. IRVING (at the request of Mr. SULLIVAN), for 4 days, on account of urgent business.

To Mr. BARING, for today, on account of official business.

To Mr. CHIPERFIELD (at the request of Mr. ARENDS), for May 16 and 17, 1949, on account of official business.

To Mr. TAURIELLO (at the request of Mr. GORSKI of New York), for Monday, May 16, 1949, on account of official business.

To Mr. DAVENPORT (at the request of Mr. BUCHANAN), for Monday, May 16, 1949, on account of death in family.

To Mr. GREGORY (at the request of Mr. BATES of Kentucky), for week of May 16, 1949, on account of attending funeral of friend.

To Mr. PASSMAN (at the request of Mr. LARCADE), for 2 days, on account of official business.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

Mrs. NORTON, from the Committee on House Administration, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 679. An act to authorize the admission of Julia Balint to the United States; and

H. R. 2360. An act for the relief of Theodore Papachristopoulos.

The Speaker announced his signature to an enrolled joint resolution of the Senate of the following title:

S. J. Res. 42. Joint resolution granting the consent and approval of Congress to an interstate compact relating to the better utilization of the fisheries (marine, shell, and anadromous) of the Gulf coast and creating the Gulf States Marine Fisheries Commission.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. PRIEST. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 3 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Tuesday, May 17, 1949, at 12 o'clock noon.

SENATE

TUESDAY, MAY 17, 1949

(Legislative day of Monday, April 11, 1949)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou whose throne is truth, frail creatures of dust serving out our brief day on the world's confusing stage, we would set our little lives in the midst of Thy eternity and feel Thy greatness and Thy peace. So guide by Thy wisdom the deliberations of this body, entrusted with such power that awes and solemnizes our hearts, that in this forum of freedom there may be heard by a listening world the solemn summons to men of good will, of all races and of all nations, to a new commonwealth of global brotherhood in which power shall be administered as a sacred trust dedicated to the common good. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. LUCAS, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Monday, May 16, 1949, was dispensed with.

The VICE PRESIDENT. A quorum is present.

TRANSACTION OF ROUTINE BUSINESS

By unanimous consent, the following routine business was transacted:

DEVELOPMENT OF MISSOURI RIVER—RESOLUTION OF CITY COUNCIL OF MITCHELL, S. DAK.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I present for appropriate reference a resolution adopted by the City Council of Mitchell, S. Dak., relating to the development of the Missouri River, and I ask unanimous consent that it may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the resolution was referred to the Committee on Public Works, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas the governing body of the city of Mitchell has been informed that the completion of the present plans for the development of the Missouri River will provide inadequate safeguards for the health of persons residing in the vicinity of such river, cause at least one community, namely Chamberlain, S. Dak., to be substantially relocated, and may in other ways have certain undesirable results: Now, therefore, be it hereby

Resolved by the City Council of Mitchell, Davidson County, S. Dak., That any plans for the development of the Missouri River be reviewed for the purpose of eliminating therefrom, wherever possible, such features thereof as may be undesirable to, or impose undue hardship upon, persons residing in the vicinity of such Missouri River; and be it further

Resolved, That this governing body is expressing no opinion with respect to the various plans and programs for the development of the Missouri River, but is limiting its position strictly to the objectives set forth in the preceding paragraphs.

Passed and approved this 2d day of May 1949.

DAMON CLARK,
Mayor.

Attest:

MARGARET GALES,
Auditor.

JOINT COMMITTEE ON LOBBYING ACTIVITIES

Mr. KILGORE submitted the following concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 41), which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

Whereas there has developed much doubt and confusion concerning the application of the laws relating to the registration and reporting of lobbyists; and

Whereas there is widespread public belief that lobbying activities are being carried on by persons not making reports thereof, as prescribed by law, in some instances because they do not believe the law applies to them and their activities; and

Whereas Members of the Congress and citizens petitioning their Congress in behalf of measures are not able to ascertain through the disclosures now being made under the law the affiliations of many of those persons who are lobbying; and

Whereas it is desirable in strengthening the democratic process to have complete identification of all individuals and organizations lobbying before Congress, the nature, sources, and amounts of their support; and

Whereas there is every evidence of general public support for enactment of legislation to strengthen the Lobbying Registration Act of 1946: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there is hereby established a joint congressional committee to be known as the Joint Committee on Lobbying Activities (hereinafter referred to as the committee), which shall be composed of seven Members of the Senate to be appointed by the President of the Senate, and seven Members of the House of Representatives to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

SEC. 2. A vacancy in the membership of the committee shall not affect the power of the remaining members to execute the functions of the committee, and shall be filled in the same manner as in the case of the original appointment. The members of the committee shall select a chairman from among their number. The members of the committee shall serve without compensation in addition to that received for their services as Members of Congress; but they shall be reimbursed for travel, subsistence, and other necessary expenses incurred by them in the performance of their duties as members of the committee, other than expenses in connection with meetings of the committee held in the District of Columbia during such times as the Congress is in session.

SEC. 3. It shall be the duty of the committee—

(1) to make a full and complete investigation of all lobbying activities, and all efforts to influence, encourage, promote, or retard legislation, directly or indirectly;

(2) to report from time to time to the Senate (or to the Secretary of the Senate if the Senate is not in session) and to the House of Representatives (or to Clerk of the House if the House is not in session) the results of its study and investigation, together with such recommendations as it deems advisable.

SEC. 4. The committee, or any subcommittee thereof, shall have power to hold hearings and to sit and act at such places and times, to require by subpena or otherwise the attendance of such witnesses, and the production of such books, papers, documents, and tangible things, to administer such oaths, to take such testimony, to procure such binding and printing, and to make such expenditures, as it deems advisable. Subpenas shall be issued under the signature of the chairman of the committee, and shall be served by any person designated by him. The cost of stenographic services in reporting such hearings as the committee may hold shall not be in excess of 25 cents per hundred words.

SEC. 5. The committee is authorized to appoint and fix the compensation of such experts and such clerical, stenographic, and other assistants as it deems advisable.

SEC. 6. The expenses of the commtitee shall be paid one-half from the contingent fund of the Senate and one-half from the contingent fund of the House of Representatives upon vouchers approved by the chairman of the committee.

AID FOR NON-COMMUNIST FORCES IN CHINA

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, last Saturday the State Department issued a bulletin, an outline of foreign affairs called Building the Peace, in which they suggest that the arms implementation program that will follow the Atlantic Pact for consideration by the Congress should contain the provision that all projects of United States military aid should be brought together in one program.

I reluctantly have come to the conclusion, from a careful reading of this document issued by the Department of State, that the Department has no intention of giving any aid to the non-Communist forces of China to prevent that country from being overrun by the Communist forces now making an effort to do so.

I wish to serve notice, on behalf of myself and a number of other Senators on both sides of the aisle, that I shall be prepared to offer an amendment to the implementation legislation when it comes before the Senate, to provide aid to the non-Communist forces in China at the time we are supplying aid to enable the democratic forces in western Europe to keep from going behind the iron curtain.

Mr. President, I ask to have inserted in the RECORD at this point as part of my remarks a resolution passed by the Texas State Legislature, pointing out to the Congress the feeling of the legislative body of that important and great State of the Union that they believe our foreign policy in the Far East has not been following a sound course.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the resolution was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas Stalin has clamped a stranglehold on 120,000,000 Europeans and is now attempting to add another 450,000,000 Chinese to his war machine for the very evident purpose of strengthening the Russion military machine for a third world war; and

Whereas the Communist threat to these United States is at present far more dangerous than the combined threat of Nazi Germany, Fascist Italy, and imperialistic Japan ever was; and

Whereas the confidence of American citizens in the atomic bomb is beginning to resemble the foolish confidence the French people had in the Maginot Line and is comparable to the false sense of security the United States had in the supposedly invincible American fleet prior to Pearl Harbor; and

Whereas today we are permitting Stalin to make the Chinese people his vassals through enslavement which will possibly involve us in a struggle not for security but for survival to maintain the fruits of our victory won at the expense of thousands of American lives in World War II; and

Whereas the Chinese Communist leader, the leader of the French Communists, and the leader of the Italian Communists have publicly stated that they would fight on the side of communistic Russia in the event of a war with United States; and

Whereas China is the key to all Asia and if it falls, Indochina, Siam, Burma, and Malay states, and Indonesia will surely fall into the hands of the Communists which will then leave India well within the sphere of Soviet influence; and

Whereas we have been so proud of the record our aviators have made in supplying Berlin by air that we have almost forgotten the daily insults which the Russians inflict upon our country by preventing us from using the ground approach to Berlin; and

Whereas our State Department has seemingly adopted a policy of passive resistance toward the Soviet Union at the expense of American prestige built up by the sacrifice of thousands of American lives and has also gone so far as to employ people whose loyalty to the American way of life has been openly questioned; all of this allowing valuable time to run in favor of the Communists; and

Whereas the American people live by the beliefs expressed in our Declaration of Independence that men are "endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights;" that the state is a tool of man, a means and not an end, and that man is responsible for the moral behavior of the state; and

Whereas the Communist creed is the exact reverse and directly opposed to this American doctrine and teaches that there is no God, no moral law, but that the communistic state is above all morality; and

Whereas from eastern Germany to China, men have already learned the terrible truth of William Penn's words, "Those people who are not ruled by God, will be ruled by tyrants"; and

Whereas public opinion in the United States has not been alerted to our present peril which is increasing daily; and

Whereas we know an American is a free man or he is nothing; that we, like our forefathers, are ready to face without flinching whatever fate the Lord God may bestow, ready to give all that we have and all that we are to defend the greatest adventure in human freedom that this earth has ever known—our America: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, by the house of representatives of the fifty-first legislature in regular session (the senate concurring), That the Government of the United States should immediately use all its influence and power to diminish the burden on our own country and increase Europe's chances to survive by bringing about the creation of a European federation; and that

The Government of the United States should dismiss from the Department of State and the foreign services the men whose records show that they have helped to bring our country into its present peril by following the policy of treating the Soviet Union as a peace-loving democracy and the Chinese Communists as mere agrarian reformers who have no connection with Moscow; and that

The Government of the United States should take immediate steps to prevent Stalin from controlling China and should cease to throw away all that was won for us by our men who fought and died in the Pacific; and that

The American Government should immediately reassert our rights to supply our section of Berlin by train or truck by putting through trains or trucks to Berlin; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the President of the United States, the Secretary of State for the United States, and each Senator and Member of the House of Representatives in the Congress of the United States from Texas.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, I also ask that there be printed as part of my remarks at this point an article which appeared in the Houston Chronicle under date of April 27, 1949, containing the address of the Honorable William Bullitt, former United States Ambassador to France and Russia, in which he discusses our foreign policy, with particular relation to that followed in the Far East.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EX-ENVOY TELLS SOLONS OF MENACE TO PEACE—STATE DEPARTMENT POLICY CRITICIZED IN ADDRESS DELIVERED TO TEXAS LEGISLATURE

AUSTIN, April 27.—A challenge to accomplish the impossible in arousing public opinion to the danger of the Soviet menace to world peace was issued to Texas legislators here Wednesday by William C Bullitt, former Ambassador to France and Russia.

Texans, Mr. Bullitt added, have always known they could accomplish the impossible.

In a speech delivered to a joint session of the Texas Legislature, Mr. Bullitt flayed the State Department's policies in the Far East and predicted that Russia would probably have an atomic bomb by 1952.

World War III is certain, he warned, if we allow Russia to conquer China, as it is now doing.

The full text of Mr. Bullitt's address follows:

"Your invitation to me to address you today I value as an exceptional honor. For Texas is both a great State and a great state of mind—the state of mind of men who know that the good life is the free life, that the adventure of life is in striving, making mistakes, striving again, and bending circumstances by human will.

"In these days of atomic energy and jet planes, history has become the biography of the impossible. Texans—from Sam Houston to Jesse Jones—have always known they could accomplish the impossible.

"And if we are to bring to fulfillment the promise of American life, in spite of the enemies who are striving to destroy us, it will be because we, as a nation, begin to act with the spirit which is yours in Texas.

"What is the threat that we face today?

"The Soviet Government is directing all the forces of world communism toward the objective of conquering not only Europe, Asia, Africa, and Latin America, but also the United States. Stalin, like Hitler, will not stop. He can only be stopped. We cannot get off this earth.

"Therefore, we shall have to stop him or submit to his rule. Our forefathers came to this continent because they would submit to no master but God. We will not submit to Stalin.

"What, then, lies before us? War?

"Our chance to preserve our freedom without fighting has decreased each day since the close of the Second World War. We never had a chance, of course, to achieve lasting peace by appeasing Stalin.

"The Communist creed demands the installation of Communist dictatorship throughout all the world. And Stalin embraces a free country in pretended friendship only in order to get close enough to strangle it."

FAILED TO USE POWER

"We did have a chance during the war, when the Soviet Union was dependent for survival on lend-lease aid, to make certain that the countries we were liberating from the Nazis and the Japanese would not be enslaved by Stalin.

"But we did not use our power while we had it, and Stalin mounted the saddles of both Hitler and the Japanese militarists.

"We had a chance also at the close of the war to build up throughout the world such moral and physical force against Soviet imperialism that Stalin would have stopped his aggressions in fear.

"But our Government was still wandering, like Alice, in a wonderland created by Communist propaganda, a wonderland in which the Soviet Union was a peace-loving democracy and the Chinese Communists were mere agrarian reformers who had no connection with Moscow.

"So we threw away most of the arms we had manufactured—at considerable cost—and destroyed the arms we had captured, and demobilized, and waited for the United Nations to bring us peace.

"Meanwhile, Stalin clamped a stranglehold on 120,000,000 Europeans, and set out to conquer Asia. Our Government did not wake up till he threatened to invade Turkey. Then it began to realize that it must do something to prevent him from taking over the Near East and the rump of Europe which was still outside his grasp.

"But it did not awake sufficiently to make the small effort which was then necessary to prevent his conquest of China. In consequence, Stalin has grown so strong that it will no longer be easy to build up the overwhelming force necessary to convince him that he had better not, at some future date, risk war.

"And it will certainly be impossible if we leave the initiative in the cold war in Stalin's hands. No war—hot or cold—was ever won by defensive action. Yet we are leaving the offensive to Stalin.

"Today, using his Chinese accomplices as instruments, Stalin is conquering China. The Chinese Nationalists, our friends, the same men who fought as our allies against the Japanese, abandoned today by us, are still fighting a desperate fight to preserve the independence of their country.

"And our Government is saying that we must sit by and watch Stalin add 450,000,000 Chinese to his war potential."

PERVERSION OF UNITED STATES POLICY

"The most conspicuous triumph of Soviet psychological warfare has been the gradual perversion of American policy toward China.

"Roosevelt and Hull rightly believed that control of China by a power which might become hostile to us would constitute such a threat to the security of the United States that we must prevent it—by war if necessary.

"On the basis of that conviction we got into the Second World War. And our fighting men, by defeating Japan, won for us what might have been security on the Pacific side. But the 1941 policy of Roosevelt and Hull has been reversed, although the Communist threat to our country is far more dangerous than the Japanese threat ever was.

"We are allowing a power which is hostile to us to conquer China, and thus we are making certain the coming of a third world war.

"Moreover we are doing this in spite of the fact that no ranking American general has been able to devise any method by which we could compel the Soviet Government to surrender if the 450,000,000 Chinese should be added to the Soviet war potential.

"We could destroy Russian cities with the atomic bomb; but the idea that the Russians would sue for peace if we should destroy their major cities is illusion. They are made of tougher stuff than that, and they would continue to fight even though they might have to retreat into the wilds of Siberia and China."

TOO CONFIDENT OF A BOMB

"The confidence of Americans in the atomic bomb is beginning to resemble the confidence of the French in the Maginot line. Many Americans believe that because we have the bomb we are certain to win a war against the Soviet Union.

"That is not true. We would run into great difficulties with Soviet fighter planes in our attempt to deliver the bomb, and it is not an efficient weapon against dispersed bodies of men.

"Unless we are more exact in our thinking, our overconfidence in the atomic bomb may become as fatal to us as overconfidence in the Maginot line was to France.

"Without Chinese allies, or a new weapon of mass destruction as deadly to groups of men as the atomic bomb is to cities, we would not have the men or the means to root the Communists out of Siberia and the Far East. We have no such new weapon, and we are permitting Stalin to make the Chinese his allies.

"One of the healthiest traditions of our country is that when a general loses an army or a division through incompetence he is court martialed. But the officials of the Department of State lose whole countries and even continents through incompetence, and receive not dismissals but promotions.

"We are today in a struggle not for security but for survival. We owe that bitter fruit of our victory in the Second World War to the men who based our foreign policy on the lie that the Soviet Union was a peace-loving democracy and the brother lie that the Chinese Communists were mere agrarian reformers who had no connection with Moscow.

"The State Department and the Foreign Service are still rancid with those men.

"They are now advising our President that we should wash our hands of China—in spite of the fact that the Chinese Communist leader Mao Tse-tung announced on the third of this month that Communist China would fight as the ally of the Soviet Union against the United States. Our President can try to wash his hands of China, but he cannot wash them clean."

OPPOSE OR ASSENT

"Unless we oppose Communist conquest of China we assent to it. And our children will face assault by overwhelming masses of Communist driven slaves. Pontius Pilate washed his hands, but the world has never forgiven him. History does not forgive craven evasions—whether by Roman governors or American Presidents.

"China is the key to all Asia. If China goes, Indochina, Siam, Burma, the Malay States, and Indonesia will fall into the hands of the Communists. India will be at Stalin's mercy, and the Japanese who depend on Asia for raw materials and food, and markets for their products, will know that they can become self-supporting only by crawling under Stalin's iron curtain and making their country a Soviet satellite.

"The Japanese and many other Asiatics are already beginning to say that to be a friend of the United States is too dangerous. Our present policy in Asia is defeatism—scuttle and run. We are in full retreat—in abject flight—and Stalin is advancing triumphantly.

"But Europe—can we not congratulate ourselves on our European policy? Have we not seized the initiative in Europe from Stalin? We have not. Our policy in Europe is not deadly to our national interests, as is our policy in Asia. It is now, at last, on the right line. But it is weakly right. And in international affairs to be weakly right is often as fatal as to absolutely wrong."

ATLANTIC PACT LATE

"We have concluded a North Atlantic Pact—3 years late. But the North Atlantic Pact is a frame without a picture; an excellent idea without substance. It will have substance when the European democracies are once more able to feed themselves and defend themselves without doles from the American taxpayer.

"Our Congress voted ECA aid to Europe as a great gift to end the need for further gifts after 1952. But our European friends have already informed us that they will need some billions of dollars annually in gifts from us even after 1952.

"And they have also informed us that they cannot pay for their essential rearmament. Today they have only six divisions armed to meet a possible assault by the Red Army. They would need from 40 to 60 divisions, armed in the most modern manner, to have a chance of preventing the Red Army from marching to the Atlantic. The cost of western European rearmament will run to at least $12,000,000,000.

"Who is going to pay that sum? The American taxpayer?"

NEED STANDARDIZATION

"It is clear today that the western European democracies will never be able to feed and clothe themselves and defend themselves unless they introduce efficient standardization and specialization of production of the sort we have in America.

"But fully modernized production with large volume and low costs cannot be achieved anywhere without the existence of a broad market in which products can be sold without barriers or restrictions.

"The states of western Europe are separated by tariff barriers, quotas, export and import licenses, different currencies and exchange restrictions.

"If our 48 States had been thus separated, we should never have been able to develop our effective mass-production system. The markets open to the individual European democracies are not broad enough to permit fully modernized production.

"Unless they will, by some form of union or federation, break down the barriers which now obstruct the flow of goods, manpower and capital among them, they will not be able to support themselves without annual doles from the American taxpayer—and they will not be able to carry more than a small fraction of the cost of their military defense.

"The individual states of western Europe cannot survive as disunited competitors, but if they unite themselves freely as members of a federation they may be able to avoid being united forcibly by Stalin.

"To attempt to build the economic prosperity and the defense of western Europe without laying the foundation of European federation is to attempt to build a skyscraper on quicksand. That is what we are doing.

"In consequence, the Soviet Government is confident that the problems of European economic life and defense will not be solved, and that we, by attempting to carry the burden of rehabilitating and rearming Europe, will produce in our own country an inflation which will hit all Americans so hard that we shall begin to quarrel among ourselves—farmers against city dwellers, employees against employers, race against race—until we lose our national unity and our will to resist.

"The Soviet Government, therefore, has no fear that time is running against it in Europe. And nothing short of the creation of a European federation—including western Germany—and the rapid rearmament of western Europe will put us in position to wrest the offensive in Europe from Stalin."

REDS IN WEST EUROPE

"To take the political offensive in Europe, we shall, in addition, have to deal successfully with the problem of the Communists in western Europe. Today about one out of four of the French votes Communist, and about one out of four taken into the French Army is a Communist sympathizer.

"The head of atomic research in France is an open and avowed member of the Communist Party. And the French Communists have announced that they will fight on the Soviet side against their own country in case of war. In Italy about one out of three voters votes Communist.

"We shall not be able to have much confidence in either the economic or the military strength of France and Italy until Stalin's fifth columns are eliminated from those countries.

"ECA has prevented the conquest of France and Italy by the Communists. It has arrested the growth of the Communist cancer, it has not eliminated the cancer. But a healthy France and Italy are essential if Europe is to survive and if we are to take the political offensive on a broad scale in Europe.

"Is there any place in Europe where we can seize the initiative now? Yes; Berlin.

"We have been so proud—and rightly proud—of our aviators who have been supplying Berlin by air that we have almost forgotten the daily insult which the Russians inflict on our country by preventing us from using the ground approaches to Berlin. We have a right to supply our section of Berlin by train or truck.

"The Russians daily forbid us to exercise that right. If you were to go home tonight and find a thug on your doorstep who threatened to slug you if you went in your front door, and if you were then to get a ladder and climb in a second-story window, and if you were to repeat that humiliating performance night after night, you would not be likely to boast of your cleverness and courage in finding a way to get into your house."

NO PRAISE FOR LEADERS

"That is our situation in Berlin. No praise is too high for our aviators who carry on the airlift in spite of fog and storm. But no praise at all is due to our political leaders who let that situation continue month after month.

"Would Stalin order his troops to shoot if we should send a truck convoy into Berlin? He might, if he were very foolish. But he has not been foolish in the past. And he knows that war today would prevent him from adding the races and resources of Asia to his war potential and prevent him from getting the atomic bomb before attacking us.

"He also knows that he is increasing the armed might of the Soviet Union and its satellites at a far greater rate than we and the European democracies are increasing our means of defense.

"We are spending all we can on armaments while living at the world's highest standard of consumption and contemplating further expenditures for welfare benefits.

"Stalin is keeping the standard of existence of the peoples of the Soviet Union and the satellite states at the lowest endurable point, while turning all their best energies into production for war. He is working feverishly to increase his air force."

BUILDING BOMBERS

"He already has hundreds of copies of our efficient long-range bomber, the B–29. And he is beginning production of bombers with even greater range. He is striving with every resource he possesses to manufacture an atomic bomb.

"Our experts estimate that he will have an atomic bomb by 1952 and that he will have quantities by 1956. He is sure that time is running in his favor, and he is not likely to risk war now.

"This is a moment when we can afford to be bold. Indeed, it is a moment when we cannot afford not to be bold. For it is true that we are allowing time to run in favor of the Communists. Yet there is no indication in the recent statements of our State Department that our Government will act intelligently, vigorously, and rapidly in either the Far East or Europe.

"What can we do about it? We cannot lead our leaders, but we can drive our leaders by arousing public opinion.

"The legislature of this great State of Texas—you gentlemen here present—have it in your power to create such a public opinion. You can do your part in this time of cold war as Texans always do their part when the shooting starts.

"You can pass resolutions telling our national leaders that you will not consider them good stewards unless they diminish the burden on our own country, and increase Europe's chance to survive, by bringing about the creation of a European federation.

"You can demand that they throw out of the State Department and the Foreign Service the men whose records show that they have helped to bring our country into its present peril.

"You can tell them that you will hold them responsible if, by allowing Stalin to control China, they throw away all that was won for us by our men who fought and died in the Pacific.

"You can demand that we furnish officers to help the Chinese Nationalists to organize a last-ditch defense which would be also, in the final analysis, a defense of the United States; that we furnish planes, arms, munitions, and silver for troop pay; that we stop Stalin—not in Alaska or California or Texas but where he stands today.

"We are, in fact, already in a war in which there is no discharge. But if our situation is serious, it is also thoroughly inspiring. We live by the belief expressed in our Declaration of Independence that men are 'endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights,' that man as a son of God is an end in himself, that the state is a tool of man, a means not an end, and that man is responsible for the moral behavior of the state."

OPPOSITE BELIEF

"The Communist creed is the exact reverse of this American doctrine.

"It teaches that there is no God, that there is no moral law, that the Communist state is above all morality, that the state is man's master not his tool, that man is not an end in himself but a means to produce world conquest for the Communist state.

"And the Communists are determined to force us to accept the life of fear and slavery which is produced by their doctrine.

"From eastern Germany to China, men have already learned the terrible truth of William Penn's words:

" 'Those people who are not ruled by God will be ruled by tyrants.' And we too shall learn that terrible truth in the sweat of slavery unless we arouse ourselves now and say to our Government that we do not ask for privileges but for duties; that we do not want to hear what we can get from our country but we do want to hear what we can give to our country; that we know an American is a free man or he is nothing; that we, like our forefathers, are ready to face without flinching whatever fat the Lord God may bestow, ready to give all that we have and all that we are to defend the greatest adventure in human freedom that this earth has known—our America."

EXTENSION OF RECIPROCAL TRADE AGREEMENTS ACT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 1211) to extend the authority of the President under section 350 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, and for other purposes.

LABOR-FEDERAL SECURITY APPROPRIATIONS—MOTION TO RECONSIDER

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business may be temporarily laid aside in order that the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN] may make a motion.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair would suggest that instead of the Senator making a motion, which, if carried, would displace the unfinished business, the Senator ask unanimous consent to proceed to the consideration of the motion.

Mr. RUSSELL. I do not know how we could proceed with the consideration of the motion until the Senator from Rhode Island has made it, but I would ask——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Rhode Island entered the motion several days ago, and he can now make it, but unanimous consent can be granted temporarily to lay aside the unfinished business and take up the motion.

Mr. RUSSELL. That was the effect of the unanimous-consent request I made.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, my understanding is that the unfinished business is the so-called extension of the reciprocal trade agreements legislation.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. The unanimous-consent request is temporarily to displace that bill, and take up for consideration the motion made by the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN] to reconsider the vote by which the Labor-Federal Security appropriation bill was recommitted.

Mr. RUSSELL. With instructions.

Mr. WHERRY. Yes; with instructions.

Mr. RUSSELL. The Senator from Nebraska is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I wish to make an inquiry of the distinguished majority leader. The motion made by the Senator from Rhode Island is debatable, of course. After the motion is disposed of, what will be the program for the day?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Automatically the Senate will return to consideration of the unfinished business, which is the reciprocal trade-agreements legislation.

Mr. WHERRY. Yes; I understand that. But my inquiry of the majority leader is whether he intends to have the Senate consider that legislation today, or whether he plans to have it set aside so the Senate may consider some other measure during the afternoon.

Mr. LUCAS. Let me say, Mr. President, that following the disposition of the motion made by the Senator from Rhode Island it is expected that a unanimous-consent request will be made to lay aside the unfinished business, for the purpose of considering the Department of Agriculture appropriation bill. The senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] who is in charge of the reciprocal trade agreements bill, is indisposed today; therefore it is necessary for us to move on to some other part of the Senate program.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I have no objection to consideration of the motion made by the Senator from Rhode Island in view of the announcement just made by the Senator from Illinois, which has clarified for us what the program will be for today.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the Senate will now proceed to the consideration of the motion made by the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN] to reconsider the vote by which the appropriation bill was recommitted.

The question now is on agreeing to the motion to reconsider.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. President, is my motion to reconsider now before the Senate?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN] to reconsider the vote by which House bill 3333 was recommitted to the Committee on Appropriations with instructions.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. President, it seems to me that the discussions reported in the RECORD are ample. Most Senators had already made their decision when they acted on a former occasion. In the meantime, those who were absent, as I unfortunately had to be at the time of the vote, have made up their minds. Personally I feel that there is no occasion for debating the matter further.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, I wish to repeat what I have said many times on the floor of the Senate during the past 4 months, namely, that we should reduce all the appropriation bills and should cut the expenses of the Government. We have been talking about cutting them 5 percent. In my opinion they should be cut not less than 20 percent.

Yesterday I voted for the reorganization bill. I think it is a fine thing, and I hope the President will be successful in reorganizing the Federal Government and in reducing expenses. However, I remind the Senate that the responsibility for reducing expenses, the responsibility for cutting appropriations, and the responsibility for not appropriating money belong to the Congress, and not to the President of the United States.

I cannot help feeling that in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, we shall incur a deficit of between $5,000,000,000 and $15,000,000,000 unless we reduce expenses by that amount. Possibly we could correct the situation somewhat by increasing taxes; but I am of the opinion that if we increase taxes they will show a diminishing return.

I think there is no question, if one reads the business signs correctly, that the volume of business is declining. The number of dollars business is handling today is less than it was a year ago. In my opinion it will grow smaller. I am thinking now in terms of volume, in terms of dollars. I am not saying that I think we are going to have a depression. I do not think we shall. But we must remember that only a year ago the President of the United States, the Congress, and the people were complaining that prices were too high, and must come down. There were those who said that if they did not come down of their own weight we should enact legislation to reduce them. Prices are now falling. They have been reduced by their own weight.

I cannot think of anything worse for this Nation than to continue to operate at a deficit in peacetime. That is particularly true when taxes are as high as they are, and when our budget and our appropriations at the moment are running above $40,000,000,000. I am thoroughly convinced that Federal revenues for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, will not be more than $35,000,000,000. I made that statement 3 months ago, and I repeat it today. I remember that 3 months ago it was estimated that revenues would amount to $40,000,000,000. The other day someone in authority stated that it seemed that they would go to $38,000,000,000. That is only $3,000,000,000 more than my estimate. My estimate is only an opinion; but suppose I am wrong. Suppose the revenues are $40,000,000,000 or $42,000,000,000. Is it not much more sound, more businesslike and more in the interest of world peace and in the interest of our economy and our people that we stay within our income and run a surplus rather than a deficit?

I do not know what we are thinking about. I cannot understand why Members of the Senate should deliberately, day in and day out, pass appropriation bills which we know will run our Government in the red during the fiscal years for which we are appropriating money. Is there a single Member of the Senate who feels that our Government can remain strong and run a deficit in peacetime, adding that deficit, whether it be $1,000,000,000, $2,000,000,000, $5,000,000,000, $10,000,000,000 or $15,000,000,000 to a national debt of $252,000,000,000?

What are we thinking about? When are we going to cut expenses? Why do we "pass the buck" to the President of the United States? Why do we not accept the responsibility ourselves? Why do we not do what the Reorganization Act calls for, namely, arrive at the estimated revenues for the fiscal year, and then appropriate not one dollar more than the revenues reasonably to be anticipated? An expenditure of $40,000,000,000 does not frighten me. An expenditure of $50,000,000,000 does not frighten me. An expenditure of $60,000,000,000 does not frighten me. The thing that frightens me is the fact that we are spending more money than we are going to take in. I agree that the time might come when we might well spend $50,000,000,000, if the national income and the volume of business should warrant it. The fact that the expenditure is $40,000,000,000 does not frighten me. It is not the amount of money that should frighten us. It is the fact that we are spending more money than we are taking in, and adding the deficit to a national debt of $252,000,000,000.

I repeat that in my personal opinion every appropriation bill that comes before the Senate should be reduced, so that the sum total of appropriations will be not more than $35,000,000,000. I think we owe it to the American people to do so. We could well appropriate more money later if we saw that our revenues were going to be greater than it seems at the moment they will be. I plead with the Congress not to appropriate a single penny more than it is reasonably expected we shall receive in revenues.

This morning I noted in the press that last night or the night before the President of the United States made a Nation-wide radio appeal to the American people to buy $1,000,000,000 worth of E bonds, on the basis that we need the money in order to maintain world peace and for our own security. I have no objection to that. I think it is a fine thing. We need to borrow money because we are running deficits each day.

Mr. President, I am sincere when I say it is my opinion that the great majority, if not all, of the 147,000,000 Americans are looking to this Congress to reduce governmental expenditures, to reduce the Government's budget, to balance the budget, to reduce the national debt. I do not know how any man in his right mind can feel that any individual, any institution, any company, any government, any organization can continue, year in and year out, to spend more money than it receives. The end of such a course must be calamity. Of course a government does not go bankrupt, but a government can get into such a position or condition that the people lose confidence in its money and bonds and management. When that time comes, there is chaos and inflation.

I have in my pocket a certificate issued by the Chinese Government, supposedly worth $2,500,000. It is a 25,000 unit certificate. Of course, today this certificate is practically valueless because the Chinese people have lost confidence in their Government.

Mr. President, I say this matter is extremely serious. We talk about reducing governmental expenditures by 5 percent. However, thus far we have not been able to make even a one-penny reduction in the appropriations. We were not able to reduce by one penny the $5,880,000,000 ECA appropriation. We have not been able to reduce by one penny any appropriation which has come before the Senate to date. It is my understanding that the House has increased the amounts carried in either six or nine appropriation bills by a total of approximately $4,500,000,000 more than was spent last year by the agencies for which the appropriations are made.

So, Mr. President, this situation is extremely serious. The very fact that the President of the United States spoke on the radio, on a Nation-wide hook-up, several evenings ago, in an endeavor to increase the sale of Government bonds, the very fact that we now have to use the President of the United States and organized bond-selling drives in an effort to obtain more funds for the Government, in itself should sober every Member of the Senate and should bring to all of us a realization that the time has come when we must reduce governmental expenditures. After all, how can we expect to ask the people to pay more taxes, when the Government is spending more money?

Mr. President, I shall not take further of the time of the Senate to discuss this matter. I simply say in closing, let us have the courage to do what each and every one of us knows should be done. Let us have the courage to face our own responsibility in this matter, the responsibility which the Congress has to appropriate the necessary money and to cut governmental expenses. We can pass all the reorganization acts we wish to, and the President of the United States can do the best he can under them, but I say we shall never stop the growth of governmental bureaucracy and we shall never stop the wasting of hundreds of millions of dollars by Government spending until the Congress of the United States has the courage to cut off and shut off appropriations.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CAPEHART. I am very happy to yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. WHERRY. In line with the very forceful remarks the distinguished Senator from Indiana has made, I should like to ask him a question. Is it not true that the correspondence the distinguished Senator from Indiana is receiving from his State today and from the places where he has gone shows that there is a grass-roots demand that Federal Government expenditures be reduced in the appropriation bills now before the Congress?

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, there is no question about that. On Friday night I am to go to Fort Wayne, Ind., at the invitation of the labor unions of that city, to consult with them regarding unemployment. More than 10,000 persons are unemployed in Fort Wayne, Ind.; and in the invitation which the labor unions have sent me, they state that they wish me to explain to them why and how it is possible for our Government to be spending billions upon billions of dollars, and yet there is widespread unemployment in Fort Wayne.

Mr. President, if Senators do not believe that the American people are aroused over the failure of this Congress to cut expenses, then Senators are making a great mistake.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CAPEHART. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. I wonder whether the Senator from Indiana noticed in yesterday's newspapers a statement that the value of the national product has, in the course of the last few weeks, declined approximately $9,000,000,000; and I wonder whether the Senator would attribute a part of the unemployment to some of the deflationary trends which have appeared in the last few months, and whether he will agree that this so-called economy drive which is accelerating the deflationary trends is likely to produce more unemployment, rather than less.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, it simply does not make sense that that would be true. If we are going to proceed on the premise that we must have a synthetic prosperity or a synthetic economy in our Nation, if we are going to develop into a 100-percent welfare state, if we are going to abandon the private enterprise system, and if the Government is going to take over all business and is going to provide employment, that is one thing. Personally, I am 100 percent opposed to it. I think that if we have unemployment today, it is due to the fact that there is lack of confidence in the financial situation in Washington.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. CAPEHART. I am happy to yield.

Mr. PEPPER. Does not all our economic experience show that what causes lack of confidence is the fear of a prospective loss of business, which means that the opinion of business is that purchasing power is less, that the market is smaller and has shrunken, and are not the people who are shouting from the housetops about Government economy and cutting all Government expenditures setting an example to private enterprise in the United States to do the same thing? And if manufacturers cut down their production because inventories are being reduced by wholesalers and jobbers and distributors, is not that the very sort of thing that produces unemployment in factories and on farms?

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, first let me say that I cannot and I will not debate this subject with anyone who does not agree that no individual, no company, no institution, or no organization can long exist if it spends more money than it takes in. I simply refuse to debate this subject with ayone who does not agree with that premise.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. CAPEHART. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. If the Senator from Florida gave any impression that he advocates having the Government spend more money than it takes in, he certainly welcomes the opportunity to correct the error or misunderstanding.

Nor is the President of the United States advocating an unbalanced budget. On the contrary, he is advocating that when governmental expenditures exceed receipts, the proper course is to increase taxes, and I agree.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. CAPEHART. I am very happy to yield.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I should like to call to the Senator's attention, for any comment he may desire to make in connection with what he has just said, to the daily statement of the United States Treasury, dated May 12, 1949, which shows, on page 2, that the receipts this year amounted to $32,345,000,000, as opposed to the receipts of the corresponding fiscal period 1948, in the amount of $36,434,000,000, a decrease of $4,100,000,000. Meanwhile, along the line of what the Senator from Florida has stated, the total expenditures in the same period, for this year, amounted to $30,800,000,000, as opposed to $28,700,000,000 a year ago. Therefore, if my arithmetic is correct, the United States Government is about $6,000,000,0000 worse off this year, at this moment, than it was last year. Does the Senator have any comment on that, in connection with the statement made by the Senator from Florida?

Mr. CAPEHART. Of course, that is what we have been talking about. That is the position we have been taking all along, that revenues are dropping, and that the Government is spending more money. Receipts and expenditures are out of balance. Each day the deficit is increased. Instead of conditions getting better, they are getting worse, because we are appropriating and getting ready to spend more money in the next year than we spent this year.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CAPEHART. I am very happy to yield.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the Senator for yielding, because I wanted him to bring out primarily the demand that is coming from the grass roots. I am in total agreement with the distinguished Senator when he states that he refuses to debate with anyone who fails to differentiate between real prosperity and synthetic prosperity. I ask the Senator, is it not true that the reason business today is apprehensive is because of the very fact that it looks as though there is nothing ahead but increased taxes, and therefore business is fearful of expanding or of going on with the present volume and with the program it has today?

Mr. CAPEHART. Businessmen are apprehensive because of that situation and likewise because the President and the administration—I could well say all of us—felt a year ago that prices were too high and had to be reduced. Prices have been reduced, and they are going to be reduced still more, because certain prices are still high. As prices are reduced, it will be found that the number of dollars we have is likewise reduced. When the volume is reduced and when the market is falling, there is a natural reaction on the part of business interests, whether the businessman be a farmer or engaged in some other line. A man contemplating a $50 purchase will wait to see whether the price is going down. Last year we complained that prices were too high. Now we are beginning to complain that they are too low. Industry and business are now doing what the administration and the President of the United States advocated last year. Revenues are declining, as a result. That was the natural consequence of handling fewer dollars, or everybody reducing prices, and doing what many people thought should have been done last year. But they forget, in doing that, that the Government is going to have less revenue. We, in the Government, have forgotten to reduce our expenses and our "prices," if we care to call them that, in proportion to what the people of the United States are doing.

GREETING TO RED CROSS WORKERS IN THE GALLERY

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. President, I have noticed in the Senate gallery a group of ladies in Red Cross uniforms. In recognition of the wonderful work that is being done by the ladies of the Red Cross, I move that the Senate stand for a moment in their honor, and give them a hand.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Idaho.

The motion was unanimously agreed to; and the Members of the Senate rose and applauded.

COMMITTEE MEETING DURING SENATE SESSION

Mr. MYERS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a subcommittee of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce which is considering certain legislation with regard to the Natural Gas Act be permitted to meet this afternoon while the Senate is in session.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, permission is granted.

Mr. MYERS. I wish to announce that the committee met this morning, and that the following Senators were in attendance: The Senator from Arizona [Mr. McFARLAND], the Senator from Kansas [Mr. REED], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICKER], the Senator from Texas [Mr. JOHNSON], and I, all of whom missed the first quorum call because they were in attendance upon the committee at that time.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2361) to provide for the reorganization of Government agencies, and for other purposes; agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. DAWSON, Mr. HOLIFIELD, Mr. McCORMACK, Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan, and Mr. RICH were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

ECA HAS FURTHERED BRITISH SOCIALISM

Mr. KEM. Mr. President, there appeared recently in the Washington Post, an article by Frank Gervasi, prominently displayed under the headline, "ERP hasn't financed socialism." I understand the same article appeared in other leading newspapers.

The article evidently was aimed at the amendment to be proposed to the forthcoming ECA appropriation bill, to prohibit Marshall plan funds being used to finance further nationalization of basic industries in the participating countries.

BRITISH PROPAGANDA LINE

Since Mr. Gervasi was writing from London, it is perhaps not unnatural that his article reflects the propaganda line of the British Information Service; which, of course, is the propaganda line of the Socialist Government and the Socialist Party in Britain.

At an appropriate time, I expect to speak at some length upon the manner and extent to which Marshall-plan funds have been used to further the socialization program in England. However, I feel that I should not delay until the appropriation bill comes before the Senate to correct certain entirely erroneous impressions that were conveyed by the Gervasi article.

I do not intend at this time to discuss either the merits or demerits, or the work or failure to work, of the Marshall plan as a whole. I do intend to show, in brief outline, that American funds are being used to further the nationalization of industry, and the medical profession, in England.

Mr. Gervasi, in his article, states:

> Such socialist enterprises as the nationalization of the Bank of England, of transportation, of electric light and power and of the coal industry were purely internal transactions involving sterling, not dollars. Nationalization of the bank, which was little more than the creation of a British version of our own Federal Reserve System, was accomplished by issuance of $232,000,000 in Government bonds to the former stockholders.
> So it was with the other enterprises which were transferred to the Government from private to public ownership. The shareholders received stocks and bonds paying from 2½ to 3 percent interest. No dollars changed hands.

Now, Mr. President, that is the type of clever half-truths that have become a favorite weapon of certain propagandists in our own Government. Of course, no dollars actually went directly from the American Treasury to pay for the purchase of the socialized industries. But that is simply a bookkeeping technicality.

COUNTERPART FUNDS USED TO CANCEL DEBT

What did happen was this:

The bonds for the purchase of the industries were charged to the British national debt. The assumption of this added debt put such a strain upon the financial structure of the British Government that last year ECA came to the rescue. The British Government was permitted by ECA to use 82,000,000 pounds sterling of the Marshall Plan counterpart funds for the cancellation of debt. This figure appears as a part of Mr. Hoffman's testimony, on page 41 of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee's hearings on the extension of European aid.

For what are the counterpart funds supposed to be used? It was insisted from the very beginning that European aid could not simply be for relief. It must also be for the rehabilitation of the western European economy. Therefore, for every dollar given in aid, each country must match that dollar in its own funds in a segregated account that must go for capital investment. The intention of Congress was that these counterpart funds should be used only for recovery or rehabilitation. But ECA dumped 82,000,000 pounds sterling of this fund into the laps of the Labor Government to cancel debt—British national debt—which had been swollen by the cost of the purchase of the socialized industries. And yet, Mr. Gervasi and the hand-outs of the British Information Service insist that Marshall-plan aid is not helping to socialize Britain.

EFFECT OF AID ON SOCIALISM PROGRAM

The industries which Britain has socialized have lost great sums of money. The civil aviation industry, for example, lost $100,000,000 the first 14 months. These losses must be made up.

The money which has gone to meet these deficits could have otherwise been used for goods and services, thereby lessening the load, to quote Winston Churchill, upon the heavily burdened people of the United States.

Raw materials have been flowing from the United States in a constant stream, further mitigating the strain which the nationalization program places upon the British economy.

It may possibly be said that the British Laborites would have attempted socialization even if they had had no American aid. If so, it is interesting to speculate as to what a Pandora's box of economic troubles would have been opened. As it is, the smooth and undisturbed flow of American billions, the rivers of cotton, wheat, and raw materials of all kinds, have enabled the Labor Party to cushion the transition and render socialization relatively painless.

The lower volume of production and consequent lower standard of living which are implicit in the Socialist program have been avoided. William A. Richardson, editor of Medical Economics, recently spent a month in England. He quotes a Member of the House of Commons as dismissing the huge cost of the socialization plan with this comment:

> What does it matter? the Americans are paying for it.

Socialism in England is being accomplished by the use of sedatives. The United States is supplying the economic soothing sirup which does the job.

It is interesting to note that Mr. Gervasi conceded that without Marshall-plan aid the present British Government probably would have had to delay its biggest Socialist venture, the National Health Service. Here, then, is a frank confession from an apologist for the Marshall plan, that without the aid of our money socialized medicine in England probably would not now be in effect.

It is the opinion of many intelligent observers that without the Marshall-plan money, the whole Socialist program in England would have collapsed long since. These funds, provided by the American taxpayers, which should have gone into rebuilding the British economy have gone, instead, to bolster the British Socialist Government and to implement its program of nationalizing industry.

NEW PROGRAM FOR SOCIALIZATION IN BRITAIN

There is one more point in Mr. Gervasi's article on which I will comment briefly. Mr. Gervasi states:

> The evidence is that Marshall-plan aid has slowed up rather than accelerated British socialism.

Mr. President, no evidence is offered in support of this statement. I submit that the evidence is to the contrary.

Let us look at the record:

On April 12, 1949, a new 5-year program for socialization in Great Britain was announced by the executive committee of the Socialist Party. In addition to the activities already socialized, it is now proposed that the Government take over the cement industry, all suitable mineral deposits, cold storage facilities not already publicly owned, sugar manufacturing and refining, and appropriate sections of the chemical industry, together with two great insurance companies, both of which have vast investments in other business enterprises.

Mr. MYERS. Mr. President, I wonder if the Senator from Missouri would yield for a request that the Senate stand in recess. I understand General Clay is on his way to the Senate.

Mr. KEM. I shall detain the Senate only briefly.

This announcement of the program was followed by the passage of the second ECA authorization bill by the Congress, on April 19, 1949. At that time the same argument was made as has since been advanced by Mr. Gervasi, that is, that our money would "slow up" the socialization program in Great Britain.

But there has been no announcement, official or otherwise, of any departure from the official program promulgated by the Socialist Party on April 12, 1949.

To confirm and to substantiate that program two important developments have occurred. These occurrences may be surprising to Members of this body who have hitherto accepted at face value the assurances of socialism "slowing up." In my judgment, these developments require the reexamination and the reappraisal of the entire ECA program by the Congress of the United States.

These events of great significance are:

First. On May 1, 1949, the British Government took over the gas industry.

Second. On May 9, 1949, the House of Commons passed the bill to socialize the all-important iron and steel industry.

Does this look like the nationalization of industry is being "slowed up"? If so, it is pertinent to ask: What would the program have been in the absence of the Marshall plan and its golden flow of dollars from the United States?

UNFAIR COMPETITION FOR UNITED STATES INDUSTRY

The plain fact is that funds which the Congress appropriated for economic rehabilitation are being used to achieve a competing economic system that will rise to plague us. It is obvious that these nationalized industries enjoy advantages of freedom from taxation, monopoly of home markets, and governmental financial support. American industry and American workers may find it extremely difficult, in the years ahead, to cope with this type of competition which is now being thoughtlessly subsidized by their tax dollars.

It is interesting to recall that when Mr. Truman was a Member of the United States Senate, he was an outstanding crusader against cartels and monopolies. Yet during his administration as President, this type of competition is being created in much of Europe today through the application of Marshall-plan dollars.

My position is that we should cease to underwrite these nationalized monopolies. I bespeak thoughtful consideration of the subject when the ECA appropriation bill reaches the Senate.

VISIT TO THE SENATE OF GEN. LUCIUS D. CLAY—RECESS

The VICE PRESIDENT. Under the order of the Senate of yesterday, the Senate will stand in recess subject to the call of the Chair in order that we may receive a very distinguished American as our guest.

Thereupon (at 1 o'clock p. m.) the Senate stood in recess, subject to the call of the Chair.

During the recess, Gen. Lucius D. Clay and Mrs. Clay, escorted by the committee appointed by the Vice President, consisting of Mr. Lucas, Mr. Tydings, and Mr. Wherry, and accompanied by Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Chief of Staff, United States Army, and Lt. Col R. V. Strauss, entered the Chamber.

General Clay and the members of the committee proceeded to the seats assigned them immediately in front of the desk of the Vice President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Members and guests of the Senate, it gives me the greatest of pleasure to present to you a very distinguished American, who combines in his character and his services a composite of America hardly ever, if ever, excelled. A great engineer, a great soldier, he was assigned to a great task in a great country. By his patience, his foresight, his courage, he performed that task to the satisfaction of the American people, as has been evidenced by their acclaim, and by the organization of a self-governing nation in the jurisdiction over which he in part presided. His father was a distinguished Member of the Senate for 13 years, from 1897 to 1910.

It gives me great pleasure to present to you Gen. Lucius D. Clay.

[Great applause, Senators and guests rising.]

ADDRESS BY GEN. LUCIUS D. CLAY

General CLAY. Mr. President, honorable Members of the Senate, I think you will understand that today, when a soldier returns home after having tried to do his duty, it is difficult indeed for him to find words to express the deep gratitude which he holds in his heart. I know that in permitting me to be here today you are animated by a desire to express a feeling of satisfaction with the men and women of the occupation forces in carrying out American policy in Germany, and that, also, it is a tribute to the men who flew the airlift, subjecting themselves to hazards of weather and of minimum safety conditions which led to a number of them giving their lives in the effort to sustain the city of Berlin. I think that we can measure their work well.

It would be impossible in a few minutes to summarize the events of the past 4 years in Germany. For 2 years the United States, both in international conferences and within Germany, devoted its every effort to live up to the international agreements which called for a four-power rule of Germany. In those 2 years we found that there was no common ground then existing for agreement. While we had joined with others in exacting security measures which would prevent Germany from again being an aggressive nation, while we fully intended that Germany would pay the costs thus exacted, we always had as a constructive purpose the effort to redirect these 65,000,000 people into a democratic way of life in which they could again be received into the comity of nations.

We failed, but perhaps in that failure came our greatest success, because as a result we realized that the free nations of the world had to be given support and encouragement so that they could again raise their heads and prevent the inroads then being made by forces which believe in the rights of the state being superior to the basic rights of the individual.

The climax in this struggle came when it appeared certain that with our aid European recovery would take place, and that Germany would be included in the program for European recovery, which was designed to bring the free nations of Europe not only into a common economic effort, but into a general program which would make possible freedom of the individual.

The threat of that program led to a blockade of Berlin. Technical difficulties, currency reform, and even other reasons, were alleged to be the cause of the blockade. Primarily it was designed to retard European recovery, to force the Allied Powers from Berlin, and to re-create the conditions of fear which are the only conditions under which a police state can be created.

Even with that decision made, there still remained a feeling of fear among the western European nations who were Germany's neighbors, and who remembered well Germany's part in aggressive war. Therefore, it was not until we had entered into a common security pact with these nations that fear became allayed, and that our Secretary of State, in a few hours of conference, was able to agree on a clear-cut, well-defined program to be supported by Great Britain, France, and the United States, which would lead to the establishment of democratic government in Germany, which could be accepted into the European concept as rapidly as Germany's neighbors were prepared to accept her into that concept.

The German people responded to this magnanimous gesture of the three western powers, and through their parliamentary council quickly adopted a constitution which guarantees free electoral processes and which is devoted to reestablishing in Germany the dignity of man. [Applause.]

At the risk, perhaps, of saying something that sounds sentimental, I wish to recall two personal incidents. Almost 4 years ago, in early August of 1945, the American flag was raised over our headquarters in Berlin in the presence of the President of the United States. At that time, in a short and simple speech, he said that out of victory we had no desire for territorial or material gain; that the United States wanted only a world in which there could be peace and freedom. [Applause.]

I saw the people of Berlin, two and one-half million strong, have their second choice, their second opportunity to choose freedom, and this time they did not repeat the error they first made. They decided that they would live by airlift; that they would undertake the discomforts of a cold winter without electricity and with employment for only a few. They had decided to cast their lot with those who loved freedom. I think that perhaps the example which they have set may indeed become an example for all of Germany.

As I said a few minutes ago in the House of Representatives, it is impossible either to forget or to forgive Germany for what she has brought upon the world, but it is also unfair to hold forever against 65,000,000 people the fact that their moral integrity deteriorated under a police state. I have seen the police state at close hand for 4 years, and I can testify how difficult indeed it would be for a people once under its control to raise their heads and voices for freedom.

Sunday, 2 days ago, I saw my last retreat in Berlin. I watched our flag being lowered, in the full knowledge that it would be raised again on the following morning. I felt that in these 4 years it had become a symbol of firm justice and not of oppression, of a rule of law, but not arbitrary law, and that indeed it had become to millions of people not of our land the same symbol of freedom and of the dignity of man that it is to us.

I am very grateful to have been able to have spoken to you today. Thank you very much. [Great applause, Senators rising.]

Following his address, General Clay and Mrs. Clay and the distinguished visitors accompanying him were escorted from the Chamber.

At 1 o'clock and 16 minutes p. m., the Senate reassembled, when called to order by the Vice President.

LABOR-FEDERAL SECURITY APPROPRIATIONS—MOTION TO RECONSIDER

The Senate resumed the consideration of Mr. GREEN's motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill (H. R. 3333) making appropriations for the Department of Labor, the Federal Security Agency, and related independent agencies, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, and for other purposes, was recommitted to the Committee on Appropriations with instructions.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to the motion to reconsider. In my opinion, the adoption of this motion would be an error of serious proportions and of grave consequence to the whole picture of Government spending.

From many sources I have heard enthusiastic approval of the step taken by the Senate when it acted for a 5-percent reduction in all items of the Labor-Federal Security agencies appropriation bill not fixed by law. To reverse that step now would be an admission that we have dismissed from our minds all thought of economy and prudence in the conduct of our Government.

For my own part, I believe that the 5-percent reduction which we instructed the Appropriations Committee to make was not enough. I am convinced that we could cut much deeper without impairing the essential services of the agencies in question or any other agency or department. Are we now to proclaim that we no longer regard the practice of economy, prudence, and efficiency as an essential attribute of good government? Are we to surrender sound principles because we encounter opposition to every suggestion for a reduction in the cost of government?

It is not surprising that there are some among us who have almost reached the conclusion that resistance to the ever-rising tide of spending cannot have any hope of success. Mr. President, I do not subscribe to that kind of thinking. I believe that the solvency of our Republic must always be maintained as one of the great bulwarks of our freedom and independence. I believe that this body should be the front line of attack against unrestricted spending by an entrenched bureaucracy.

There can be no doubt that we are approaching a period of reduced national income. The other day the Department of Commerce, in its monthly survey, revealed a drop in consumer income to an annual rate of $214,300,000,000 from the high of $221,000,000,000 reached last December. This drop in income, according to the Department of Commerce, was the third successive decline since the beginning of the year.

Can we at a time of declining national income and consequent reduction in Federal revenue give approval to new or expanded spending programs without danger to the national economy? Shall we close our eyes to the alarming deficits that will add more billions of debt to the present mortgage of nearly $252,000,000,000? Or shall we face the situation with courage and determination to fight for sound fiscal policies, for a balanced budget, and a realistic common-sense approach to our financial problems?

A decision of tremendous importance is before us. One need not be an economist to recognize that our national wealth is not inexhaustible. One does not need to be a fiscal expert to recognize that national bankruptcy awaits at the end of the road we have been traveling.

Simple arithmetic gives the answer. An individual, a family, a business concern, or a nation is subject to the same fundamental laws. Spending beyond one's means is the way to disaster. When a nation goes broke, state socialism or some other form of dictatorship gains control and the freedom of the individual citizen is destroyed.

Mr. President, all recorded history from ancient times to the present day proves that excessive taxation robs the people of initiative and deprives them of incentive.

I submit that the time to cut the cost of government is here—now. Retrenchment all along the line should be uppermost in our thinking, even when we consider projects that are of unquestioned merit.

I appeal to my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to stand firm for the 5-percent reduction and to vote in opposition to the motion to reconsider.

Today we have heard from one of the great soldiers of America. He is a disciplined man, and for that reason he could bring order out of chaos. A few moments ago he told us that in Germany they were observing not the rule of men, but of a government of laws. When we have an entrenched bureaucracy, that situation does not exist.

I know some of my well-meaning colleagues have stated that we can cut the appropriations when all the appropriation bills are completed. I feel that, if we do not do it now, we may fail to do it; and if we do not cut the appropriations to fit the amount of our revenues, the Nation is doomed to bankruptcy. Bankruptcy in government means a dictatorship of some kind. If America is to continue the leadership which it has had during the past few years, when it has saved the world from chaos and ruin, America must remain solvent; and we can remain solvent only by cutting down the cost of government. The time to do it, Mr. President, is now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KERR in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN] to reconsider the vote by which House bill 3333 was recommitted to the Committee on Appropriations with instructions.

Mr. KEM. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Hill	Miller
Anderson	Hoey	Morse
Baldwin	Holland	Murray
Bricker	Humphrey	Myers
Butler	Ives	Neely
Cain	Jenner	O'Mahoney
Capehart	Johnson, Tex.	Pepper
Chapman	Johnston, S. C.	Russell
Chavez	Kefauver	Saltonstall
Connally	Kem	Smith, Maine
Cordon	Kerr	Sparkman
Donnell	Kilgore	Stennis
Douglas	Knowland	Taylor
Downey	Langer	Thomas, Okla.
Ellender	Long	Thomas, Utah
Ferguson	Lucas	Thye
Frear	McCarthy	Tydings
Gillette	McClellan	Vandenberg
Graham	McFarland	Watkins
Green	McGrath	Wherry
Gurney	McKellar	Williams
Hendrickson	McMahon	Withers
Hickenlooper	Martin	Young

By order of the Senate, the following announcement is made after each quorum call:

The members of the Committee on Foreign Relations have been granted permission to be absent from the sessions of the Senate while the Committee on Foreign Relations is conducting hearings on the North Atlantic Pact.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A quorum is present.

The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Rhode Island to reconsider the vote by which House bill 3333 was recommitted with instructions.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I should like to ask the distinguished Senator who made the motion what his understanding or interpretation is of the status of the bill to which the motion relates. The motion is to reconsider the vote by which the bill was recommitted to the Appropriations Committee with instructions.

The Senator from Rhode Island knows the procedure in such cases. Is it his understanding that, if the motion to reconsider is adopted and if subsequently the motion to recommit is rejected, the bill will return before the Senate exactly as it was when it was previously voted to be recommitted?

Mr. GREEN. That is my understanding.

Mr. WHERRY. There has been considerable discussion to the effect that the moment the bill was recommitted it was stripped of all the amendments which had been added on the floor of the Senate. Of course, several views are taken of that point. One opinion even is that under such circumstances the bill would return to the Senate with the figures inserted by the House of Representatives.

So I should like to have the opinion of the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island as to whether, if the Senate adopts the motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was recommitted, and subsequently rejects the motion to recommit, the bill will again be before the Senate in exactly the same form that it was when the motion to recommit was originally agreed to; in other words, with all the amendments which the Senate added to it.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. President, I cannot do better than to quote the statement made by the distinguished Vice President in this connection. He said the following:

> The Chair will advise Senators that when a bill is recommitted to the committee from which it emanates, such action nullifies all amendments that have been agreed to on the floor of the Senate, and the bill goes back to the committee—if it happens to be a House bill—in the same shape in which it came to the Senate from the House, regardless of the intention of any Senator.

Mr. WHERRY. Then, under that interpretation, the bill will be stripped of the amendments made on the floor of the Senate; is that the view of the Senator from Rhode Island?

Mr. GREEN. That is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. Then I ask this question: If the motion to reconsider prevails, will it be necessary for the Senate again to proceed to the consideration of the bill and of all the amendments which previously were adopted by the Senate?

Mr. GREEN. That would not be necessary; the Senate could pass the bill as it was reported by the committee.

Mr. WHERRY. I know that. However, if amendments are to be offered, the bill will be open to amendment; will it not?

Mr. GREEN. Yes.

Mr. WHERRY. So, if the bill is again before the Senate, it will come before the Senate as it came from the Appropriations Committee in the first place; will it not?

Mr. GREEN. Yes.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the motion to reconsider is adopted, then the question will be on agreeing to the motion to recommit, on which another vote would be had.

Mr. WHERRY. If the motion to reconsider prevails, we shall return to the consideration of the motion to recommit; shall we?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. WHERRY. Until the bill is recommitted, it seems to me that the amendments which already have been adopted remain in the bill. Why is it stripped of all the amendments which have been added on the floor of the Senate? That is the point I wish to make, and the question I wish to ask.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That would depend upon the action taken by the Senate.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, a further parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. WHERRY. If the motion to reconsider prevails, and if the motion to recommit does not prevail, then does not the bill stand before the Senate in the form in which it was amended previously on the floor of the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. Then, that is all there is to it.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, the Senate now has before it a motion to reconsider its previous action in voting to recommit to the Appropriations Committee, with certain instructions, the Labor-Federal Security appropriations bill. The instructions to the committee were that it should attempt to perform that which had been moved in the Senate, namely, to make a cut of 5 percent in all appropriations carried by that particular bill.

For a moment, a couple of weeks or so ago, the Senate became economy-minded. In other words, the Senate marched up the hill, saying, "We realize that we must cut expenditures of the Federal Government, for if we do not do so we shall be compelled to increase taxes or resort to deficit spending, or even to both deficit spending and an increase in taxes."

I say we became economy-minded for a short time. But, within less than 24 hours, the majority side of the Senate decided that it wished to march right back down that hill again, and to insist upon the expenditure of a sum of money which in the opinion of the Senate was so great that we would not be able to provide it unless we engaged in deficit spending or increased taxes, or even both.

There seems to be no doubt in the minds of many persons who understand the present situation that there has been a marked decrease in the national income which, after all, is the basis for the collection of taxes, since the Government has no money of its own, and must take from the citizens every dollar that it wishes to spend.

Only last night on the radio the United States Government had a number of Hollywood stars, the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, and the President of the United States asking the people to invest in Government bonds in order that the United States Government might obtain money with which to conduct its operations. During that radio broadcast, the people were told in no uncertain words that Government bonds of the United States of America were the safest investment in all the world. If the Senate today is to march down the hill again, after having voted to recommit the bill with instructions that the committee must reduce it, then we are saying to the people that United States Government bonds may not be the safest investment in the world. We have at times seen bonds of the United States Government selling at less than par; but why are they not selling at less than par today? Not entirely because of the financial condition of the United States. It is because the Government itself will buy in any bond at its full par value. But there will come a time when, if we do not receive enough money from the taxpayers, we may be unable to do that.

There came from the White House only a few days ago a statement that the present administration had paid on the national debt the greatest sum of money that has ever been paid in the history of this or of any other nation. Let us analyze the situation and see what really happened. Let us determine whether the Government actually made a debt reduction of $27,000,000,000, as was claimed. Four years ago our Nation was at war, proceeding with full force and at full speed. In 1945 we conducted a great bond sale. Billions of dollars worth of bonds were sold. Not knowing how long the war would continue, we were, as I say, going ahead with full force, raising every dollar we could, paying no attention to deficit spending or to the amount the people were taxed. We faced the common enemy and we had to win. We contracted an immense debt. The war ended abruptly. Then what did we do? Did we actually begin to retire that debt? What we did was simply to cancel obligations in the amount of $20,000,000,000, and returned to the bondholders the money. Is that what is meant by paying off the debt? Oh, yes; we did pay off $7,000,000,000. But that was in 1947 and 1948. The present administration was not in control of the Congress which accomplished that reduction.

Today many promises are made to us. I say to the people of the United States that the time has come when they must distinguish between promises and performance. A great deal is said about economy in Government. It is only a promise, when we hear it said we are going to reduce expenditures by so much. The test is whether we, as Members of the Senate, are willing to vote for cuts and a balanced budget, so that we shall not have to resort to deficit spending or to an increase in taxes, or even both.

Action is what will speak, and the Senate has acted. It voted to recommit the bill with instruction for a reduction. But before it reached the Appropriations Committee and before any positive economy steps were taken, a motion was made to reconsider the Senate's action. The bill is now on the desk of the Senate, and we are about to vote whether it shall be returned to the Appropriations Committee, and whether the committee shall be required to follow the instructions which were the expressed will of the Senate.

Mr. IVES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield.

Mr. IVES. The junior Senator from New York would like to ask the able Senator from Michigan whether it was not the Senator's understanding, when the bill was recommitted the other day by the vote on which we are about to take action on a motion to reconsider, that the Senate intended to have the committee act on the bill as it was at the moment when the motion to recommit was agreed to?

Mr. FERGUSON. That is correct. It was intended that none of the amendments which had been adopted should be taken out, that they would be included by the committee but less the amount by which we were instructing the committee to reduce the various items over-all.

Mr. IVES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. IVES. The interpretation which has been placed upon the action taken by the Senate apparently is that, when the bill was returned to the committee, it was returned in its original form, without any amendment whatever being attached to it. Is that correct?

Mr. FERGUSON. That was the ruling of the Chair; but that was not the intent of the Senate. That was not the intent of the Senator from Ohio, as shown by the statement read by him on the floor of the Senate since that day. The legislative history of the vote clearly demonstrates that the Senate did not intend that the bill should come back from the Committee on Appropriations without the amendments which had been adopted on the floor.

Mr. IVES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. IVES. Then, that being the case, is it the Senator's idea at the present time, assuming the motion to reconsider prevails, as it may, in the present instance, to move to recommit the bill with specific instructions that the Senate committee shall act upon it in the condition in which it actually leaves the Senate.

Mr. FERGUSON. I shall have to answer that by saying I do not know. I have no knowledge of what motions may be made if the motion to reconsider prevails. The able Senator from New Hampshire is not on the floor, and he is the ranking minority member of the committee which has charge of the bill. Therefore, I do not have knowledge at present upon which I can advise the Senator.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a moment?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I was handling the bill on the floor, and it was my understanding and interpretation that what the motion of the Senator from Ohio meant was that the bill should be recommitted as it was, in the same status that it had at the time the motion was made, including the amendments that had been adopted on the floor.

Mr. FERGUSON. That is correct. That is the legislative history. The record shows that.

Mr. CHAVEZ. That was the understanding of the chairman of the subcommittee. If we are still to carry out the mandate of the Senate, unless the motion of the Senator from Rhode Island prevails, so far as the chairman of the subcommittee is concerned, that will be the understanding.

Mr. IVES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. IVES. That being the situation, the committee was then, I take it, instructed by the Senate—up until the present time of reconsideration, at least, this condition would appear to prevail—to take 5 percent off the bill, in line with the terms of the amendment, and to have that 5 percent cover not only what was in the bill when originally reported to the Senate, but also the amounts added for heart research and for cancer research, together with other items which were added by amendment in the Senate. Is that correct?

Mr. FERGUSON. I will yield to the Senator from New Mexico to give his version.

Mr. CHAVEZ. That is correct, so far as the chairman of the subcommittee is concerned.

I further understood from the debate and the reasons given as to why the bill should be recommitted that the committee was instructed that the reduction of 5 percent was to apply generally to all the items in the bill, including administrative expenses.

Mr. FERGUSON. That is correct. But the committee would have the discretion of reducing one item more than another, so that it would average a 5-percent cut, but it could not cut below 20 percent on any particular item. That is just as the agency would have been instructed and required to do by virtue of the motion of the Senator from New Hampshire and the Senator from Michigan if the motion had been agreed to.

Mr. IVES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield once more, in order that I may have the question clear in my own mind?

Mr. FERGUSON. I shall be glad to yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. IVES. In the present instance a vote against the motion to reconsider would be, in effect, a vote further to instruct the Senate committee to take off 5 percent from the over-all bill, as amended, when it was returned to the Senate committee. Is that correct?

Mr. FERGUSON. That would be the fact; 5 percent of the amount of the bill as it was when it went back to the committee.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. PEPPER. If the Senator will allow, that is not the effect of the statement of the Chair when the matter was under consideration a few days ago, and it is not the advice of the Parliamentarian. The advice of the Parliamentarian, as confirmed by the Vice President when the subject was under discussion, was that the effect of the Taft motion to recommit, if it should be allowed to stand, was, first, to strip the bill of all amendments added in the Senate; the second, to strip the bill of all amendments added by the Senate Appropriations Committee; and, third, to take off 5 percent of the over-all volume of the bill as it came from the House of Representatives.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The present ruling on the question before the Senate is that if the motion to reconsider shall be agreed to, the question will then recur on the motion to recommit the bill to the committee, to carry out the instructions of the Senate as contained in the motion to recommit.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. We were talking about what would be the effect of the motion to recommit. Of course, if the motion to reconsider should be agreed to, the Senate would vote on the motion to recommit. If the Senate should adhere to its previous action in agreeing to the motion to recommit, the effect would be what the Senator has stated.

Mr. FERGUSON. But the able Senator from New Mexico has stated what he would do with the bill, according to the instructions laid down by the motion to recommit, and the further explanation by the able senior Senator from Ohio——

Mr. GREEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I shall yield in a moment.

When the bill came back to the Senate it would have all amendments in it; it would come back to the floor with the instructions taken care of. The committee would attempt to reduce the bill an over-all of 5 percent.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I think we are losing a good deal of time by debating that particular question, because what we are now working on is the problem as announced by the Chair at the moment, that, after the motion of the Senator from Rhode Island, if it shall prevail, the next step will be to revert to the motion of the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. FERGUSON. That is correct.

Mr. CHAVEZ. What I have in mind is that if the motion to recommit shall prevail and the bill goes back to the Senate committee, the instructions of the Senate will have to be carried out, but I think we have not yet reached that point, because, first, we shall have to vote on the motion to reconsider made by the Senator from Rhode Island. We do not have to worry about what happened before, because we have the motion of the Senator from Ohio just as if it had not previously been made. So why should we worry about the other at the moment? It seems to me it is perfectly possible to reach a solution of the problem. If the motion to reconsider is adopted, and then a motion is made to recommit, and there is attached to the motion to recommit the proviso that the bill shall go back to the committee with all the amendments adopted in the Senate, that would make it perfectly clear and would avoid any ambiguity or misunderstanding.

Mr. FERGUSON. But if the motion shall not prevail, as the able Senator from New Mexico has said, the understanding of the subcommittee of which he is chairman——

Mr. PEPPER. That does not bind the Senate.

Mr. FERGUSON. It binds the committee.

Mr. CHAVEZ. It cannot bind the committee if no action has been taken. If the motion of the Senator from Ohio shall prevail, we shall be in the same status as if no action had been taken heretofore.

Mr. FERGUSON. But if the motion shall prevail, the bill will be sent back to the Appropriations Committee.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Of course; and then the committee will act.

Mr. IVES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. IVES. It is still not clear in my own mind. If the motion to reconsider does not prevail, as I understand, the bill is still in committee, under instructions to cut 5 percent the over-all amount appropriated. It is in its original form, without the amendments made in committee and amendments made on the floor. Is that correct?

Mr. FERGUSON. That is the ruling of the Chair. But the ruling of the Chair does not overrule the understanding of the Senator from New Mexico in what he has stated this afternoon with reference to what he considers the instructions to be.

Mr. IVES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield.

Mr. IVES. Let us see if we cannot trace it out, step by step. Let us leave it as stated, and assume that that is its status. Assuming the motion now before the Senate should prevail, it would be followed by a motion to recommit. Is that correct?

Mr. FERGUSON. There would be a vote upon the motion of the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. IVES. The motion would be to recommit, and that would be the question immediately before the Senate.

Mr. FERGUSON. That is correct.

Mr. IVES. If that motion should prevail, does the bill return to the committee with instructions to do exactly as the Chair has apparently ruled it was instructed to do, in the present instance? We had better find out where we are on this question.

Mr. FERGUSON. I should say, because of the statement of the Senator from Ohio, the instructions would not be according to the ruling of the Chair, and also because of the statement made by the able Senator from New Mexico, that he would accept the instructions that the amount was to be cut.

Mr. IVES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for one more question?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield.

Mr. IVES. I think we are speculating now. Is it not possible for this body to recommit a bill to a committee, or to commit it to a committee, with definite instructions to have the committee act on it as instructed, and to have it reported forthwith following the carrying out of those instructions?

Mr. FERGUSON. There is no doubt about that.

Mr. IVES. Cannot that be done in this instance?

Mr. GREEN. Mr. President, that was the suggestion of the Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield.

Mr. CORDON. I should like to propound a parliamentary inquiry in regard to the subject at hand.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. CORDON. If the pending motion to reconsider shall prevail, the bill then will have this parliamentary status: I understand it will be then pending under the motion of the senior Senator from Ohio to recommit, with instructions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion will be pending.

Mr. CORDON. That is correct. The bill will be subject to the pending motion. The parliamentary question is, will the motion pending be subject to amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By action of the Senate, yes.

Mr. CORDON. The answer is that at that time at least a motion would be in order to amend the instructions contained in the motion to recommit?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. CORDON. So that at that time the instructions might be amended so as to direct the committee to reduce by 5 percent the appropriated amount as it existed in the bill after action on the floor of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That would be in order.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, there should not be any confusion over what the Senate attempted to do, because the able Senator from Ohio stated in no uncertain terms, when he made his motion. He stated that under the instructions the committee would have to do that which the motion of the Senator from New Hampshire and the Senator from Michigan would have required the two Departments to do, namely, to make an over-all cut of 5 percent, using its discretion in making the cut, but not cutting any particular item more than 20 percent.

Mr. President, there are some who might feel that the way to do this is to reconsider. Nothing would be gained by that. The able Senator from New Mexico has indicated what he believes to be the instructions now.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Of course, the Senator from New Mexico will follow the instructions of the Senate, but that does not mean that he agrees with those instructions. He still thinks that the committee reported a good bill.

Mr. FERGUSON. There is no doubt about that being the feeling of the Senator. He objected to the motion, and still objects to the motion, and I assume from what he is now saying that he will vote in favor of reconsideration. But if the motion to reconsider is not agreed to, I assume he will then obey what he considered to be the instructions of the Senate of the United States. He has so expressed himself on the floor of the Senate.

There are those who feel that the best way to bring about a reduction is to wait and provide for a reduction at the end of the consideration of the bill by virtue of an amendment to the bill. If that is sound, then there must be a two-thirds vote, because such an amendment would be legislation on an appropriation bill. Those who propose that may say, "Well, that can be avoided by framing a regular bill to accomplish the result, making a cut in all appropriations or specific appropriations by 5 percent." Such a bill could be passed by a majority vote, but if the President vetoed it, it would still take a two-thirds vote, not only of the Senate, but a two-thirds vote of the House of Representatives, to pass such a bill. So, if we come down the hill we have ascended, having instructed the Committee on Appropriations to cut 5 percent, we face the possibility of the necessity of a two-thirds vote, not only in the Senate, but in the House of Representatives. That is the position in which we would place ourselves.

Mr. President, I hope that for the good of the people of the United States the Congress will retain its control of the purse strings. If it is to remain in control of the purse strings, it must determine what the costs of the Government of the United States shall be. I know of no better or more scientific way to cut appropriations—that is, to reduce the costs of government—than to provide that a certain amount shall be taken from the appropriation bill, and that the agency itself shall be required to make the cuts in the most appropriate places.

I realize that every agency believes it does not receive sufficiently large appropriations. That is why Congress has to act, that is why Congress must control the purse strings. I have sat on the Committee on Appropriations for many years, and I have never found one agency which thought it was getting sufficient money in an appropriation bill. The agencies of the Government are not even satisfied with what the Bureau of the Budget allows them.

The agencies have instructions which prevent them from asking for more than the Bureau of the Budget recommends as the proper appropriation. But a representative of an agency will go to a Senator's office and ask the Senator to ask him, when he comes before the committee, questions about what the Bureau of the Budget did, and ask him about whether the agency cannot use more money. That is not unusual. If that is done, under the rule of the executive branch of the Government, such officials are allowed to ask for more and to explain fully what they really need. Under those circumstances they get even more than the Bureau of the Budget said they were entitled to. That is not unusual, as I have said.

The rule is that the agencies have to come before the committees of Congress and not ask for more than the Bureau of the Budget allowed them, but, as I have just stated, if a Senator or a Representative brings up the subject, they can come forward and tell their whole story, and there is no limitation. That happens not once, but many, many times.

So, Mr. President, I say that if we expect voluntary cuts by the bureaus and departments of the Government, if the taxpayers are waiting until 1950 to get voluntary cuts, that is, nonuse of money appropriated in appropriation bills, they are not going to find their desires realized to the extent of 1 cent. I say to them now, not only will there not be a cut of 1 cent, but in most cases all the money appropriated will be used and the agency will come back next spring and ask for deficiency appropriations, as is being done today. This afternoon there will be before the Committee on Appropriations a second deficiency appropriation bill to take care of certain departments of the Government which have used all that was appropriated for them last year. The same thing will be repeated next year.

Mr. President, this is a very serious problem to the people of the United States. They expect us to live up to our promises, and we must live up to them by our votes on the Senate floor. We said a couple of weeks ago that we wanted the bill cut 5 percent. I hope that the Senate will affirm its previous action, and allow the Committee on Appropriations to perform its function and make the cut as directed when the motion to recommit was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN] to reconsider the vote by which the appropriation bill was recommitted.

Mr. CHAVEZ obtained the floor.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CHAVEZ. I yield.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, several hours ago a gentleman from Middletown, Ohio, who appeared before the Foreign Relations Committee, placed in the RECORD an exhibit which related to the subject of foreign aid and the Atlantic Pact. Part of this exhibit caught my attention, because it was headed: "By getting the truth into Europe."

It may not appear that I am now speaking to the issue which is before the Senate at this time when I take a few moments to give to the Senate what I consider to be words of wisdom that came from this gentleman from Middletown, Ohio. Yet I am going to apply his very thesis, "By getting the truth into Europe," to the subject of economics by getting the truth into America. This is what he said about getting the truth into Europe:

1. Encourage and support the continuance and growth of the Voice of America.

It is a sad commentary on what we are doing that while we are stressing "Getting the truth into Europe," into foreign countries, we do not stress having the Voice of America give the truth to Americans. If we were to use the Voice of America in speaking to Americans, as we use it in speaking to the people of foreign countries, it would mean getting the whole economic picture to the people of America. Our domestic conditions and foreign conditions and our domestic problems and foreign problems are intertwined, they are intermingled. Yet when we discuss a certain problem we discuss it on the theory that it is isolated and apart from all the related issues, foreign and domestic.

I read the second point:

2. Publicize everywhere the Soviet violations of agreements.

Mr. President, we were certainly appreciative of the remarks made by General Clay today. General Clay, a great soldier, a great American, gave us a brief word picture of the problems he has had to face. He has now returned to the United States. I am sure that if we had the privilege of asking him he would tell us of his belief in the biblical expression, "The truth shall make you free," and that he would say to us that it was the truth which was given to the Germans, which made the Germans free of fear, so that they adhered to what he called the democratic side of the issue.

The gentleman from Middletown said:

Publicize everywhere the Soviet violations of agreements.

Mr. President, when we consider our domestic economy we must realize that some of the sayings of Franklin, such as "A stitch in time saves nine,' and "If you have a dollar and you spend a dollar and one cent, you are a failure; but if you have a dollar and spend ninety-odd cents and save the rest, you are a success," are worthy of consideration as we enter upon the task of evaluating the economic picture in America.

I heard the distinguished Senator from Florida today ask the distinguished Senator from Indiana a question which related to the effective workings of what might be called the economic shot in the arm. Mr. President, economics is not a static thing any more than any other branch of human knowledge is static. Sometimes there comes a time when a country becomes economically sick and certain economic medicine is needed to cure the patient. On the other hand, the time may come when the same patient is overfed, bloated, and it does no good to feed him any more.

Applying what I have said in a general way to our country, we have had a feverish economic condition ever since the beginning of the war. We have had a 40-cent dollar, a 50-cent dollar, a 57-cent dollar, and now it is said we have a 63-cent dollar.

Mr. President, we have unemployment, so it is suggested that perhaps we should give the patient, our country, an economic shot in the arm to do away with that condition. Let us see whether a shot in the arm would do away with such a situation. In those lines where we have caught up with demand, where already the market is filled, where the warehouses and the stores are filled, and buying power is no longer centered on particular items, we know that a shot in the arm would do no good. Probably in some lines Federal aid might do good. But we have social security and we have the fourth round of wage increases coming up. We have strikes. We have the Communist influence creating friction between classes and groups. Is not what is needed just what the gentleman from Middletown, Ohio, said the Commies and other people in Europe needed, which is the truth that makes men free?

He said further:

3. Penetrate the iron curtain by pamphlets, newspapers, votes of the United Nations Assembly, radio, word of mouth.

Mr. President, we must penetrate into the minds of some of our own people at home. We must make our people realize that no matter how hard we may try to upset the law of supply and demand, it is constantly operating. The law of supply and demand has its influence upon the thinking and the living of the people of this country.

Pretty soon the Senate will consider the extension of the reciprocal-trade agreements. If in our analysis of that subject we disregard the law of supply and demand in the United States, and act on the theory that we can safely disregard that law in acting on the trade agreements, we will open up the gates of America to the inflow of foreign goods, and the law of supply and demand will do its work. It will put many Americans out of business. It will flood our markets with foreign goods. It will bring on some more economic sickness in this country. How would Senators undertake to cure such a sickness? Would they endeavor to cure it by taking more and more of the American market away from the American producer, or what would they do? I repeat the third point:

Penetrate the iron curtain by pamphlets, newspapers, votes of the United Nations Assembly, radio, word of mouth.

Let us endeavor to penetrate the minds of the people of America, so that they will get down to a consideration of fundamental, basic principles. We should realize that what we must do is to apply some of the simple principles we were taught when we were youngsters in school. One of those principles is to cut out chiseling. Put a full day's work into production. If a person does not have the money with which to buy something, let him refrain from buying it. Let us teach the principles of economy and clean living in the homes and in the schools, and it will be discovered that many of our problems will disappear. And we will find solutions for many other problems.

The gentleman from Middletown, Ohio, said further:

4. In every way possible, entice willing and freedom-loving peoples away from the Russian sphere.

Oh, how applicable those words are to America. Let us entice Americans who have gone cockeyed because of their absorption of foreign isms, especially communistic ideas, away from the crooked way of thinking, back to the American way of thinking, back to that position where they stand as free men who want to go to work, who do not want to accept charity, who do not want to become chiselers and grafters, but who want to become builders and, if necessary, renovators of an economy which now is a little bit sick.

Yes, Mr. President, let us entice Americans who have thought that the pastures of Europe are greener than ours away from that concept, back home where they can see this country as it is, with 148,000,000 people, the hope of the world, the political and economic reservoir of the world. Let them see what we have here, instead of constantly taking the attitude that there are greener pastures elsewhere.

The next point of the gentleman from Middletown in connection with getting the truth into Europe is:

6. Drop 1,000,000 copies of the Sears, Roebuck catalog in Russia, Poland, Rumania, Hungary, and Yugoslavia.

Penetrate the curtain of ignorance. By means of the Sears, Roebuck catalog show what one great institution has on hand for the people of America, giving the people of Europe a picture of the productivity and the plenty which prevail here.

Let us reverse the roles. Let us on the American front take an inventory of what we have here, an inventory of our American freedoms, our rights, and our privileges. Let us also take an inventory of our responsibilities. Let us have a Sears, Roebuck catalog of the great freedoms of America. That is something which we might well take into consideration. Those of us who have a sense of appreciation of what America means, not only to us but to the world, had better see to it that our children recognize that the price of liberty is eternal vigilance. Eternal vigilance as applied to the present means educating our youngsters to an appreciation of what America is and what she stands for in the world, an appreciation by contrast with what other nations have, which will educate them away from the notion that the Russians are better off than we are.

Remember that the technique of psychological warfare which is continually going on, the technique of repeatedly stating falsehoods, is the technique whereby Hitler overcame country after country. It is the technique by which, after the war, Russia took 100,000,000 people into her orbit without firing a shot.

So, Mr. President, let us apply this rule of the citizen from Middletown. Let us drop 100,000,000 copies of Americana into the hearts and souls and minds of America, especially of our growing youth, many of whom are totally oblivious of the challenges of the atomic age in which they are living.

The gentleman from Middletown had this suggestion about getting the truth into Europe:

7. Supply our comrades in this propaganda battle with the best of our technical know-how, publicity, and advertising genius.

I have practically covered that point by applying it to the home front. Let us supply our youngsters in the schools, our preachers in the pulpits, and the teachers who teach our youth with an appreciation of the virtues, the qualities, and the rights which are the result of the march of mankind upward through the centuries. If we supply them with such education, they will become dynamic teachers.

The gentleman from Middletown was talking about what we should do in Europe. I am telling the Senate that we must do it here.

His next point is:

8. Encourage the bolstering of morale among individual Europeans by adoption of European cities by American cities.

He is talking about the great brotherhood of cityhood. Some cities in America have adopted cities over there which have been bombed out and killed economically. Their property has been destroyed. It would not be a bad idea for the citizens of Washington do adopt Washington and do for Washington what they should do in order to meet their responsibility. They should not put everything in the hands of the Government. Other cities have accepted the challenge to get rid of places such as those depicted in the pictures which we have recently seen. Such places exist in Washington, which has never known a depression, which has an economic current which is constant because of 250,000 persons on the Federal pay roll. No matter whether prices are high or low, Washington has enjoyed the benefit of a swift economic current, which means economic health. Much property is assessed below its real value. The tax rate is the lowest in the country, considering the assessed valuation. A reassessment of all property should be brought about.

The economic, social, and other leaders of Washington should "adopt" Washington, and not pass the buck to Congress to take care of many of their economic needs. It is their responsibility. They are living on the fat of the land. Where else in America, or elsewhere, is there so much wealth per capita as there is in Washington? Where else is there greater need to look after the underprivileged than in Washington? Whose job is is but that of the citizens of Washington to look after their own underprivileged? It is not the responsibility of the Federal Government.

The gentleman from Middletown suggests that it is the privilege and opportunity of American cities to look after cities in Europe. I think that is part of the doctrine of brotherhood, and it is all right; but I am applying it to Americans, in this country.

His next point is:

9. Carefully censor American movies produced for world consumption. We want other nations to understand the true American way of life.

The American way of life speaks for itself. We in America might well look to the character of things which go to make up the thinking of our youth. It is exceedingly significant that this man recognizes that there are motion pictures which we should not send to Europe, because they give a wrong concept of the American way of life. I am asking whether there are not motion pictures that we have seen which give to us the wrong concept of the American way of life. If so, let us think the thing through.

Mr. President, I have practically concluded. Number 10 in this remarkable statement is as follows:

10. Educate our own people to our world responsibilities.

Yes, Mr. President; I think we must do that. Yet I think we must go a little higher than world responsibility in order to get the right perspective. I was in California last year. I visited Mt. Palomar, where the great 200-inch telescope is located. I was told that it measures light from stars which are 500,000,000 light years away. Light travels at the rate of 186,000 miles a second. This little earth of ours is only 10,000 miles in diameter. The sun is 1,000,000 miles in diameter. Through that telescope we are discovering solar systems in which the sun is as much larger in comparison with our sun as our sun is compared to the earth.

I agree that we must educate our people to world responsibility. First and last, that responsibility is to keep the United States strong, both economically, morally, and politically.

Today we are discussing the issue of keeping the United States strong economically. How are we to do it if our Government constantly spends more than it takes in?

Mr. President, when the North Atlantic Pact was being discussed on the floor of the Senate, I said that we as a government had gone into the red before, and that going into the red is not always bad business, but that going into the red continually is always bad business, either for a business firm or for a government.

Now the time has come when we must face that issue squarely. I have just returned from a trip to my own State, where I talked with many of the people—young men, young women, businessmen, homemakers. As I have previously stated on the floor of the Senate, they are concerned with the amount of money the United States Government is spending. They may not see the over-all picture; but they are concerned with the fact that today, after two years of attempts to balance the budget and to make payments on the national debt, and after helping Europe, and making plans to continue to help her, our Government is going into the red. The people are asking questions about the situation.

Mr. President, I shall inform the Senate some of the questions the people at home are asking, and I ask my associates in this body to give them consideration. The people ask: "If the United States' dollar is worth more now than it was in January, if it will buy more, why cannot the $15,000,000,000 the Congress assigned for the national-defense forces be cut at least the percentage the dollar has appreciated in purchasing power?

Mr. President, I think that is a pertinent question. In other words, if the United States' dollar has appreciated in purchasing power 10 percent, why cannot we cut that $15,000,000,000 10 percent? I do not know any reason why that cannot be done, especially if we consider in that connection the fact that prices have been decreasing. So I do not know why such a 10 percent reduction or saving cannot be made.

Another question which the people back home have been asking is this: "What about former President Hoover's recommendations? What are you going to do about them? He said the Government could save $1,500,000,000. What are you going to do about that?"

My reply has been, "I hope the majority party, which is in absolute control of the Senate and House, will see fit to adopt those suggestions and again cut that part of the budget."

The people back home also asked this question: "Is it true that there are parts of the administrative branch of the Government where there is a surplus of help, if the help would work 44 hours a week?"

Mr. President, some of those questions are, at least, to my way of thinking, "right down the alley." I have heard reports pro and con in regard to the subject matter of that question. I have heard reports that many Government agencies could obtain effective results if they were headed by effective administrators who would conduct them in the way a successful businessman operates his business. In other words, Mr. President, it is quite true that when the head of a large business sees that the sales of his firm are decreasing and that its income is falling off, it is common practice for him to tell the heads of the various departments under him that they must cut their expenses by a certain amount, in order to keep the firm from going into the red. So, Mr. President, the question arises, Should we apply that rule to our Government now, after our Government has passed through a period of 2 years in which it was able to accumulate a surplus?

Of course, Mr. President, I do not favor the application of the meat-ax method. I think there must be reason in everything we do. Good judgment and common sense must be applied. But the Government belongs to the 148,000,000 people of the United States; and in this period of tremendous change we are faced with the question of maintaining the integrity of the $250,000,000,000 of United States bonds which are the foundation stone of every insurance company and every bank in the United States. If any question develops about the integrity of those bonds, then we shall encounter a fiscal storm which will soon develop into a hurricane.

Mr. President, the people back home, those at the grass roots, who have been asking these questions, have a right to be answered.

Therefore, Mr. President, I say that if we are to educate our own people to their world responsibility, we should bring them to a realization that they must insist that the United States be maintained sound economically, sound politically, and sound spiritually.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILEY. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. The distinguished Senator from Wisconsin, who is making a very able address in the interest of economy, has just stated a list of questions which have been asked by people at the grass roots in regard to whether savings can be made in the operations of the United States Government because of the percentagewise increase in the purchasing power of the dollar, which has been felt since January; and the Senator has applied that question first to the expenditures for national defense, as well as to expenditures for other agencies of the Government.

I wish to ask the Senator whether any of the people at the grass roots have suggested that similar savings might be made in the appropriations for ECA? In other words, I ask the Senator this question: If savings can be made because of the increased purchasing power of the dollar, should not all Government appropriations be reduced—both those for world-wide purposes and those for domestic purposes—accordingly?

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, I am very happy to have the Senator from Nebraska ask that question. It is the fourth question on which I have planned to comment.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the Senator. If he will speak on that point, I shall be most appreciative.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, it is true that the folks back home have asked whether the Appropriations Committee is going to reconsider the authorization for ECA. Being a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, I said to them what every member of the Foreign Relations Committee has said on the floor of the Senate, namely, that there were a number of imponderables that did not appear in November of last year when the estimates for the ECA authorization were drawn up by the President of the United States and his advisors, and that since that time those imponderables have come to light—one of them being that the dollar has appreciated in purchasing power. Another is that the foreign countries themselves have recovered to a much greater extent than was expected; and a third important factor is that during this very period when conditions in Europe have definitely improved, conditions in the United States have deteriorated. In other words, our national income has decreased, and we have approximately 3,500,000 unemployed persons in the United States. In my humble opinion, those conditions require a revaluation—as I have stated to the people who have asked questions of me—as to the amount which can properly be appropriated for all governmental purposes; and I believe we must do that in order to show our understanding of our responsibility in the world situation.

Some of the people back home have asked me, "What about the St. Lawrence waterway? If we can appropriate money for foreign aid, why can't we go ahead with the St. Lawrence waterway"—a project which is so vital to the Midwest.

The people back home have also asked me about the oleomargarine legislation and other proposed legislation.

In connection with those matters, Mr. President, I wish to speak on the point on which my good friend from Middletown, Ohio, spoke today, namely, our own responsibility to the world. I repeat, that responsibility is, first, to diagnose America, to hold a clinic over her, to see what is needed for her economic health, for her political stability, and for her spiritual strength. Once that is done, and once we have the answer to that question, then we may reach out and apply the rule of brotherhood or the rule of the good Samaritan on a world-wide scale. When that is done, we shall have fulfilled our mission in the period in which we are living.

I am not a pessimist, Mr. President; I am an optimist. I sense that in many ways this is the most wonderful age in the history of mankind. Never before have we seen a condition in which the world was, literally, through the ingenuity of man, compressed into a small ball, so that sound travels around the earth in 2 seconds; a plane can cross the ocean in a matter of 4 hours; we have produced jet planes that will travel under guidance approximately 2,000 miles; we travel from coast to coast in a matter of 4 hours; and atomic energy may be utilized to generate great forces, not for war, but for peace.

While we have progressed in a material way, while the ingenuity of man has developed and grown we might say as a fungus grows, perhaps, the race has not sensed that it must also grow in another sense. It must grow in great spiritual values, and in the sense of the great need for understanding.

So, Mr. President, what the gentleman from Ohio is suggesting is that by getting the truth into Europe, by getting it into the minds and souls of those behind the iron curtain and even of those on this side of the iron curtain, there is a hope that the truth will make men free, that the consciences and minds of men will become open, so that they may sit around the council table—let us hope, of the United Nations—and there work out a plan, so that war shall be no more, so that literally, not figuratively, we shall beat our swords into plowshares, and so that the people will learn war no more.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion to reconsider.

Mr. McKELLAR. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, before the Senator makes the sugegstion of the lack of a quorum, may I be permitted to make an observation?

Mr. McKELLAR. I withhold the suggestion.

Mr. WHERRY. I should like to ask the distinguished Senator from Tennessee, as chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, whether the Secretary of Agriculture has submitted to Members of the Senate the flood-control survey which was requested in the recommendations made by the committee about a week ago?

Mr. McKELLAR. Unless it has been done today, it has not been done. I shall find out and will let the Senator know about it immediately.

Mr. WHERRY. I should like to know, before the appropriation bill is considered, whether the survey has been submitted to Members of the Senate.

Mr. McKELLAR. I shall send for the information immediately.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, in a very brief moment, I should like to say it is my intention to vote against the motion to reconsider made by the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island. I suppose it is unnecessary to give again the many reasons which Senators on this side have given time and time again on the motions made to cut Government expenditures. I feel that if the motion to recommit is interpreted in the spirit in which it was made, if it is interpreted as it was intended by the distinguished Senator from Ohio, it will take from the bill in the neighborhood of $15,000,000 only. I am quite satisfied that in a measure of this kind, which carries an appropriation of more than $2,000,000,000, this slight saving can be made without loss to a sound administration of the Government.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I have asked the Secretary to the committee about the matter requested by the Senator from Nebraska. He tells me the request was interpreted as meaning that the Secretary should furnish the Senator with that information. It has not been furnished to the committee.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the Senator for the answer. I am intensely interested in getting the survey of the soil conservation legislation which was enacted in the last Congress, with respect to the Missouri River Basin. The appropriations were made, the survey has been made, and as I have said on the Senate floor, the survey has been made public. It has been given to several of the Governors in the 10 States.

It seems to me that in appropriating a considerable amount of money for soil conservation, as we are going to do, in connection with agriculture, we at least should have a report of the survey, in order that we may have a guidepost to intelligent legislative procedure, if we are to keep faith with the Congress which authorized it and asked that the survey be made for the purposes for which we wanted it, namely, as a guide to appropriations.

Mr. McKELLAR. I agree with the Senator entirely, and I shall instruct the secretary of the committee to obtain the information and send it to the Senator.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. President, I not only intend to vote against the motion to reconsider, but I hope the distinguished Senator from Michigan, who was a joint sponsor of the former motion to recommit, will again offer his motion, in the event the motion to reconsider prevails. I think the Members of the Senate ought to know that.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. WHERRY. I am glad to yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. I wish now to state to the Senator from Nebraska and also to the Senate that, in case the motion to reconsider prevails, I have prepared and will immediately send to the desk a substitute for the motion to recommit, which will set forth clearly what was intended by the Senator from Ohio, and I shall ask that it be voted upon.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I very much appreciate the observation made by the distinguished Senator from Michigan. If the Members of the Senate are to vote to reconsider the motion to recommit because there is doubt in regard to what the instructions really meant, I can see some justification for that; but I feel that in the event the motion prevails, the motion should be made to recommit, and it should be made in such certain terms that this small saving can be effected in the appropriation bill. I think such an attempt should be made in all appropriation bills, as they are considered by the Senate.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHERRY. I am glad to yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. I have ready the proposed substitute motion.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that, if the motion to reconsider prevails, the motion to recommit will then become the pending question, subject to amendment.

Mr. FERGUSON. Then I ask that what I have prepared be a substitute, so that the Senate may know what to expect.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, in order to clarify the situation on the floor, I ask that the distinguished Senator from Michigan read the proposed substitute. I feel that it should be before the Members of the Senate when we are considering the motion to reconsider.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to read the substitute.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FERGUSON. The substitute motion reads as follows:

I move that the bill be recommitted to the Committee on Appropriations with instructions to report the same back to the Senate with amendments providing for a certain reduction equivalent to that provided in the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], for himself and the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON]: Provided, however, That any such reduction shall be based on the amount of the appropriations contained in the bill as amended by the Senate, including committee amendments, at the time of its recommittal.

That would make plain the status of the amendments.

Mr. WHERRY. If the Senator will permit me, it would apply, would it not, to the amendments adopted on the Senate floor prior to the time the motion was made to recommit?

Mr. FERGUSON. That is correct.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield.

Mr. CAIN. The junior Senator from Washington was among those Senators who supported the Taft motion. In order to make certain that the 5-percent cut is accomplished in due time, would it not be proper for us to vote in favor of the motion offered by the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN] in order that we may be certain to have an opportunity to vote for a clarification of the original motion?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, that is one way, of course. If there be any doubt as to the interpretation of the motion of the distinguished Senator from Ohio, that is one way in which it can be clarified. For that reason I took the floor to state that I felt I should oppose the motion to reconsider because I place the same interpretation upon the motion as was placed upon it by the distinguished Senator from Ohio when he made it, but I stated that if the motion to reconsider should prevail, I wanted to know from the distinguished Senator from Michigan, who was joint sponsor of the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], prior to the motion to recommit, if the instructions which have just been read by the Senator from Michigan would be explicit. In that way any Senator who has any doubt as to what the motion means can resolve it, or any Senator who cares to offer an amendment providing for further clarification may do so.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President——

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHERRY. I shall yield, first, to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. CAIN. May I inquire what the status of the Taft amendment will actually be if the motion of the Senator from Rhode Island is rejected?

Mr. WHERRY. The Vice President has informed the Members of the Senate that the pending question, if the motion to reconsider shall prevail, will be the motion to recommit. It will be open to amendment. I asked the distinguished Senator from Michigan if he wished to offer a clarifying amendment, and he has just read to the Senate the motion which he intends to present. I think it clarifies the intention of the Senator from Ohio. If there be any doubt about it, the Senator from Michigan can offer an amendment still further to clarify it.

I shall now be glad to yield to the distinguished Senator from California.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Will not the Senator from Nebraska agree that should the motion to reconsider not prevail, it is entirely within the jurisdiction of the Appropriations Committee to take the Senate's intent as expressed by the Senator from Ohio, and to report as committee amendments such sums as, in the judgment of the committee, are in accordance with the Senate's intent, so we would then have before us practically the same situation?

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the distinguished Senator from California for his observation. That was the second point which I expected to make in my argument for resisting the motion to reconsider, because the Senate committee can accomplish that very thing. That is the second reason why I shall oppose the motion. The third reason is that I feel that the committee members, including the distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Committee, for whom I have the highest regard, should not consider it as a personal affront because the motion was made. I feel that there have been sufficient statements and observations made so that the Members of the Senate have full faith and confidence in whatever action the committee shall take in reference to the bill. I cannot see any reason in the world why the intent of the Senate cannot be accomplished without agreeing to the motion to reconsider.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield to the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. President, I do not quite understand the Senator's second point. How is the Senate to amend the bill when it is in the committee?

Mr. WHERRY. If the motion to recommit shall prevail, the bill will go to the committe stripped of all amendments made on the floor. But I am of the opinion that the Members of the Senate have received so much information that the committee could adopt the amendments and bring the bill back as it left the Senate. That would accomplish the 5-percent saving desired.

Mr. GREEN. The Senator does not think the instructions of the Senate are exclusive.

Mr. WHERRY. That is my interpretation.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield to the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. FERGUSON. That very question was asked the able Senator from New Mexico, who is chairman of the subcommittee, and he has expressed his opinion on the floor, which appears in the RECORD, that he would interpret it as it has been explained by the Senator from Ohio, and which, in effect, would also be accomplished by the motion which I have read to the Senate.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I do not want to detain the Senate longer on this question. I shall vote to recommit the bill with instructions in accordance with the motion offered by the Senator from Michigan, if the motion to reconsider shall prevail. I feel that there is a demand from the grass roots of the country that Congress take the leadership in reducing the cost of Government and in cutting the cloth to fit the pattern.

The Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART] made observations this morning relative to the leveling off of business. The reason why some unemployment is appearing in the Nation is that the businessmen of the country are afraid of increased taxes. They do not know what will happen; they do not know what the administration's programs will cost. They know that there are three alternatives—either we must increase taxes, resort to deficit spending, or cut the cost of Government. I choose the latter method. I think that as business retrenches the Government must retrench. If prices come down and the dollar purchases more, the cost of Government should come down also. That would not destroy the efficiency of the agencies of the Government.

In accordance with that feeling on my part, I am glad to know the Nebraska State Legislature has acted. In the Omaha World-Herald, a newspaper which largely covers the Missouri River Basin, there appears this statement:

> The Nebraska Legislature Friday added its voice to the growing cry for a slash in Federal spending.
> By a vote of 26 to 5, the legislators adopted a resolution urging Congress to make a 10-percent slash "in all Federal expenditures possible."

They are admonishing the Government of the United States.

> The resolution had been offered by Senator W. J. Norman.

I know Mr. Norman personally. He is a businessman of Omaha, and a very sound and progressive one. He is one of my very best friends and is a very able legislator. He introduced the resolution, which contains the following provision:

> 1. If President Truman's proposed budget is accepted by Congress, the Federal tax bill would amount to at least one-fifth of the individual taxpayer's income.

We are told by leading economists that 27 cents of every dollar we spend is taken for local, State, and Federal taxes.

We talk about restricting liberty. The power to tax is the power to destroy; and when approximately 25 cents out of each dollar goes to the Federal Government for taxes, and, in addition to that, we have to pay local and State taxes, that is a restriction upon the liberties of the American people.

> 2. New taxes at such times as these may accelerate a minor business recession into a major depression.

With that observation I completely agree. If we increase taxes to meet a deficit of five, six, eight, ten, or eleven billion dollars—and that is the figure which has been submitted by the distinguished Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] up to and including the fiscal year 1951—it might not only cause a minor depression, it might cause a major depression. At least it would mean hard times. I read further:

> It is the general opinion that sources of Federal revenue are "seeking lower levels." This opinion is buttressed by "all official calculations" of economic developments for the first quarter of 1949.

Mr. President, the remarks made a few minutes ago by the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY] were to the effect that the dollar will buy more at this time, which means that prices are falling, and if we get more for our dollar, why do we not effect that saving, because many of the budgets were made up in October and November, when prices were considerably higher than they are today? Why not effect the savings now?

I should like to say to the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin that not only should we begin at home, but I think the measuring stick should go clear across the line, and certainly should apply to the ECA and other foreign commitments. I see no difference between foreign and domestic commitments, so far as that is concerned. That was one of the reasons why I offered an amendment to cut the authorization of ECA 15 percent when it was before the Senate. That amendment was lost, and I supported an amendment to cut it 10 percent, and that was lost. Since that time even the President of the United States has recommended that if savings can be made because of falling prices, they could well come off the appropriations for ECA. So when we apply the measuring stick, let us apply it not only domestically, but clear across the board. Let us make the savings abroad as well as at home.

I read further from the Omaha Evening World-Herald:

> The resolution urges Nebraska's representatives in Congress to use every effort at their command to reduce the Federal budget for the 1949-50 fiscal year.

Mr. President, I shall vote against the motion to reconsider for the reasons already given, first, that the committee can itself completely carry out the interpretation placed by the distinguished Senator from Ohio on his motion; for the further reason that, in accordance with observations made on the Senate floor, the Committee on Appropriations can carry out the original intention of the Senator from Ohio; and for the further reason that the time has arrived when we must start to cut appropriations. It simply has to be done, and I am going to do everything in my power to accomplish it. Therefore, I shall vote against the motion to reconsider, and I shall support any motion to recommit the bill to the committee in an effort to effect the savings which are desired by the proponents of the motion, and cut the expenditures recommended in this particular appropriation bill.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the article from which I have been reading be printed in the body of the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED STATES CUT IN SPENDING URGED BY LEGISLATURE—MOVE IS TAKEN IN RESOLUTION BY STATE BODY—NORMAN INTRODUCER OF PLEA TO MAKE SLASH IN GOVERNMENT COST

The Nebraska Legislature Friday added its voice to the growing cry for a slash in Federal spending.

By a vote of 26 to 5, the legislators adopted a resolution urging Congress to make a 10-percent slash in all Federal expenditures possible. The resolution had been offered by Senator W. J. Norman, of Omaha.

Voting against it were Senators Lester Anderson, Babcock, Carson, Cretsinger, and Schroeder.

Commented Senator N. F. Schroeder: "It's silly. How can we ask Congress to cut down? Look at our budget."

The 1949-51 State budget bill now under debate by the legislature is the largest in Nebraska's history.

Senator Norman's resolution declares:

1. If President Truman's proposed budget is accepted by Congress, the Federal tax bill would amount to at least one-fifth of the individual taxpayer's income.

2. New taxes at such times as these may accelerate a minor business recession into a major depression.

3. It is the general opinion that sources of Federal revenue are seeking lower levels. This opinion is buttressed by all official calculations of economic developments for the first quarter of 1949.

The resolution urges Nebraska's Representatives in Congress to use every effort at their command to reduce the Federal budget for the 1949-50 fiscal year.

Senator Norman earlier Thursday had warned his colleagues of the trend in Federal spending and taxation.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion to reconsider made by the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN].

Mr. CHAVEZ. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Hoey	Morse
Anderson	Holland	Murray
Baldwin	Humphrey	Myers
Bricker	Hunt	Neely
Butler	Ives	O'Conor
Byrd	Jenner	O'Mahoney
Cain	Johnson, Colo.	Pepper
Capehart	Johnson, Tex.	Reed
Chapman	Johnston, S. C.	Robertson
Chavez	Kefauver	Russell
Connally	Kem	Saltonstall
Cordon	Kerr	Schoeppel
Donnell	Kilgore	Smith, Maine
Douglas	Knowland	Sparkman

Green	McGrath	Watkins
Gurney	McKellar	Wherry
Hayden	McMahon	Wiley
Hendrickson	Martin	Williams
Hickenlooper	Maybank	Withers
Hill	Millikin	Young

By order of the Senate, the following announcement is made after each quorum call:

The members of the Committee on Foreign Relations have been granted permission to be absent from the sessions of the Senate while the Committee on Foreign Relations is conducting hearings on the North Atlantic Pact.

The VICE PRESIDENT. A quorum is present.

The question is on the motion of the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN] to reconsider the vote by which the bill (H. R. 3333), the Labor-Federal Security appropriation bill, was recommitted, with instructions.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk called the roll.

Mr. MYERS. I announce that the Senator from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON] and the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] have a pair. If the Senator from Washington were present and voting he would vote "yea," and if the Senator from Georgia were present and voting he would vote "nay."

I announce that the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. EASTLAND] is absent on official business.

The Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. MILLER], and the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON] is absent on public business.

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. MILLER] is paired on this vote with the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT]. If present and voting, the Senator from Idaho would vote "yea" and the Senator from Ohio would vote "nay."

The Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] is paired on this vote with the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES]. If present and voting, the Senator from New York would vote "yea," and the Senator from New Hampshire would vote "nay."

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I announce that the Senator from Maine [Mr. BREWSTER] is absent on official business. If present and voting, he would vote "nay."

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] is absent on official business and is paired with the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER]. If present and voting, the Senator from New Hampshire would vote "nay" and the Senator from New York would vote "yea."

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. FLANDERS] is absent by leave of the Senate. If present and voting, he would vote "nay."

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. MALONE] is necessarily absent. If present and voting, he would vote "nay."

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH] is absent because of illness. If present and voting, he would vote "nay."

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT], who is necessarily absent, is paired with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. MILLER]. If present and voting, the Senator from Ohio would vote "nay" and the Senator from Idaho would vote "yea."

The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. MUNDT] is detained on official business. If present and voting, he would vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 43, nays 41, as follows:

YEAS—43

Aiken	Hoey	McFarland

So Mr. GREEN's motion to reconsider was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed, without amendment, the following bills and joint resolution of the Senate:

S. 392. An act authorizing the issuance of a patent in fee to Thomas A. Pickett;

S. 683. An act to relieve certain employees of the Veterans' Administration from financial liability for certain overpayments;

S. 716. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to sell the land of George Peters under existing regulations; and

S. J. Res. 18. Joint resolution for the relief of the First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co., administrator of the estate of C. A. Ragland, Sr.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the Vice President:

S. 460. An act to authorize the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to reconvey to the Helena Chamber of Commerce certain described parcels of land situated in the city of Helena, Mont.;

S. 461. An act to clarify the provisions of section 602 (u) of the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940, as amended;

S. 812. An act to protect scenic values along Oak Creek Canyon and certain tributaries thereof within the Coconino National Forest, Ariz.;

S. 1185. An act to provide that all employees of the veterans' canteen service shall be paid from funds of the service, and for other purposes; and

S. 1704. An act to strengthen and improve the organization and administration of the Department of State, and for other purposes.

LABOR-FEDERAL SECURITY APPROPRIATIONS—MOTION TO RECONSIDER

The Senate resumed the consideration of Mr. Green's motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill (H. R. 3333), making appropriations for the Department of Labor, the Federal Security Agency, and related independent agencies, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, and for other purposes, was recommitted to the Committee on Appropriations, with instructions.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question now recurs on the original motion of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] to recommit the bill to the Committee on Appropriations with instructions.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, I send to the desk a motion as a substitute for the motion of the senior Senator from Ohio, and ask that it be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The motion will be read for the information of the Senate.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

I move that the bill be recommitted to the Committee on Appropriations with instructions to report the same back to the Senate with amendments providing for a reduction equivalent to that provided in the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], for himself and the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON]: Provided, however, That any such reduction shall be based on the amount of the appropriations contained in the bill as amended by the Senate (including committee amendments) at the time of its recommittal.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] by way of a substitute for the original motion of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] to recommit the bill to the Committee on Appropriations with instructions.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, just a few words in explanation——

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield to the Senator from Georgia for a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. RUSSELL. I understood that the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] made the original motion to recommit.

The VICE PRESIDENT. This is a substitute for the motion originally made by the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, I should like to make a brief explanation of the substitute motion.

During the debate on the motion to reconsider, some doubt was expressed as to the meaning of the original motion to recommit. There had been a ruling by the Chair that when the bill was recommitted, under the rules of the Senate all amendments adopted on the floor would be stricken out and the bill would find itself in the Appropriations Committee in its original form.

There was also some doubt as to the method by which the cut was to be made, and on what items. The substitute motion leaves no doubt, and makes crystal clear what is intended by the instructions in the motion.

The instructions are that the Appropriations Committee receive the bill as it now is, including all committee amendments and all amendments made on the floor. The committee would be asked to cut from the bill the amount of 5 percent, as originally set forth in the amendment offered by the senior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], for himself and the junior Senator from Michigan. That amendment was held to be legislation, and was not made a part of the bill. There are certain items not subject to the cut.

Under the original motion of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] the bill went back to the committee with instructions to cut at least 5 percent off the items subject to reduction, and in no case to cut more than 20 percent off any particular item. It would be necessary, therefore, for the committee to go into the items with those who are to administer the law, in the same way as was proposed by the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire. It would be necessary to obtain the advice of the Federal Security Administrator and the Secretary of Labor, in order that the proper reductions might be made in the amounts to be expended.

Mr. President, I hope the Senate will vote to send the bill back to the committee, with the specific instructions which clarify the intent of the Senate in its original recommittal action.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield to the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. AIKEN. I wonder whether the Senator from Michigan will designate some of the items in the bill in which he thinks cuts can best be made. I admit that his substitute improves the situation somewhat, because I do not think the appropriation items for the control of diseases should be reduced in amount. So I should like to have the Senator from Michigan suggest some of the items for which the appropriations might be reduced without damaging the national health or the national economy in any way.

Mr. FERGUSON. Of course, the bill as reported by the committee provides for appropriations in excess of those provided in the bill as passed by the House of Representatives. I think a 5-percent cut can be made in almost all the items, except those as to which it was specifically stated that reductions in the appropriations would not be made—for instance, the items for appropriations for pensions in cases in which the Government has agreed to return a certain amount of the funds already paid in by the persons concerned, and the items for unemployment compensation. Such provisions have already been made.

Mr. AIKEN. Can the Senator give us an idea of the approximate amount of the cuts which might be made?

Mr. FERGUSON. I should think it would be approximately fourteen or fifteen million dollars.

Mr. AIKEN. Can the Senator give us a general idea as to how much of that amount would otherwise be expended for supplies?

Mr. FERGUSON. I do not have the figures before me at this time, so I am sorry I cannot answer that question.

Mr. AIKEN. I still believe that the place where the cutting of appropriations should be done is in the committee, before the bill is reported to the floor of the Senate. I very much dislike to see cuts made in appropriation items which affect the health or perhaps even the lives of our people.

Mr. FERGUSON. I am sure the Senator from Vermont and other Senators will be able to rely upon the Appropriations Committee not to make cuts which would vitally affect the health or the welfare of the people.

After the committee has acted on the bill, the bill will return to the floor of the Senate, and at that time it will be subject to further consideration by the Senate. If the Senate then feels that the Appropriations Committee has made a mistake in the case of any particular reduction in an appropriation, after obtaining the advice of the Federal Security Administrator and Secretary of Labor, the Senate will be in complete charge of the bill at that time and will be able to make whatever amendments it thinks should be made to the bill. So no real injustice will be done to any particular program.

Mr. AIKEN. Under the Senator's substitute motion, if cuts were made in the appropriations for the control of heart disease and other diseases, they would be made in the figures as finally approved by the Senate when the bill was previously before the Senate; would they not?

Mr. FERGUSON. That is correct.

Mr. AIKEN. Those cuts would not be made from the figures which were contained in the bill when it came to the floor of the Senate. Is that correct?

Mr. FERGUSON. That is correct. The substitute motion is specific on that point. The bill would go back to the committee with the full amounts as previously approved by the Senate.

Mr. AIKEN. Then I think the Senator's substitute improves the situation.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the substitute proposed by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] for the motion of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] to recommit the bill with instructions.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed at this point in the RECORD, prior to the vote, the estimates of Federal receipts for the fiscal years 1949 and 1950, prepared by the staff of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, of which committee the able Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] is a member. The staff of that joint committee estimates that the deficiency for the year 1950 will be $2,900,000,000; and the receipts for the next fiscal year are estimated to be $2,100,000,000 less than those estimated by the Director of the Bureau of the Budget and the President of the United States, as stated in the message which has been sent to the Congress.

There being no objection, the estimates were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ESTIMATES OF FEDERAL RECEIPTS FOR FISCAL YEARS 1949 AND 1950

The joint committee staff estimate of Federal receipts for the fiscal year 1949 is $39,300,000,000 and for the fiscal year 1950 is $38,900,000,000. Taken with the President's January budget estimate of expenditures these estimated receipts would result in a surplus in the fiscal year 1949 of $2,100,000,000 (excluding expenditures of $3,000,000,000 from the Foreign Economic Cooperation trust fund) and in a deficit in the fiscal year 1950 of $2,900,000,000. If the reduction resulting from the effect of the Foreign Economic Cooperation trust fund were ignored, there would be a deficit in the fiscal year 1949 of $900,000,000 instead of a surplus. However, expenditures in 1949 (including the $3,000,000,000 FEC expenditures) in May and June must exceed those in the same period last year by $1,600,000,000 in order to reach the estimate in the budget. Should this not occur, the deficit would be smaller than $900,000,000 and might disappear altogether.

The attached table compares the staff estimates with the estimates of receipts appearing in the January budget. It will be noted that the joint committee staff estimates of receipts for the fiscal year 1950 are $2,100,000,000 below the estimates appearing in the January budget. The primary reason for this is that the staff's estimates are based on a lower assumed level of business activity. The staff assumed a personal income level of $212,000,000,000 in the calendar year 1949, and $198,000,000,000 in the first 6 months of the calendar year 1950. This compares with a personal income level of $215,000,000,000 for this entire 18-month period, which is reported to have been assumed in the preparation of the budget. The assumed level of corporate profits used by the staff in estimating corporate income tax collections was $29,000,000,000 for the calendar year 1949, which is about 11 percent below the actual corporate profits for 1948 or $32,200,000,000.

The low level of business activity was assumed by the staff only after consultation with a number of outstanding economic analysts, both in private business and in the Government. The assumed decline is moderate and does not take into consideration the effect of any sizable increase in Government expenditures above the level forecast in the January budget, or any possible increase in tax rates.

Estimated budget receipts, expenditures, and the surplus or deficit of the Federal Government

[In billions of dollars]

	Staff	Budget	Excess of budget over staff estimates
Fiscal year 1949:
Receipts	$39.3	$39.6	$0.3
Expenditures	[1] 37.2	[1] 37.2	----
Surplus	2.1	2.4	.3
Fiscal year 1950:
Receipts	38.9	41.0	2.1
Expenditures	[2] 41.9	41.9	----
Deficit	2.9	.9	2.1

[1] January 1949 budget estimates excluding expenditures of $3,000,000,000 from the Foreign Economic Cooperation trust fund. Including these expenditures would result in a deficit of $900,000,000 using the staff estimate of receipts, and $600,000,000 using the budget estimate of receipts. But expenditures in 1949 including the $3,000,000,000 FEC expenditure must in May and June exceed those in the same period of last year by $1,600,000,000 in order to reach the estimate. Any portion of this increase not expended would reduce the above-mentioned deficits accordingly and could possibly result in a surplus even though the FEC expenditure is attributable to 1949.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the substitute proposed by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] for the motion of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] to recommit the bill with instructions.

Mr. WHERRY. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, before the vote is taken, the Senate should consider the situation carefully. At the present moment the question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT], as modified or amended by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON]. I hope the Senate will vote against that motion, and will let the Senate conferees take this measure to conference with the conferees on the part of the House, and determine in conference whether a bill satisfactory to both Houses can be determined upon.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, before the vote is taken on the motion, I wish to say that I believe some of my colleagues will be interested in knowing at least what the motion is.

On page 5213 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for April 28 appears the orignal amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] and the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON]. I shall read the amendment for the benefit of my colleagues who would like to have their memories refreshed as to the extent to which this motion, if adopted by the Senate, could affect the pending measure, and the extent to which the committee to which the bill would be recommitted would have authority to act, and the field within which it could exercise that authority.

The amendment proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire and the Senator from Michigan reads as follows:

SEC. 502. (a) The Secretary of Labor, with respect to appropriations made in title I of this act, and the Federal Security Administrator, with respect to appropriations made in title II of this act, are authorized and directed, with the approval of the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, to make such reductions in the amounts to be expended from the appropriations made in each such title as will in the aggregate equal at least 5 percent of the total amounts so appropriated therein (less in the case of title II amounts appropriated for grants under titles I, IV, and X of the Social Security Act, and grants to the States for unemployment compensation and employment-services administration), except that appropriations for grants under titles I, IV, and X of the Social Security Act, grants to the States for unemployment compensation and employment-services administration shall not be reduced. The Secretary of Labor and the Federal Security Administrator shall certify the reduction in each appropriation account to the Secretary of the Treasury and to the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and House of Representatives. The amounts so certified shall not be expended but shall be impounded and returned to the Treasury.

(b) Such reduction shall be made in a manner calculated to bring about the greatest economy in expenditure consistent with the efficiency of the service.

(c) No item of appropriation contained in either of such titles shall be reduced more than 20 percent.

(d) A statement of each reduction hereunder, including the amount thereof, shall be included in the annual budget for the fiscal year 1951.

The motion before the Senate is to refer the bill back to the committee with instructions to the committee to report back a bill effecting these reductions, in amounts not over those set out, and within the classes of activities which are not prohibited in the proposed amendment, which was not adopted due to the fact that objection was made on the basis of a point of order.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CORDON. I yield.

Mr. AIKEN. The Senator evidently has the bill before him. The rest of us are not so fortunate. Will the Senator read the 10 items from which cuts could be made, so that we may know what they are?

Mr. CORDON. Title I, which is within the group where amendments or reductions are directed, is in the Office of the Department of Labor. The items are:

Salaries and expenses, $1,154,000.

Office of Solicitor, salaries and expenses, $1,093,900.

Bureau of Labor Standards, salaries and expenses, $550,000.

Bureau of Veterans' Employment Rights, salaries and expenses, $270,000.

Bureau of Apprenticeship, for salaries and expenses, $2,605,000.

Bureau of Labor Statistics, salaries and expenses, $5,506,500.

Women's Bureau, salaries and expenses, $334,800.

Wage and Hour Division, salaries and expenses, $5,252,000.

That completes title I. The Senator will note that this is entirely for salaries and expenses of administration.

Mr. AIKEN. What is the aggregate? Is it about $15,000,000?

Mr. CORDON. I do not have it added, but I can give it in a minute.

Mr. AIKEN. The Senator read two $5,000,000 items and then several smaller ones.

Mr. CORDON. I think it would be around $15,000,000 to $17,000,000.

Mr. AIKEN. I gather the other reductions would have to come on items of public health at places where cuts could be made.

Mr. CORDON. I should be glad to go through the other title. The next reductions are in the Federal Security Administration with respect to appropriations made in title II. In the case of title I the reductions would be made by reducing the salary and expense items which I read to the Senate by an estimate of 5 percent, which might be spread anywhere within that group of items, all of which represent salary and expense or administrative items. It goes to no substantive grant.

Mr. President, I merely want to say before closing that there have been made a number of motions of this character, going to different bills coming from the Appropriations Committee. I have been a member of that committee for about 3½ years. I should like to be able to say to the Senate that we who work in that committee—and we do work—know that every dollar which we recommend for appropriation is being wisely spent. I cannot make that statement. I know that no member of the committee can. The chore that we have is beyond the capacity of any group the size of the Appropriations Committee, with the help the committee has, or with the help that can be granted the committee short of the setting up of another bureau of the budget, to accomplish in a way satisfactory either to ourselves or sufficient to give to the people of the country knowledge that they are getting a dollar's worth for every dollar of the money they spend.

Those who come before us—and particularly is this true on the side of the Senate—come as special pleaders. They come seeking money. I do not mean to imply by that that they are dishonest in their representations; I do not mean to imply that they seek money which they do not believe can be wisely spent; but I do say that they come as special pleaders seeking funds to advance the thing they are charged with doing. They do not come with any over-all knowledge of the other calls which will be made upon the Treasury. They do not come with the knowledge that there is a limit to what Congress can find in the way of money to appropriate.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Oregon yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. CORDON. I am glad to yield.

Mr. RUSSELL. I should like to ask if it is not also the usual thing for most of them to come with a statement that they are very highly in favor of the utmost economy in government, but that this one item is so important that the committee should approve it, regardless of what the item may be?

Mr. CORDON. I suppose one or two have come without making that statement, but I cannot now identify them.

Mr. President, the net result is that the committee cannot do the kind of job it wants to do. I know that many members of the Appropriations Committee feel that there are many places where there could be reductions in the amounts of expenditures, but we cannot find them. We have tried to find them, we have done all we can to try to find them. I undertake to say that whatever happens to the motion, or to the bill, or to the appropriations made this year, in the last analysis there will never be a reduction in the expenditures of the Federal Government or any other public spending of money, except to the extent that there is a will in the spending divisions to make the reduction. That I know to be true.

Mr. President, I am going to vote for the motion. I am a member of the Appropriations Committee which reported the bill and recommended it to the Senate. That would seem to me a paradoxical and inconsistent position for me to take. I have tried to explain why I believe that something more can be done than we have been able to do. It does not mean that I am at all satisfied that we shall come back with the result I wish we could come back with, if the motion be adopted; I am not at all certain. But I should like to have the test made, I should like to determine what can be done by the use of this particular approach.

Let me say that in good faith I have endeavored to go over the possibilities of what could be done by the Appropriations Committee, if the bill were recommitted, to effectuate the results indicated in the motion to recommit. It seems to me, Mr. President, that if the bill is recommitted we could ask the affected departments, under the directions which bind us, to bring the recommendations of each department to the committee, indicating how the appropriations might be reduced, still save all of the essential services, effect the greatest economy possible, and do the least amount of damage.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CORDON. I shall be glad to yield for a question.

Mr. CHAVEZ. This appropriation bill is the one bill which directly affects human beings. It affects the Children's Bureau, public welfare, public health—everything that touches humanity——

Mr. CORDON. Will the Senator come to his question, please?

Mr. CHAVEZ. I shall ask the question. Why pick public health or the Children's Bureau in order to make an example of how economical we can be? Why pick on cancer research, research in dentistry, research in connection with heart ailments? Why pick on anything which affects the welfare of the people?

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, I have not particularly picked this bill. It is a bill in which it would seem that Members of the Senate felt some reductions might be made. I suspect, without knowing, that additions made to the bill as reported to the Senate involve considerably greater amounts than were contained in the bill as it passed the House. Those facts may have had something to do with the action of the Senate in returning the bill to the Appropriations Committee. I can understand that might well be true. We know that additional amounts were added on the floor of the Senate. Whether the amounts so added were proper, whether they can be profitably and efficiently expended, may be questions which the Senate would like to have inquired into more carefully than can be done on the floor of the Senate. It may be that Members of this body have felt that if those additional amounts affect certain items, there may be other adjustments of an offsetting nature which could be made. I am simply suggesting reasons why the Senate may have been moved to take the action which it took.

Mr. President, I return to the point I was making when the Senator from New Mexico rose to propound his question. I had suggested that we might request the several spending agencies to report their recommendations to the committee. I think it would also be very proper for the committee to request the Bureau of the Budget to consider the recommendations and report to the Congress its recommendation as to how reductions might best be applied. So far as I am concerned, Mr. President, if the bill is recommitted to the committee I hope the whole committee will meet in advance of the meeting of the subcommittee and at least suggest to the subcommittee that in view of the fact that considerable sums were added on the floor of the Senate, the Members of the Senate should be asked by letter to advise the Appropriations Committee whether they desire inquiry made as to the amount added to the bill on the floor of the Senate. I think, if the Appropriations Committee is directed to reexplore the matter, it should at least have from Senators, over their signatures, statements that they are willing to have their action on the floor of the Senate reexamined and the facts which might be ascertained from such a reexamination presented. Under such a procedure it may well be that a better considered bill than the one we have before us might be presented to this body.

In closing, Mr. President, I simply suggest that once the bill is reported, it is in the same position as was this bill when it reached the floor the first time. It is subject to the same scrutiny by Members of the Senate. It is subject to any corrections which this body may desire to make. The Senate in nowise surrenders its control over final action on the bill.

Mr. President, I shall vote for the pending motion.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, I do not want to delay the Senate, but I wish to make certain that my interpretation of the pending motion is correct. If I may have the attention of the able Senator from Michigan, according to my interpretation of the motion which the Senator has submitted, if this bill is returned to the committee for reconsideration, there will have to be retained in the bill when it is reported to the Senate the additional amounts added to the bill by amendment on the floor of the Senate when the bill was considered. Is that correct?

Mr. FERGUSON. Subject to an overall reduction of 5 percent, or not to exceed 20 percent on any item. That is correct.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Subject to a cut of 5 percent, or not to exceed 20 percent?

Mr. FERGUSON. The committee may not cut any specific item more than 20 percent in reducing the total by 5 percent.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Then, in other words, the committee is not free, when the bill is recommitted, to work it over and to report a new bill if the committee should prefer to do so?

Mr. FERGUSON. No. I would say that it is recommitted with specific instructions.

Mr. McCLELLAN. In other words, it is recommitted, and the committee must be bound by what the Senate has already done; is that correct?

Mr. FERGUSON. That is correct.

Mr. McCLELLAN. I thank the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. President, I voted to recommit the bill a few days ago because I felt if we were to consider bills and increase the amounts considerably by amendments on the floor, we would have to resort to some remedy, to try to find a way to economize, if we are to hold expenditures within the budget. That is the way I felt about it. But I do not believe that is the best way to achieve the desired result, because if we make a practice, every time a bill is before us and it is recommitted, of reducing the amounts 5 percent, there will be testimony on the part of representatives of governmental agencies to indicate why they need a larger appropriation, and there will be a tendency on the part of some members of the committee, under certain circumstances, to report a bill with anticipation that there will be a 5-percent reduction. That is not the sound, safe, or practical way to get reductions. I shall vote against the pending motion.

Mr. President, I understand—I am not fully advised about it—that an effort is now being made by able members of the Appropriations Committee to find some kind of formula to bring in at the conclusion of consideration of appropriation bills by which we can make adjustments and try to bring down the total amount of appropriations this year, within the budget, or within the anticipated revenues for the next fiscal year. I sincerely hope that some kind of a formula can be found and that such a proposal will be presented, so that I may have an opportunity to vote for it in connection with all appropriation bills.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I yield to the Senator from California.

Mr. KNOWLAND. I should like to ask the able Senator from Arkansas if there is not the difficulty, in connection with such a formula as he suggests, that we shall have to take one of two courses: Either it amounts to legislation on an appropriation bill, and thereby might be subject to a point of order, or, if it is treated as a separate piece of legislation which goes to the President of the United States separately, he is then in a position to veto it on the theory that he has already passed on the budget and has given the budget figures as his best judgment; that his judgment is that there should be $4,000,000,000 in new taxes; and therefore he can nullify the intent of the Congress?

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, let me answer the Senator by saying that irrespective of which approach is taken, if two-thirds of the Members of Congress desire actually to reduce expenses, it can be done.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, there is no question that Congress should scrutinize very carefully every request which is made for an appropriation. I agree with the senior Senator from Oregon when he says we must take the broad, over-all viewpoint of the entire appropriation situation. But each of us is entitled to his own idea as to where cuts should be made in appropriations for running the Government.

Personally, I am prejudiced in favor of doing everything possible to improve the health of the people, to improve the opportunities for our children, particularly homeless children who come under the care of the Children's Bureau and the various State children's departments. I would much rather see a 20-percent cut made in the appropriation for rivers and harbors or a higher percentage of cuts made in other appropriation bills which may come before the Senate, than in the bill which is before us at this time. All over the United States, in every State, in every city, and in every small community, there are people who are afflicted with deadly, creeping, pernicious diseases, who are hoping and praying that help may come and discoveries be made to save them before it is too late. I do not believe we should make a cut from any appropriation which would save one single life in the United States.

Mr. President, I suspect some of the money appropriated for health services is wasted. If it is not, it is the only appropriation we make from which some funds are not wasted. But would it not be better to make the cuts in appropriations for rivers and harbors and flood control, in the appropriations for the Army, which wastes more every 6 months than this entire bill from which cuts would be made amounts to, or in appropriations for some of our foreign commitments? I believe that is the case, Mr. President, and for one I cannot vote to take from anybody the chance which he may have to live a little longer by reason of an adequate appropriation.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, when the able Senator from Vermont asked me some questions I did not have before me the information I now have. I wish to call to his attention some of the items, and how they would be affected.

For instance, on page 2 of the bill appears the amount appropriated for the office of the Secretary of Labor. I realize that because this bill concerns the Department of Labor and the Federal Security Agency there is involved a question about the health of the people. But I call the attention of the able Senator to the fact that in cutting this appropriation 5 percent, or an amount equal to 5 percent of the over-all, it should not affect those services. As I understand the able Senator from Vermont, he is interested in protecting the lives of the people of America. That would necessarily go to the question of research. But there are many items affecting those who work beyond the man who is engaged in actual research which can be cut 5 percent, without cutting the actual research appropriation any amount. In fact, a greater amount could be used for actual research.

Last Friday evening I was talking with Mr. Charles F. Kettering, one of the most able scientists and research men in America, about research in the Government. He called my attention to how some of his research work and that of other scientists had been done. We spoke then about whether or not we needed marble buildings in which to conduct research. It has been well known that much of the research in America has never been conducted in marble buildings. It has been done even in lofts, and places of that sort. The important thing is not the setting but the will of the man who is doing the research. I, for one, want the Government to aid in every way it can, and I would not take one dollar from the man who is engaged in research activities.

I turn to the item affecting the office of the Secretary of Labor. The Senate bill appropriates $1,154,000 to operate the office of the Secretary. The House of Representatives provided only $1,074,000. The Senate added $30,000.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield.

Mr. AIKEN. What was the reason for making the increase in the appropriation?

Mr. FERGUSON. It was because, according to the Secretary, more help was needed in his office.

Mr. AIKEN. If the appropriation for the Secretary's office is too much, would it not be more to the point to offer an amendment on the floor of the Senate reducing the appropriation $100,000, if the bill calls for $100,000 more than is needed?

Mr. FERGUSON. That is one way to get at it. But that item has already been passed on as a committee amendment, and therefore it is not subject to review by the Senate, unless we recommit the bill to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator from Michigan yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Let us get the record straight so far as the $80,000 is concerned.

Mr. FERGUSON. Yes.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Is the Senator reading from page 3 of the report?

Mr. FERGUSON. No, from the bill itself. I shall be glad to have the Senator read from the report.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Is the Senator speaking of the $80,000 item for the Department of Labor?

Mr. FERGUSON. Yes.

Mr. CHAVEZ. That has nothing whatsoever to do with health, except in a general way. That appropriation is composed of the following items: $27,795 for the International Labor Organization program, a program authorized by the Congress; $6,901 for the Trade Union Advisory Committee program, authorized by the Congress of the United States; $11,238 for the United Nations and other international organizations; $22,978 for the foreign-service program, authorized by the Congress, and to which we are committed, $11,088 for the trade-agreements program, authorized by the Congress.

There are five different items which make a total of $80,000, representing the increase in the Department of Labor appropriation.

Let me say to the Senate that the total increase by the Senate Committee on Appropriations, which was agreed to by the Senate, was only $216,200. That was the total increase over the House figures, and that was due to the fact that a new convention had been made by the governments which belong to the International Labor Organization. That is all that item amounts to. It has nothing to do with health, except as trade agreements would have to do with health.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, that does not change what the Senator from Michigan has said as to the Department of Labor. The appropriation is for more employees in the Department. For instance, under the trade-agreement program, the Department wanted $11,038 increase, and the Senate increased the appropriation that much. I call the Senator's attention to the fact that if we reduce the program now 5 percent, we will take from that program only $57,700. It could be tested in this way: Instead of trying to accomplish what we seek to accomplish on the floor of the Senate, let us call before the committee the Secretary of Labor and ask him whether he can reduce the item of $1,154,000 by $57,700.

Mr. President, it is not unusual for the Appropriations Committee, for instance, to send to the Army engineers three sets of figures, and ask them:

> If you had the amount of money represented by the first figure how would you apply it to projects already begun, and to projects not begun?
> Take the second figure. How would you apply that amount to the projects already begun, whether they are on the way to completion, or are simply new projects, after reconsidering the whole program?
> Take the amount represented by the third figure. How would you apply it to the various projects you have in mind, if it was all the money you were given?

Such a thing is not unusual.

Mr. President, by what I am saying I do not wish to cast any reflection on the subcommittee, of which I happen to be the ranking minority member. The committee did the best it could under the circumstances, at the time it considered the bill. But I say to the Senate that since that time the conditions in America have changed. We find a realization that things are not now going so well as they were when the bill was being considered, and that we will face a deficit unless we take some action of the kind now proposed. As a member of the committee responsible for bringing the bill to the floor, in connection with this program, or any other program, I shall at all times endeavor to do my best to effect economies wherever possible. What I now say is meant in nowise to be a reflection on any member of the committee. What I am attempting to do is to save the taxpayers from a deficit or an increase in taxes.

Let us consider the next item. I do not intend to cover all the items, but the next item is the Solicitor's office, the office of the legal adviser, for which the sum of $1,093,900 is provided. We appropriate for the office of the Secretary for all services $1,154,000, and then appropriate for the lawyers in that Department $1,093,900. I wish to ask anyone who has had experience in the law profession, who has practiced law, whether 5 percent, or $54,695, could not safely be cut from the total of $1,093,900 provided for the Office of the Solicitor?

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield.

Mr. AIKEN. Does not the Senator believe the office of the Solicitor is another good place where an amendment could be offered to cut the amount? Based on my knowledge of the office of the Solicitor in a department of the Government, I would say that a large part of the time of the lawyers in the office of the Solicitor is spent in misinterpreting the acts of the Congress and devising ways and means of getting around what Congress itself has enacted. The Senator from Michigan has put his finger on one spot where money could be saved, not only in the Department of Labor, but in almost every other department of the Government. If the Senator will offer an amendment to cut the appropriation for the office of the Solicitor one-third I shall be glad to vote for it.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, under present conditions practically each department and each agency has its own solicitor's office. I think the Senator from Vermont has hit the nail squarely on the head. We have sat together in the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments and we have discovered that what the Senator just said is true. The reason the departments and agencies want large offices of solicitors within their own departments or agencies, and will not go to the Attorney General, who is the law officer of the United States, and who has to interpret the law and advise the different agencies, is, as the Senator has said, that they want the law to be interpreted in the way in which they wish to carry it out. Thus we find different departments carrying out a provision of law, each in its own way, entirely different from the way it is carried out in other departments.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield.

Mr. AIKEN. The Senator from Michigan is perfectly aware that the head of a Government department wants an act of Congress to be interpreted by someone who is employed by him, who is under fear of losing his job if he does not bring to the department head the kind of interpretation of the law the department head desires. The Senator from Michigan is perfectly correct when he states that they no longer go to the Attorney General, as was contemplated and provided by the founders of the Government, to secure interpretations of laws enacted by Congress, but insist upon having huge solicitors offices in nearly all major departments to interpret the acts of Congress in such way as they want them to be interpreted.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, that is one thing which is really apparent in all these appropriations. Let us consider what is done in connection with income-tax evasions. The office of the Solicitor in the Treasury Department prepares the entire case before it is brought to the Attorney General for criminal proceedings. Then the Attorney General reviews the case before he takes it to the district attorney in a State where he wishes to bring the prosecution before a grand jury. So the Attorney General says he needs additional legal help for the making of such reviews. Thus we have three sets of lawyers in the Government examining all the facts and examing all the law to decide whether the Government has a case on which it can secure an indictment.

No indictment can be secured by the Treasury Department. The Treasury Department, which has lawyers trained in matters relating to the income-tax laws, lawyers who are familiar with all the sections of the income-tax laws, who know when a violation has been committed, and who are responsible for collecting all the facts, does not take the case to the district attorney in Detroit. The department does not take a case directly to the district attorney in Chicago. No, the department lawyers take the case to the office of the Attorney General in Washington. Then does the Attorney General begin the action? No, he takes the case to the district attorney in the city in which an indictment is to be sought, and the district attorney must then go over the entire case, and he will be responsible for presenting it not only to the grand jury but to the trial jury. There we have a duplication of work by three sets of lawyers. They do the work that could be done by one set of lawyers.

Mr. President, I hope the time will come when the Attorney General of the United States will be the legal adviser of each department, even though the department may be a large one. In that way we could probably dispense with more than half the lawyers who are now serving the Government. I believe that could be done if the legal services were performed through one office that is responsible to the President for the interpretation of law. That, Mr. President, would be much better than running around the bush and allowing the solicitor of each department to interpret the law according to the way the head of the department wants it carried out.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. Yes; I am glad to yield.

Mr. AIKEN. Will the Senator agree that if Congress can devise a way to prevent the departments of Government from misinterpreting and misapplying the acts of the Congress we would probably save considerably more than the 5 percent of total Government expenditures we are attempting to save in one way or another at this time?

Mr. FERGUSON. The percentage would be enormous.

Mr. AIKEN. That is correct.

Mr. FERGUSON. There is one way to accomplish that objective, namely, to have the law interpreted by one agency, which is the Department of Justice, the Office of the Attorney General of the United States, instead of having each department interpret the law as suits its own wishes.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield.

Mr. LANGER. The Senator was a member of the Committee on the Judiciary 2 years ago during the Eightieth Congress. The Senator is familiar with the fact, is he not, that I submitted a bill to accomplish the very purpose which the distinguished Senator has now brought to the attention of the Senate, but we could not get the bill out of committee.

Mr. FERGUSON. That is true. The Senator will recall also that the Senator from North Dakota and the Senator from Michigan have been attempting to see how appropriations were spent, so far as antitrust cases are concerned. No satisfaction has ever been had. Let us appropriate more money for antitrust cases. Let us also hold someone responsible for getting action in antitrust cases. The House of Representatives has allowed $100,000 over and above the budget, and not asked for by the Attorney General, for antitrust cases.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield.

Mr. AIKEN. Does the Senator know any good reason why most of the antitrust suits should be brought 2 or 3 months before an election and forgotten after the election?

Mr. FERGUSON. I must answer that question with absolute frankness. The reason is pure politics. A candidate can make votes by saying that he is going to prosecute someone, and by obtaining an indictment. After the election he can get a nolle prosequi, or a nolo contendere, the defendants can be fined a small amount, and the voters will think he is actually doing something.

Let me come back to the question of antitrust laws and the appropriation of $100,000. An appropriation of $100,000 would be insignificant if those cases were prosecuted. The report shows that prosecutions are desired in connection with housing, clothing, and food. If the American people could be assured that there was no monopoly in housing materials, food, and clothing, $100,000 would be but a drop in the bucket. But if $100,000 is appropriated for that purpose, I ask that a report be submitted to Congress showing that it has been spent in an endeavor to prosecute monopolies in those lines.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. FERGUSON. I am glad to yield.

Mr. KNOWLAND. In view of the statement the Senator has made with regard to the office of the Solicitor, I ask the Senator if he is familiar with the fact that the record shows the appropriations for that office over a 10-year period? What is the appropriation for the office of Solicitor for the fiscal year 1950?

Mr. FERGUSON. For salaries and expenses, office of the Solicitor, $1,093,900. That item is found on page 2, line 16.

Mr. KNOWLAND. I wonder if the Senator is familiar with the fact that for the fiscal year 1942 the appropriation was $850,000; for 1943, $841,000; for 1944, $715,000; for 1945, $834,000; for 1946, $714,177. Then there was increased pay allowed by the Congress of $110,900. For 1947 the figure was $953,000; and for 1948, $808,000.

Mr. FERGUSON. I appreciate very much the interest of the able Senator from California, and I am glad to have in the RECORD the figures which he has given. They show what is happening in connection with this bill so far as the Solicitor's Office is concerned.

Mr. President, I do not intend to review all the items. However, Senators asked certain questions, and I did not then have the facts before me. I wanted to place some of them in the RECORD.

I do not wish to repeat what I have said on the original motion, or what I have said on the question of economy in various statements which I have made in connection with this program. I think the time has come when it is no longer a question of promises to economize. It is time to try to do the job. For every Senator it is a question of actually doing the job. This is the time and this is the place to do it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] as a substitute for the motion originally made by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] to recommit the bill to the Committee on Appropriations with instructions. On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the Secretary will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. MYERS. I announce that the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. EASTLAND] and the Senator from Delaware [Mr. FREAR] are absent on official business.

The Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] and the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON] is absent on public business.

The Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] is paired on this vote with the Senator from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON]. If present and voting, the Senator from Georgia would vote "yea" and the Senator from Washington would vote "nay."

The Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] is paired on this vote with the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES]. If present and voting, the Senator from New York would vote "nay" and the Senator from New Hampshire would vote "yea."

The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER] is paired on this vote with the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT]. If present and voting, the Senator from Tennessee would vote "nay" and the Senator from Ohio would vote "yea."

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I announce that the Senator from Maine [Mr. BREWSTER] is absent on official business. If present and voting, he would vote "yea."

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], who is absent on official business, is paired with the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER]. If present and voting, the Senator from New Hampshire would vote "yea" and the Senator from New York would vote "nay."

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. FLANDERS] is absent by leave of the Senate. If present and voting, he would vote "yea."

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH] is absent because of illness. If present and voting, he would vote "yea."

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT], who is necessarily absent, is paired with the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER]. If present and voting, the Senator from Ohio would vote "yea" and the Senator from Tennessee would vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 41, nays 44, as follows:

So Mr. FERGUSON'S substitute for Mr. TAFT'S motion to recommit with instructions was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on the original motion of the Senator from Ohio to recommit the bill with instructions. [Putting the question.]

The "noes" appear to have it.

Mr. WHERRY. I ask for a division.

The Senate proceeded to divide.

Mr. TAYLOR. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; the legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. AIKEN. Will the Chair please state the pending question?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The yeas and nays have been ordered, the Secretary has proceeded to call the roll, and one Senator has answered to his name, when called.

Mr. AIKEN. Notwithstanding the fact that that has occurred, Mr. President, I ask that the Chair state the question.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the original motion of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] to recommit the bill with certain instructions.

The Secretary will continue with the call of the roll.

The legislative clerk resumed and concluded the calling of the roll.

Mr. MYERS. I announce that the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. EASTLAND], and the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER] are absent on official business.

So Mr. TAFT'S original motion to recommit with instructions was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The parliamentary status is that the various motions have brought the bill back before the Senate as it was before the original motion was made to recommit; which restores all the amendments, including committee amendments and those adopted from the floor.

The bill is open to further amendment. If there be no further amendment to be offered, the question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill, H. R. 3333, was read the third time and passed.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, request a conference thereon with the House, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice President appointed Mr. CHAVEZ, Mr. MCCARRAN, Mr. RUSSELL, Mr. FERGUSON, and Mr. GURNEY conferees on the part of the Senate.

EXTENSION OF RECIPROCAL TRADE AGREEMENTS ACT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 1211) to extend the authority of the President under section 350 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, and for other purposes.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATIONS, 1950

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar 351, House bill 3997.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the bill by title.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. A bill (H. R. 3997) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. WHERRY. Reserving the right to object, may I ask, for the benefit of Members of the Senate, what the opinion of the majority leader is relative to the length of time the consideration of this bill might take, and whether it is contemplated to try to finish it tonight?

Mr. LUCAS. If I may, I yield to the Senator from Georgia for an answer to the question.

Mr. RUSSELL. I know of no particular controversy over the several Senate amendments. I should like to obtain unanimous consent to dispense with the formal reading of the bill, to have the bill read for amendment, the Senate committee amendments to be first considered, and to proceed with the Senate amendments. If too much time is not taken, we might complete those tonight and let the remainder of the bill go over until tomorrow.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Georgia that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill H. R. 3997?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 3997) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations, with amendments.

Mr. RUSSELL. I ask unanimous consent that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with, that the bill be read for amendment, and that the committee amendments be first considered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ANNOUNCEMENT AS TO LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for an announcement?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. I should like to say to the Senate that following the disposition of the bill now pending before the Senate, we shall probably take up Calendar No. 350 (H. R. 3734), the civil functions appropriation bill, in the event the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] is not well enough to take up the reciprocal trade-agreements bill. There is also a possibility that, following that, we may take up Calendar No. 356, Senate bill 1843, the unification bill, which has been reported by the Committee on Armed Services. I merely make that announcement in order that the Senate may know about what to expect.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. I should like to ask the majority leader, relative to the future procedure: Has the distinguished majority leader given any consideration to taking up Calendar No. 284, Senate bill 1008, the so-called basing-point or moratorium bill, which is on the calendar?

Mr. LUCAS. The Senator from Nebraska propounded that inquiry to the Senator from Illinois this morning over the telephone. I may say, in response, that I have not. We are to have a meeting of the policy committee tomorrow morning, and I assure the Senator that we shall discuss it at that time.

NATIONAL HEALTH INSURANCE

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair would like to admonish the Senator from Georgia that he cannot yield for insertions in the RECORD.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I am not seeking to control the floor. I do not approve of the practice of Senators undertaking to hold the floor while a bill is being read for amendment. I shall take my seat.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair had recognized the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, is it in order to offer insertions in the RECORD in my own time?

The VICE PRESIDENT. In the Senator's own time; yes.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD at this point, as part of my remarks, a copy of an open letter addressed to President Truman by Mr. John F. Lawlor, president of the Lincoln, Nebr., Chamber of Commerce, transmitting the stated opposition of the board of directors of that organization on the subject of the pending compulsory national health insurance bill.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE LINCOLN CHAMBER OF COMMERCE,
April 29, 1949.

Hon. HARRY S. TRUMAN,
President of the United States,
White House, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: The board of directors of the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce, an organization composed of more than 3,300 business and professional men and women, is opposed to the national compulsory health insurance bill now before the Congress.

We believe that instead of achieving its stated objective of improving our general standards of health service, such legislation inevitably would lower the caliber of medical facilities and services available to each individual citizen.

Great strides are being made, through voluntary health insurance paid for by individuals and through numerous fine health services paid for in part or in full by employers, toward raising the whole level of physical well-being in this country. This is proceeding in an orderly manner, and both individuals and employers are adjusting themselves to the cost as rapidly as possible.

It is well known that no indigent or even low-income person needs to be without competent and adequate medical care, generally speaking. Millions of dollars' worth of such service is given freely each year by doctors and hospitals, while much other such care is provided through privately financed welfare organizations or governmental agencies.

Other millions of dollars are contributed annually by our firms and citizens, voluntarily, for health research in the fields of cancer, heart disease, infantile paralysis, etc. Now, it is proposed that many millions of tax dollars also be appropriated directly for similar purposes.

However, even these huge sums become trifles compared to the billions of dollars which would be required to finance the proposed compulsory health insurance plan. The national economy is in no position to stand such a shock at this time.

Even more important than the fantastic cost involved is the unsatisfactory experience with such measures where attempted in other countries.

We respectfully urge that you withdraw your support of this proposal so that the Congress can devote itself to measures more vital to the national welfare.

Very truly yours,

JOHN F. LAWLOR,
President.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATIONS, 1950

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3997) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will proceed to state the committee amendments.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the heading "Title I—Department of Agriculture—Office of the Secretary—Salaries and expenses," on page 2, line 19, after the word "expenses", to strike out "except that not more than the amount shown in the budget schedule for 1948 may be so transferred from the appropriation for flood control"; and in line 23, after the words "total of", to strike out "$95,764" and insert "$109,280."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Research and Marketing Act of 1946," on page 5, line 3, after the numerals "1946)", to strike out "$6,000,000" and insert "$6,020,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 5, line 4, after the words "in all", to strike out "$19,000,000" and insert "$19,020,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Library, Department of Agriculture," on page 10, line 9, after the word "members", to strike out "$700,000" and insert "$722,400"; and in the same line, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$515,775" and insert "$520,840."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Bureau of Agricultural Economics," on page 10, line 14, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$2,370,000" and insert "$2,419,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 11, line 6, after the word "trends", to strike out "$1,850,000" and insert "$2,180,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Agricultural Research Administration—Special research fund, Department of Agriculture," on page 15, line 21, after the word "Columbia", to strike out "$1,230,000" and insert "$1,242,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Research on strategic and critical agricultural materials," on page 16, line 11, after the word "Columbia", to insert "purchase of not to exceed 60 acres of land in Texas for nursery and other production tests on guayule and construction on such land of buildings costing not in excess of $10,000 each"; and in line 14, after the amendment just above stated, to strike out "$349,000" and insert "$522,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Bureau of Animal Industry—Salaries and expenses," on page 19, line 18, after the word "hatcheries", to strike out "$1,252,000" and insert "$1,302,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 21, line 21, after the word "products", to strike out "$11,995,000" and insert "$12,577,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Bureau of Plant Industry, Soils, and Agricultural Engineering—Salaries and expenses," on page 25, line 12, after the word "crops", to strike out "$2,498,000" and insert "$2,805,000, of which not to exceed $85,000 shall be available for the construction of an office and laboratory building at the Southern Great Plains Field Station, Woodward, Okla."

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Georgia with relation to the eradication of foot-and-mouth disease, whether this appropriation applies to the establishment of any laboratory in New England?

Mr. RUSSELL. It does not carry one dime for the erection of any laboratory dealing with the foot-and-mouth disease. Appropriation is being sought for that purpose in the second deficiency bill.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Is there an appropriation for that purpose in the second deficiency bill?

Mr. RUSSELL. I do not think it is in the bill yet, but funds may be asked for it in the second deficiency bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment on page 25, line 12.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 25, line 19, after the word "plants", to strike out "$2,347,000" and insert "$2,581,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 25, line 22, after the word "control", to strike out "$383,480" and insert "$420,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 26, line 9, after the word "management", to strike out "$1,900,000" and insert "$2,050,000, including not to exceed $16,000 for remodeling two structures at the United States Northern Great Plains Field Station, Mandan, N. Dak., to provide laboratory facilities for investigations on lands to be irrigated under the Missouri Basin development program."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine—Salaries and expenses," on page 28, line 3, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$797,600," and insert "$805,800."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 28, line 21, after the word "application", to strike out "$2,993,000" and insert "$3,921,600: Provided, That $800,000 of this amount shall be available for oriental fruitfly, of which not to exceed $500,000 may be used for contracts with public or private agencies for research without regard to provisions of existing law, and the amounts obligated for contract research shall remain available until expended."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, may I ask the distinguished Senator from Georgia the reason for the increase on page 26, line 10?

Mr. RUSSELL. That is merely a restoration of the budget estimate having to do with dry-land agriculture. It was represented to the committee that, because of difficulties which have been encountered in irrigated lands by reason of the land souring, and because of the waste of water, the budget estimate should be restored, and we merely restored it.

Mr. WHERRY. Is the amount recommended by the committee the budget estimate?

Mr. RUSSELL. It is.

Mr. WHERRY. Was there any new evidence submitted to warrant the increase over the House figure?

Mr. RUSSELL. It is an increase over the House figure of approximately $150,000, but it is the budget estimate.

Mr. WHERRY. Was there any new evidence offered to the committee regarding the matter?

Mr. RUSSELL. A number of witnesses appeared before the subcommittee and testified as to the great need for the classification of soils and the preservation of irrigation water. Some witnesses testified that as much as 50 percent of the water in reservoirs was wasted before it reached the land.

Mr. WHERRY. Does the Senator know whether in the survey made for flood control——

Mr. RUSSELL. I will say to the Senator that this is not a flood-control question.

Mr. WHERRY. I so understand; but I was about to ask the distinguished Senator whether this is strictly applied to the contents of the soil?

Mr. RUSSELL. It is pure research.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the next amendment.

The next amendment was, on page 30, at the beginning of line 2, to strike out "$3,364,000" and insert "$3,564,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 31, line 8, after "(7 U. S. C. 147a)" to strike out "$2,296,000" and insert "$2,325,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Control of emergency outbreaks of insects and plant diseases," on page 31, line 11, after the word "necessary," to strike out "to enable the Secretary, through such agencies as he may determine"; and in line 14, after "(7 U. S. C. 148–148e)", to strike out "and of section 1 of the Forest Pest Control Act (16 U. S. C. 594–1)."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Bureau of Agricultural and Industrial Chemistry—Salaries and expenses," on page 32, line 1, after the word "exceed," to strike out "$242,622" and insert "$251,870."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 32, line 21, after the word "stores," to strike out "$637,550" and insert "$653,500."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 33, line 2, after the word "commodities", to strike out "$5,016,000" and insert "$5,196,000: Provided, That $180,000 of this amount shall be available for research on fats and oils, of which not to exceed $45,000 may be used for contracts with public or private agencies for research without regard to provisions of existing law, and the amounts obligated for contract research shall remain available until expended."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Control of forest pests," on page 34, line 10, after "(7 U. S. C. 147a)", to strike out "$550,000" and insert "$601,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 34, line 11, after "Forest Pest Control Act", to strike out the comma and "surveys: For surveys authorized by the Forest Pest Control Act" and insert a colon and "For carrying out the provisions of the act approved June 25, 1947"; and in line 14, after "(16 U. S. C. Supp. I, 594–1—594–5)", to strike out "$272,300" and insert "$1,000,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 34, at the beginning of line 17, to strike out "$3,595,000" and insert "$3,695,000"; in the same line, after the word "amount", to strike out "$557,850" and insert "$572,850"; in line 23, after the word "States", to strike out "$1,894,550" and insert "$1,945,550"; and in line 25, after the word "and", to strike out "$1,142,600" and insert "$1,176,600."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Forest Service—Salaries and expenses," on page 38, line 10, after the word "forests", to strike out "$24,971,000" and insert "$26,752,000"; and in line 11, after the word "site", to insert "and not to exceed $36,000 shall be available for the construction of one building at Horseshoe Organization Camp, W. Va."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 39, line 7, after the word "watershed", to strike out "shelterbelts"; and in line 12, after the word "elsewhere", to strike out "$2,808,500" and insert "$2,818,500."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Forest development, roads and trails," on page 40, line 1, after the word "administration", to strike out "$9,748,000" and insert "$10,748,000"; and in line 4, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$111,188" and insert "$121,188."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Acquisition of lands for national forests," on page 42, after line 6, to insert:

Superior National Forest: For the acquisition of forest land within the Superior National Forest, Minn., under the provisions of the act approved June 22, 1948 (Public Law 733), $100,000, to remain available until expended.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Flood control," on page 43, line 12, after the word "improvements", to strike out "$8,975,000" and insert "$10,000,000."

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, may I inquire of the distinguished Senator from Georgia if the report of the Secretary of Agriculture has been submitted?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Chair understand the Senator from Nebraska to be objecting to the amendment last stated?

Mr. WHERRY. Yes, I reserve the right to object. I wish to ask the distinguished Senator from Georgia a question because this has to do with the appropriation for flood control. I am for the flood control appropriation, but the Senator well remembers that in the appropriation bill for last year a million dollars was appropriated for additional surveys, and $500,000 was earmarked for a complete investigation of the flood control needs of the Missouri River Basin States. The distinguished Senator from Georgia was very much interested in the legislation, along with the junior Senator from Nebraska. Senator Brooks, of Illinois, was the chairman of the subcommittee, and recommended the appropriation to the full committee, and the full committee recommended it, and the Senate adopted the recommendation.

Mr. RUSSELL. We had no difficulty with that. We did have a little difficulty in the conference.

Mr. WHERRY. That is correct. I deeply appreciated what the conferees did in keeping the provision in the bill. It became the law, and the survey was made commencing last July.

The Senator knows that I appeared before the subcommittee having charge of agricultural appropriations, and asked whether the survey report had been made. At that time I informed the members of the Appropriations Subcommittee, and finally all members of the Committee on Appropriations, that I felt that it was necessary that the report of the survey be made available in order to enable Members of Congress intelligently to appropriate for a flood-control program. The distinguished Senator well knows that in his splendid cooperation he called the Secretary of Agriculture to ask if the report might not be made available. Will the Senator from Georgia state now whether or not the report has been made available?

Mr. RUSSELL. So far as I am advised, the report has not been made available. But as I understand the committee report in the language that appears on page 12, the report will be furnished to Members of Congress from the States affected rather than to the committee, so the Senator from Nebraska would have more knowledge as to whether the report had been made available than would the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. WHERRY. I deeply appreciate the language written in the Senate report, and I thank the members of the committee for including in the report the reference on page 12. But let me point out to the Senator that more than a month ago I called this matter to the attention of the Members of the Senate. I submitted a resolution asking that the distinguished Secretary of Agriculture submit his report to Congress, even before the Committee on Appropriations considered the appropriation for flood control. I sent a copy of the resolution to the Secretary of Agriculture. I did that after the Secretary of Agriculture had apparently—I will not say ignored or refused to furnish the report, but at least he did not furnish a copy of the report I asked for.

I am not the only Senator who wrote and asked him for the report. When this matter was mentioned on the Senate floor nearly a month ago several Senators attempted to get from the Secretary of Agriculture the report of the survey which has been made. I have been informed reliably that the survey has been made. I have been reliably informed that the report has been made, at least in what I would call its yellow-print stages, and the data submitted to several governors. I knew that as early as last January. It seems to me that, in view of the fact that the survey has been made, and that it is of interest to every Member of the Senate who is vitally concerned in the Missouri River Basin, the request having been made more than a month ago, the Secretary of Agriculture should furnish the report, in whatever form it may be, to the Members of the Senate when they are called upon to make appropriations for the fiscal year 1950.

I may say that I do not know how to get the report. I would not care to attempt to write legislation in an appropriation bill in an effort to get the report, because I know it would not carry. We have made similar efforts heretofore. But I appeal to the Members on both sides of the aisle who are interested. It certainly is not in keeping with the spirit of the law; it is not in keeping with the intention of the Committee on Appropriations, of which I am a member, and certainly it is not in keeping with the very definite promise the Secretary of Agriculture made me on April 8 that he would have the report in my hands the following Tuesday. The promise was made on Friday, and it was to be furnished within 3 or 4 days after that.

I ask the distinguished Senator if there is not some way he can suggest so that Members of the Senate can get the survey report.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I am frank to say that, while I have the greatest sympathy with the Senator from Nebraska in the difficulties he has encountered in securing a copy of the report, I know of no language we can write into the bill which would compel the furnishing of the report to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. WHERRY. Would the Senator object to language in the appropriation bill providing that the bill would be held up until we received the report?

Mr. RUSSELL. I would not care to commit myself until I saw the language. I have always believed that Members of Congress are just as much interested in the particular funds they appropriate as is any official of the Government, and I think Members of the Congress are entitled to be kept fully informed as to the progress that is made on the expenditures of all public funds paid out of the Treasury of the United States. But I certainly would have to see the language before I could agree to accept it.

I should like to say that it is incomprehensible to me why these reports have not been furnished. In an effort to cooperate with the Senator from Nebraska, I telephoned the office of the Secretary of Agriculture. The Secretary happened to be out of the city on that day, but I spoke to a gentleman, whose name I do not recall at the moment, who was said to be in charge of the office in the Secretary's absence. He told me that the stencils were being cut at that time so the report could be mimeographed. He further said that there had been some difficulty in assembling the various parts of the report in order that it might be comprehensive. But he stated that active steps were being taken to supply the information to the Members of Congress. I am frankly surprised that the Senator from Nebraska has not received the report, all the more so in view of the fact that the Secretary in his letter written to the committee several weeks ago, when the appropriation bill first came over from the House, took occasion to state that the Department is endeavoring to expedite the completion of survey reports on the watersheds where the Congress has authorized and directed that surveys be made.

I know of no reason why the Senator from Nebraska should not have been furnished the report, and, in my judgment, if the report has been completed the Senator from Nebraska is as much entitled to it as the Governor of Nebraska or anyone else. But I do not know of any steps the Senate could take to see that the report was furnished.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. I trust the bill will not be passed until tomorrow. I do not want to be at all unreasonable or unfair, but——

Mr. RUSSELL. I have no objection to the amendment going over until tomorrow, if the Senator desires.

Mr. WHERRY. I should like to have the amendment passed over until tomorrow. I can conceive that the Department wants to have the several reports compiled into one report. But if the reports are ready I should like to have the opportunity to make at least another request of the Secretary for them, so I may see them before the bill is passed. So I ask that the Senator agree to pass the amendment over until tomorrow.

Mr. RUSSELL. I have no objection to the amendment being passed over until tomorrow.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment will be passed over.

The clerk will state the next committee amendment.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Soil Conservation Service," on page 45, line 21, after the word "installations", to strike out "$994,000" and insert "$1,751,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Land utilization and retirement of submarginal land," on page 46, line 13, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$29,100" and insert "$32,150"; and in line 14, after the word "Columbia", to strike out "$1,124,000" and insert "$1,327,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Production and Marketing Administration—Conservation and use of agricultural land resources," at the top of page 48, to insert the following additional proviso: "Provided further, That none of the funds herein appropriated or made available for the functions assigned to the Agricultural Adjustment Agency pursuant to the Executive Order Numbered 9069, of February 23, 1942, shall be used to pay the salaries or expenses of any regional information employees or any State or county information employees, but this shall not preclude the answering of inquiries or supplying of information to individual farmers"; in line 14, before the word "including", to strike out "$262,500,000" and insert "$300,000,000"; in line 21, after the word "than", to strike out "$2,500" and insert "$1,500"; and on page 49, line 10, after the word "head", to strike out the colon and the following proviso: "Provided further, That the county agricultural conservation committee in any county may allot not to exceed 10 per centum of its allocation for the agricultural conservation program to the Soil Conservation Service for services of its technicians in formulating and carrying out the agricultural conservation program and the funds so allotted shall be utilized by the Soil Conservation Service for technical and other assistance in such county."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Section 32 funds—Exportation and domestic consumption of agricultural commodities," on page 51, line 8, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$500,000" and insert "$150,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "National School Lunch Act," on page 51, line 16, before the word "Provided", to strike out "$75,000,000" and insert "$87,500,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Marketing services," on page 52, line 6, after the word "products", to strike out "$1,864,000" and insert "$1,900,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 52, line 23, after the word "supplies", to strike out "standarization" and insert "standardization."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Farmers' Home Administration," on page 56, line 6, after the numerals "1000", to strike out "1023" and insert "1032."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 57, line 4, after the word "acts", to strike out "on any loans made hereunder."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 57, line 20, after the numerals "1946", to strike out "$23,249,000" and insert "$23,649,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Title II," on page 63, after line 9, to strike out:

Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation of Washington, District of Columbia: Not to exceed $90,000 (to be computed on an accrual basis) of the funds of the Corporation shall be available for administrative expenses, including services performed for the Corporation by other Government agencies (except services and facilities furnished and examinations made by the Farm Credit Administration central office); and said total sum shall be exclusive of interest expense, legal and special services performed on a contract or fee basis, and expenses in connection with the acquisition, operation, maintenance, improvement, protection, or disposition of real or personal property belonging to the Corporation or in which it has an interest: Provided, That for the current fiscal year, the revolving fund in the Treasury of the United States created by section 84 of the act of June 16, 1933 (12 U. S. C. 1148a), for investment in any regional agricultural credit corporation shall be available only in the amount of $25,000,000: Provided further, That notwithstanding any provisions of law to the contrary, in addition to the foregoing the Corporation is authorized to utilize, from the revolving fund created by section 84 of the Farm Credit Act of 1933 (12 U. S. C. 1148a), such sums as may be necessary (a) to make loans, during a period of 4 years, to bona fide fur farmers in accordance with the provisions of section 201 (e) of the Emergency Relief and Construction Act of 1932, as amended (12 U. S. C. 1148), all such loans to carry full personal liability of the borrowers and to be secured by such collateral as is deemed by the Corporation to be necessary to afford reasonable assurance of repayment, the aggregate principal amount of which loans shall not exceed $4,000,000 outstanding at any one time.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. Is there anything in the Commodity Credit Corporation legislation, contained in the amendment, that in any way cancels any of the so-called indebtedness which has been brought to the attention of the Members of the Senate by the distinguished Senator from Delaware [Mr. WILLIAMS]?

Mr. RUSSELL. No, there is nothing affecting the Commodity Credit Corporation, so far as I am aware, except the administrative expenses for the Commodity Credit Corporation.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment on page 63, after line 9.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Title III.—General provisions," on page 65, after line 3, to strike out:

SEC. 301. No funds appropriated or made available under this act shall be used to pay the compensation or expenses of any officer or employee of the Department or any bureau, office, agency, or service of the Department, or any corporation, institution, or association supervised thereby, who makes or approves, or directs or authorizes the approval of, any loan or advance by the Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation of Washington, D. C., unless such loan or advance (1) is for the purpose of protecting the security for or assisting in the collection of a loan or advance theretofore made by the Corporation, or (2) is for use in and confined to a specific area or region in which the Secretary of Agriculture shall have found that such loans for specified agricultural purposes and for limited time periods are necessary because of economic emergencies or production disasters. All loans and advances made pursuant to this section will carry the full personal liability of the borrower, shall be secured by crops or livestock and such additional collateral as is deemed necessary to afford reasonable assurance of repayment, and will be accompanied by a certificate of refusal of the loan or advance by a local bank or the production credit association serving the area: Provided, however, That the Secretary of Agriculture may authorize the Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation to reenter an area or region where an economic emergency or production disaster has occurred, in conformity with the provisions of section 201 (c) of the Emergency Relief and Construction Act of 1932, as amended (title 12, U. S. C. 1148).

The VICE PRESIDENT. That completes the committee amendments.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, there was an amendment approved by the committee, on page 56, in line 20, which because of an error in printing did not appear in the bill. As appears in the report of the committee on page 15, the committee recommends the deletion of the words "either without interest or." Those words appear in line 20 on page 56. But because of a printer's error that language does not appear in the bill as a committee amendment, to be stricken. I ask that that committee amendment be agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I understood the Senator to say that the words stricken are "or either"?

Mr. RUSSELL. "Either without interest or."

Mr. WHERRY. Those words appear in line 20 on page 56.

Mr. RUSSELL. The Senator is correct.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, the bill I inquire of is now open to further amendment?

The VICE PRESIDENT. There is still one committee amendment pending, which was passed over until tomorrow.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I offer the amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 5, at the end of line 21, after the word "development", it is proposed to insert the words "of inspection, grading, standards, and."

On page 5, in line 22, it is proposed to strike out the word "of."

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, the amendment involves no expenditure of money. It purpose is to permit, under the guidance of the Department of Agriculture, the fishing industry to adopt certain inspection, grading and standards which are necessary in the marketing of fish products. I have discussed the amendment with the Senator from Georgia and I understand he is willing to take the amendment to conference.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I have not had an opportunity to look into the amendment with the legal authorities of the Department of Agriculture who deal with fish or shellfish, but in view of the statement made by the Senator from Massachusetts I have no objection to taking the amendment to conference.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I thank the Senator.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment which I ask to have stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 58, line 8, it is proposed to strike out "$6,063,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$7,063,000."

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, the purpose of the amendment is to see to it that the REA, the Rural Electrification Administration, has money enough so it can keep up with the work when it comes to laying out new lines, particularly in some of the more sparsely settled States. I think every Senator is familiar with the fact that although last year, in the Eightieth Congress, the President recommended only $300,000,000 for REA, Congress finally, after we brought the matter to its attention, made an appropriation for $400,000,000.

The trouble was that the money needed for the administration of the act was cut down. I now want to make it very clear that an REA line cannot be built anywhere in the United States unless the engineer first locates every single pole. Blueprints must be drawn up and must be submitted by a competent engineer who is retained by the REA cooperative, but who is approved in Washington by the National Administrator. The result is that last year roughly 167 engineers lost their positions because there was no money with which to pay them.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield.

Mr. LANGER. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. The amendment the Senator from North Dakota is offering is one which I think is of interest to many Senators. I do not want in any way to hinder the Senator from speaking to his amendment if he desires. If he wishes to proceed tonight, very well. My feeling is that possibly before a vote is had on his amendment more Senators would like to hear what the amendment would accomplish. I ask the distinguished Senator from Georgia if it is his intention to continue with the consideration of further amendments tonight? If it is, it seems to me more Senators should be present on the floor. The Senator from North Dakota, as I understand, desires to present a series of amendments.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I have no objection to the Senate taking a recess at this point if the Senator from Nebraska so desires.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I do not particularly care for a recess, unless the Senator from Georgia so wishes. It was my understanding that when the committee amendments had been acted upon other amendments would probably be offered from the floor tomorrow. If the Senate is to continue to consider amendments offered from the floor perhaps we should have a quorum call to bring more Senators to the floor so they may be informed of the nature of the amendments being offered.

Mr. RUSSELL. I have no objection to a quorum call being had at this time, but I would say that the attendance at this time is pretty fair. There are at present on the floor the number of Senators who are usually present on such an occasion. But if the Senator from Nebraska desires the Senate to take a recess I shall be glad to make a motion to that effect, if there is nothing on the Executive Calendar to be considered.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. Would it be possible to agree upon the amendments which are not in dispute, and pass over until tomorrow the amendments which are to be offered by the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. RUSSELL. The Senate has completed the committee amendments, with the exception of one passed over, and the Senator from North Dakota is now offering amendments to the general bill.

Mr. FERGUSON. I beg the Senator's pardon. I did not know that the committee amendments had been adopted. Would it be possible to have the amendments of the Senator from North Dakota printed tonight so we may have them on our desks in the morning in order to study them and become familiar with them?

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I always try to be as agreeable as possible when I am charged with responsibility for legislation on the floor of the Senate. I cannot always accept amendments which Senators offer. We have made very fine progress with the committee amendments this afternoon, and if Senators wish to recess at this early hour I have no objection. I thought we might proceed and make such progress as we could.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield so I may ask the Senator from North Dakota a question?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. I ask the Senator from North Dakota how many amendments he proposes to offer?

Mr. LANGER. I have three amendments, all dealing with the REA.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Only one amendment can be pending, which is the amendment which has been offered. The others may be printed and lie on the table.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, in view of the fact that it is agreeable to the Senator from North Dakota to postpone consideration of his amendments until tomorrow, I suggest to the distinguished Senator from Georgia that I think the suggestion of the Senator from Michigan that they be printed and lie on the table would probably expedite progress. I believe it would possibly work to our advantage to have the amendments printed and taken up tomorrow.

Mr. RUSSELL. Does the Senator from Nebraska think that would save time?

Mr. WHERRY. I am perfectly willing to proceed further this evening, but I think it would save time to have the amendments printed and lie on the table, and take them up tomorrow.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I should like to submit an amendment and have it go over until tomorrow for consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator may have his amendment printed and ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. PEPPER. On page 39, line 12, I should like to increase the figure of $2,818,500 by $35,000.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That is a committee amendment which has already been agreed to. The Senator's amendment could be considered only by reconsidering the vote by which the committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PEPPER. I submit an amendment to lie on the table and be printed, on page 39, line 12, to increase the figure of $2,818,500 by $35,000.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment cannot be offered unless the committee amendment is reconsidered.

Mr. RUSSELL. If the Senator from Florida serves notice of a motion to reconsider the vote by which the committee amendment was agreed to, his amendment will then be in order, will it not?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I serve notice that I shall make a motion to reconsider the action by which the Senate adopted the figure of $2,818,500, on page 39, line 12, and will offer an amendment, if the motion to reconsider is favorably acted upon, to increase the figure by $35,000.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator from Georgia yield to me?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. LONG. The Senator will recall that I appeared before the subcommittee on behalf of the continuation of the pecan experiment station near Shreveport, La. That subject is referred to on page 81 of a memorandum on House bill 3997. I ask the Senator whether the action of his committee in increasing the amount on page 28, line 21, contemplates the continuation of the pecan experiment station.

Mr. RUSSELL. It does. The committee was advised by the Department that if the House reduction below the budget estimate were sustained, it would be necessary to close the pecan laboratory at Shreveport, La.; but the action of the Senate committee in restoring the budget estimate will keep the laboratory in operation, provided the other body sees fit to agree to the action taken by the Senate. The committee amendment has already been adopted by the Senate.

Mr. LONG. In view of the fact that it is very vital to an industry in my State, I thank the Senator for his consideration of the item.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. Knowing the great interest which the able Senator from Georgia, who is in charge of the bill, has always taken in the school-lunch program, I invite his attention to the committee amendment on page 51, which was adopted. The amount approved was $87,500,000, which is $12,500,000 in excess of the amount provided for the fiscal year 1949. I ask the able Senator whether he believes that the increase made by the committee is sufficient. Does he believe that the appropriation recommended is large enough to meet the school-lunch needs of the country?

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, since the Senator puts the question in that way, an honest answer, of course, would have to be "no." It does not meet all the needs of the school-lunch program. However, it is the largest amount that has ever been recommended by either body of the Congress for the school-lunch program, and I think it will allow for a healthy expansion and development of that program. There is no doubt that as much as $115,000,000 could be expended on the school-lunch program.

Mr. PEPPER. Until I confer with some of my colleagues who are interested in the same point, I do not wish to make a motion at this time to reconsider that item, but I should like to give notice of the possibility of a motion tomorrow to reconsider the item of $87,500,000 in line 16, on page 51.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, in view of the statements which have been made, and the fine progress we have made with the committee amendments, even though notice has been given that motions will be made to reconsider two of them, I think it might be well to take a recess at this time.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. LANGER] so that he may have his amendments printed and ordered to lie on the table?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, on behalf of the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. HUMPHREY], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. JOHNSTON], and myself, I send to the desk three amendments and ask that they be printed and lie on the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendments will be printed and lie on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3704) to provide additional revenue for the District of Columbia; agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. MCMILLAN of South Carolina, Mr. SMITH of Virginia, Mr. JONES of Missouri, Mr. BATES of Massachusetts, and Mr. O'HARA of Minnesota, were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. RUSSELL. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, and withdrawing the nomination of Mon C. Wallgren, of Washington, to be chairman of the National Security Resources Board, which nominating messages were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there be no reports of committees, the clerk will state the nominations on the Executive Calendar.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Robert E. Tehan to be United States district judge for the eastern district of Wisconsin.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

UNITED STATES MARSHALS

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of W. Bruce Matthews to be United States marshal for the District of Columbia.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Joseph L. Wisniewski to be United States marshal for the eastern district of Michigan.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed; and, without objection, the President will be notified forthwith of all nominations confirmed this day.

That completes the Executive Calendar.

RECESS

Mr. RUSSELL. I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 27 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Wednesday, May 18, 1949, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

TUESDAY, MAY 17, 1949

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Lord our God, how manifold are Thy works; in wisdom hast Thou made them all.

In these confused days we await Thy will concerning us. In our hopes and aspirations be Thou our anchor, for without Thy guiding hand our labors may become a delusion and our devotion a weakness.

Today we honor one who has defended human rights against tyranny and pagan forces. In the light of his magnanimous and patient leadership, enable us to assert our everlasting obligations and swing our country on the right side of every question, as persuasive as truth and as uncompromising as justice. O give us a mighty uprush of courage as we challenge any who fail to call Thee Lord and Master, and Thine shall be the glory and ours the blessing. Through Christ. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McDaniel, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate agrees to the amendment of the House to a bill of the Senate of the following title:

S. 1704. An act to strengthen and improve the organization and administration of the Department of State, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed, with an amendment in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 2361. An act to provide for the reorganization of Government agencies, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendment to the foregoing bill, requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. MCCLELLAN, Mr. EASTLAND, Mr. HOEY, Mr. MCCARTHY, and Mr. IVES to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 3704. An act to provide additional revenue for the District of Columbia.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the foregoing bill, requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. HUNT, Mr. MCGRATH, Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina, Mr. MCCARTHY, and Mr. SCHOEPPEL to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2632) entitled "An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, and for other purposes."

The message also announced that the Vice President had appointed Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina and Mr. LANGER members of the joint select committee on the part of the Senate, as provided for in the act of August 5, 1939, entitled "An act to provide for the disposition of certain records of the United States Government," for the disposition of executive papers referred to in the report of the Archivist of the United States numbered 49–12.

FEPC HEARINGS

Mr. POWELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the subcommittee holding hearings on the bill H. R. 4435, as well as other bills, may sit during general debate today.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. KEOGH asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances.

Mr. GORSKI of New York asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a resolution.

Mr. BATTLE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial.

Mr. REDDEN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

DR. DAVID J. PRICE

Mr. FENTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. FENTON. Mr. Speaker, on May 16 Secretary of Agriculture Brannan presented a superior service award to Dr. David J. Price, of the Bureau of Agricultural and Industrial Chemistry, for outstanding service to agriculture in the development of methods for the prevention of grain-dust explosions and the prevention of fires on the farms and in the rural communities of the United States.

Dr. Price recently completed 37 consecutive years of Federal service and is a native of Ashland, Pa., which is in the district I have the honor to represent. He has made distinguished contributions in the chemical engineering field and is an internationally recognized authority on the prevention of dust explosions in industrial plants and in grain milling and processing operations.

Dr. Price served as president of the National Fire Protection Association from 1942 to 1944 and has rendered valuable assistance to the firemen of the Nation in the development and application of safety measures for fire-fighting operations.

The award to Dr. Price by the Secretary of Agriculture is a well-deserved recognition of the splendid services rendered by one of the Department of Agriculture's distinguished research scientists.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HALLECK asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial from this morning's Washington Post entitled "Saving the Taft-Hartley Act."

Mr. COLE of New York (at the request of Mr. HALLECK) was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an article by Admiral Halsey.

Mr. HARVEY asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial.

Mr. GOLDEN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a report of the miners' welfare and retirement fund.

Mr. FELLOWS asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial.

GERHART EISLER

Mr. FELLOWS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maine?

There was no objection.

Mr. FELLOWS. Mr. Speaker, Gerhart Eisler, the convicted criminal, the friend and companion of fraud and perjury, bail jumper, stowaway, and fugitive from justice, our No. 1 Communist, and exponent of bloody revolution, appeared at our oldest university by invitation of its authorities to inspire youth in the nobility of human service, the dignity of the individual, the blessedness of Christian sacrifice and living, the brotherhood of man, and the love and glory of God and got paid for it.

I hope the Judiciary Committee will act favorably on H. R. 10, the Hobbs bill.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FELLOWS. I yield.

Mr. RANKIN. What college was that?

Mr. FELLOWS. Harvard.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Maine has expired.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CHURCH asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a dedication address by Dr. Scheele at the laying of the cornerstone of Goldblatt Memorial Hospital, Chicago, Ill.

Mr. HORAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and to include an editorial from this morning's Washington Post.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Mr. D'EWART. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may be granted leave of absence from May 20 to May 27, inclusive, on account of official business.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. FARRINGTON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a resolution, together with his comments with respect to the labor situation in Hawaii.

Mr. HAGEN asked and was granted permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an article concerning Concordia College Choir, of Moorhead, Minn.

Mr. LEONARD W. HALL asked and was granted permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a speech by former Congressman Hamilton Fish.

ADDITIONAL CLERK HIRE FOR CONGRESSMEN

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, the morning RECORD states that yesterday the Representative from New Jersey [Mrs. NORTON], chairman of the Committee on House Administration, made the statement that I was reading the paper when she was putting through that $3,000 additional for Congressmen's secretary-hiring fund.

Now, I try to keep track of what is going on in the House, especially when I am on the floor. I was here, on the House floor and I moved down in front, but maybe I am like that Hague machine in New Jersey. They tried to keep track of what was going on in New Jersey, but they did not know what was happening election day last Tuesday. I had no way of knowing what the Member was going to bring to the floor. I do not know how she can say I was reading the paper when I am sitting over there and she is standing down here on the left of the Speaker, addressing the Speaker with her back to the House. Does she have eyes in the back of her head? Somebody misinformed the lady and they should not do that. When the Boss Hague political machine in her district and State does not know what is happening to it, she should not blame me if I do not know what she is doing down in the well with her back to the House and mumbling about a bill when all we expect is a privileged resolution.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN] has expired.

SPECIAL ORDER GRANTED

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that today, after the legislative business of the day and any other special orders, I may address the House for 20 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wiscon [Mr. BYRNES]?

There was no objection.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT NATIONAL MEMORIAL PARK

Mr. LEMKE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. LEMKE]?

There was no objection.

Mr. LEMKE. Mr. Speaker, on Saturday, June 4, next, the Theodore Roosevelt National Memorial Park will be dedicated at Medora, N. Dak.

On behalf of the Governor of the State of North Dakota, the Greater North Dakota Association, and all the people of the State of North Dakota, I wish to extend to each and every one of you a most hearty invitation and welcome to attend this dedication.

I want to say that I have personally heard Theodore Roosevelt say that but for having lived in North Dakota he never would have been President of these United States. I wish to say to my Democratic friends that you should take note of that, because unless Theodore Roosevelt had become President of the United States, we perhaps never would have heard of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

So, it is proper for both Republicans and Democrats to join in this dedication, paying tribute to a great American. I sincerely hope to see most of you there on that occasion. You will get a real opportunity to see the best of the West. You will also see a national park that is different from any of the others.

Most of the parks display their beauty and grandeur above the ground. Here, however, you will find it below in a sunken valley that reminds you of a sunken city. It is a different kind of beauty, but one that I believe will interest you as much, if not more, than that of any other national park.

I again extend to you a most hearty and welcome invitation to attend this dedication.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from North Dakota has expired.

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently there is no quorum present.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

By unanimous consent, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

GEN. LUCIUS D. CLAY

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints the following Members as a committee to escort General Clay into the Chamber: the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK], the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. VINSON], and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN].

The Chair declares the House in recess at this time, subject to the call of the Chair.

RECESS

Accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 37 minutes p. m.) the House stood in recess, subject to the call of the Chair.

During the recess the following occurred:

Gen. Lucius D. Clay entered the Hall of the House of Representatives at 12 o'clock and 42 minutes p. m., and was escorted to the Speaker's rostrum by the committee appointed for that purpose.

The SPEAKER. Members of the House of Representatives and your guests, it has been my high privilege to present many distinguished guests to this House. I never had more pleasure in my life in presenting anyone than I do in presenting our distinguished guest today. An old friend has come home from his labors, which have been stupendous and great. He has served not only you and me, but his imprint has been and will be left upon world history.

I present to you a man of the many men I have seen who I think is as able as any man I ever met in the Army or out. It is a high privilege and a distinct pleasure to present to you Gen. Lucius D. Clay. [Applause.]

General CLAY. Mr. Speaker, honorable Members of the House of Representatives, I am honored beyond measure to be here today. The reception which I have received today has made it very difficult for me to express myself. I only knew last night that I was going to have an opportunity to appear here. I have no prepared talk, and I hope that by the sincerity of what I say I may make up for my lack of preparation.

I know that my appearance here today is not a personal tribute; it is a tribute to the men and women who have represented America in Germany and who have been responsible for the carrying out of our American policy. [Applause.] It is meant for the American soldier, and above all, for our gallant airmen who flew the airlift to Berlin under every type of weather, under minimum safety standards; and some, indeed, gave their lives to the success of that effort. [Applause.]

It would be impossible in a few brief moments to report to you on the events of the last 4 years in Germany; I should like to make a few comments: For 2 years we tried desperately to make the four-power government of Germany set up at Yalta and Potsdam, work as an example of international cooperation. We failed, because we found that one of the four powers had but two objectives in Germany: The one of those was to exact the maximum in reparations, and the other was to establish the type and kind of government which could be controlled or at least exploited to the full by a police state. That was not our objective in Germany. Yes; Germany had been an enemy nation, and we had laid down the price that Germany had to pay for having waged aggressive war, but it was expressed in specific terms, and it was to be executed under a rule of law and not a rule of caprice.

We found that the three western occupying powers believing in true democratic principles had to go alone. However, it was not until there had been established by the security pact a feeling of security throughout the world that conditions were finally created in which the three western occupying powers here in Washington, a little over a month ago, agreed to a constructive policy which would give the German people an opportunity to earn their right to return to the comity of nations. The German people have responded, and their parliamentary council has adopted a constitution for western Germany which guarantees not only free, electoral processes and procedures, but also the basic rights of the individual. The Germans have cast their die for a government which stands for the dignity of man as an individual.

It is impossible to forget, and it is difficult to forgive. We all remember that Germany started the aggressive war which has brought the world to the conditions which we have seen during the past 4 years. One has only to revisit Buchenwald and Dachau to remember the extreme cruelty of the Nazi regime. It is difficult, however, for us living here in this free country to realize the moral deterioration of a people who come under a dictatorship, under a secret police, when one's next-door neighbor may, in deed, be an informer on one's daily activities. A people who have been subject to such a regime cannot be restored to democracy overnight nor by oppression; they can be led back to democracy. Today they need the helping hand of the freedom-loving democratic people of the world.

I saw in Berlin the spirit and soul of a people reborn. Two and one-half million Germans had a second opportunity, and few people in this world have a second opportunity to choose freedom. They had foregone their first opportunity; they did not forego their second opportunity. [Applause.] Men, women, and children in that city took their stand, and they lived through a cold and hard winter with steadfast spirit, and some of that spirit has spread throughout Germany. It may, indeed, be the spirit that lights a flame for freedom in Germany that may grow with the years. It is our only hope to a peaceful and stable Europe that we encourage that flame, and that we try to develop a Germany which sees Germany not alone but as a part of a new European concept devoted to common economic effort and to a common love for freedom. [Applause.]

I could not leave this Chamber without expressing my own appreciation for the friendship and confidence which I have received from that grand and great American who is your Speaker. [Applause, the Members rising.]

At 12 o'clock and 53 minutes p. m., Gen. Lucius D. Clay retired from the Hall of the House of Representatives.

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, at 12 o'clock and 55 minutes p. m., the House was called to order by the Speaker.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the proceedings had during the recess be printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

CALENDAR WEDNESDAY

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the business in order on Calendar Wednesday of this week be dispensed with.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION AND LABOR

Mr. BARDEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the subcommittee of the Committee on Education and Labor be permitted to sit during this week while the House is engaged in general debate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. LANE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances and include in one a radio address.

Mr. BURNSIDE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. THOMPSON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances and include articles.

Mr. BUCKLEY of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and include an address delivered by Stanislaw Mikolajczyk. I am informed by the Public Printer that this will exceed two pages of the RECORD and will cost $243.75, but I ask that it be printed notwithstanding that fact.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, notwithstanding the cost, the extension may be made.

There was no objection.

Mr. TAURIELLO asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial appearing in the Buffalo Courier.

Mr. DONOHUE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. DOYLE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in three instances and include editorials.

Mrs. DOUGLAS asked and was given permission to extend her remarks in the RECORD in three instances and include certain excerpts.

Mr. BENNETT of Florida asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an article.

Mr. TALLE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a newspaper article.

Mr. LECOMPTE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a set of resolutions of the Russell E. Marshall Post of the American Legion.

Mr. LODGE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a newspaper article.

GEN. LUCIUS D. CLAY

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, we have just had a visit from a great soldier-statesman, known to and honored by all the world, who has spent the youth of his life in the service of his country, and now comes home to receive the thanks and the plaudits of the multitude before retiring to private life.

Mr. Speaker, this distinguished American is a native son of Georgia, and Georgia and all Georgians are justly proud of him. With open arms and hearts of love we welcome him back to his native soil.

SPECIAL ORDER VACATED

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the special order I have for today be vacated.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

SPECIAL ORDER GRANTED

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan (at the request of Mr. HALLECK) was given permission to address the House for 10 minutes on Thursday next at the conclusion of the legislative program of the day and following any special orders heretofore entered.

There was no objection.

PEERLESS OIL CO.

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 656) for the relief of the Peerless Oil Co., of Brooklyn, N. Y.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the Peerless Oil Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., the sum of $2,320.03. Such sum is claimed by such corporation to be equitably due and payable to it by reason of an increase in the price of oil sold by it from April to June 1942 to the Department of War under authority of Office of Price Administration amendments 4 and 10 to Revised Price Schedule No. 88. Such increase was incorporated by subsequent amendment into contract Tps 45255 for the purchase of such oil as aforesaid. The payment of such sum shall be in full settlement of all claims under such contract. No part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 4373) for the relief of Ray G. Schneyer and Dorothy J. Schneyer.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $1,500 to Ray G. Schneyer; to pay the sum of $500 to Dorothy G. Schneyer, both of Whittier, Calif., in full settlement of all claims against the United States for personal injuries, hospital and medical expenses, and property damage, and loss of wages sustained as the result of an accident involving a United States Army vehicle on Rosemead Boulevard, Rosemead, Calif., on September 30, 1944: Provided, That no part of the amounts appropriated in this Act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with these claims, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

THOMAS A. PICKETT

The Clerk called the bill (S. 392) authorizing the issuance of a patent in fee to Thomas A. Pickett.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Ragland, Sr., in full satisfaction of his claim against the United States for work done by him under two contracts Nos. 1-1P-5554 and 1-1P-5688, dated, respectively, December 14, 1935, and February 17, 1936, on projects 1T1 and 2E2, Shenandoah-Great Smoky Mountains Parkway; and

Whereas on March 9, 1944, such bill was referred, pursuant to section 151 of the Judicial Code, to the Court of Claims by Senate Resolution 256, which directed the court to proceed in accordance with such section and report to the Senate, irrespective of any statute of limitations or any administrative requirement or contractual provision relative to notice of protest as to filing claim therefor, giving such findings of fact and conclusions thereon as shall be sufficient to inform Congress of the nature of the claim, legal or equitable, of the said C. A. Ragland against the United States, and the amount, if any, legally or equitably due from the United States to the claimant; and

Whereas the Court of Claims has considered such claim pursuant to such resolution and has certified on March 2, 1948, to the Senate its findings of fact, conclusions thereon, and its opinion on the several items of such claim: Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co., of Raleigh, N. C., as administrator of the estate of C. A. Ragland, Sr., deceased, (1) the sum of $9,860.35, the amount to which the Court of Claims found the said First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. entitled, the payment of such sum being in full satisfaction of the claim of the said First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. against the United States for compensation for work performed by the late C. A. Ragland, Sr., under contracts Nos. 1-1P-5554 and 1-1P-5688, on projects 1T1 and 2E2, Shenandoah-Great Smoky Mountains Parkway.

SADAKO TAKAGI

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 623) for the relief of Sadako Takagi.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That notwithstanding any provision of law excluding persons of certain races from admission to the United States for permanent residence, the alien Sadako Takagi, of Kyoto, Japan, shall be admitted to the United States for permanent residence, if she is otherwise admissible under the immigration laws.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following: "That in the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws the provisions of section 13 (c) of the Immigration Act of 1924, as amended, which excludes from admission to the United States persons who are ineligible to citizenship, shall not hereafter apply to Sadako Takagi of Kyoto, Japan, financée of Lt. William M. Marutani, of Chicago, Ill., presently a tubercular patient at the Veterans' Administration Hospital in Waukesha, Wis., and a retired United States Army officer of World War II, and that if otherwise admissible under the immigration laws she shall be granted admission to the United States for permanent residence upon application hereafter filed."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

HOY C. WONG

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 1042) for the relief of Hoy C. Wong.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, the alien Hoy C. Wong, who served in the military forces of the United States, shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence and shall be permitted to become a naturalized citizen of the United States without complying with any other provision of the naturalization laws by taking before any naturalization court the naturalization oath required by law to be taken in open court, before admission to citizenship, by persons who have petitioned for naturalization.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following: "That in the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws, the alien Hoy C. Wong, who served in the military forces of the United States, shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of November 14, 1946, the date on which he last entered the United States as a temporary visitor.

"SEC. 2. Upon the enactment of this act, the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the quota for Chinese persons of the first year that such quota number is available."

CENTRAL BANK, ASSIGNEE OF JOHN C. WILLIAMS

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 1009) for the relief of the Central Bank, a California corporation, as assignee of John C. Williams, an individual operating under the fictitious name and trade style of Central Machine Works, of Oakland, Calif.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Navy Department be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to receive, consider, and pay the claims of Central Bank, a California corporation, as assignee of John C. Williams, an individual operating under the fictitious name and trade style of Central Machine Works, of Oakland, California, arising under Navy Department, Bureau of Ships contract NObs 10824, amounting to $30,644.39, by reason of claimant's failure to comply with the provisions of article 5 (b) of said contract: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 per centum thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with these claims, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 3, strike all after the enacting clause down to the colon in line 1, page 2, and insert in lieu thereof "That the Navy Department be, and is hereby, authorized to waive compliance by the Central Bank, a California corporation, as assignee of John C. Williams, an individual operating under the fictitious name and trade style of Central Machine Works, of Oakland, Calif., with the requirement of article 5 (b) of the Navy Department, Bureau of Ships contract NObs-10824 that estimates of the cost of performing change orders be submitted within 10 days of the receipt of such orders or within such further time as the naval inspector may allow in writing within said 10-day period."

ALVIN G. PATTON

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 1297) for the relief of Alvin G. Patton.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Alvin G. Patton, Los Angeles, Calif., the sum of $221.13. Such sum represents payment for 189 hours of accumulated annual leave earned by the said Alvin G. Patton while employed under contract N244s-37735, dated September 1, 1943, in the district security office, headquarters, Eleventh Naval District, San Diego, Calif., for the period beginning September 1, 1943, and ending June 30, 1944. Funds were not available after June 30, 1944, to renew such contract, and, therefore, the services of the said Alvin G. Patton were terminated without an opportunity for him to take such accumulated leave.

With the following committee amendment:

At the end of bill add ": Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ARTHUR HOLBERT ET AL.

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 3138) for the relief of Arthur Holbert; the estate of Ernest L. Gass, deceased; and the estate of James L. Thomas, deceased.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $10,000 to Arthur Holbert, of Jefferson County, Tenn.; the sum of $10,000 to the estate of Ernest L. Gass, deceased, late of Jefferson County, Tenn.; and the sum of $10,000 to the estate of James L. Thomas, deceased, late of Jefferson County, Tenn., in full settlement of all claims against the United States for personal injuries, medical and hospital expenses sustained by the said Arthur Holbert and Ernest L. Gass, and for the death of James L. Thomas sustained as a result of being shot by M. H. Rogers and A. E. Leake, investigators, Alcohol Tax Unit Internal Revenue Department, in the foothills of English Mountains, Jefferson County, Tenn., on April 11, 1946: Provided, That no part of any sum appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with the claim satisfied by the payment of such sum, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, line 5, strike out "$10,000" and insert "$8,396."

Page 1, line 6, strike out "$10,000" and insert "$2,617.60."

Page 1, line 8, strike out "$10,000" and insert "$7,500."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

LOUIS BROWN

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 4559) for the relief of Louis Brown.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $1,000 to Louis Brown, of Steelton, Pa., in full settlement of all claims against the United States for personal injuries, medical and hospital expenses, and loss of earnings sustained as a result of an accident involving a United States Army vehicle at Nome, Tex., on August 12, 1940: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof, shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

ORREN J. LUCHT

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 2252) for the relief of Orren J. Lucht.

Mr. DOLLIVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. DOLLIVER and Mr. LICHTENWALTER objected, and, under the rule, the bill was recommitted to the Committee on the Judiciary.

JACOB GROSS, A MINOR

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 3127) to authorize the admission into the United States of Jacob Gross, a minor.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of State be, and he is hereby, authorized to instruct the proper United States consular officer in Paris, France, to issue an immigration visa to Jacob Gross, a minor orphaned grandchild of Rabbi Solomon Horovitz, of New York, N. Y.: Provided, That the child is otherwise eligible for immigration into the United States.

SEC. 2. Upon the issuance of a visa to the said Jacob Gross, the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the quota for Rumania for the first year that such quota number is available.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZING SALE OF CERTAIN LAND IN ALASKA TO FORD J. DALE, OF FAIRBANKS, ALASKA

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 1790) to restore certain land in Alaska to the public domain and to authorize its sale to Ford J. Dale, of Fairbanks, Alaska.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Ford J. Dale of Fairbanks, Alaska, is hereby authorized, for a period of one year from and after the effective date of this act, to apply for the purchase of, and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to restore to the public domain and convey to Ford J. Dale for trade and manufacturing purposes the following-described land situated in Alaska:

Beginning at post No. 1, which is located on the west right-of-way line of the Richardson Highway, approximately two one-hundredths mile north of post 183; thence northerly along said right-of-way line, a distance of approximately six hundred feet to post numbered 2; thence westerly at right angles approximately two hundred feet to post numbered 3, which is located on the east shore of Paxon Lake; thence southerly along the shore of the lake approximately six hundred and fifty feet to post numbered 4; thence due east a distance of approximately two hundred feet to post numbered 1 and point of beginning, said tract to embrace approximately five acres located in approximate latitude 62 degrees 50 feet north and longitude 145 degrees 30 feet west.

SEC. 2. That the conveyance shall be made upon the payment by said Ford J. Dale for the land at its reasonable appraised price of not less than $1.25 per acre, to be fixed by the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That the conveyance hereby authorized shall not include any land covered by a valid existing right initiated under the public land laws: Provided further, That the coal and other mineral deposits in the land shall be reserved to the United States, together with the right to prospect for, mine, and remove the same under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 2, line 12, after the word "west", insert "Provided, That the cost of any survey necessary to the issuance of patent shall be paid by Ford J. Dale prior to the commencement of such survey."

Page 2, line 24, after the word "under", insert "applicable laws and."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZING THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR TO ISSUE A PATENT IN FEE TO L. J. HAND

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 4261) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to issue to L. J. Hand a patent in fee to certain lands in the State of Mississippi.

Mr. DOLLIVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. That completes the call of bills on the Private Calendar.

REORGANIZATION OF GOVERNMENT AGENCIES

Mr. DAWSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 2361) to provide for the reorganization of Government agencies, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. DAWSON, HOLIFIELD, MCCORMACK, HOFFMAN of Michigan, and RICH.

ASSISTING STATES IN COLLECTING SALES AND USE TAXES ON CIGARETTES

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 190 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 195) to assist States in collecting sales and use taxes on cigarettes. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 2 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Ways and Means, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, this rule makes in order the consideration of the bill H. R. 195, reported unanimously, I understand, from the Committee on Ways and Means. It is the so-called cigarette bill. The House passed a similar bill in the last Congress, but unfortunately it did not pass in the other body.

The purpose of this bill is to assist the States in collecting State-imposed sales and use taxes on cigarettes. The bill provides that—

Any person selling or disposing of cigarettes in interstate commerce whereby such cigarettes are shipped to other than a distributor licensed by or located in a State taxing the sale or use of cigarettes shall, not later than the 10th day of each month, forward to the tobacco tax administrator of the State into which such shipment is made, a memorandum or a copy of the invoice covering each and every such shipment of cigarettes made during the previous calendar month into said State; the memorandum or invoice in each case to include the name and address of the person to whom the shipment was made, the brand, and the quantity thereof.

Mr. Speaker, there is a general demand for this legislation, because there are several States that have no tax on cigarettes, and the mail-order houses find it profitable to send great quantities of cigarettes into those States. The dealers in those States resell them indirectly via mail and on the "q. t." basis without in any way paying a tax thereon. The States lose a great deal of revenue and so does the Federal Government. Consequently, there is a general demand for this legislation, as I said before.

The bill will be taken up under the general rules of the House. This is an open rule, and it provides for 2 hours of general debate.

I do not believe it is necessary for me to say anything more about the bill because I know it will be fully explained by the gentlemen representing the Committee on Ways and Means and also the gentleman who originally introduced the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I now yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BROWN].

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may use, and ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, as the gentleman from Illinois has explained, House Resolution 190 makes in order, with 2 hours of general debate, the consideration of H. R. 195, a bill introduced by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JENKINS], which was reported unanimously from the Committee on Ways and Means. It is for the purpose of assisting the States in collecting sales and use taxes on cigarettes.

This is a very meritorious measure, and one in which there is a widespread national interest.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. BURNSIDE].

Mr. BURNSIDE. Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to this bill. I firmly believe that it is bad in principle and that it is not the kind of legislation to which this Congress should direct itself. For the first time in history this Congress is being approached by the States with a confession by those States that they cannot deal with their own citizens. The great State of Ohio has come here, according to the gentleman who introduced this bill, and said, "Our citizens will not obey our cigarette-tax law as we construe it. We need the help of the Federal Government to compel interstate shippers to tell us who these citizens are. We wish the Federal Government to force the shippers to act as revenue agents of our State so that we may be informed of which of our citizens has chosen to buy in the interstate market rather than the local market, and then we wish to attempt to collect taxes from those persons." It seems to me that this is a violation of the entire principle of Federal-State relationship. State taxation has been regarded by the States as solely their own business and of no concern of the Federal Government whatever. I am sure that the States would resent Federal interference and instruction as to what type of tax structure they must have. Yet, here we have the spectacle of the States asking the Congress to help enforce their tax laws. Of course, what we are being asked to do today is to say that we approve of the State sales taxes and use taxes on cigarettes and that we will lend the aid of this Congress and the executive branch of the Federal Government to help collect those taxes. We are being asked to make available the services of Federal district attorneys to prosecute violations of this law and of the FBI to prepare cases for trial. I, for one, am unwilling to do this. I believe Congress should not be asked to pass judgment on the tax structure of the various States of the Union. It should not be asked either to say that it approves of the tax structure of the State of Ohio or that it disapproves of it. It should not be asked to interfere with that tax structure in any way, either to hinder or to help. However, if we are to pass on that subject—and I cannot see what else is proposed here—I cannot approve of the State cigarette taxes. They are sales and excise taxes on necessities, and I am opposed to those taxes. I was elected on the platform of my party, which states that it is opposed to sales taxes. I believe in that platform, and I will not knowingly do anything to aid in furthering the spread of such taxes. They impose a disproportionate burden on the poor. The present bill, if passed and effective in accomplishing the objectives of its supporters, will make it impossible for the workingman in tax States to escape the consequences of local high taxes, or of local so-called fair-trade laws, which make him pay more for cigarettes, which to him are a necessity of life. That cigarettes are a necessity to smokers cannot be doubted. We spent millions getting them to our armed forces and they are part of Marshall-plan aid.

I have before me a copy of the magazine the Tobacco Leaf which is a vigorous supporter of this Jenkins bill. It has in its issue of May 7 an editorial called Sharpshooters on the March, headlined "They are making a determined and methodical fight against every form of law that makes price cutting difficult." The editorial is equally divided between support of the Jenkins bill and the so-called fair-trade laws on cigarettes in the States. I quote from the editorial:

> Now the Miller-Tydings law, the fair-trade practice laws, the unfair-trade practice laws, and the Jenkins bill have but one thing in common; all of them are intended to make price cutting more difficult.

Gentlemen, I am not interested in making price cutting more difficult. I believe in the way of free competition. I believe it will result in cheaper products for consumers. It will increase the real income of the American people. I do not believe in artificial restraints designed to keep prices high and to prevent the lowering of prices. Accordingly, the whole purpose of this bill is one which runs counter to the entire philosophy in which I believe. I am opposed to sales taxes on necessities. I am opposed to high prices on necessities of life and I am opposed to the Federal Government interfering in the tax structure of the States.

Furthermore, if I am to be asked and compelled to consider the tax structure of my neighboring State, the great State of Ohio, I may ask, Why it is that that State which is so eager to have the Federal Government assume part of its own burdens of tax collections, does not adopt a form of taxation which is not so easily avoided? Since the suggestions of the Congress have been invited by the Jenkins bill, I believe it is appropriate to suggest the State of Ohio should adopt a graduated income tax which it has not seen fit to do rather than this inequitable sales tax which singles out a necessity of life and imposes heavy taxation upon it. It is generally conceded by tax experts that an income tax is to be much preferred to a sales tax. I would have thought that this was a matter upon which the State of Ohio, for example, was entitled to do whatever it saw fit without comment by me or by any other Member of this body. However, that State has sent its tax commissioner here to ask the aid of the Congress and voluntarily submitted to this Congress the question of whether the Federal Government should aid the State of Ohio to collect this tax or whether the State of Ohio should be limited to its own devices. I say let the State of Ohio collect or not collect the present tax or seek other means of taxation which do not require the aid of the Federal Government. I will not do anything to increase the burden of taxation by way of a sales tax on necessities except in a case of absolute necessity. No such necessity is shown here.

In addition, the bill before us is not only a precedent shattering bill, it is one as to whose constitutionality there is substantial doubt. I have in my possession a brief filed before the Ways and Means Committee of the House by Judge Thurman Arnold, former judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. We in West Virginia know him well. He was at one time dean of our law school at the University of West Virginia. Judge Arnold's brief points out with citation of specific cases that the Jenkins bill proposes to aid the States in collecting sales and use taxes which they are prohibited from collecting under the Constitution. His brief cites specific examples of State laws which it is unconstitutional to apply to interstate shipments. I have read the report of the committee and I do not see any answer to these arguments or, indeed, any treatment of them except a simple statement of the committee's conclusion that the bill is constitutional. I believe it would have been helpful to this body to have a more detailed analysis of the specific charges made in that brief. For example, the brief states that the cigarette tax of the State of Illinois has been held unconstitutional as applied to interstate shipments to people who buy for consumption. It states further that under the Jenkins bill a shipper into the State of Illinois would still have to send to the tax commissioner of Illinois an invoice on every customer to whom he sent cigarettes in the State of Illinois. If this is so, it seems clear to me that it is imposing a very heavy burden on the shipper and giving absolutely no aid whatsoever to the State of Illinois. I would like to know from the supporters of the bill whether that is the kind of thing we are being asked to do. I would also like to know whether it is not true that most of the cigarette-tax laws require a license before any purchase is made in interstate commerce and I would like to ask whether such a requirement of a license is not in violation of the commerce clause and is not a restriction on free trade among the several States which the commerce clause was intended to protect and foster.

Also, I note in the hearings on this bill that the proponents of the bill agree that the principle of the bill is equally applicable to every kind of commodity and is not limited merely to cigarettes. Under the circumstances it seems clear to me that once this bill is enacted we will be faced with a drive to strike out the word "cigarette" and to insert "any commodity." This bill seems to me to be the opening wedge in a drive to stifle interstate commerce in a welter of restrictions based on local taxation of interstate traffic.

I also note in examining the hearings that there is no comment from the Post Office Department whose revenues might be affected; from the Department of Justice or from the Treasury Department. I assume that the Treasury Department and the Justice Department have by now answered the request of the committee for comments and I respectfully suggest that those comments should now be made available to the membership of the House. I have the greatest respect for the members of the Ways and Means Committee but I suggest that in this instance they have acted somewhat hastily without having before them the comments of the Government departments involved and without having an analysis of the State laws which the Congress is being asked to help the States enforce. I respectfully suggest that the matter be referred back to the committee for it to give this situation the attention which such a substantial departure from precedent requires. I suggest that the legal and constitutional arguments which have been raised be subjected to careful analysis.

One other thing which deserves notice is the loose use of estimates. Tax commissioners appeared and estimated that their States were losing substantial sums of money as a result of the interstate traffic in cigarettes by mail to consumers. The report of the committee states that a fair estimate of the loss is $40,000,000 annually. I have examined some figures which are matters of official record. During the past year approximately 1,700,000,000 cartons of cigarettes were moved into domestic consumption. The 39 tax States accounted according to their own published figures for about 1,350,000,000 cartons. On the same basis ordinary local consumption in the 9 nontax States would account for another 270,000,000 cartons even assuming—contrary to fact—that the consumption in a nontax State is as low in a tax State. Territories and reservations and armed forces and VA hospitals which are not subject to tax, would account for another 70-odd million cartons. Thus by the roughest sort of figuring it is clear that the maximum interstate shipment would not exceed 20,000,000 cartons which even at a 3-cent average tax would equal $6,000,000. In fact, experience shows that more cigarettes are carried in interstate commerce by automobile where citizens near the border go into a nontax State to buy their cigarettes than are shipped by mail. Accordingly, this $6,000,000 figure should be cut well below half and if divided among the 30 nontax States, the average loss of revenue at the maximum per State is about $75,000 per State.

It is because of this possibility that States may be losing this much revenue that the Congress of the United States is requested to consider and put its approval on the tax laws of the various States in violation of basic principles of States' rights and to set up enforcement machinery to carry out that program. I tell you that before we are through it is likely to cost the Federal Government more money to help the States try to collect this trickle of funds than it will realize to the States.

I appreciate that there has been a campaign conducted by some tax commissioners from a few States. The main drive has come from the National Association of Tobacco Distributors who are interested in stopping mail shipments because they regard it as a means of price cutting and giving the consumer a product at a cheaper price. I find to my surprise that the tax commissioner from my State has written a letter which appears in the RECORD supporting this bill. It is obvious to me that he could not have understood the implications of this bill. The State of West Virginia has only a 1 cent per pack tax on cigarettes and I know of no problem of mail shipment which is presented by that tax. So far as I know people who buy by mail in West Virginia do so only for purposes of convenience because it costs as much to buy through the mails as it does to pay the 1-cent local tax. Accordingly, I am sure that West Virginia does not have the kind of tax problem from sales through the mails that Louisiana with its 8-cent tax has. I must say that I regard this legislation as ill-considered and an invasion of States' rights. While I will oppose the invasion of State's rights in this respect, if I am nevertheless required to pass judgment on the tax laws of the various States, I will say that a sales or use tax on cigarettes is perhaps the last kind of tax that I would wish to assist the States in collecting.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURNSIDE. I yield.

Mr. COOLEY. What right do we have to spend Federal funds to enforce State laws?

Mr. BURNSIDE. I do not think we have that right. Answering the gentleman further, we are taking two or three million dollars from the Post Office Department by this bill.

Mr. COOLEY. What right do we have to impose upon the budget of the Department of Justice the financial burdens which will be imposed upon that Department in the event this legislation is enacted?

Mr. BURNSIDE. I do not think we have a right at all to do that.

Mr. DOUGHTON. What provision of the bill provides that the Department of Justice should perform any such function? Read the section of the bill that makes any such provision as that.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I do not have the bill before me just at this time.

Mr. DOUGHTON. I will furnish you with a copy of it. Read the provision which says that the Department of Justice should perform any such function.

Mr. BURNSIDE. The gentleman will admit this will be an additional burden upon the United States Government.

Mr. DOUGHTON. What provision of the bill provides for that?

Mr. BURNSIDE. Let us take it in general terms. Would the States have come to the United States Government asking for help if they did not expect the United States Government to perform some service of this nature?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. BURNSIDE] has again expired.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Delaware [Mr. BOGGS].

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. Mr. Speaker, H. R. 195 which the rule under consideration makes in order is so fundamentally contrary to the whole scheme and philosophy of our Federal system that I must oppose this rule. I urge the entire membership of this House to oppose this rule upon principle.

I suggest that a State tax on a package of cigarettes is one thing and important fundamental principles of our Federal-State system of government are another of much greater significance to our present and future well-being.

This rule makes in order a bill which with criminal penalties seeks to make a citizen of one State without his consent and probably against his wishes, an informer or helper to the tax collector of another State. If that is not bad enough itself, it further makes the Federal Government responsible to see that this is done and, in fact, puts the Federal Government in the business of collecting State sales and use taxes. If that is not bad enough, it further has a result of permitting any one of the 48 States by State action only to determine in effect our national revenue-raising policy. Under this bill the Federal Government would be committed to assisting in collecting these taxes—which taxes in all probability would have 48 different names, amounts, percentages, and other incidents which most certainly would add greatly to the already chaotic confusion which exists in the taxation field; or else it will be a precedent for Federal examination and approval of the tax statutes of the various States and thus an interference with basic States' rights.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. I yield.

Mr. DONDERO. The point the gentleman raises is exactly what General Clay mentioned in his few remarks before the House that happened in Germany under dictatorship where one's next door neighbor might be an informer against him.

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. The gentleman is exactly right.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. I yield.

Mr. CHURCH. I wish to join in the gentleman's statement. On principle I am opposed to this sort of legislation. I appreciate the gentleman's statement on the floor of the House.

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. I thank the gentleman.

From a practical, everyday standpoint, this bill will cost the Federal Government substantial sums of money to enforce, if it is enforceable at all.

Now, from a pure legislative, practical point of view, this legislation is not only bad in its theory, conception and content but its obvious purpose is close to being met by other legislation with which I may not be in accord but which in principle is sound and in line with all our fundamental concepts of the Federal system of government. I refer to the postage-rate-increase bill. Increased postage rates, I am advised, will accomplish the objective of the author of this bill now under consideration. The cigarette mail-order business will be destroyed by increased postage rates because there is such a slim margin of profit in the business even at the current rates.

Let us not be hasty, let us not violate fundamental principle, let us not establish precedent that leads us on to a completely nationalized system, let us not pass legislation for which there may not be any necessity.

I urge you to vote down this rule.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. I yield.

Mr. CHURCH. The gentleman mentioned certain other items in interstate commerce; the necktie business in interstate commerce, or any other item that enters into interstate commerce could be affected by similar legislation. This bill simply sets a precedent to extend this type of legislation to many other things.

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. The history of this legislation, as the gentleman well knows, is long; and it has been before the Congress in many different phases for a long period of time. It has never been enacted into law. Certainly, there is no reason for this Congress today to take up this matter further because it is so wrong in principle; and, furthermore, there is legislation pending in Congress right at this time that may cure the evil of which the gentleman from Ohio complains.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. I yield.

Mr. KEEFE. In the event a person desired to send a carton of cigarettes to a son, relative, or friend in some distant State, would it not be incumbent upon the shipper to ascertain the State laws before shipping the carton of cigarettes as a gift?

Mr. JENKINS. No; it would not be.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Delaware has expired.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield two additional minutes to the gentleman from Delaware.

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. It certainly would be incumbent upon the party to look into the law; otherwise, he might be subject to the criminal penalty which this bill provides of $1,000 fine, or imprisonment for not more than 6 months, or both.

Mr. KEEFE. And the burden of enforcing this act will be on the Federal Department of Justice.

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. I do not know who else would enforce it.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. I yield.

Mr. JENKINS. I wish to advise the gentleman that his answer with reference to the shipment of a present of cigarettes through the mails is absolutely erroneous. The shipper of a gift would not have any obligation or responsibility whatsoever under this bill in the matter of State laws.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. I yield.

Mr. COOLEY. What section, may I inquire, eliminates gifts?

Mr. JENKINS. I believe the gentleman must have the old bill in mind, the one before it was amended in the last session of Congress. In section (b), page 1, that very matter was taken out.

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. The gentleman from Ohio has stated his point of view and I understand his answer; but it would be incumbent on any citizen in any State to study the law if he were sending a couple of cartons of cigarettes to somebody; otherwise, how could he know that he might not be subject to this penalty? He is assumed to know what the law is. He better be sure about it.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. JENKINS. If this bill is passed there are only a few who will violate it and those are the ones who are engaging in this nefarious business at the present time. One of the worst offenders stated that if this bill were passed he would be put out of business. Well, nobody would have to watch him. The same will be true of all of them.

Mr. CHURCH. May I say to the gentleman that I do not use cigarettes, so I hold no brief for them. But all of these people receiving these articles in interstate commerce at home will be harassed by these State checkers.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Delaware has expired.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JENKINS].

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, I want to reply to the distinguished gentleman from West Virginia who lives just across the river from where I live. He is a very fine gentleman, but he is just as wrong as he can be in practically every detail so far as this bill is concerned.

May I inform him, if he does not already know it, that the governor immediately preceding this present governor endorsed the principle of this bill and the State tax official also endorsed it in principle at least and I think he endorsed it unqualifiedly. I think the present governor has endorsed the principle of this bill and also the principal tax commissioner of his State has endorsed it. The laws of West Virginia provide for a sales tax the same as the laws in the other 39 States that have endorsed this program.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENKINS. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. MICHENER. May I refer to section 2 which reads in part as follows:

> Any person selling or disposing of cigarettes in interstate commerce whereby such cigarettes are shipped.

Suppose I went into a store in Washington and bought five cartons of cigarettes and I was going to visit a constituent friend of mine in another State. Could I take those five cartons of cigarettes in my grip and deliver them to my constitutent in an adjoining State without violating this law?

Mr. JENKINS. The gentleman could, because the language used is "'disposing of' means any transfer for profit." The gentleman could take all he pleased, if he took them as he said he would and he could send them to as many as he pleased, but if he is in the business of selling them for profit then, this bill, if passed, would reach a case like that. This bill only reaches those who ship for profit and who fail or refuse to notify the taxing authority in the State into which they ship, if that State has a sales or use tax, that they have made such a shipment.

Mr. MICHENER. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. LYLE. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes had it.

Mr. BURNSIDE. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Obviously a quorum is not present.

The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 323, nays 24, not voting 84, as follows:

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 195) to assist States in collecting sales and use taxes on cigarettes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 195) to assist States in collecting sales and use taxes on cigarettes, with Mr. TRIMBLE in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

By unanimous consent, the first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, the bill we are presently considering, H. R. 195, was introduced by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JENKINS]. The House passed a similar bill during the last session, which failed of passage in the other body on account of lack of time for its consideration, not because the bill was defeated or anything of that nature.

The Committee on Ways and Means of the House has held extensive public hearings on this bill and reported it unanimously after full and complete hearing.

The purpose of the bill, Mr. Chairman, is to aid the States in the collection of their sales and use taxes on cigarettes. Approximately 39 States have imposed a sales or use tax on cigarettes and, as I stated, the purpose of the bill is to aid the States in the collection of those taxes.

When the rule was under consideration, someone mentioned that the penalties provided by the bill might be applicable if a small quantity of cigarettes were to be sent to a friend in another State. If that were the only trouble this bill would not be here for our consideration. The fact of the matter is that there are about $40,000,000 or $50,000,000 a year in State taxes being lost through evasion in payment of the State sales taxes.

A number of the States have laws imposing a tax on cigarettes. This bill imposes the duty upon the distributors of cigarettes in those States to furnish to the tax authorities of the States affected and to which the cigarettes are shipped information as to the consignee and the number of cigarettes shipped; in other words, information upon which the taxing authorities of a particular State may enforce its own tax laws and collect the taxes that are imposed or levied by the State.

As I stated, there are about 39 States that have such laws and I believe 25 Governors of States have requested the enactment of this legislation.

In many of the States that have imposed this tax, it is provided that the revenue derived from the tax be earmarked for specific purposes, such as the payment of the soldiers' bonus, for old-age assistance, or for the purpose of education and other designated purposes.

Mr. Chairman, this is quite a serious matter and it is only for the purpose of aiding the various States that impose the sales and use tax on cigarettes that this bill is offered. We all know that large quantities of cigarettes have been and are being shipped into those States by parcel post, the expense of which is very light. You can ship a considerable quantity of cigarettes by parcel post at very small expense, which results in the State laws being very easily evaded. The sole purpose of this bill is to aid the various States in the collection of their revenues and to help the States in preventing the evasion of their tax laws. This is meritorious legislation and I hope it receives favorable action by the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina has expired.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, this bill was before this House in the last Congress, and it passed by an overwhelming vote. I do not have the figures here and I forget just what the vote was, but it was a very large majority.

While the gentleman who spoke on the rule said that this legislation had been before Congress for many years, in that respect the gentleman was mistaken, because last year was the first year that this legislation was presented and to my best information no legislation of this import has ever been introduced before I introduced this in the last session of Congress. My very distinguished friend the Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DOUGHTON] stated that this legislation was not considered in the other body in the last Congress because it was not reached. As you know, that happens quite frequently. It no doubt would have been considered except for the fact that one of the leading members of the Finance Committee of the Senate was called away. In order to set the membership right as to the importance and the merits of this proposed legislation I should like to say that 39 out of the 48 States of the Union have either through their governors or through their secretaries that have charge of finance—I think they call them financial directors—indicated their approval of this legislation. There were a few States that did not approve of it because they have not seen fit to pass a sales tax or a use tax on cigarettes. Practically all of the larger States are in this category of favoring this legislation. For instance, the State of New York estimates that it loses at least $3,000,000 a year which it would not lose if this bill would pass into legislation. Up until about 1 year ago New York State lost this revenue to shippers from the State of New Jersey—but the State of New Jersey got tired of staying in that class, realized that it would be wise for the State treasury of New Jersey to have some of those millions that were going into the hands of these economic marauders who were making these unfair and unjust profits. So New Jersey passed a use tax and then the bootleggers in New Jersey moved down into Delaware and Maryland. After a while these two States will wake up and will pass laws that will be for the benefit of all their people and not for a few unethical cigarette operators. I think the State of Oklahoma maybe comes next in the amount it loses because it has a large tax, and it loses more than $2,000,000 a year. The State of Pennsylvania loses over $1,000,000 a year and the State of Ohio loses $750,000 a year.

Who gets that money? They lose it to somebody. Now, who gets it? While the cigarette seller in Ohio and in New York and in Oklahoma steps up and pays his license fee and pays for his stamps and pays for his part of the business, there are a few people in this country who ship the cigarettes into these tax States and avoid paying the taxes. Some may argue that practice is not unlawful and for that reason should not be designated as bootlegging. But it is shamefully unethical and cannot get the approval of a totally disinterested person. Now, there are not very many of these people in the country. The distinguished gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. BURNSIDE] who spoke on the rule saw fit to argue against this legislation, but as I have already stated, a governor of his State sent to the Committee on Ways and Means his approval, as did a tax commissioner. We only had two men from West Virginia testify before the committee. One of them said he was representing the other, and that other told us that he was the only man in West Virginia that he knew of that shipped cigarettes out to other States. That man lives nearly across the river from where I live. He ships these cigarettes into Ohio, brings or sends them across the river, and sells them for 2 cents less than the merchant in my home town could sell them, because he does not put the tax stamps on.

If this practice is a worthy one and that would justify the support of the Congressman from West Virginia he should be able to find more than one person in the whole State who would engage in that kind of an unfair and unethical practice. All the high-class shippers comply with the law.

We had a gentleman appear before our committee who resented very much the designation applied to that class of shippers as being bootleggers. Well, I do not want to use that name and hurt anybody's feelings, and I shall try to refrain from using it but I do not know of any other name that would apply.

I do not know what you would call a man who does not provide stamps for his cigarette packs and might operate right across the street from where another man operates and who provides tax stamps for his cigarettes; one man has an agent planted around here, there, and yonder, and he peddles out these cigarettes so he can sell the packages for 2 cents a pack less than the man who engages in the cigarette business in a lawful way and pays the tax and pays his clerks, and so forth.

You say, "Well, what would you do with a company like Sears, Roebuck, for instance?" Do you know what Sears, Roebuck does? Sears, Roebuck has a little item on every bill it sends out saying that it is understood that whoever buys from it who lives in Ohio or New York or Indiana or any other of these States will have to pay that tax. For Ohio, Sears, Roebuck will probably collect as much as $100,000 a year in taxes and send it to the tax collector in Ohio. That is the way they do business. This is the way thousands of other mail-order companies do. That is the way men who want to do business honestly and fairly will do.

Then someone may say to me, "You are going to put a terrific burden on somebody." On how many people? How many people will be burdened? Only about half a dozen came before our committee, not very many. Out of $750,000 that we lose in Ohio, one concern knocks down $150,000. I dare say there will not be more than 30 or 40 concerns who will ship unlawfully into one State. Oh, there might be 50 or 75, maybe 150, I do not know, but the number is very small.

You who are going to speak on this subject and who are afraid about the enforcement of this bill if it becomes a law, just take the testimony of a little old gentleman who came before us from North Carolina. He said he was a Presbyterian, and he used to live in Georgia, but when he found that he could go up into North Carolina and get cigarettes tax-free and send them into some other States, he said, in effect "Why, I am a Presbyterian, but I think that is all right if I can beat that game. If I can undersell these other fellows, I think it is all right. But if and when you pass this legislation, I am going out of business. Nobody is going to prosecute me." That in effect is what he said. That is the very reason we want this legislation. If it is passed these piratical operators will all go out of business.

You talk about somebody going to snoop around. Certainly the tax enforcing officers in Ohio can snoop around. There are a lot of people who have imported these cigarettes through the mails. Most of them are good citizens but they know when they carry around in their pockets a pack of cigarettes that does not bear a Government stamp or a use-tax stamp they are violating the law. However, our officers do not do that kind of business. They do not want to run around and find a fellow with a package of cigarettes in his pocket on which he has not paid the tax, and then haul him in. They do not do it in Ohio or so far as I know in any other States. They do not want to do that. They want to localize it down to these few people who do this business.

You say, "It has never been done before." I do not have the time right now to give you a list of all the decisions of the Supreme Court that deal with this subject. They start back with the old liquor laws. You say, "Well, tobacco is not liquor." All through the taxing laws of this Nation from the beginning down to now they have always listed tobacco and liquor as nuisances to be taxed, not always in the same legislation but in the same category.

Someone said, "People will go across the line to buy neckties and things like that." No; there is no commodity except liquor that carries a tax so far out of proportion to the value of the article sold, except cigarettes. Do you know how much taxes you pay on a package of cigarettes now? I think you pay the Federal Government 6 or 7 cents, and you pay the State government whatever the law provides in the particular State. In Ohio it is 2 cents, in Oklahoma I think it is 4 or 5 cents, in New York probably 2 or 3 cents, and in some States only 1 cent. You cannot put cigarettes in the same category as you do shoes. No one is going to go way off to some other State to buy shoes because he can get them 12 or 13 cents cheaper. No one is going to go across to buy a necktie in some other State and pay streetcar fare, and so on. No one is going to bother to import a necktie if he is going to save only a cent or two by it. On cigarettes you save a much larger proportion. You pay a dollar or maybe $5 for a necktie and maybe only save 10 or 15 cents.

How do these clandestine shippers do business? A man who is working in a big factory, we will say, who is a smart fellow, will communicate with one of these companies that ship cigarettes. Then he will go through the shop and he will say, "Bill, how much do you pay for your cigarettes?" Bill will say, "Twenty-two or twenty-four cents, whatever they are." "I can save you 2 cents on every pack, and I will sell them to you. You let me know how many you want, and next Monday or Tuesday I will come through the plant and I will bring them to you." Then he may bring his car to the plant loaded down with cigarettes and most likely though he will take the orders from his friends and then send in maybe a hundred or 200 orders and these will be delivered by mail. He does this while your merchants are paying a tax, and that tax money goes into the State treasury for what purpose? Just as the gentleman from North Carolina said, it goes there maybe to pay a soldiers' bonus, or to pay for the schools and similar necessary public activities, or maybe it goes to maintain the hospitals. That is the kind of purpose it is used for. I tell you it is nothing short of a scandal that these great States that pay all this money permit two or three hundred fellows like that to knock down about $30,000,000 a year of our money. It is not fair and it is not right.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself three additional minutes.

Mr. Chairman, this law is absolutely constitutional. I am not going to inflict a lot of court decisions on you here, but if anybody provokes me to do so, I will. Just let me read to you what Chief Justice Hughes said in one case. I will read just one case to you. Here is what he says:

> While the power to regulate commerce resides in the Congress, which must determine its own policy—

Now, listen to this—> the Congress may shape that policy in the light of the fact that transportation in interstate commerce, if permitted, would aid in the frustration of valid State laws.

That is what Chief Justice Hughes said. We can pass any kind of law that we want controlling interstate commerce, if it has for its purpose, preventing the frustration of the laws of any State. In my State and in your State and in all the other States, of course it works a frustration of our laws because they come in and bootleg cigarettes and our people pay the price.

What else does Chief Justice Hughes say? He paid a great compliment to the Congress and you Members who are lawyers will be able to take a great deal of satisfaction in the way the Chief Justice Hughes praises the power of the Congress. Here is what he said:

> The Congress has formulated its own policy, and established its own rule. The fact that it has adopted its own rule in order to enforce the valid State laws, affords no ground for a constitutional objection.

That is exactly the point. He says that we can pass any kind of law that we please to keep interstate commerce, which is a child of the Government, from being abused. That is what we do here. We prevent the violation of this great instrumentality and we do it so that the States can enforce their own laws, which they will enforce anyhow. It is said that it is going to cost a great deal of money. Do not let anybody take the position that it is going to cost a lot of money. The testimony of these people who appeared before us was to the effect that if we pass this bill they will go out of business. Take this man who went broke up in New York a few days ago. There was the most scandalous bankruptcy case that I think I ever heard or read of. There was a man who was in this business, who was dealing with people all over the country. He knew he was going into bankruptcy. He had a lot of these weekly checks coming in from all over the country. He cashed those checks and put the money in his pocket. He owed, I think, about $151,000 and he had, I think, about $3,000 to back him up. That is the kind of fellow who is in this business. Why do we owe him any obligation? Are the great States, the great sovereign power of our country going to allow our laws to be frustrated and to compel our people to pay taxes to let somebody else come in and bootleg and take down $30,000,000 a year for his trouble? I say no, the sense of fairness of Americans rebels and we will stop this practice.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has again expired.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. COOLEY].

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, on account of my love and devotion for the chairman of this distinguished committee, I hesitate to rise in opposition to this bill. I want to make it perfectly clear that I am unalterably opposed to taxes on tobacco. I am opposed to taxes of all kinds on tobacco. It is the only agricultural commodity in this Nation which is taxed, and heavily taxed, not only by the Federal Government, but by about 39 States of the Union.

I, for one, do not want to make it any easier for the States to levy and to collect additional taxes on an agricultural commodity upon the production of which my people depend for their livelihoods.

I know the distinguished gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JENKINS] is a smart, intelligent legislator, and I will add to that that he is a great American, but I must say I think he has just made one of the weakest arguments I have ever heard him make in this House. In the first place, the gentleman says 39 governors called upon us to throw the force of the Federal Government into the enforcement of State laws. So what? Suppose 48 governors called upon us. Are we going to so forget our own responsibilities that we are going to embark upon a program of enforcing State laws? That is just what this bill does.

The gentleman says thousands of dollars worth of cigarettes are transported across the river and sold in his State of Ohio, but the police force of the State of Ohio hesitates to snoop around and find out whether or not the taxes have been paid. Pray tell me, why should the Federal law-enforcement officers be placed in the position of going around to ascertain whether State laws have been complied with? We might as well admit the fact that this is the opening wedge. Oh, yes, the Federal Government is aiding the States, perhaps, in enforcing some laws which seem to be beyond the power of the States to enforce. We made kidnaping amenable to Federal law. We have the white slave law and the Narcotics Act. But what about firearms? There are many sorry white men and Negroes in my State who are ordering from Sears, Roebuck, and other mail-order houses, pistols, bowie knives, blackjacks, and every other kind of deadly instrumentality, in violation of the laws of the State of North Carolina. Certainly there is more reason for the Federal Government to throw its strong arm into a situation like that and try to protect the people of my State from the menace to which they are subjected on account of the violation of that type of law. But here is a tax, a civil tax, levied upon an agricultural commodity. Those 39 States are clamoring for the assistance of the Federal Government. Now, if it is not going to cost anything, if Mr. Tom Clark and his coworkers are not going to enforce this law, why did you bring it to the floor of the House? You know it is going to cost something. It puts the responsibility upon the Department of Justice to prepare and prosecute cases.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield.

Mr. KEEFE. If I understand the gentleman's argument, it is that he is opposed to a tax on any agricultural commodity. Did I so understand the gentleman?

Mr. COOLEY. The gentleman is not far wrong.

Mr. KEEFE. I was wondering what the gentleman's attitude would be about the tax on whisky, which has its origin in corn or rye.

Mr. COOLEY. Well, they do not grow whisky in North Carolina.

Mr. KEEFE. I understand they do in certain sections of North Carolina.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. COOLEY] has expired.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman from North Carolina three additional minutes.

Mr. KEEFE. I just wondered if the gentleman's parity of reasoning extends that far.

Mr. COOLEY. Maybe not quite that far.

Mr. KEEFE. That he would not impose a Federal tax on an item simply because it had its genesis in an agricultural product.

Mr. COOLEY. No, I would not go that far.

Tobacco is purely and simply an agricultural product. It is not mixed at all, it is not blended except with other tobacco. But the fact is that the arguments made here, that the States are unable to enforce this law, is weak. The burden of the argument of the gentleman from Ohio is that the States are not making an honest and diligent effort to enforce the law. If you know the wholesaler is shipping into your district, and if you know that the retailer receives and sells cigarettes with impunity, you know that your law enforcement officers are not doing a good job. They should apprehend the violators and bring them to justice.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield.

Mr. JENKINS. How much is the value of the tobacco in a cigarette? What is its proportion of the 24-cent per pack price?

Mr. COOLEY. It is negligible, it is not any great amount. This does not touch the question of what the farmer receives for his tobacco.

Mr. JENKINS. Then the argument with reference to a pack of cigarettes, that the ingredients make up 8 to 10 percent of the value ought to have a whole lot more weight than the argument that the value of the ingredients is negligible.

Mr. COOLEY. Maybe the gentleman's thought is that every State should come forward and double their tax on tobacco. The point is that this bill establishes a precedent. If we are going to help the States collect taxes this is the beginning point, here is where we start. Here we help them collect taxes on tobacco, then it will be on liquor, then perhaps it will be on cosmetics and all other items that are now taxed. I remember, when we had a sales tax in the State of North Carolina and they did not have one in the State of Virginia. Many of our citizens went across the State line into Virginia to shop, and they purchased large amounts of valuable merchandise, but we certainly never called upon the Federal Government to help us collect our taxes.

I think this bill should be defeated; I think we should not place the burden on the Federal Government. I wish to ask one question: Has this bill been submitted to the Bureau of the Budget? If so has the Bureau of the Budget approved it?

Mr. DOUGHTON. This bill does not impose any semblance of Federal tax. What has the Bureau of the Budget to do with the matter of helping collect the State tax?

Mr. COOLEY. That is right; I think the gentleman has answered my question. So the Bureau of the Budget has not been consulted with regard to the possible cost of this bill, whether it will be $10,000 or $10,000,000; we do not know.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina has expired.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman one additional minute.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield.

Mr. COOPER. The Director of the Bureau of the Budget has advised, and the Treasury Department has advised that they have no objection to the presentation of this report.

Mr. COOLEY. Of the report; but does the report recommend passage of the bill?

Mr. COOPER. Yes; that is the usual report from the Bureau of the Budget.

Mr. COOLEY. Do you have any information from the Department of Justice?

Mr. COOPER. Yes.

Mr. JENKINS. Yes.

Mr. COOLEY. Does that department have objection to it?

Mr. COOPER. They have no objection either.

Mr. COOLEY. There is no objection from the Department of Justice, and no objection then from the Bureau of the Budget?

Mr. COOPER. That is right.

Mr. COOLEY. That is some information that the gentleman from Ohio failed to give the House. I am still opposed to it, these facts to the contrary notwithstanding.

Mr. JENKINS. And the Treasury is in the same category as the others. This is all in the report.

Mr. COOLEY. The Treasury wants it, the Department of Justice wants it.

Mr. JENKINS. Everybody but the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. COOLEY. I would not want it under any circumstance.

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. COOLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Delaware.

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. Is there a report on this measure from the Post Office Department?

Mr. COOLEY. Maybe the gentleman from Ohio, the gentleman from Tennessee, or the gentleman from North Carolina can answer the gentleman's question; I am certain I cannot.

Mr. MASON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield.

Mr. MASON. I will answer that for 10 years a similar bill was before the Committee on Post Office of this Congress and was turned down on the recommendation of the Post Office Department.

Mr. BURNSIDE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield.

Mr. BURNSIDE. One other thing, it would cost the Post Office Department between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000; yet we are worrying now about trying to get enough revenue for the Post Office Department.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield.

Mr. CURTIS. What additional duties would this impose upon the Post Office Department?

Mr. SHORT. It causes loss of revenue, chiefly. It does not impose any duties upon the Post Office Department. It certainly does upon the Department of Justice.

Mr. CURTIS. The gentleman is assuming that these men do not want to pay the tax.

Mr. COOLEY. I think the gentleman from Missouri has answered the question. It involves a loss of revenue.

Mr. JENKINS. May I say that the legislation referred to by the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MASON] was legislation that permitted certain investigators to investigate the mail. It was not a case such as this at all. It was not like this matter. It was an entirely different proposition and an entirely different situation.

Mr. COOLEY. Does not the gentleman agree that this is setting a precedent?

Mr. JENKINS. No, sir; not a bit.

Mr. COOLEY. Does the gentleman have any other precedents?

Mr. JENKINS. No.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina has expired.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. ROGERS].

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I want to congratulate the distinguished gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DOUGHTON] for the very clear and comprehensive statement he made with reference to the provisions of the pending bill. This is not a bill for the collection of taxes. It is merely a bill providing that the shippers of cigarettes outside of a taxing State, a shipper that uses the instrumentalities of interstate and foreign commerce, must furnish an invoice and send it to the commissioner of taxes of the taxing State. That is everything this Congress has to consider in connection with this bill.

There are 39 States of the Union that have a cigarette tax. There are a number of shippers in various States shipping into these taxing States and they and their consignees are evading payment of the cigarette tax. In my particular State of Florida we suffer a loss of revenue of a quarter of million dollars or more annually through this practice. This is small in comparison with other States. A number of the States suffer a greater loss than that.

Mr. Chairman, let us see what the evil is we want to correct and let us observe what the remedy is we want to apply. The evil in the shipping of cigarettes into a taxing State in competition with the honest merchants who have to pay a local tax and who have to keep up the expenses of that particular jurisdiction. Some of my friends have made reference to the Post Office Department. Are we going to make the post office an avenue of transmission so that the State tax might be evaded? But that is not my conception of the functions of the United States Post Office. If you analyze clearly the arguments that have been proposed here that is what it would do because these cigarettes are dumped into these various taxing States by parcel post and they are using the Post Office Department in order to evade the payment of a legitimate local cigarette tax. Now, that is what they are doing. Are you going to condone that?

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. I might say before I yield, that in paying this tax there will not be one less leaf of tobacco grown. They will still smoke the same amount of cigarettes, but the taxes will be collected on them if this bill is passed. Now I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. COOLEY. That argument of mine was secondary. But, we have State control of liquor in North Carolina, and yet the Federal Government will issue a license and collect a fee and permit whisky stills to be erected in any part of that State. Now, does not the gentleman think that that is more of an evil than exists in this situation where cigarettes are going into a State without paying the tax?

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. Certainly they do that. I certainly think that the Federal authorities can enforce the law in that respect, but in this instance the State authorities cannot enforce the law without the information from shippers.

Mr. COOLEY. Why can they not do it?

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. Because of the fact that they use the Post Office Department or the express company to ship the cigarettes into various States and that the local authorities cannot get in touch with them. The Federal Government does not enforce that feature. The State must collect the taxes after the cigarettes are shipped and delivered. It is not the Federal Government that does that.

Mr. CAMP. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. CAMP. Is it not a fact that we have seven Federal acts exactly in line with this act wherein the Federal Government does assist the States in the collection of taxes?

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. I think that is correct.

Mr. CAMP. And we also furnish information right now to the State income-tax collectors regarding Federal income-tax returns. There is a Federal law regarding the furnishing of information about liquor being shipped into dry States which is almost verbatim with this.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Florida has expired.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman two additional minutes.

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I cannot see how anyone can object to the passage of this bill. As I see it, it is so simple. It is not the imposition of an additional tax, but it is just the means of assisting the States in collecting these taxes. The cigarette tax is used in various States for different purposes. Some taxes are used for the payment of veterans' bonuses; now, all of us are in favor of payments to veterans. In some States the tax is used for the purpose of assisting in aiding education and for charitable purposes. All of us are in favor of that. How can any reasonable man who wants to assist the States collecting cigarette taxes object to carrying out the laws of the States where, in some instances, the States are being cheated out of four or five million dollars in revenue by reason of permitting the transportation of these cigarettes into those States without the imposition of this tax? I trust that this bill will be unanimously passed. It did pass in the last Congress in the House, and it went over to the other body, and it would have passed over there, I think, but for the fact that the chairman of the Finance Committee, due to the loss of his father, had to leave at the time the bill was to be called up.

Mr. HUBER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. HUBER. If I am a resident of Florida and I buy a suit of clothes from Sears Roebuck, will that tax be collected?

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. I cannot answer that, but I presume that it will.

Mr. HUBER. I heard Members of Congress who come from States where a State sales tax is charged say that if they have something shipped to the District, they would not be required to pay the tax.

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. Well, there are two different taxes, the sales tax and the use tax.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Florida has again expired.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from New York [Mr. REED].

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, I am in favor of this bill. The point was raised by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. COOLEY] that the post office would lose revenue. As a matter of fact, this would be a great saving to the Post Office Department, because in many of the post offices these cartons of cigarettes are piled up high, and they are utilizing the space needed for the regular mail, and if this tax-evasion proposition goes on, you will have to have more post offices and more floor space in which to operate for the regular parcel post mail. So I believe this will really save money to the taxpayers of this country.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REED of New York. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. JENKINS. Is it not a fact that in many of the big cities of the country the post office does a bigger cigarette business than any other company in that city?

Mr. REED of New York. There is no question about that. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CAMP] raised an interesting point, and that is that the Federal Government now cooperates with the States to help them collect income taxes and the States assist the Federal Government to collect its income taxes. There is no new principle involved here.

I call attention to the effect this evasion of taxes has on the merchants of New York State. Here is the testimony of Mr. Jerome Kaufman, director of industry and public affairs, National Association of Tobacco Distributors, New York City:

> In view of the serious effect on more than a million local merchants of the shipments of cigarettes from nontax States into the cigarette-tax States for the purpose of evading the tax laws of those States, we consider it our duty to emphasize the dire need of a law which will afford relief and equity to the merchants so affected. These local merchants in every city, town, and hamlet of our Nation depend, in small or large measure, for their livelihood upon the sale of cigarettes in their communities, and it is they who give employment to local residents and in the aggregate pay a substantial portion of the taxes used to support their local, State, and Federal Governments.

We all know that these cigarette taxes in some 39 or 40 States go for various purposes that are of the greatest importance, some to pay the soldiers' bonus, some for the purpose of education, some to take care of crippled children, and so on down the line of the whole social scale.

Mr. Chairman, I am heartily in favor of this bill to do away with this questionable practice.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from New York [Mr. WILLIAM L. PFEIFFER].

Mr. WILLIAM L. PFEIFFER. Mr. Chairman, 39 States, representing approximately 80 percent of the total population of the country, have cigarette tax laws on their statute books. The combined income to these States from cigarette taxes, according to the most recent official report, will approximate $400,000,000 in 1948. According to present estimates, it is also reliably reported, on the basis of the best available figures, that between 15 percent and 20 percent of this huge income is lost to the States, individually and collectively, as the result of parcel-post shipments of cigarettes from nontaxing States into taxing States. Thus, a State that imposes a tax on cigarettes which, based on consumption, should produce $12,000,000 a year, establishes its budget on that basis. When approximately 20 percent of the consumers purchase untaxed cigarettes from out-of-State sources, the State—instead of securing $12,000,000 a year—obtains only $9,600,000, being deprived of $2,400,000. This inescapably throws the entire budgetary estimates out of keel and the legislature is thus confronted with the necessity of imposing additional taxes. The following is a case in point: To provide adequate funds for paying a bonus to its veterans, the New York State Legislature imposed an additional 1 cent tax per package on cigarettes, which was ratified by popular referendum. The State expected to receive a specified amount annually from this source and was fully entitled to expect every cigarette consumer in the State to pay his share. We know from experience that a substantial portion of the cigarettes consumed in New York State is being obtained from mail-order houses in Delaware and other nontaxing States. The result has been a substantial reduction of revenue intended for the veterans' bonus and unlimited evasion by a large number of persons.

As a practical matter, this is what happens. Wholesale distributors in nontaxing States secure or purchase lists of cigarette smokers in States which impose cigarette taxes. These smokers are then circularized with tempting offers to mail their remittances in advance for cigarettes which will be sent to them by mail with a saving in the amount of the State tax. State cigarette taxes vary in amount from 1 cent per package to as high as 8 cents per package. A carton of cigarettes contains ten packages, offering an inducement of a 10-cent to 80-cent saving per carton. It is therefore easy to visualize the extent of the diversion of cigarettes from the ordinary channels of trade and the large amounts of needed revenue lost to the taxing States.

The circumvention and flaunting of State cigarette tax laws in this manner constitute, in the eyes of the public, a mockery of all laws enacted by the elected representatives of the people of the States concerned. When the majority of people are required to conform with our laws and a minority permitted to ignore them, it cannot help but weaken our respect for the laws and for the governmental agencies entrusted with their administration and enforcement. Moreover, because each citizen is expected and should bear his just burden of taxation—be it Federal, State, or local—any condition or practice which renders it simple and effortless for him to evade such taxation, encourages general violation of the law and—just as significant—saddles the law-abiding citizens with a heavier and unwarranted tax burden.

There are also other practical considerations. In each taxing State there are hundreds of wholesalers and thousands of retailers who depend for their livelihood on the sale of cigarettes. The constantly increasing abuse of State cigarette tax laws deprives these merchants of the sales they are rightfully entitled to and would have had if it were not for the illicit shipment of cigarettes into their State. These deserving businessmen are penalized merely because they are located in a State which imposes a cigarette tax. Aside from the loss of business, however, the general effect of this practice on the wholesale distributor—who serves as the primary medium for collecting State cigarette taxes—is to demoralize him and to undermine his desire to cooperate with the taxing States in protecting this valuable and needed source of revenue.

What is the effect on Federal cigarette tax collections of the practice of shipping cigarettes, interstate, to avoid payment of State taxes? Here is the picture:

Cigarette tax income to the Federal Government during 1947 exceeded $1,250,000,000. Certainly, a product that is responsible for this prodigious amount of revenue to the Federal Government should not be permitted to fall into the state of disrepute which inescapably results from illicit handling. It would appear to be sound and prudent business judgment on the part of the Congress to protect this valuable source of revenue.

A workable solution to this problem has been sought for some time. Efforts were made to enlist the aid of the Federal postal authorities to prevent parcel-post shipments of cigarettes made to circumvent State cigarette-tax laws. We also looked to the Federal Trade Commission to find a proper and adequate solution within the framework of that agency's delegated powers. These attempts were not successful.

It is my opinion that an appeal to the Congress of the United States for this legislation is warranted and justified, since the matter it is sought to correct involves a condition which affects interstate commerce, is injurious to the public welfare, and, as has been demonstrated, cannot be rectified on an individual-State basis. It is, I think, in this type of situation that it becomes necessary for the Congress to come to the rescue.

I do not believe that a law of the type proposed would establish a precedent in the field of Federal legislation. Many other business practices, potentially dangerous to the public interest, are presently controlled by Federal regulatory agencies. Among these agencies are the Interstate Commerce Commission which regulates and controls all interstate travel of public vehicles; the Federal Communications Commission which prescribes and administers regulations controlling all radio facilities; the Food and Drug Administration which establishes standards of acceptability for food and drug products.

The proposed law does not call for or require the establishment of a governmental agency. It will merely place in the hands of the State tax administrators the means for removing an inequity in the collection of State cigarette taxes, facilitating the collection of such taxes, and assuring the equal application of the tax acts to everyone.

In view of what I have pointed out are the adverse effects of illicit shipping of cigarettes—on taxing States, on the hundreds of thousands of wholesalers and retailers all over the Nation, and on Federal cigarette-tax collections—I urgently request your favorable consideration and support of this bill.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. CURTIS].

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Chairman, considerable comment has been made pertaining to this bill in reference to its placing additional burdens on the various departments of the Federal Government. This bill does not place any additional burdens on the Post Office Department. It will call for no additional expenditures. No agency of the Federal Government is called upon to enforce a State law or collect a State tax. It merely provides that if a licensed distributor sells cigarettes and sends them in interstate commerce the seller must send a duplicate of the invoice to the taxing authority in the State where the sale is consummated.

This will be self-enforcing. The Federal Government is not asked to follow that transaction to seek out the purchaser and see that he pays the tax. That will be the responsibility of the State that will receive the tax.

Perhaps every State that has a cigarette tax has been faced with this problem. Mail-order houses have sprung up over the country and they circularize the boxholders and say, "Order your cigarettes from us. They will be sent to you in a plain wrapper and you do not need to pay the cigarette tax imposed by your State government." Those transactions can still go on. Those people can remain in business. The only requirement is that they must send a copy of their invoice to the State taxing authority so that the State may collect the tax. It has been said that the Post Office would lose money because they would lose revenue. On every sale they will pick up 3 cents additional revenue, because the invoice must be sent to the State taxing authority. It will place no additional burden on the Department of Justice or on the Post Office Department. Here you have merchandising being carried on almost solely through an agency of the Government of the United States, the Post Office Department, which is operating at a deficit. Certainly the Congress of the United States has a right to lay down the rules as to how interstate commerce shall be transacted, and to say to these people, if they are going to use this Government subsidy to deliver their cigarettes, what the shipping requirements are. One of the shipping requirements shall be that a copy of the invoice must be sent to the State capital to the proper taxing officials where the tax is to be collected.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CURTIS. I yield.

Mr. McSWEENEY. My distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JENKINS], said that these mail order houses distinctly said that they will refund the taxes to the State taxing authority. That is my first question. I am in sympathy with the bill.

Mr. CURTIS. What is the gentleman's question?

Mr. McSWEENEY. Did the gentleman say that some mail order houses send out advertisements that they would send cigarettes in plain packages so that the tax could be avoided?

Mr. CURTIS. Oh, yes. They say that right in the advertising. That was incorporated in last year's hearings.

Mr. McSWEENEY. My colleague says that the mail order houses tell you that they will refund the taxes to the State tax authority.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield—what I meant was that the great bulk of the mail order houses in the country, like Sears, Roebuck, obey the laws, and a company like Sears, Roebuck sends thousands and thousands of dollars a year to the State of Ohio. They collect their own taxes and send the money to the State. They do not violate the law.

Mr. McSWEENEY. What mail order houses was he referring to?

Mr. JENKINS. The ones that we are seeking to reach by this law.

Mr. CURTIS. If the gentleman from Ohio will secure the hearings which were prepared for the bill last year, he will see incorporated in those hearings copies of those advertisements.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CURTIS. I yield.

Mr. COOPER. I am sure the gentleman will recall that the evidence presented to the committee indicated that some of these fly-by-night so-called mail-order houses are doing business just for the purpose of carrying on this cigarette trade.

Mr. CURTIS. There are facts which would indicate that that is probably true. They can stay in business if their customers pay the tax, and we will not hurt them a bit.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. SASSCER].

Mr. SASSCER. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to this bill because the result accomplished by its passage will not primarily be to aid the States in collecting their local State revenues as claimed. The result will be to permit States to go higher and higher in the imposition of cigarette taxes, a commodity which is excessively overtaxed. The farmer gets about 2 cents for his contribution to each pack of cigarettes; the Federal Government gets 7 cents on each pack of cigarettes; the State tax ranges up as high as 5 cents a pack, and now municipalities have gone into this field of taxation. In some cases the tax in municipalities ranges as high as 2 cents additional, making a total in some instances of 14 cents tax on a pack of cigarettes, on which the farmer only gets 2 cents. This cigarette tax has been the goose that has laid the golden egg in the field of taxation. I fear that if we lock this old goose's feet so that she cannot move a little bit when it gets plucked too hard by the pyramiding of these taxes, it will affect the over-all tax income from this source, and, primarily, if you make it easier for the States to pyramid cigarette taxes you will depress the farm market on this agricultural commodity.

The Federal Government receives one and one-quarter billion dollars every year from cigarette taxes. The States receive $340,000,000 a year.

Now, let us move cautiously in this productive field of revenue. Let us move cautiously, because if we do not, true to the chart sheet of every instance where any one source has been overtaxed, the source of revenue dries up. Let us move slowly because the real purpose of this legislation is not to bring in the Government to help States collect this tax, as claimed, but it is to lock it so that they can pyramid more and more State taxes without any possible competition at all.

This has been referred to as bootlegging. It is legitimate in the States in which a sale is made. If it is illegitimate in a State to which it is shipped, then those local States should enforce their laws and not ask the Federal Government, with the stroke of a pen, to wipe out that form of competition, so that they can get more taxation from a product that cannot stand any tax. If you handcuff it and lock it you will sink it.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. SASSCER] has expired.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Delaware [Mr. BOGGS].

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to the bill, H. R. 195. Some of my reasons for opposing this bill are as follows:

First. It permits the creation of trade barriers, in violation of the purposes of the commerce clause of the Constitution, to create an area of free trade among the several States.

Second. It is the first attempt to use the power of the Federal Government, by criminal processes, if you please, to help the States to collect their local taxes.

Third. It will be a precedent for the extension of this legislation to all other commodities, with the substantial destruction of interstate trade and mail-order business.

Fourth. It will subject such properties as mail-order customers' lists, worth many millions of dollars, to the risk of arbitrary or improper dispersion.

Fifth. It is not only Federal aid to collection of purely local taxes, but is truly a harrassment of interstate business, aimed principally at destruction of it so far as sale of cigarettes is concerned.

Sixth. It will be a precedent for Federal examination and approval or disapproval of the tax statutes of the various States and thus an interference with basic States rights.

Seventh. It will cost the Federal Government substantial sums of money in attempting to enforce the legislation and will destroy many present sources of postal revenue to the Federal Government.

I have said the Jenkins bill would create a precedent, and I want to say now that I believe that precedent to be a most dangerous one. The large mail-order houses who do not sell cigarettes have expressed strong opposition to the bill as a matter of principle and have long opposed similar legislation in the past. The Post Office Department, although not consulted on this bill, has opposed previous bills of the same type. The Department of Justice last year took no position on the bill but pointed out its effect in creating a precedent the bounds of which could not be estimated. This is the first time in history that the Federal Government has been asked to help States collect local taxes. The arguments in favor of this bill apply equally to every commodity shipped in interstate commerce, be it shoes, clothing, food, and so forth. Gasoline taxes are an obvious example of transactions which may in some instances avoid State taxes—gifts for the family on return from trips, special licenses for particular types of commodities such as firearms and ammunition—the examples could be multiplied indefinitely. If the Jenkins bill is applied as a precedent, it would have disastrous consequences. The Federal Government would then be closing the channels of interstate commerce instead of opening them. It would stifle free trade and create independent sovereignties of the States, each with a protective tariff around it erected in the interest of the local merchant and the local tax collector and to the detriment of the national welfare.

This bill is most untimely for two reasons. There is already pending in the Congress a bill to increase postal rates. If such legislation is enacted, in all probability this vicious piece of legislation would not be necessary to accomplish the purpose of H. R. 195. The postal rates increase bill would automatically shut off the mail-order business in cigarettes because there is such a small margin of profit in this business. Furthermore, this bill comes at a time when every attempt is being made, without much success, to keep down Federal expenditures.

This bill proposes to destroy substantial sources of revenue for the Federal Government and impose additional burdens upon the Federal enforcement agencies. It will reduce postal revenue from interstate shipment. It will throw many people out of employment. It will impair existing businesses which pay the United States Government substantial taxes. It will impose upon the Department of Justice the expensive job of investigating and trying those who violate the statute.

This bill endeavors to accomplish something which is prohibited by the Constitution of the United States. It is a basic constitutional principle not subject to challenge that a State may tax only events which take place within its own borders. An attempt by a State to tax a citizen of another State for an act committed by the citizen of the other State in his own State would violate the due-process clause of the fourteenth amendment—Frick v. Pennsylvania (268 U. S. 473 (1925)); Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky (199 U. S. 194 (1905)). It would be an attempt to extend the jurisdiction of the State beyond its borders. For example, it would be unconstitutional under the due-process clause for the State of New York to attempt to tax a sale made in Delaware. But on an ordinary shipment of cigarettes from Delaware to New York for consumption, the entire transaction of sale takes place in Delaware. The cigarette smoker in New York, having received a circular by mail or having seen an advertisement, sends an order blank and a check to Delaware. In Delaware the check is accepted, the cigarettes are shipped by mail to the purchaser. Delaware is the place where the order is accepted, where transfer of title is effected, and where the shipment is made. The sale is a Delaware sale. For the State of New York to attempt to place a tax on that Delaware sale would be to attempt to tax an event which is outside its jurisdiction and it would be powerless to do so under the due-process clause.

Under the commerce clause the same transaction is equally immune from taxation by the State of New York. It is well established that a State may not tax transactions in interstate commerce. As long ago as 1887, the Supreme Court said in Robbins v. Shelby County (120 U. S. 489, 497):

Interstate commerce cannot be taxed at all, even though the same amount of tax should be laid on domestic commerce, or that which is carried on solely within the State.

That principle has recently been reaffirmed by the Supreme Court in the case of McLeod v. J. E. Dilworth Co. (322 U. S. 327 (1944)). There the Court held that it would be a violation of the commerce clause of the Constitution for Arkansas to place a sales tax on the sale of machinery and mill supplies from Memphis, Tenn. In that case the selling company had salesmen who traveled through Arkansas, but orders were accepted in Memphis and goods shipped from Tennessee. Title passed in Memphis and the sales price was collected there. As the Court said at page 328:

In short, we are here concerned with sales made by Tennessee vendors that are consummated in Tennessee for the delivery of goods in Arkansas.

Therefore, at page 330:

We would have to destroy both business and legal notions to deny that under these circumstances the sale—the transfer of ownership—was made in Tennessee. For Arkansas to impose a tax on such transactions would be to project its powers beyond its boundaries and to tax an interstate transaction.

And again at pages 330, 331:

The very purpose of the commerce clause was to create an area of free trade among the several States. That clause vested the power of taxing a transaction forming an unbroken process of interstate commerce in the Congress, not in the States.

It is, accordingly, perfectly clear that no State may impose its sales taxes on an interstate shipment of the type to which this bill would apply. The sales in all cases take place in the State of the shipper and not in the State of the consumer. The consumer's State may not constitutionally under the due-process clause and the commerce clauses apply its sales tax to the transaction of sale. Plainly, the purpose of H. R. 195 insofar as it is to assist States in collecting sales taxes on cigarettes is a bill to assist States in collecting taxes which they are prohibited by the Constitution from collecting.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. ELLSWORTH].

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to this bill. Not only am I opposed to the bill, but I voted against the rule. I seldom vote against a rule in this House, because I think in almost all cases a piece of legislation is entitled to be brought to the floor and discussed and acted upon. But in this case it seems to me the Congress is out of line in considering a measure of this kind, interfering, as it does, in the affairs of State government and in the field of taxation within the States.

Secondly, I have heard most of this debate. The reasoning for the passage of this bill seems to be based largely on the fact that the Governors or State administrations in several of the States want it. Arguments for the bill seem to be based also on losses to certain businesses in some of the States, but I have heard almost nothing said about the fact that the State taxes on cigarettes are taxes levied heaviest upon the poor people—people who have little incomes, who have few diversions. Call smoking a bad habit if you will; we are not legislating on the subject of morals at the moment; we are legislating on the subject of State taxes. It seems to me that this product, already taxed 40 percent of its normal retail value by the Federal Government, is supporting tax load enough. It seems to me that when a user of this product pays 6 or 7 cents Federal tax per pack that is tax enough under any circumstance. Many States; I do not know how many; I believe 39. Am I correct, I ask the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. COOPER. Thirty-nine States now tax cigarettes, and the rates range from 1 to 8 cents on the package.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Thirty-nine States have seen fit to impose a tax on this particular commodity. Now they are finding some difficulty in collecting the higher tax. If the States were more modest in their tax demands on this product, quite likely this situation would not have developed; but the fact is that the States are overtaxing this product, and the situation is that the Federal Government is now to be asked to police the shipment of cigarettes. I do not think the Federal Government should have any part in such an effort. I think that if the States are suffering as the result of their own folly in making the tax too high upon a product that is already overtaxed, they themselves should pay the penalty involved as the result of their own actions, and I do not think the Federal Government should be required, or that we here in Congress should be required, to help them out.

Mr. HUBER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. I yield.

Mr. HUBER. I agree with everything the gentleman has said. The House not long ago refused to place a 1-cent tax on the sale of cigarettes. When the tax bill for the District of Columbia was under consideration I offered an amendment for that purpose, but the House would not go along with it, yet we were seeking every possible means to increase the revenues of the District. The House in its wisdom did not see fit to charge 1 cent a package on cigarettes here in the District of Columbia.

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. I yield.

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. Will the gentleman state whether or not his State has a tax on cigarettes?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. My State, I am proud to say, does not have a cigarette tax.

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. So it makes no difference to the gentleman's State whether we pass this bill or not.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. I will put it this way: It will make little or no difference to my State whether we pass this bill or not. As to whether or not the people in my State would favor or not favor this legislation, I should say there would be about as much sentiment one way as the other. I believe it is quite likely that many people in my State approve of this bill. I oppose it on principle, because I think the Congress of the United States has no business legislating on such matters. The States, by their own tax laws have created the situation we are now asked to remedy. Let the States themselves undo what they have done and at the same time relieve their citizens who can least afford it from the tax burden that has been placed on them.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oregon has expired.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. LYNCH].

Mr. LYNCH. Mr. Chairman, I am very much in favor of this legislation. I believe it is forward-looking legislation. I think the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JENKINS] is to be congratulated upon proposing it. The reason I am in favor of it is that if we do not pass this legislation New York State will continue to lose $7,500,000 a year as a result of people sending cigarettes into New York State without a tax, while the great majority of the people of our State pay cigarette taxes. I think that is important; I think it is so important that when 39 States have a tax on cigarettes and it is possible for the few remaining States to evade that tax and cause a tax loss to the 39, it is about time we did something to try to help those States.

It has been said that this is a new departure. May I say that the New York State Assembly on March 30, 1949, passed the following resolution, which was subsequently concurred in by the senate, and about which I more recently received a letter from the chairman of the tax commission of the State of New York:

STATE OF NEW YORK, IN ASSEMBLY,
Albany, March 30, 1949.

Resolution 124

By Mr. Ostertag:

Whereas there is a tax levied by the State of New York on the sale of cigarettes; and

Whereas the revenue therefrom is essential to the payment of the State bonus to veterans and other obligations; and

Whereas the avoidance of this tax is possible and substantial revenue is being lost to the State by such avoidance; and

Whereas such avoidance occurs principally through the interstate shipment of cigarettes into the State from non-cigarette-taxing States; and

Whereas there is no remedy available for the stoppage of such avoidance except by action of the Federal Government to which by the Constitution of the United States has been delegated by the States the power to regulate commerce between the States; and

Whereas there are now 38 other States similarly affected: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved (if the senate concur), That the Legislature of the State of New York respectfully urge the Congress of the United States to speedily pass appropriate legislation effecting the disclosure to the tax administrators of the States taxing cigarettes by shippers thereof in non-cigarette-taxing States of shipments of cigarettes to other than State-licensed distributors in cigarette-taxing States; and be it further

Resolved (if the senate concur), That the Legislature of the State of New York respectfully urge the President of the United States to speedily approve such corrective legislation when, as, and if submitted to him for Executive approval; and be it further

Resolved (if the senate concur), That copies of this resolution be sent to the President of the United States, the Secretary of the Senate of the United States, the Clerk of the House of Representatives of the United States and to each Member of the Congress of the United States.

In senate, March 30, 1949.

Concurred in without amendment.

By order of the senate:

WILLIAM S. KING, Clerk.

By order of the assembly.

ANSLEY B. BORKOWSKI, Clerk.

Mr. Chairman, there is the action of the Legislature of the State of New York asking that we pass this legislation.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LYNCH. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. McSWEENEY. I am in sympathy with the legislation generally, but I am worried a little about the field of cosmetics and other items on which there is an excise tax and that we might be called upon to pass the same sort of legislation with reference to those taxes.

Mr. LYNCH. As far as I know, we have no State excise tax on cosmetics in New York. I do not know whether there is any such excise tax in any other State of the Union. I am referring to States which have specific taxes on cigarettes. Those States number 39. There are some of the other States that take advantage of the situation and bootleg cigarettes to the extent that we are seriously affected in New York to the tune of $7,500,000 a year, which has to do with the payment of bonuses to veterans. We are very much opposed to such avoidance of State taxes and we are glad, as is indicated by the resolution of the Assembly of the State of New York, to have the support of the United States Government.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman three additional minutes.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Is it not a fact that in the State of New York there is a law which permits any municipality to set up a sales tax of its own and might not that city put a sales tax on cosmetics and other things that might be affected by this law?

Mr. LYNCH. We have a law in New York which permits the city of New York to impose a sales tax. If the city of New York desires to impose a sales tax upon certain products in order to get money to aid those people who would be on public assistance, we believe we are perfectly justified in imposing such a tax as the city of New York desires to impose. But we get this permission from the State legislature. We have no right in New York City to impose any general taxes except those that are imposed under what we call the home-rule amendment whereby the State gives permission to do that which the gentleman has suggested. We have a sales tax in New York City, but it has not been abused.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CAMP].

Mr. CAMP. Mr. Chairman, there has been a good deal of confusion regarding this bill. Some of those who are opposed to it have not done much to clear the confusion. I was right well amused at the distinguished gentleman from North Carolina, the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture. It so happens that he is from one of the States that does not tax cigarettes, and from which State some of these so-called bootleggers are operating most extensively. You see, these operators that this bill is aimed at started in business over in Pennsylvania, and when Pennsylvania passed a cigarette use tax—by the way, let me digress here to say that this is not a sales tax in these States, but a use tax, the State law providing that a person who smokes cigarettes or who purchases cigarettes that do not have the State tax stamp on them is violating the law—when the State of Pennsylvania passed a law providing for a State tax on cigarettes, why that same jobber immediately moved over into another State. Some of these jobbers we have traced through three or four States. The one who is selling most of the non-tax-paid cigarettes in Georgia is a Georgian who moved up to North Carolina, just over the line, and is flooding our State with these non-tax-paid cigarettes.

Now, the gentleman asked me if there had ever been any precedent for any such law as this. I now want to cite him some precedents. The Congress has, for almost a century, passed laws regulating commerce between the States but especially have the following acts been passed to assist in the enforcement of State laws:

The Webb-Kenyon Act of March 1, 1913, prohibited the shipment of intoxicating liquor into a dry State in violation of the State law.

The Plant Inspection Act of March 4, 1915, provides that parcels containing plants or plant products addressed to a State having terminal-inspection facilities must be delivered to these inspection depots.

There were several laws passed to assist the States in the collection of revenues—mainly the law which opens Federal income-tax returns to the inspection of the taxing authorities in the States that have State income-tax laws, and the law which gives such information to the States that tax alcoholic liquors.

This act is similar to these. This simply provides that any person shipping cigarettes into a State that has a State tax on cigarettes must forward to the tax authorities of the State of the consignee a duplicate or copy of the invoice. That is all that is required.

We have the Post Service Act of March 3, 1917, prohibiting the use of the mails for liquor advertising or solicitation of orders for delivery at any place in any State where local law forbade the advertisement, sale, or solicitation of orders for liquor.

We have three acts of Congress to assist in the enforcement of the State tax laws.

We have the Costigan amendment to the Revenue Act of 1936, wherein it is provided that all Federal income returns shall be open to inspection by any official body or commission charged with the administration of any State tax law.

Then there is the Hayden-Cartwright Act of June 16, 1936, wherein the officer in charge of a post exchange or similar agency on Federal territory is directed to submit a written statement as to taxable gasoline sold and to remit the tax on same to the State tax administrator.

There are 8 or 10 more of these laws that have been passed by Congress to assist in the collection of State taxes, and they are here for anybody to see.

I wish you could read some of the advertisements of these men. I call them bootleggers, and I do not apologize for it.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CAMP. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. COOLEY. Did you say that the biggest bootlegger in North Carolina came from Georgia?

Mr. CAMP. I said he moved up into the gentleman's State in order to ship non-tax-paid cigarettes back into Georgia. I am wondering if the gentleman from North Carolina has ever talked to that gentleman.

Mr. COOLEY. I do not know the gentleman.

Mr. CHUDOFF. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CAMP. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. CHUDOFF. I have an open mind on this bill.

Mr. CAMP. I am mighty glad to hear it.

Mr. CHUDOFF. Suppose one of these people does not do what he is supposed to do under this bill, who enforces it?

Mr. CAMP. What do we have United States district attorneys in all these districts for?

Mr. CHUDOFF. Then the Department of Justice will have to enforce it?

Mr. CAMP. Of course it will. It is charged with the enforcement of all Federal law. If one of these fellows does not send this copy in, of course we expect the Department to go and get him, else why would we want this bill passed?

Mr. CHUDOFF. Then the Department of Justice would have to spend some money?

Mr. CAMP. Yes, and the Department of Justice approves this bill.

Some of the States that have levied these taxes have allocated the funds to the schools, some to the hospital authorities, and so on. The tax has dwindled so that in the last year it amounted to thirty or forty million dollars. We must cooperate with the States in the collection of taxes, as they must cooperate with us. We have had meetings of the committee of which I am a member with the State committees, in which we have discussed ways in which the Federal and the State Governments can cooperate so that one may help in one field and one in the other. This is a question of helping a State to enforce its laws, and I certainly ask your cooperation in passing the bill.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. CAMP. I yield.

Mr. COOLEY. Does the gentleman know why these letters from the Department and the Bureau of the Budget were not incorporated in the report?

Mr. CAMP. I have not seen them. Are they in the report?

Mr. COOLEY. No; they are not in the report.

Mr. CAMP. I am sure the gentleman could get them from the clerk of our committee if he wants them. Does the gentleman think there is any doubt about their doing it?

Mr. COOLEY. No. I just wondered why they were not in the report.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHORT].

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, when the roll call was had on the rule I was having lunch at the other end of the Capitol with the Vice President of the United States, the Speaker of the House, and other distinguished Members of both bodies in honor of Gen. Lucius Clay, whom we listened to with such great interest and profit today. Had I been present when the roll was called, I doubt if I would have voted against the rule, particularly after the Committee on Rules was kind enough to give me a hearing in opposition to this legislation. Whether we approve or disapprove of a bill, I think every man should have his day in court. It is with rare exception that I have ever voted against a rule for the consideration of any legislation whether I was in favor of it or opposed to it.

I want it distinctly understood, however, that I am unalterably opposed to this legislation because I believe it is dangerous.

It is most difficult and disagreeable to differ with or oppose any measure sponsored by that very venerable and able gentleman from North Carolina, our beloved BOB DOUGHTON, and my good friend, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JENKINS] or, for that matter, any other member of the distinguished Committee on Ways and Means.

But, I have always been taught in the schools that I have attended that we have a dual system of government. We have a Federal Government and we have 48 State governments. Whatever powers are not specifically delegated or granted to the Federal Government are reserved to the various States.

I am in opposition to this legislation on fundamental grounds. It is basically wrong. It strikes at the very core of States' rights, and if adopted, I fear it will bring us into chaos. I am not a lawyer, nor the son of a lawyer, and I cannot speak with the authority of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CAMP], but it seems to me the acts to which he refers are inapplicable in the present instance. I do not think the examples he cites are at all comparable or analogous to the pending legislation. In my humble, but honest opinion, this is the first time where the power of the Federal Government has been asked, with criminal penalities, if you please—6 months in jail and a thousand dollars fine—to help the various States collect their local taxes. If the local tax authorities can get the Federal Government to come in and help them collect taxes on cigarettes, they then can ask the Federal Government to come in and collect poll taxes or any other kind of taxes on all kinds of commodities. This would be unwise.

Mr. Chairman, I do not like these epithets, and words of opprobrium that have been hurled at men who are engaged in a lawful and legal business, branding these men as bootleggers and racketeers. They are not. Bootlegging is an unlawful activity. If this were a racketeering business or if this were bootlegging and if it were illegal and unlawful, then this legislation would not be before us at this moment. Everyone knows that. These men are engaged in a legal and lawful enterprise. Do you mean to tell me that if you live in a State where you pay 6 or 7 cents a gallon tax on your gasoline and you cross the border to buy your gas in some other State, or, let us say, in the District of Columbia, where you pay only 3 or 4 cents, that you are violating the law? Are you a criminal? Should you pay a fine or go to jail?

I think this law is absolutely unconstitutional. I thing it is unwise and unsound. It is unenforceable. If it is adopted, I think you are going to give encouragement to the expansion of this kind of legislation, not only to cigarettes, but to every other commodity. I do think that it strikes at the mail-order business in this country. Perhaps Sears, Roebuck sends out their statements, but I do not know who checks on them. And what about the other companies? If this legislation is passed, I believe the Post Office Department will lose hundreds of thousands and perhaps millions of dollars in revenue and at the same time I think it will impose additional burdens upon the Department of Justice and the additional expense will perhaps be as much as any tax that might be collected. Why harass our people further?

Not only do I believe the law is unconstitutional, but I think it is unenforceable. It is unworkable. I do not know who is going to be the stool pigeon or the spy or the snooper who is going to go around and visit every home or household to find out who is or is not getting legal cigarettes. I do not believe we want this kind of legislation. It has no place in America. Why, you might as well levy a tax upon the people who go to Reno or to Florida to get a divorce because of the cheap and lax laws in those States covering divorces. How can anyone who believes in States' rights and local self-government support such a measure?

Mr. Chairman, I hope we can defeat this legislation.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. BURNSIDE].

Mr. BURNSIDE. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to this bill on principle. I am opposed to it on the basis of our system of government. We are getting into the wrong type of thing when we legislate in this field.

Let me give you one illustration that probably you have not thought about. Suppose each individual here should buy four or five cartons of cigarettes and ship them home. If this law were enacted, would you not violate the same law? If you will read the section of this bill to which I refer, you will find that you will violate the law.

Can the States not pass proper laws to look after their own taxation? I feel sure that they can. After any package or packages of cigarettes have been shipped, when they come to a state of rest in another State, then the State has complete jurisdiction of those cigarettes, or anything else, for that matter. Then they could properly tax them.

We had some of this same trouble with automobiles. My State had to pass a use tax on automobiles. The cigarette tax that we are proposing is not a use tax, as has been stated today. It is a consumer tax.

I certainly would have as much sentiment for schools and veterans as anyone in this House. I am much in favor of building up our school system. I have taken opportunity on many occasions to speak for the schools of this country. As a matter of fact, I was a former professor. I taught constitutional law and I taught public administration. So I have been vitally interested in schools. I am opposed to this legislation on the basis of principle, so we will not violate our system of government. I could not lose this opportunity to speak in behalf of things that I hold dear today.

This is class legislation. Great lawyers, lawyers such as Mr. Arnold, have declared that this is class legislation. I wish to call your attention to the testimony that he gave before the committee.

This would mean a loss of revenue to the Post Office Department. You have men already assigned to do these jobs. If the cigarettes were not sold and shipped in interstate commerce, the revenue would drop off to the extent of two or three million dollars.

Let us examine the red tape. I have heard so many people say that they do not believe in red tape; they do not believe in red tape in government. It is unfortunate that I find those very same people today advocating very much expansion of red tape in government. Let us look at section 2 of this bill:

SEC. 2. Any person selling or disposing of cigarettes in interstate commerce whereby such cigarettes are shipped to other than a distributor licensed by or located in a State taxing the sale or use of cigarettes shall, not later than the 10th day of each month, forward to the tobacco tax administrator of the State into which such shipment is made, a memorandum or a copy of the invoice covering each and every such shipment of cigarettes made during the previous calendar month into said State; the memorandum or invoice in each case to include the name and address of the person to whom the shipment was made, the brand, and the quantity thereof.

If that is not a vast amount of red tape, I do not know what red tape is. We of the Committee on Expenditures in Executive Departments are trying to cut down on the cost of government. We have been meeting twice a day trying to iron out these difficulties and differences in government. Here we are establishing more functions for government to perform. Certainly this is a new job, if you are going to check it adequately.

Some of these people have been calling others bootleggers. If any of the men who used that name would use it off the floor, they could be prosecuted for using that expression.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. BURNSIDE] has expired.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY].

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I have listened very diligently to this debate as it has gone on here today and I am convinced by the arguments of those in opposition to the pending bill that they would be on sound, solid and very good ground if they were serving in the various State legislatures arguing against enactment of a State cigarette tax.

But we are not faced with that problem of levying a State cigarette tax. If we believe in the right of the States to levy their own taxes then I think we should recognize the responsibility that the Federal Government has not given aid in violating those State laws and thus help to make it impossible for the States to collect the taxes which the legislatures have determined should be raised in those various States.

The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHORT] spoke about States' rights. I am in favor of his citizens of Joplin, Mo., and these mail-order cigarette men enjoying all the State rights within the boundaries of the State of Missouri that they can enjoy. But when they dump millions of dollars worth of untaxed cigarettes over in Oklahoma and evade a State tax in the amount of about $3,000,000 then it ceases to be a State-rights question for the State of Missouri and becomes a part of the State rights of the State of Oklahoma. Thus these 39 cigarette-taxing States protest and look for some help to try and prevent the loss of some forty to fifty million dollars' worth of revenue that is so badly and desperately needed by these States for schools, veterans' benefits, pensions, and the like.

Mr. MAGEE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. MAGEE. The gentleman would want the citizens of Missouri to be taxed so that the Department of Justice could have a corps of agents go around over the State to help you folks collect your taxes?

Mr. MONRONEY. Oh, no. The only reason that these so-called mail-order cigarette houses exist is simply to evade the State cigarette tax in other States. The minute they have to make a return to the State taxing authorities, you will find that they will be out of business. Their only stock in trade is the tax evasion that they encourage.

Listen to this. Here is what they all say. I think we had over 100 of these advertisements in the hearings last year. Safety in tax evasion—it runs throughout every single one of these hearings, and no one can dismiss the fact that they are enjoying a business based on tax evasion that comes through the United States mail. This advertising quote is from the testimony of the chairman of the Oklahoma Tax Commission as found on page 114 of the hearings:

> Cigarettes at wholesale prices. Our best reference is the fact that we are conducting our business through the United States mails. Therefore, it is strictly legal and you are assured the privacy of the United States mails.

There we have the whole story behind an allegedly fine enterprise that is costing the various States multiplied millions of dollars.

These States are struggling to pay for their veterans' bonuses, their aid to education, their old people's pensions out of their cigarette taxes, and yet into every State go those advertisements by the hundreds of thousands to chip away their tax funds.

Let me tell you something. I have seen passed, in one-tenth of the time this bill has consumed, Federal aid for forty or fifty million dollars through this House. And yet today we spend 2 or 3 hours debating whether to cooperate with the States to collect forty or fifty million dollars of revenue that is justly theirs.

Mr. CAVALCANTE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. CAVALCANTE. I am a resident of the State of Pennsylvania. Suppose that I write to a mail-order house in Chicago and tell them to ship me four cartons of cigarettes, and enclosed herewith is the postage; please send them to me by parcel post. And they proceed to ship me those cigarettes. Who is the bootlegger, the mail-order house that is legitimately set up in Chicago, Ill., or me, in the State of Pennsylvania?

Mr. MONRONEY. Let me tell you who I think is the principal, though unwilling, bootlegger in this case, and I think we ought to do something about it. The biggest seller of tax-evaded cigarettes in every single one of the 39 States that have cigarette taxes is the United States Post Office. They sell more cigarettes in your town and in my town than any other single store in the whole city. Thus, you are not only discriminating against the States that are losing this forty to fifty million dollars of revenue, but you are discriminating against 1,500,000 licensed cigarette dealers who pay from $5 to $25 for the right to sell cigarettes on a legitimate, respectable basis in the State and at the same time collecting tax money for the State itself.

They pay for the privilege of selling the cigarettes, and they also collect the money to pay for the old folks' benefits, school aid, and the veterans.

In my State—get this figure, because it is true—we have 20,000 dealers who are paying $202,000 a year to sell cigarettes in Oklahoma, yet my State tax commissioner advises that more than $3,000,000 of State taxes are evaded.

Let us look at the story and see what happens. These 20,000 dealers, your constituents and mine, pay $202,000 to sell cigarettes. They are undersold by 50 cents a carton by these alleged mail-order houses that pay no taxes into these States, who have no license to do business there. But these licensed dealers are undersold by 50 cents. So, these dealers lose the sale of that carton of cigarettes because they cannot possibly take 50 cents off of the price. That 50 cents comes out of the tax that they would be compelled by law to levy.

The State also loses that 50 cents, and that is gone. Who makes the money? I will tell you who makes it. One of these 200 mail-order cigarette bootleggers makes it. But he does not make the 50 cents that the dealer loses; he does not make the 50 cents that the State loses. He makes 10 cents. So there you have the story of the break-down of a system of revenue for the States that is truly dangerous.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. COOLEY. Why could not the State of Oklahoma make it unlawful to receive or consume cigarettes upon which the State tax has not been paid?

Mr. MONRONEY. It is unlawful, but these cigarettes all come in, as the gentleman knows.

Mr. COOLEY. The gentleman says it is unlawful now to receive and use them?

Mr. MONRONEY. It is unlawful. It is a use tax, and it is unlawful to have in your possession a package of cigarettes on which the tax has not been paid.

Mr. COOLEY. Why could you not go to the post office and find out who is violating the law?

Mr. MONRONEY. That is a thing we cannot do, and that is the reason for this bill. The sanctity of the United States mails is involved. If it were a private business, sure, we could collect that tax, but we are building up this great cigarette business in the United States post offices and depriving our States of this needed revenue. The confidential nature of these parcel post shipments make it possible to safely evade State law.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. JENNINGS].

Mr. JENNINGS. Mr. Chairman, I have been greatly interested and informed by my able and distinguished colleagues in the debate on this measure. My interest in this measure is to protect the taxpayers of my State, the small-business man who is your neighbor and mine. We must have taxes. Only the savage pays no taxes. And I am interested in preserving the prosperity of the men and women who support our churches, our schools, our disabled veterans, and our old people.

I had a predecessor in this House more than 30 years ago who voted against all tax measures and in favor of all appropriations. That was his program always, in and out of Congress.

With respect to the use of tobacco, I quit again, for the fourth time, 3 years ago and I think finally. It burned a hole in my pocketbook and in my clothes and I thought hurt me physically. For quite a while I was a little bit like a lawyer in the town in which I grew up who was addicted to strong drink. He was a fine and able man, and when he would sober up he would be remorseful. His friends would say to him, "Reid, why don't you quit?" He would say in reply, "My trouble is I quit too often."

On my farm, I raise tobacco. It is a profitable crop in Tennessee. It is a profitable crop all over the country. The tobacco crop brings the tobacco farmers $1,000,000,000 a year. That is no mean sum for the people of the States where it is grown and for the people of the entire country, and the taxes on tobacco bring to the Government of this country

$1,000,000,000 yearly in revenue. This is one crop that more than pays its way.

Why not afford protection to the home dealers in cigarettes, the corner drug stores, the grocery stores, the tobacco stores, all the dealers who pay a privilege tax, ad valorem taxes, and property taxes on their places of business and on their homes? Why not afford them protection? They pay taxes that support the schools of their communities, that maintain the streets and the roads of the cities and towns in which they live. These people are our neighbors, our friends who help support the old people and contribute to the support of our local, State, and Federal Governments.

This is not a drastic bill. I see nothing in it that threatens the liberties of the people of this country. It places the duty upon a dealer in cigarettes, who ships them from one State to an unlicensed dealer in another State, to send a duplicate invoice to the taxing authority of the States into which he ships these cigarettes.

Oh, they say there will be an army of spies and informers turned loose on the people. That will not happen. The average man who has money and intelligence enough to engage in an interstate business shipping cigarettes to other States is not going to subject himself to a prison term or to a fine of a thousand dollars by violating this law. I just cannot see anything here which constitutes a threat to the liberty of the people. I do not see in this proposed law any hidden weapon which is designed to overthrow the Constitution. When a fellow is hard up in a lawsuit, he, as a last resort, raises the question of the constitutionality of the law involved. This proposed measure will protect the local dealer in cigarettes who pays taxes against the competition of a nonresident dealer who pays no taxes. This proposed law simply says to the fellow who wishes to ship cigarettes from one State to another to an unlicensed dealer in cigarettes that when he makes the shipment he shall mail a duplicate invoice to the State taxing authority. As I have pointed out such a dealer has money and is intelligent, and he will observe the law. If he does not, he has no one to blame but himself. We ought to keep the tobacco trade on the level of a lawful business. As I said a while ago, it is an important source of revenue to the people of the country. The 5,000 tobacco growers in my district reap a reward each year through the sale of their tobacco of $3,000,000. The dealers also make a profit. They all contribute to the prosperity of their community and to the support of their Government. For these reasons I shall support this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Tennessee has expired.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I want to compliment the Members who have engaged in this debate this afternoon. In other words, I think, outside of listening to me, we have all had a pretty good time. It has been my purpose to grant time to those in opposition as well as to the proponents of the bill. We do not wonder that the Members who come from other States which do not have a use tax would have a different interest than those who come from States whose tax laws are being thwarted. I would like to leave this thought with you. There is a difference between a sales tax and a use tax. The use tax is a tax on your right to use a commodity. In my State of Ohio we have a 2-cent use tax. That means that a man has no right to use a pack of cigarettes until he has paid that 2 cents tax. There has been so much talk here that there are going to be so many violations. I just want to read to you a few statements made by the tax authority in Ohio to show how fine and law-abiding and magnificent most of the people of the Nation are who are engaged in shipping cigarettes. As I said before, there are only a comparatively few of these so-called bootleggers. There are not very many. But they are very disturbing, and they are taking a terrific toll. In my State we do not run after these people who may have a pack of cigarettes that does not have a stamp on it. We do not run after such people, because it is too much trouble, and, furthermore, what would be the use? Let me show you how nicely most of these shippers of cigarettes cooperate. Here is what Mr. Glander, the tax commissioner of Ohio, says. He is an able man, a good lawyer, and a fine administrator. I do not know whether he is a Republican or a Democrat, for he is now serving under a Democratic governor, and served under the last governor, who is a Republican.

I would at least like to get the attention of the Members from Ohio before I read what Mr. Glander says:

> There are some 300 out-of-State firms registered and authorized to collect the use tax, without using stamps to make quarterly remittances to Ohio.

There are 300 of them, like Sears, Roebuck and these other big mail-order houses. There are 300 of them that make their own reports and their own returns to the State of Ohio, which accepts them. They send in hundreds of thousands of dollars in taxes. These people cooperate.

Let us see further what this tax man says. He has two other categories:

> In addition to these, there are approximately 1,000 out-of-State firms registered under our use-tax laws, who make use of the stamp taxes.

There are a thousand of them outside of these 300 big fellows who qualify and meet the test of the law. If all the principal shippers cooperate, why permit a lot of unethical operators to violate the principle of the law?

You recall the case of this man who came up out of the State of Georgia into North Carolina and who told us that he had left Georgia and gone to North Carolina because he knew he could undermine these laws. He said he was going to carry on in this way even if he was a Presbyterian. But he said in effect: "As soon as you pass this law I will go back to Georgia."

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENKINS. I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. We have a sales tax in South Dakota which applies to commodities generally. In order to make that sales tax effective, we have a use tax and it operates exactly as the gentleman from Ohio has described. It is easy to make the use tax effective if it is an automobile, because when you register your car, if you have not paid the original sales tax, you have to pay the use tax. There is nothing that compels a man when he smokes a cigarette to come in and pay the tax.

Mr. JENKINS. Yes. It is a violation of law in Ohio and all of these other States that have use taxes, for a man to use cigarettes, just as it would be for him to use them without the Federal tax stamp on them. But we do not want to be snooping around. The cigarette business is a tremendously large business. The States collect a total tax of hundreds of millions of dollars. We know that the great bulk of the people comply with the spirit of the law. There are only a few people who do not. We want to reach them. That is what we are trying to do.

I cannot understand how the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. BURNSIDE] can justify himself from the standpoint of rendering service to his State and his constituents. There was only one man who came out of his State before the committee and he testified that he was the only man in West Virginia engaged in that line of business. I do not see why the gentleman, an ex-professor in school, can justify his action with reference to ethics, that he would encourage that man to follow a course entirely different from the course followed by about 99 percent of the persons engaged in shipping cigarettes.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JENKINS] has expired.

Mr. JENKINS. I yield myself five additional minutes, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENKINS. I yield.

Mr. COOLEY. I want to know to whom you had reference when you looked this way and said something about somebody having a client who was a bootlegger.

Mr. JENKINS. I will withdraw the word "client." I meant constituent.

Mr. COOLEY. He is not even my constituent. I do not have any constituents engaged in any such business. I do not even know the man that you have reference to.

Mr. JENKINS. I assume the gentleman, with his great ability, represents the whole State of North Carolina. I am sure he is highly esteemed down there as he is here in Congress. He knows of the high esteem I have for him.

Mr. COOLEY. I do not know to whom you had reference. I do not represent any bootlegger.

Mr. JENKINS. Let not your heart be troubled, we all understand that. I told you I had reference to the man who came out of Georgia and said he came up to North Carolina so he could stay in your State long enough to make some money by shipping cigarettes into States which had a tax on the use of cigarettes.

Mr. COOLEY. That was the gentleman from Georgia's [Mr. CAMP'S] constituent.

Mr. BURNSIDE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENKINS. I yield to the gentleman from West Virginia.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I would like to ask the gentleman: Suppose a person from the State of Ohio should write to one of these companies and ask them to ship cigarettes to him.

Mr. JENKINS. All right. If he does that, whoever employs the mails or an instrumentality of interstate commerce to ship cigarettes into the State of Ohio without having made arrangements to stamp them must send notice to the Ohio tax authorities. That is all he would have to do.

Mr. BURNSIDE. Is that in the bill?

Mr. JENKINS. Yes; that is in the bill. That is the very essence of the bill. I am sure that if the gentleman had studied the bill carefully he would be in favor of it as I dare say 90 percent of the people of West Virginia are.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENKINS. I yield.

Mr. McSWEENEY. The gentleman has spoken about the interest in this debate. I think that was a credit to you for allowing even your opponents to have plenty of time to discuss it. I do not like your use of the word "bootlegger," because I was in Italy and I saw a lot of boys who bought cigarettes for 50 cents a carton and sent them home to their people who did not have any cigarettes. They were not violating the law, but they were simply trying to take care of their people.

Mr. JENKINS. I thank the gentleman. I am not responsible for this word which they use. It is the word they use in the trade. I think that is what they call themselves.

I want to pay a compliment to the great bulk of people who ship cigarettes. I do not want to be tedious about this. I have mentioned it before, but the great bulk of the people, 95 or 99 percent of them, obey the law, not only the law of Ohio but of every other State. They found out it was best to do it. Why do you shed so many tears over so few people? I expect one of the No. 1 men in the business went out of business in New York a few days ago when he took advantage of the bankruptcy laws.

Mr. JENNINGS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENKINS. I yield.

Mr. JENNINGS. There has been a good deal said in this debate about the loss of revenue to the Postal Department. Is it not a known fact that the Postal Department carries commodities like cigarettes, books, and other merchandise at a loss?

Mr. JENKINS. Yes. There is a bill pending in this Congress to increase the rate on second-class mail matter, because it does not pay. It is an unsound argument to advance by claiming that the Post Office Department loses revenue. It does not lose revenue when it costs $2 for every $1.50 that comes back in postage.

Mr. RIVERS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENKINS. I yield.

Mr. RIVERS. Are you putting into the RECORD the amount of revenue lost by the respective States as a result of this tax?

Mr. JENKINS. I am not sure that I have them all. If I have, I will put them in the RECORD. My best recollection is that the States lose $40,000,000. In fact, I know that one person testified to that figure.

Mr. Chairman, I have prepared a complete brief showing the Supreme Court decisions on all phases of any charge that this bill when enacted into law will be unconstitutional. This brief is as follows:

The objection has been raised that such a measure as House Resolution 195 "may set a precedent for similar legislation with respect to other items upon which the States have imposed, or may impose, a sales or use tax."

As to this argument it is respectfully submitted that a precedent would not be established. On the contrary, the Congress actually has established a precedent for such action by enacting legislation to aid the States in the enforcement of certain State laws.

The Wilson Act of August 8, 1890 (26 Stat. L. 313, ch. 728), subjected intoxicating liquors transported into any State to the operation of State laws to the same extent as though they had been produced within the State, although still in the original package. This act was upheld by the Supreme Court in Re Rahrer (140 U. S. 545, 35 L. Ed. 572, 11 S. Ct. 865).

The Wilson Act did not apply until the transportation was completed by actual delivery to the consignee. Thus Congress enacted the Webb-Kenyon Act of March 1, 1913 (37 Stat. L. 699, ch. 90). This act prohibited the transportation of intoxicating liquors into any State where it was intended that they should be "received, possessed, sold, or in any manner used" in violation of its laws. The Supreme Court upheld this act in Clark Distilling Company v. Western Maryland R. Co. (242 U. S. 311, 61 L. Ed. 326, 37 S. Ct. 180).

Justice White, speaking for the Court, on page 324, said: "Reading the Webb-Kenyon law in the light thus thrown upon it by the Wilson Act and the decisions of this Court which sustained and applied it, there is no room for doubt that it was enacted simply to extend that which was done by the Wilson Act, that is to say, its purpose was to prevent the immunity characteristic of interstate commerce from being used to permit the receipt of liquor through such commerce in States contrary to their laws, and thus in effect afford a means of subterfuge and indirection to set such laws at naught."

The Hawes-Cooper Act of January 19, 1929 (45 Stat. L. 1084, ch. 79, 49 W. S. C. A., par. 65), provided that convict-made goods transported into any State should be subject upon arrival, whether in the original package or not, to the operation of State laws as if produced within the State. This act was upheld in Whitfield v. Ohio (297 U. S. 431, 80 L. Ed. 778, 56 S. Ct. 532). The Court in this case held that this was not a delegation of congressional power to the States but was a removal of impediment to State control presented by the broken package doctrine. The Court also held that there was no violation of the privileges and immunities clause of the Federal Constitution where the statute also prohibited sale in open market of goods made in Ohio by convict labor.

The Hawes-Cooper Act was followed by the Ashurst-Summers Act of July 24, 1935 (49 Stat. L. 494, ch. 412, 49 U. S. C. A., pars. 61, 62). This act relates to the interstate transportation of convict-made goods and has about the same provisions as those of the Webb-Kenyon Act with respect to intoxicating liquors. It also required that packages containing convict-made goods be labeled, disclosing the nature of the contents, the name and location of the penal institutions where the goods were produced, and the names and addresses of shippers and consignees. The act was upheld by the Supreme Court in Kentucky Whip & Collar Company v. Illinois Central Railroad Company (299 U. S. 334, 81 L. Ed. 270, S. Ct. 277). The opinion in this case, written by Mr. Chief Justice Hughes, contains an excellent review of congressional enactments "designed to prevent the use of interstate transportation to hamper the execution of State policy." The opinion stated "while the power to regulate commerce resides in the Congress, which must determine its own policy, the Congress may shape that policy in the light of the fact that transportation in interstate commerce, if permitted, would aid in the frustration of valid State laws for the protection of persons and property. * * * The Congress has formulated its own policy and established its own rule. The fact that it has adopted its rule in order to aid the enforcement of valid State laws affords no ground for constitutional objection."

Another instance of action by the Congress in order to protect the declared policy of the States is the enactment into law of prohibitions on the interstate transportation of lottery tickets, lists, etc. This legislation was upheld in the famous case of Champion v. Ames (23 S. Ct. 321, 188 U. S. 321). Justice Hughes, speaking for the Court, said: "In legislating upon the subject of the traffic in lottery tickets, as carried on through interstate commerce, commerce only supplemented the action of those States—perhaps all of them—which, for the protection of the public morals, prohibit the drawing of lotteries, as well as the sale or circulation of lottery tickets, within their respective limits. It said, in effect, that it would not permit the declared policy of the States, which sought to protect their people against the mischiefs of the lottery business, to be overthrown or disregarded by the agency of interstate commerce. We should hesitate long before adjudging that an evil of such appalling character, carried on through interstate commerce, cannot be met and crushed by the only power competent to that end."

By the enactment of the Connelly Act (15 U. S. C. 715), Congress declared its policy to be that of protecting interstate and foreign commerce from the diversion and obstruction of and the burden and harmful effect upon such commerce caused by contraband oil. In this act, contraband oil was defined as petroleum, any constituent part of which was produced, transferred, or withdrawn from storage in excess of the amounts permitted to be produced, transferred, or withdrawn from storage under the laws of a State. The constitutionality of this enactment was upheld in the case of Griswold v. The President of the United States (82 F. 2d 922). The Court said the purpose of the act was to aid the States in enforcing laws limiting the amount of oil permitted to be produced from wells in designated fields by prohibiting shipments of excess oil commonly known as "hot oil" in interstate commerce. It is settled that the law is a valid enactment of Congress to effect that purpose. In the case of United States v. Skeen (118 F. 2d 58), the Court said the statute authorizing district courts to enjoin persons dealing interstate in contraband oil from doing so is not invalid as an invasion of State powers or as improper legislation of interstate commerce since the act dealt only with interstate commerce for the purpose of supplementing State legislation. It takes up where State policy ends and by supplementing its legislation it makes effective the general will of the people of Texas expressed in its conservation laws.

Congress again aided the States in the enforcement of their laws by enacting a law prohibiting game birds killed contrary to State laws from being shipped in interstate commerce and prohibited transportation from one State to a State where the importation is prohibited by State law. In Bogle v. White (61 Fed. 2d 930) the court said the definition of the offense is the taking, capture, etc., of birds contrary to laws of the State and makes this section of the Federal law coextensive with and effective to enforce their acts. (The acts of the States.)

There are many other instances where Congress has regulated interstate commerce to prevent the use of that commerce as an impediment to State policy. Congress has provided for penalties for transportation or distribution in commerce of misbranded wool products (15 U. S. C. 68 (a)); has set up standards for shipment of goods or dry commodities in barrels of less capacity than standard barrels as defined (15 U. S. C. 235); has provided against the shipment of falsely marked gold or silverware manufactured after June 13, 1907 (15 U. S. C. 331); has provided against the shipment of firearms in interstate commerce (18 U. S. C. 361); has provided against the introduction into interstate commerce of adulterated or misbranded food products (21 U. S. C. 331); has provided against advertising securities without disclosing consideration (15 U. S. C. 77 (b)); has provided against the transportation of contraceptive drugs (18 U. S. C. 396). In the Eureka Productions v. Lehman (17 F. Supp. 259) the Court stated that the purpose of this section (18 U. S. C. 396) was to supplement State legislation.

The courts have upheld the regulation by Congress of interstate commerce to supplement State laws. As in the case of Reid v. Colorado (187 U. S. 137), it was held that Congress could prevent diseased stock from entering into interstate commerce. In the Lottery Case (188 U. S. 321) it was held that Congress could prevent the transmission of lottery tickets in interstate commerce. In the Hipolite Egg Co. v. United States (220 U. S. 45) it was held that Congress could prevent the transportation of adulterated articles if it would deceive or injure purchasers.

These instances are merely examples of Congress exercising police power with the field of interstate commerce for the benefit of the people. Congress can regulate interstate commerce to the extent of punishing and forbidding its use as an agency to promote immorality, dishonesty, or the spread of any evil or harm from one State to the people of another State (Brooks v. United States (267 U. S. 432)).

The unregulated sale of cigarettes in interstate commerce promotes violation of the law, and therefore the sale of cigarettes in interstate commerce from a nontaxing State to a taxing State where the seller does not collect the tax nor advise the State of those to whom he sells, but actually solicits business on the basis that the people of the State can evade their tax laws by purchasing from him, would be a proper case for Congress to act to prevent these sellers from aiding and abetting tax evasions by the citizens of a taxing State. The Kentucky Whip case (299 U. S. 334) states: "Congress has the power to prohibit the movement of harmless and useful goods in interstate commerce. The social interest of protection of life and welfare in business is sufficient to satisfy the due process of law requirement of the Constitution."

One who successfully evades his legal obligations obtains a competitive advantage over his law-abiding competitor. In the interest of fair competition among the sellers selling to those in taxing States, Congress should pass such legislation as proposed in H. R. 195. Congress should not let interstate commerce be used as a shield by the seller to secure an unfair competitive advantage over those sellers who must collect and do collect taxes under State law. For Congress to deny the right to supplement State tax laws in this instance would be to deny merchants an equal competitive basis under the law and unfair competition would be fostered as would tax evasion.

The opponents to H. R. 195 have questioned the constitutionality of such an act in that it would be a burden on interstate commerce and that such an enactment is not a valid exercise of Federal power.

The requirements set forth in H. R. 195 to require all out-of-State sellers to furnish the tax administrator of the State in which shipment is made with names and addresses of their purchasers, together with the cigarettes and the quantity thereof, is not a burden on interstate commerce in that he may either do this or collect and remit the tax as other sellers within the State. There is no discrimination, in that the State imposes a tax on cigarettes sold in the State as well as a tax on the use of cigarettes which are brought in from outside the State and consumed in the State. The United States Supreme Court has upheld the right of a State to require an out-of-State seller to collect the use tax (General Trading Co. v. Iowa (322 U. S. 335)). The effect of the law would not be to burden interstate commerce but, instead, would serve to alleviate unfair competition, as in the case of a resident-seller who must collect the tax whereas the out-of-State seller does not and, as a result, continually undersells the local dealer. However, Congress, within the limits of the fifth amendment, has the authority to burden commerce if they deem it a desirable means of accomplishing a permitted end (Morgan v. Commonwealth of Virginia (66 S. Ct. 1050)).

The opponents to H. R. 195 further state that they have a property right in the names and addresses of the customers and that H. R. 195 would violate the provisions against unlawful search and seizure. The same question was raised by Kentucky dealers under a Kentucky statute which required cigarette sellers to report alleged exempted sales to the tax commissioner. Such a list of customers and addresses was furnished Ohio under an agreement for mutual assistance in enforcing the Kentucky cigarette tax on Ohio use tax. Dixie Wholesale v. Martin (278 Ky. 275) held that transmitting such report to the commissioner was no violation of the Federal Constitution. Such act would not constitute (1) interference with interstate commerce nor (2) illegal search and seizure inasmuch as there would be no proceeding of any kind against the seller on the basis of information furnished and he may refuse to furnish the names and addresses of his customers by collecting the cigarette use tax. Certiorari was denied by the United States Supreme Court (308 U. S. 609).

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has again expired.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself one additional minute.

Mr. COOLEY. I wish to ask the gentleman, in view of the argument made by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CAMP], if he knows of any law that requires distillers of alcoholic beverages to transmit invoices to the States to which the whisky is sent?

Mr. JENKINS. No; they are not nearly as lenient as we are in this bill. They make it a violation of law.

Mr. COOLEY. But they do not require the transmittal of invoices.

Mr. JENKINS. No. That is a complement to this bill. All a man has to do is to send an invoice or statement that he has sent the cigarettes into the State. It is very simple, more simple than in any other law of this kind.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has again expired.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may require to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HARRISON].

BUREAUCRACY EYES THE CIGARETTE TAX

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. Chairman, this bill will impose upon the Federal taxpayer the cost of enforcing local tax laws in many States and cities. It will impose unfair and unconstitutional restrictions upon tobacco, a great agricultural industry.

Tobacco is paying an excessive and oppressive share of the taxes collected by the Federal Government, the States, and some municipalities. From each pack of cigarettes the tobacco farmer is lucky if he gets 2 cents. The Federal Government levies 7 cents on every pack. On top of this, 39 States have seen fit to levy a tax of from 1 to 8 cents a pack. In recent years, municipalities have imposed additional sales levies.

And now, in this legislation, these States and large cities want to spend the money of Federal taxpayers, including that of tobacco farmers themselves, to increase the unconscionable burden which tobacco growers already are forced to bear.

I have listened with interest to the distinguished Representatives from large eastern areas in their descriptions of the desperate need of their States and cities for the revenue from taxation of cigarettes. I sympathize with their predicament. Possibly if they could induce the authorities of their States and cities to practice economy in government, as we do in Virginia, their problems would not be so pressing. But that is a matter that lies within the discretion of their local governments. All we in rural areas ask of them is that they manage their own affairs and leave us alone to manage ours.

But this is something the great urban centers of the northeastern section of the country simply will not do. They want this Congress to pass laws telling us who may vote in our local elections; they want Federal laws taking from us our local police powers; in their iniquitous FEPC proposal they want to subject all business and business relations to total control of Washington bureaucracy, enforced by a Federal gestapo.

Although theirs is the wealthiest section of the Nation, we never turn around without finding their governors or mayors, hat in hand, begging for Federal money to bail them out of some trouble of their own making. They want to impose additional crushing taxation upon us to build houses in their great cities to be rented to their citizens on subsidy supported by Federal taxation. They want to tax us to provide for them when they are sick and when they are well, when they are young and when they are old. In extortionate tariff levies they impose heavy burdens upon us to protect their industries from competition.

In the bill now before the House, they want the Federal taxpayer to put up the money and provide the police to do the budgetary housekeeping in their own States. For this purpose the swollen Federal bureaucracy must have more agents, more prosecutors, more personnel to provide for this adventure in snoopery.

They claim that mail orders for cigarettes paying no State taxes on tobacco have reached the proportions of big business. If this is true, the passage of this bill will add substantially to the large loss in the operation of the Post Office Department by depriving it of the postage revenue from mail-order shipments. It is only in States which have resorted to unreasonable imposts on cigarettes that tax avoidance through mail purchases has become a problem.

It is true that the tobacco farmer is the only producer hurt in this particular bill, but I want to warn those of you who do not represent tobacco-growing areas that those States and cities which tax tobacco so heavily that they have to come to the Federal Government to enforce their levy on their own citizens already are taxing everything in the heavens above, the earth beneath, and the waters under the earth. Once they get the Federal Government to act as policemen over tobacco, they will be here asking for the same bureaucratic control on products grown or manufactured in your district.

For these reasons I urge the defeat of this measure.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Chairman, we have no further requests for time on this side.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. COOPER].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee is recognized for 8 minutes.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, it is not my intention to ask the indulgence of the House very long on this occasion. I believe that any opposition to the pending bill can readily be cured by reading the bill by sections. The bill is simple, and its purpose is very clear: The main purpose and effect of the enactment of this legislation is to require the citizen of a State to observe the laws of his own State; that is all there is to it. If a man lives in a State that has a State cigarette tax and he wants to order cigarettes from some other State where there is no tax, wants to order them for the purpose of evading the tax levied by his own State, he is the man who should be designated as the tax evader, or whatever you wish to call a man who is evading a tax imposed by his State on cigarettes.

When the distinguished gentleman from North Carolina, my good friend, the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, said that he was against all tobacco taxes, he covered his field; and that is the reason for his speech. He is against all tobacco taxes. But 39 States of the Union, in the wisdom of their legislatures, have seen fit to levy a cigarette tax. The purpose of this bill is to assist those States in the collection of that revenue from the citizens of those States, and that is all it amounts to.

The only duty or obligation imposed upon anybody under this bill who ships cigarettes into a State where a State tax is imposed is simply to forward to the taxing authority of that State a copy of the invoice, or a simple memorandum; in other words, if somebody in the great State of Missouri, where they do not have a State cigarette tax, wishes to send a shipment of cigarettes to my State of Tennessee, he simply mails to the commissioner of finance and taxation of the State of Tennessee a copy of the invoice or a simple memorandum that he has shipped those cigarettes, and he is free; no other duties or obligations are imposed upon him. He simply states to the commissioner of finance and taxation of Tennessee in writing that: "On the 17th day of May 1949, I shipped to JERE COOPER, at Dyersburg, Tenn., 10 cartons of Camel cigarettes." That is all. There is no further duty or obligation imposed upon him. It is thought by your committee that this is only a fair and reasonable degree of cooperation for the Federal Government to give these 39 States to help them see to it that the citizens of those States obey the laws of the States.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOPER. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. COOLEY. The gentleman has been a member of the Ways and Means Committee for a number of years. Can he tell us of any other single solitary Federal act comparable to this?

Mr. COOPER. The gentleman asked that same question a year ago.

Mr. COOLEY. And I got no answer.

Mr. COOPER. I answered it then and many others have answered it. There are many, many acts of Congress directly comparable with the pending bill. There is no question about that. The hearings amply show it. And if the gentleman will take the time to look them up or simply walk back there to the table, the clerk of the Ways and Means Committee will be delighted to point them out to him and assist him in that respect.

Mr. COOLEY. If the gentleman will mention one of the acts I would appreciate it.

Mr. COOPER. There are plenty of them. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CAMP] has already mentioned quite a number of them.

Mr. COOLEY. None of them are applicable.

Mr. COOPER. Every one of them is absolutely and directly applicable.

As I said a moment ago, 39 States of the Union impose a State cigarette tax. By this method that has developed very largely in recent years of people setting themselves up in business in a State where the cigarette tax is not imposed and shipping cigarettes into States where the tax is imposed, the States imposing the cigarette tax are losing around forty or fifty million dollars a year in State revenue by reason of this evasion. As I said earlier, it simply means that a citizen of that State is evading the law of his own State.

This State tax ranges all the way from 1 cent a pack in West Virginia to 8 cents a pack in the State of Louisiana. Think about that for a moment. Think about what 8 cents a pack on cigarettes means. If they are evading the tax, the profit of that amount will run to an enormous figure. Some States have six, some five, some four, I believe more of them have three than any other figure. When you consider the margin of profit in a package of cigarettes and consider further the fact that you are shipping them in volume—maybe a dozen or 20 or 50 or 100 cartons—you can see how much this tax amounts to. These people are largely setting themselves up in business to make the profit of this tax on the sale of cigarettes, thereby enabling the citizens of a State to evade the law of their own State and prevent the payment of a tax the legislature of that State has imposed upon them.

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOPER. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. The gentleman heard the statement made a while ago that the Post Office Department would lose some $2,000,000 by virtue of the revenues they were getting. Is it not a fact that Postmaster General Donaldson has stated that the Post Office Department is losing money on the parcel-post business?

Mr. COOPER. That is absolutely true. In all probability the mailing of these invoices and these memoranda by first-class mail will bring in more revenue than the Post Office Department will lose on the parcel-post items.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Tennessee has expired.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman five additional minutes.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOPER. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. McSWEENEY. I am deeply interested in the gentleman's analysis because he is very basic in his consideration of legislation. Does he think it will follow that cosmetics and other things will come in the same category as we place cigarettes if this legislation is passed?

Mr. COOPER. I appreciate the gentleman's comment, but nothing else can come under this law unless the Congress acts.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Could it not be applied upon cosmetics as well?

Mr. COOPER. I do not think so; the fact remains that nothing of that kind could be done unless the Congress passed legislation providing for that.

Bear in mind another thing, as was pointed out earlier, with the exception of liquor, you can scarcely find any commodity that carries as high a relative tax as cigarettes and tobacco. I do not think it would establish a precedent at all.

Mr. CAVALCANTE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOPER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. CAVALCANTE. I used the example of a citizen of Pennsylvania sending a letter to Chicago, a mail-order house, and ordering four cartons of cigarettes. Under this bill the mail-order house will send a copy of the invoice to the State of Pennsylvania that the mail-order house has sold the citizen of Pennsylvania four cartons of cigarettes. Now may I ask the gentleman this question? If the tax is imposed upon the sale of the cigarettes in the State of Pennsylvania, how will any law declare the consumer, the citizen who merely consumes that cigarette, in violation of the law, or a bootlegger—how will this act assist the State in collecting any tax there?

Mr. COOPER. That will depend entirely on your State law. If the State statute in Pennsylvania imposes a use tax on cigarettes, and your State taxing official—in Tennessee it is the commissioner of finance and taxation, but whatever your comparable State official is—when he has knowledge that John Jones in a certain city in Pennsylvania has received this shipment of cigarettes, then it is his duty to apply the law of the State of Pennsylvania. If that law imposes a use tax, he can collect. Of course, if there is a defect in the law of the State of Pennsylvania, that is a job for the State Legislature of Pennsylvania.

Mr. CAVALCANTE. If the State law imposes a sales tax, there has been a sale of cigarettes made, but the State of Pennsylvania cannot collect any tax.

Mr. COOPER. That will depend on your State law.

Mr. STEED. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOPER. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. STEED. The gentleman is aware that while the testimony shows that this year several States are losing forty to fifty million dollars in revenue, the history of this whole thing, since the imposition of cigarette taxes, is that each year it gets larger, and, unless the Congress acts on this bill, as the years go by this loss can be expected to increase to many millions of dollars more than the record now shows is being lost.

Mr. COOPER. The gentleman is correct. On page 72 of the hearings you will see a list of the 39 States that impose a cigarette tax. You will find the amount of the tax ranging from 1 to 8 cents a pack; you will find in the year 1948 the amount received from that tax and then you will find also the amount of the loss of the tax to those different States.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOPER. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DONDERO. Not long ago the National Building Administrator came before the Committee on Public Works, Mr. Reynolds, in whom we have a great deal of confidence, and said that if it were not for the parcel post that the present facilities of the Post Office Department in this country were sufficient to handle the traffic. But, this particular item that is brought up under this bill adds to the burden of the handling of the parcel post, because a great deal of this business goes through that channel, or nearly all of it.

Mr. COOPER. The gentleman is absolutely correct, and to use his great State of Michigan as an example, I believe the figures here show that the State of Michigan is losing about three and one-third million dollars a year in revenue on the State cigarette tax.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired. The Clerk will read the bill for amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That as used in this act the term—

(a) "person" means any individual, partnership, corporation, or association;

(b) "disposing of" means any transfer including a gift of more than 200 cigarettes;

(c) "cigarette" means any roll for smoking made wholly or in part of tobacco, irrespective of size or shape and whether or not such tobacco is flavored, adulterated, or mixed with any other ingredient, the wrapper or cover of which is made of paper or any other substance or material except tobacco;

(d) "licensed distributor" means any person authorized by State statute or regulation to distribute cigarettes at wholesale or retail;

(e) "use", in addition to its ordinary meaning, means the consumption, storage, handling, or disposal of cigarettes;

(f) "tobacco tax administrator" means the State official duly authorized to administer the cigarette tax law of a State.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 6, after "transfer", strike out "including a gift of more than 200 cigarettes" and insert "for profit."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 2. Any person selling or disposing of cigarettes in interstate commerce whereby such cigarettes are shipped to other than a distributor licensed by or located in a State taxing the sale or use of cigarettes shall, not later than the 10th day of each month, forward to the tobacco tax administrator of the State into which such shipment is made, a memorandum or a copy of the invoice covering each and every such shipment of cigarettes made during the previous calendar month into said State; the memorandum or invoice in each case to include the name and address of the person to whom the shipment was made, the brand, and the quantity thereof.

SEC. 3. Whoever violates the provisions of this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than 6 months, or both.

Mr. CHUDOFF. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CHUDOFF: On page 3, at the end of the page add a new section, as follows:

"SEC. 4. Any tax recovered by any State by virtue of the enforcement of this act shall pay into the Treasury of the United States a sum equal to 10 percent of all such taxes recovered."

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the amendment that it is not germane to this bill or any provision of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. CHUDOFF. I will stand by the decision of the Chair, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule.

The amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania adds a new section, section 4, which is, by its own language, legislation that is not germane to the bill in question. The point of order is sustained.

Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. TRIMBLE, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 195) to assist States in collecting sales and use taxes on cigarettes, pursuant to House Resolution 190, he reported the bill back to the House with an amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

THE FEDERAL SECURITY AGENCY, WHEN ESTABLISHED AS A DEPARTMENT OF WELFARE, SHOULD NOT INCLUDE THE UNITED MEDICAL ADMINISTRATION

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, the bill to create a Department of Welfare was on the schedule for consideration today, but was withdrawn with the suggestion that it would come up at some later date.

In anticipation of its reappearance, I wish to ask consideration at this time of some of the reasons why the Hoover reports, rather than the recommendations of the Federal Security Agency, should be followed.

Because the consideration of an action on H. R. 782, a bill to constitute the Federal Security Agency a Department of Welfare, which is the first measure sent to the House purporting to embody recommendations of the Hoover Commission, may establish a precedent, careful consideration by the Members is warranted.

The Congress established the Hoover Commission in a so-called last-ditch effort to bring about economy and efficiency in the sprawling executive departments, about which the Comptroller General of the United States, Lindsay C. Warren, testifying on January 25, 1949, before the House Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments on the question of the reorganization of Government agencies, said:

Of course, some of these problems may be solved by the Hoover Commission's report, but it is too much to hope they can all be worked out at once, by any over-all master plan, and, anyway, some method must be provided to translate into law their valid recommendations.

That is why I said, and still, on the whole, reiterate, that the present set-up is a hodgepodge and crazy quilt of duplications, overlappings, inefficiencies, and inconsistencies with their attendant extravagance. It is probably an ideal system for the taxeaters and those who wish to keep themselves perpetually attached to the public teat, but it is bad for those who have to pay the bill. That is why I say the Government should put its own house in order.

The Hoover Commission, made up of men of outstanding ability and character, with its assistants, practically all of whom were experts in their line, spent almost 2 years in gathering facts and reaching conclusions.

The cost of the Commission's activities approximated $2,000,000 and even a casual reading of the reports shows that the money was well spent.

President Truman approved of the activity and has requested, and will undoubtedly within the month get, enabling legislation permitting him to send to the Congress his recommendations, which, when considered with those of the Commission, should enable the Congress to enact effective legislation which will tend to bring economy and efficiency to the executive departments.

The present bill, which seeks to establish a Department of Welfare, was reported to the House on the 15th of February, this year.

This bill was written by the legal department of the Federal Security Agency. Note the testimony:

Mr. PFEIFFER. Did you or did you not have anything to do with the drafting of this legislation?

Mr. EWING. I saw the draft before it came up here. The bill was originally drafted, I think, in our legal department.

* * * * *

Mr. PFEIFFER. You are not the author of this bill, then?

Mr. EWING. I didn't write it; no. It was written in our legal department.

Mr. PFEIFFER. But you did see it before it was presented?

Mr. EWING. Oh, yes.

In view of the testimony of Mr. Ewing, it may fairly be stated that one of the purposes of the bill was to enlarge the Department, to extend its power.

It is a matter of common knowledge that, although several statutes forbid and make it a criminal offense for executive agencies to use Federal money to propagandize their existing and proposed activities and the claimed need therefor, the line of demarcation between the furnishing of useful and essential information and propaganda is difficult to define.

Mr. Ewing himself was questioned as to his views on propaganda and he quite frankly attempted to justify his own activities along that line. In substance, he claimed that he not only had the right, but that it was his duty to convince people—taxpayers—as to the necessity of spending additional tax dollars for future extended, as well as for the present, activities of the Department in which he was interested.

He insisted that it was his right to travel about the country disseminating information advocating the extension of the activities of the Department over which he was the head, even though that information was compiled through the expenditure of Government funds.

His testimony along that line does not appear in the record. He evidently deleted it, but he gave it, and specific instances of Mr. Ewing's advocacy of socialized medicine, of the end of segregation, of Federal aid to education, can be cited.

The Hoover Commission's reports were not referred to the House until March, and the present bill does not follow the recommendations of that report.

Nor has the President as yet had an opportunity to send up to us his views as to the establishment of a Department of Welfare and the inclusion therein of the activities of the Public Health Service.

When the bill was reported out, a minority report was filed in which, among other things, it was said:

While the minority members are in favor of the objectives of this legislation, this bill, H. R. 782, is premature and may not be in accordance with the recommendations of the Hoover Commission's report.

And further:

Apparently it is an effort on the part of the Federal Security Agency to, as it were, "jump the gun" to now obtain more power or a wider jurisdiction over additional social services to be rendered by the Federal Government to various segments of the population. It seems on its face to be an effort of this particular agency to "blow itself up" not only from an agency into a department but to give it exclusive jurisdiction over departments or agencies of health, education, and the general welfare of the people.

Subsequent events have shown the wisdom of the minority report, for the Hoover Commission, in its task force report on Federal medical services, supplement to appendix O, page 1, dated February 8, which was not before the committee when H. R. 782 was considered and reported out, as well as in reports, recommended that there be established an independent medical agency, to function either as an independent department or agency.

In deciding that question, among other things, it said:

It remains to consider whether such an alternative would be preferable. This question has been fully considered by our committee, and we have reached the conclusion that such an independent organization would be preferable to placing this function in a larger department, as the Commission originally proposed.

In favoring this, we recognize that such an organization would create some additional problems. For example, the administration of health and welfare require close coordination in certain areas. Their separation would require an adjustment of the dual functions of the Children's Bureau and of the Office of Vocational Rehabilitation. These, however, can be solved without undue difficulty.

The advantages of an independent agency are:

(a) The health agency, if submerged within a multipurpose department, would be more likely to find its health functions impeded by collateral considerations pertaining to welfare and insurance.

(b) Appropriations for health should, if possible, be clearly identified as such and not confused with those for social security, welfare, or other social programs.

(c) Other departments, such as the armed forces, using the medical-service agency would be concerned only with its health functions as such and would thus be protected from any collateral and irrelevant considerations having to do with welfare, social security, etc.

(d) The special personnel policies which we have recommended in our main report (sec. XI) could be established with much greater freedom and better success for an independent agency than they could be for one of three bureaus standing side by side in a single department. The new plan would, therefore, greatly facilitate obtaining personnel of the highest quality for the key positions. Under the previous plan, this was a problem which occasioned serious concern in our minds because of the contrast between the great responsibilities of the director general and the heads of his three main divisions (especially the Medical Care Division) and the relatively limited governmental position and pay of the head of a bureau and the chiefs of its subordinate divisions. We believe, therefore, that the new proposal would go far to solve this problem which we regard as the most serious affecting the original plan.

(e) The head of such an independent agency should be assisted by an advisory committee, representing the several departments and agencies which would be the principal users of medical services, such as the Medical Departments of the Army, Navy, and Air Force, the new proposed Department of Welfare, and the Veterans' Administration. With the agency independent, it would be more flexible to adapt its services, with the assistance of such advisory committee, to the needs of the several interested departments and agencies in its medical-care facilities, in the training and staffing of professional and technical personnel, in its public health functions, and in other ways.

In considering the establishment of such an independent health agency, our committee again calls attention to a most important consideration pointed out in chapter III (p. 26) of our main report. The agency should be headed by a professional career director general. Under the new plan he should report directly to the President, and should, in the nonmilitary Federal medical organization, be the highest ranking physician in the Government. The supreme medical importance of the position of the Director General should command, irrespective of all other considerations, the ablest medical and health administrator whose services can be obtained by the Government.

For these reasons, the committee views the present proposal for an independent organization as a significant improvement over the previously submitted plan.

The Commission's report on medical activities, which was transmitted by Mr. Hoover to the Congress on the 16th day of March 1949, among other things states:

REORGANIZATION OF FEDERAL MEDICAL ACTIVITIES

The immediate purpose of the Commission, in recommending reorganization of Federal medical activities, is to unite the functions now in five major agencies so as to eliminate overlap, waste, and inefficiency. The proposed form of organization is a unification in which each of the major agencies will have an advisory voice in management.

However, the much wider and critically necessary objectives are:

First. To provide better medical care for the beneficiaries of the Federal Government's medical programs.

Second. To create a better foundation for training and medical service in the Federal agencies.

Third. To reduce the drain of doctors away from private practice. The country is now dreadfully short of doctors.

Fourth. To provide better organization for medical research.

Fifth. To promote a better state of medical preparedness for war.

RECOMMENDATION NO. 1

To accomplish these purposes, the Commission recommends the establishment of a United Medical Administration into which would be consolidated most of the large-scale activities of the Federal Government in the fields of medical care, medical research, and public health (in which we include preventative medicine).

It should be said at once that, under this plan, the military medical services would remain intact, except for hospitalization within the United States. Each of the three services would retain one major teaching and research center (such as the Naval Medical Center at Bethesda, Md., and the Walter Reed General Hospital, Washington, D. C.). The professional personnel of the services may be assigned to the new Administration for duty, research, and training. The proposed United Medical Administration would provide the major part of all hospital care required by the military forces in the continental United States.

The Veterans' Administration would continue to certify patients for treatment and would determine disability, ratings, etc., but the United Medical Administration would look after veterans' medical care.

The recommendation of our task force that medical supply be centralized in a single agency, preferably in one of the armed forces or in the United Medical Administration, merits favorable consideration.

In reaching the conclusion that medical services should be unified, the Commission had the aid of extensive surveys by its distinguished task forces on medical services and on the national security organization. The recommendations set forth in our report are generally in accord with those submitted by these two task forces.

The task force on medical services was instructed to "base its orilgnal report on the premise that the Commission will recommend a Cabinet department embracing health, education, and security." However, in view of the size of the medical operations of the Federal Government and the extreme dissimilarities among the activities which would have composed such a department, the task force was later requested to consider the advisability of placing medical-service functions in a single agency. Its supplementary report favors very strongly a separate United Medical Administration. This supplement, with the task force's main report (appendix O) is being transmitted separately, along with this Commission's report.

A proposed United Medical Administration is recommended in subsequent pages of the report beginning on page 15, where it is said:

Only the creation of a new United Medical Administration can remedy the weaknesses of the present organization and give the leadership, direction and planning urgently needed. To it would be transferred the Government's major services in the field of medical care, public health, and medical research.

The Nation's vast medical services, which we have noted lack any central plan of operation, require unified responsibility. The Government must have a central plan if waste and inefficiency are to be avoided. The advantages of unification of Federal medical services include the following:

(a) The general standard of Federal medical care would be improved.

(b) There would be central supervision of the major Federal medical care, public health, and medical research activities. Unified responsibility is the key to good management. The President, the Congress, and the public could look to one man for results.

(c) Construction costs could be standardized and reduced.

(d) Federal hospitals could be utilized to the fullest extent by eliminating present distinctions as to the particular types of beneficiaries for which each can care. After all, a patient is a patient whether he is a veteran, a merchant seaman, or in the Army, Navy, or Air Force.

(e) The medical manpower at the call of the Federal Government could be used to the fullest extent, and present deficits in skilled personnel could be greatly reduced.

(f) The need for any draft of medical manpower in time of peace would be greatly lessened.

(g) The cost of health and medical services would be clearly identified and known to Congress.

(h) The facilities of private hospitals and the skills of physicians in private life and in the universities could be utilized far more effectively than they are now.

The Commission's report on Social Security, Education and Indian Affairs, which was transmitted to the Congress by Mr. Hoover on the 18th of March, 1949, states, page 4:

In our report on medical services, we have recommended a separate United Medical Administration, reporting directly to the President. That agency would embrace the major hospitalization, medical research, and public health activities of the Government and, by its creation, bring about better medical care, development of medical staff, research, and protection of public health, together with large economies in administration.

The same report on the same page calls attention to the fact that the commission in its report on the Labor Department had recommended the return of several agencies now in the Federal Security Agency to the Labor Department. The report then continued:

There remain, however, certain most important bureaus or agencies relating to education and security which must be organized into a workable department. They are now, with one exception (the Bureau of Indian Affairs), in the Federal Security Agency.

The size of these agencies, after making the changes we have outlined, is somewhat indicated by the fact that they embrace about 20,000 employees. The administrative expenditures would be roughly $50,000,000. The grants-in-aid to be distributed would approximate $800,000,000 (in addition, the budget for 1950 includes $301,200,000 for Federal aid to education and $65,000,000 for the extension of public assistance programs). For the calendar year 1948, the collections of old-age and survivors insurance approximated $1,688,000,000, and the disbursements $550,000,000. The accumulated funds on August 31, 1948, were $10,388,000,000.

While we discuss the educational problems at greater length later, it may be said here that it has long been suggested that the educational activities of the Federal Government should be given independent or Cabinet status. However, the Federal Government is not engaged in direct educational activities (except in a small way in the case of Howard University). Its function is that of stimulating educational advancement by research, issuing publications, and making grants-in-aid to the States. The administrative staff required is less than 500 persons.

We believe that the functions, including education, which we propose to assign to this Department have such an important relationship to the formation of the domestic policies of the Government that the person in charge of the functions should be a member of the President's Cabinet.

RECOMMENDATION NO. 1

We therefore recommend that a new Department to administer the functions set forth in this report be created and headed by a Cabinet officer.

EVERYONE WANTS IT

Efficiency and economy in the executive departments, the objectives of the Hoover Commission, have the approval of President Truman and every thinking citizen who has the welfare of the country at heart. An overwhelming majority of the people, if communications from our constituents and the comments in the public press are to be considered, support in general the findings and the recommendations of the Hoover Commission.

Action by the House on this bill is the first test as to whether the principles enunciated in the recommendations of the Hoover Commission are to be followed or whether the Congress is to follow the time-honored procedure of permitting the agencies, the bureaus, and the departments in the executive department to write legislation designed, not primarily in the interests of the people as a whole, but to further the purpose and the objectives of the various agencies, bureaus, and departments.

It is only natural that an agency, bureau, or department, once established, should seek to enlarge its sphere of influence, to increase its personnel, bring under its jurisdiction additional activities of the Government. That has been the procedure in the past every time the Congress sought to economize in or make more efficient the executive branch of the Government.

It was because, and only because, the Congress realized the futility of its efforts that it created the Hoover Commission and gave it almost $2,000,000 to outline the legislation which was needed to accomplish what the people and the Congress have long desired—economy and efficiency.

If we adopt this bill as it is written, we will, in my opinion, have again surrendered to the bureaucrats in the executive department, in this instance to the Federal Security Agency.

We will have denied to the President of the United States the opportunity to send up to us his recommendations under a reorganization bill which we will have adopted before the month is ended.

We will have repudiated the recommendations of the Hoover Commission.

The passage of this bill as written will be a notice to the economy-minded people of the United States that the Congress lacks either the ability, the inclination, or the courage to give them what they so greatly desire—economy and efficiency in the executive branch of their Government.

This bill should be recommitted to the committee, which will undoubtedly shortly have before it some of the President's recommendations on reorganization.

The committee can then, after considering the Hoover recommendations and the recommendations of President Truman, write a bill creating a Department of Public Welfare and an independent agency to deal with the medical activities of the Federal Government.

A plan for such an agency is outlined in the Hoover reports to which reference has just been made.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CASE of South Dakota asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial.

Mr. PRICE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial from the St. Louis Post-Dispatch on the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Cahokia, Ill.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and include a manuscript entitled "National Constitution and Bylaws of the Auxiliary of AMVETS—American Veterans of World War II."

I have an estimate from the Public Printer that this extension will make three and two-thirds pages in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD at a cost of $275; notwithstanding, I ask unanimous consent that the extension may be made.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. ELSTON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial from the Cincinnati Times-Star of May 10.

Mr. SHORT asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. DURHAM asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial.

Mr. WEICHEL asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an article.

Mr. DONDERO asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks in the RECORD.

AMENDING FEDERAL CROP INSURANCE ACT

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 212 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3825) to amend the Federal Crop Insurance Act. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 2 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Committee on Agriculture, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 212 makes it in order to consider a bill which has to do with the increase of and continuation of crop insurance. Those of us who come from agricultural communities realize how important this legislation is. I learned that this was reported out unanimously by the Committee on Agriculture. Therefore, I am not going to take up the time of the House to discuss it further.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time and yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] one-half hour. The gentleman from New York has consented to represent the minority on the rule.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Ohio has described the purpose of the bill. Since there are no requests for time on this side, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question. The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3825) to amend the Federal Crop Insurance Act.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 3825, with Mr. MONRONEY in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

By unanimous consent, the first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. COOLEY] is entitled to 1 hour and the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN] is entitled to 1 hour.

The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. COOLEY].

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, the bill before us at this time continues the Federal crop insurance program on an experimental basis.

I am sure most of you will recall that the original crop-insurance program was all too ambitious. At the time we embarked upon it, it was contemplated that we might suffer losses aggregating as much as $100,000,000. The fact is the losses were very substantial, but did not amount to as much as $100,000,000. This bill provides for authority to write off of the books of the Corporation the amount of accrued losses to date. Those losses were so substantial that everyone knows it will never be possible for the Corporation to earn enough to become solvent. We have, according to our report, a deficit of approximately $73,000,000.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. The losses to which the gentleman has referred were losses that were incurred prior to the institution of the experimental program?

Mr. COOLEY. The gentleman is correct. Since the program has been on an experimental basis it has operated rather successfully, and according to the information before the committee last year the premiums collected amounted to $12,500,000. The losses amounted to $5,200,000.

In addition to authorizing the writing off of the losses which have accrued to date, the program is continued on an experimental basis, on a somewhat broader basis, however, because the Corporation is permitted to increase the number of counties by not to exceed 50 percent in any one calendar year.

Someone asked the question before the Rules Committee as to the participation. According to our information, in wheat the participation has been 37 percent of the eligible growers in the counties in which the program was in effect. The eligible growers of corn in the counties where the program was in effect was 20 percent; flax, 35 percent; tobacco, 35 percent; cotton, 13 percent; beans, 26 percent; multiple crop insurance, 26 percent.

The committee has authorized the Corporation to enlarge its multiple crop insurance program, which we think should be done.

The administrative expenses, of course, are not paid from the premiums, but are borne by the Government.

There is one other provision I would like to call attention to. We have authorized the Corporation to investigate the feasibility of a crop insurance program on livestock. I am sure you will also recall that a provision was inserted in the bill some time ago which required the Corporation to operate on an actuarially sound basis, after the passage of 2 or 3 years, or perhaps 3 or 5 years. That was not considered practical in view of the fact that you could not determine the losses incurred in any 1 year until all the claims had been submitted and adjudicated, and in the event some of the claims were to become involved in litigation court action might result in delay in the payment to many policyholders who would be entitled to benefits. Since it does appear that the program is now operating successfully we thought that it was no longer necessary to have that restriction in the law, so the bill removes the restriction.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina has expired.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself two additional minutes to yield the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I wish to make this observation in the gentleman's time and have his reaction to it: We have had some very disastrous results in the crop-insurance program. We are now operating it on an experimental basis. The only thing that I fear under the present proposal is a larger expansion of the experimental program than is advisable. We have had the experimental program in operation for 1 year, one of the best crop-growing years we have had in the history of our country; and, of course, it makes a good showing.

They collected more in premiums than they paid out in losses. I only sound this as a word of caution because should we have extensive crop failures under the new experimental and expanded program, crop insurance will be gone forever; that is, if we have to pay out considerable money from the Treasury. I am hopeful that those who administer the law will go slowly in picking out counties and conducting this expanded experimental program, because I feel that one of the strong planks in a sound and long-range farm program would be an insurance program to secure the farmers in the losses they might have at least for the expense of putting in the seed and tilling the soil. I want a self-sustaining program, one that will carry its own weight; and I am sure the gentleman will agree with me on that point as a part of the long-range permanent farm program.

Mr. COOLEY. I agree with the gentleman, and I believe that the entire membership of our committee agrees with him in that regard, but I do not think we have expanded the program too much by this pending legislation; time alone, of course, will tell. I agree with the gentleman that it would be well for the Corporation to go slowly and not to expand too rapidly.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina has again expired.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kansas is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, we have had crop-insurance legislation on the books since 1938, and some kind of program in effect most of the time since that date. Crop insurance has had a rather checkered history. It certainly has not been a successful program up until, I would say, the last year when it was on an experimental basis. I believe, however, that we have learned a great deal about crop insurance in the course of these programs, and there is no doubt in my mind but what we are in a far better position now than we have ever been to carry out a successful program. I believe it is only fair to the program to state that a considerable part of the difficulty that we have had with crop insurance in the past has been due to poor management; I think part of it is due to the fact that we started out on the wrong theory in the first place. Crop insurance was begun at a time which was not too far removed from the period of the drought, the dust bowl, and low farm prices. Very frankly, I think that those who were administering the program in the early part of it were more or less of the opinion that they were carrying out a relief program and administered it very much in that fashion.

The losses were so great that in 1943, I believe it was, the Appropriations Committee refused to make any further appropriations for crop insurance and efforts were made to wind up the program altogether. However, following that we amended the law, putting some safeguards in it, but even with those changes we had a very disastrous program in connection with cotton during the 1946 crop year with a loss of over $50,000,000 in cotton alone, a very large part of it due to extremely heavy losses in west Texas. I think anyone who has looked into the matter will agree that a great part of those losses was due to mismanagement on the part of the Crop Insurance Corporation.

In 1947 we enacted legislation putting the program entirely upon an experimental basis, one which took into account what we had learned through past experience. Perhaps the greatest change made was one which to a large extent eliminated the moral risk. The fact that we had such a high moral risk in the early crop-insurance program is responsible more than anything else for its failure, because the way the program was set up in wheat and cotton in its early years it was frequently more profitable to have a loss than to grow a crop. You cannot make any kind of an insurance business a success if it is more profitable to have a loss than not.

We have a program now which has very largely eliminated that factor because we do not insure any producer for more than the amount he has invested in a crop. There is no way by which he can gain any advantage for himself by having a loss as compared with producing a crop.

Mr. Chairman, it is only fair to say that the Crop Insurance Corporation at the present time is under extremely good management. Mr. G. F. Geissler who has managed the Corporation during the last 2 years is one of the most competent and able administrators in the Government service. He has done an excellent job and I know the committee has been very much impressed with it.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOPE. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. MICHENER. I want to impress upon the farmers of the country and in my district in particular, and those interested in this crop-insurance program, the fact that this bill writes off a loss of $73,000,000. I was one of those in 1938, when this matter was first suggested, who felt, and so expressed my feeling at that time, that this matter should be handled as ordinary insurance by the private insurance industry. We were told at that time by the insurance companies that the risk was too great, that they could not afford to take the chance in fairness to their other risks; but the assurance came from the farmers and the groups advocating this crop insurance that there would not be any losses. I believe in crop insurance if it can be provided by private companies, and if not, then by the method suggested in this bill. In these days when the Government is being asked to do so much for all of the people all of the time, it is well to point out the cost to the taxpayer. We must proceed with caution. I have much faith in the gentleman from Kansas, whose approach to all farm problems is always sound and objective. We have now done some pioneering work. It has been proven that these experiments cost a lot of money, and I hope we have gotten $73,000,000 worth of benefit out of the experience. When I go back home and when other Members from agricultural districts go back home and talk with the farmers who are so enthusiastic about this crop insurance, I hope that they will understand that there has been a loss and that we are trying to work out something now so that we will avoid these losses in the future.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOPE. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. McSWEENEY. I always turn to the gentleman from Kansas for information on agricultural matters since serving with him on the Committee on Agriculture. Is it necessary to charge off all of the $73,000,000? Will there not be any possibility for some earnings to come under this present law that might take care of, say, half of it?

Mr. HOPE. I might say this to the gentleman, that if we had a full program now, there would be a better chance, of course, for some earnings that might absorb part of this loss, but the program we are on now is simply an experimental program. It covers only a few commodities. It is in effect in only a comparatively small number of counties, less than 400 counties in the United States, and it would take a very long time under this experimental program to build up reserves to even take up a part of this loss. I think it would be unfair to those farmers who go into the program now—a sound program as I believe it to be, and an experimental program—to charge premiums which would have to be used to make up this loss. I think we simply have to charge this loss to experience and bad management and write it off and start over again.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield further, what becomes of any surpluses that are earned under the program? Do they go back to the Treasury?

Mr. HOPE. They go to build up a reserve; that is, the premiums which are charged under this program, just as they are in any insurance business, are based upon what it is estimated the risk will be, and if we have any excess, it goes to build up a reserve. I think it is very important for the Crop Insurance Corporation to build up a reserve as it goes along, and that is especially true as we are expanding, because unless we build up a pretty good reserve on the smaller business this year it will be inadequate as a reserve to take care of the larger business next year, and a still larger business the following years as we expand.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kansas has expired.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself five additional minutes.

I believe that we should consider this $73,000,000 as gone and try to build up a sound reserve under the present program.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOPE. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. As far as building up reserves, I would like to make this observation: We have had 7 or 8 years of ideal production and growing weather in agriculture, and if the law of averages operates at all, why, we can look for some crop failures in the next 6 or 7 years. In all probability in some of those years the losses will be greater than the income, so whatever reserves are built up now during the good years would have to be used during the poor years when the insurance-premium income would be lower, so I doubt very much if anything could be paid on that $73,000,000.

Mr. HOPE. I quite agree with the gentleman. I think that without any doubt we have poor years from a crop production standpoint ahead of us, and it is important to have sizable reserves built up to take care of the losses that are bound to occur in those years.

Just very briefly I want to call attention to the principal changes which this bill makes in existing law. For one thing it provides for an orderly expansion of coverage. Under existing law insurance is available to farmers in only approximately 400 counties and there is no provision for expansion except into new commodities. This bill sets up a formula for expansion. It authorizes as to each type of insurance an increase each year of not to exceed 50 percent of the number of counties in which that type of insurance was offered during the previous year.

In the second place, it provides for multiple crop insurance. That is something we have not had heretofore except in an experimental way in a couple of counties this past year. Under that program the Corporation will be able to insure all of the important crops on a farm in one policy. That should be a more stable type of insurance. It will not only be of greater benefit to the farmer, himself, to have all of his major crops insured, but by reason of the fact that there is very seldom a failure of all crops in any particular year it will stabilize the entire program.

It is provided in this legislation that beginning with next year we will try out the multiple-crop-insurance program in 50 counties. That is subject to increase in succeeding years under the formula which I mentioned a moment ago. Reference has already been made to the fact that the bill provides for wiping out the $73,000,000 loss that has already occurred.

The next matter I want to mention is that this bill repeals a provision in an earlier act which provides that if the premiums are not sufficient to pay all the losses the loss payments must be prorated. That is a very unsatisfactory provision. We are told by the Comptroller General's office and also by the Crop Insurance Corporation that it might in some cases be 2 or 3 years before it could be determined what the indemnity paid to an insured farmer might be, and he would have to wait that long in order to receive his payments, which of course is a very unsatisfactory situation. I do not see how you can build up any sort of an insurance business under conditions of that kind.

Another section of the bill repeals a provision that would go into effect in 1950 which provides that the administrative expenses shall be no more than 25 percent of the premiums collected. I am advised that for insurance companies generally over the country the administrative expenses amount to about 35 percent. Certainly it would be asking a great deal, I think, to expect this Corporation, which is conducting its business only on an experimental basis, and which cannot for that reason have a very large volume, to carry out its operations with an administrative expense that is considerably lower than private insurance companies.

Furthermore, if we limit the amount to 25 percent in the years when large losses occur, it might be impossible to make adequate adjustments and the Corporation might suffer losses because it was not possible to make careful inspections and adjustments. Therefore, I believe we are fully justified in removing that 25-percent limitation. Of course, we expect the Corporation to conduct its operations in as economical a way as possible, but we do not expect them to do the impossible.

Mr. Chairman, this bill was reported out unanimously by the Committee on Agriculture. I think I can say the committee was very well pleased with the report which the Crop Insurance Corporation made of its operations over the past year. I think we have confidence in the present management of the Corporation and that we are now on the road to working out a successful crop-insurance program. I agree with what the gentleman from Minnesota says, in that I do not think we ought to go too fast. I think it is a question of moving slowly to gain experience as we go along, because, after all, the basis of all insurance business everywhere is experience.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kansas has again expired.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time on this side. Does the gentleman from Kansas have any requests for time?

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subsection (a) of section 508 of the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(a) Commencing with crops planted for harvest in 1948, for the purpose of determining the most practical plan, terms, and conditions of insurance for agricultural commodities, if sufficient actuarial data are available, as determined by the Board, to insure, or to reinsure insurers of, producers of such agricultural commodities under any plan or plans of insurance determined by the Board to be adapted to any such commodity. Such insurance shall be against loss of the insured commodity due to unavoidable causes, including drought, flood, hail, wind, frost, winterkill, lightning, fire, excessive rain, snow, wildlife, hurricane, tornado, insect infestation, plant disease, and such other unavoidable causes as may be determined by the Board. In 1948 insurance shall be limited to not more than seven agricultural commodities (including wheat, cotton, flax, corn, and tobacco) and to not more than three additional agricultural commodities in each year thereafter: Provided, That other agricultural commodities may be included in multiple crop insurance (insurance on two or more agricultural commodities under one contract with a producer). Insurance shall be limited to producers in not to exceed 200 counties in the case of wheat, 56 counties in the case of cotton, 50 counties each in the case of corn and flax, 35 counties in the case of tobacco, 20 counties in the case of any other agricultural commodity, and, in addition, 50 counties in the case of multiple crop insurance: Provided further, That, beginning with crops planted for harvest in 1950, the number of counties for insurance on wheat, cotton, corn, flax, and tobacco, and for multiple crop insurance may be increased each year by not in excess of 50 percent of the number of counties in which such insurance was provided the previous year and the county limitations specified for other insurance may be similarly increased as to any agricultural commodity after insurance for such commodity has been provided for 3 years. Reinsurance for private insurance companies shall be limited to not to exceed 20 counties which may be selected without regard to the other county limitations specified herein. Any insurance offered against loss in yield shall not cover in excess of 75 percent of the recorded or appraised average yield of the commodity on the insured farm for a representative period subject to such adjustments as the Board may prescribe to the end that the average yields fixed for farms in the same area, which are subject to the same conditions, may be fair and just: Provided further, That if 75 percent of the average yield represents generally more protection than the investment in the crop in any area, taking into consideration recognized farming practices, the Board shall reduce such maximum percentage so as more nearly to reflect the investment in the crop in such area. Insurance provided under the subsection shall not cover losses due to the neglect or malfeasance of the producer, or to the failure of the producer to reseed to the same crop in areas and under circumstances where it is customary to so reseed, or to the failure of the producer to follow established good farming practices. Counties selected by the Board shall be representative of the several areas where the agricultural commodity insured is normally produced. The Board may limit or refuse insurance in any county or area, or on any farm, on the basis of the insurance risk involved. Insurance shall not be provided in any county unless written applications therefor are filed covering at least 200 farms or one-third of the farms normally producing the agricultural commodity, excluding farms refused insurance on the basis of the risk involved; nor shall insurance on any agricultural commodity be provided in any county in which the Board determines that the income from such commodity constitutes an unimportant part of the total agricultural income of the county. The Corporation shall report annually to the Congress the results of its operations as to each commodity insured."

SEC. 2. Subsection (b) of section 508 of the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended, is amended by striking out the proviso in the second sentence and the colon which precedes it and substituting a period therefor.

SEC. 3. Subsection (c) of section 508 of the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(c) To adjust and pay claims for losses in the agricultural commodity or in cash, under rules prescribed by the Board: Provided, That indemnities may be determined on the same price basis as premiums are determined for the crop with respect to which such indemnities are paid. The Corporation shall provide for the posting annually in each county at the county courthouse of a list of indemnities paid for losses on farms in such county. In the event that any claim for indemnity under the provisions of this title is denied by the Corporation, any action on such claim hereafter brought against the Corporation shall be brought in the United States district court sitting in the district in which the insured farm is located, and jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon such district courts to determine such controversies without regard to the amount in controversy: Provided further, That no such claim shall be allowed under this section unless the same shall have been brought within 1 year after the date when notice of denial of the claim is mailed to and received by the claimant."

SEC. 4. Subsection (e) of section 508 of the Federal Crop Insurance Act is hereby repealed.

SEC. 5. Subsection (a) of section 504 of the Federal Crop Insurance Act is amended by striking out the second sentence thereof.

SEC. 6. The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to cancel, without consideration, outstanding receipts for payments for or on account of the stock of the Corporation in excess of $27,000,000.

SEC. 7. Subsection (b) of section 504 of the Federal Crop Insurance Act is amended to read as follows:

"(b) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary for the purpose of subscribing to the capital stock of the Corporation."

SEC. 8. Subsection (c) of section 505 of the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended, is amended by striking out the second sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "The members of the Board who are not employed by the Government shall be paid such compensation for their services as directors as the Secretary of Agriculture shall determine, but such compensation shall not exceed $100 per day each when actually employed and transportation expenses plus not to exceed $10 per diem for subsistence and other expenses when on business of the Corporation away from their homes or regular places of business."

SEC. 9. Subsection (b) of section 506 of the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(h) may conduct researches, surveys, and investigations relating to crop insurance and shall assemble data for the purpose of establishing sound actuarial bases for insurance on agricultural commodities."

SEC. 10. Section 518 of the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended, is amended by striking therefrom the words "determined by the Board pursuant to subsection (a) (2) of section 508 of this title" and substituting therefor the words "determined by the Board pursuant to subsection (a) of section 508 of this title."

Mr. COOLEY (interrupting the reading of the bill). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the further reading of the bill be dispensed with, that the bill be considered as read and be printed at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the committee amendments.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 2, line 20, strike out the word "further."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Committee amendment: Page 3, line 13, strike out the word "further."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Committee amendment: Page 3, line 19, change the words "under the subsection" to read "under this subsection."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the remainder of the committee amendments be considered en bloc and be printed at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

The balance of the committee amendments are as follows:

Page 5, lines 6 to 17, beginning with the words "In the event that," strike out the rest of the section and insert in lieu thereof the following: "In the event that any claim for indemnity under the provisions of this title is denied by the Corporation, an action on such claim may be brought against the Corporation in the United States district court, or in any court of record of the State having general jurisdiction, sitting in the district or county in which the insured farm is located, and jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon such district courts to determine such controversies without regard to the amount in controversy: Provided, That no suit on such claim shall be allowed under this section unless the same shall have been brought within one year after the date when notice of denial of the claim is mailed to and received by the claimant."

Page 5, lines 18 and 19, strike out all of section 4.

Page 6, line 9, change "Sec. 8" to "Sec. 7."

Page 6, line 15, strike out "$100" and insert in lieu thereof "$50."

Page 6, line 17, change the words "per diem for subsistence and other expenses" to read "per diem in lieu of subsistence expenses."

Page 6, line 20, change "Sec. 9" to "Sec. 8" and change "Subsection (b)" to "Subsection (h)."

Page 6, line 24, following the word "crop", insert the words "and livestock."

Page 7, line 2, after the word "commodities," insert the words "and livestock."

"SEC. 10. Subsection (a) of section 507 of the Federal Crop Insurance Act is amended to read as follows:

"'(a) The Secretary shall appoint such officers and employees as may be necessary for the transaction of the business of the Corporation pursuant to civil-service laws and regulations, fix their compensation in accordance with the provisions of the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, define their authority and duties, delegate to them such of the powers vested in the Corporation as he may determine, require bond of such of them as he may designate, and fix the penalties and pay the premiums of such bonds: Provided, That personnel paid by the hour, day, or month when actually employed, and county crop insurance committeemen may be appointed and their compensation fixed without regard to civil-service laws and regulations or the Classification Act of 1923, as amended.'"

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendments.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, may I suggest, for the purposes of the RECORD, that it be understood that any Member who wants to offer an amendment to any of these committee amendments tomorrow may do so, and that the chairman will not object to a unanimous-consent request that such amendments be considered.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Massachusetts make a unanimous-consent request to that effect?

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I make that unanimous-consent request.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. MONRONEY, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 3825) to amend the Federal Crop Insurance Act, had come to no resolution thereon.

CONTRACT SETTLEMENT ACT OF 1944

Mr. MADDEN, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following privileged resolution (H. Res. 220), which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed:

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 534) to amend the Contract Settlement Act of 1944 so as to authorize the payment of fair compensation to persons contracting to deliver certain strategic or critical minerals or metals in cases of failure to recover reasonable costs, and for other purposes. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the Chairman and the ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

ADDITIONAL REVENUE FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. McMILLAN of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 3704) to provide additional revenue for the District of Columbia, with Senate amendments, disagree to the Senate amendments and agree to the conference requested by the Senate.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. MCMILLAN]?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, is this agreeable to the ranking minority member, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. BATES]?

Mr. McMILLAN of South Carolina. It is.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees: Mr. MCMILLAN of South Carolina, Mr. SMITH of Virginia, Mr. JONES of Missouri, Mr. BATES of Massachusetts, and Mr. O'HARA of Minnesota.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. LATHAM (at the request of Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts) was granted permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include an article.

INVESTIGATION OF DOMESTIC FISHING INDUSTRY

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following communication, which was read by the Clerk, and, together with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries and ordered to be printed:

MAY 17, 1949.

The Honorable SAM RAYBURN,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. SPEAKER: I have further reference to your letter of April 5, 1949, transmitting a signed engrossed copy of House Resolution No. 147, requesting the Secretary of State to cause an immediate study to be made of the effect on the domestic fishing industry of increasing imports of fresh-water and salt-water fresh and frozen fish, especially groundfish fillets, and to make his report and recommendation to the House of Representatives not later than May 15, 1949. The requested study has been made and I am enclosing the requested report, with recommendations.

The Department recognizes that the report is not as comprehensive as may be desired, but is the best that could be made within the time limit set by the resolution and with the limited facilities available to the Department for undertaking such a study.

The Tariff Commission and the Fish and Wildlife Service, in accordance with the Department's request, generously supplied much of the basic data which are reproduced in the report. Interdepartmental consideration of the report was undertaken in the Committee on Trade Agreements, whose membership consists of representatives of the Departments of State, Agriculture, Commerce, Labor, and Treasury; the National Military Establishment; and the Economic Cooperation Administration. All of these agencies concur in this report.

Sincerely yours,

ERNEST A. GROSS,
Assistant Secretary
(For the Secretary of State).

(Enclosure: Report on House Resolution No. 147.)

The SPEAKER. Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DONDERO] is recognized for 30 minutes.

COMMUNISM IN THE HEART OF AMERICAN ART—WHAT TO DO ABOUT IT

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, on two occasions recently I have placed in the RECORDS of this Congress my remarks on a situation which I firmly believe to be of serious import to the Nation; namely, the penetration by deception, stealth, and fraud of Communist standards and theories into the great cultural life of our Republic. The evidence which is available upon this subject is so extensive, so difficult of complete anlysis that to study the situation comprehensively would require a major investigation on the part of a competent Government agency.

There are, however, two things which I consider it my duty to do, and which I now propose to do. The first is to turn the revealing light of publicity on a limited area, which I believe to be typical of the general condition of which I speak, and by informing the public, put them on guard to successfully resist encroachment by subtlety and falsehood into our national traditions. I wish to talk more about the abasement of our art standards by Communist infiltration and by the willing coservice of unprincipled, radical adherents to Marxist theories. I want to talk about a spearhead of radical influence. It is the ACA Gallery at 61 and 63 East Fifty-seventh Street in New York City. These letters ACA are particularly interesting and are typical of a practice, which has long existed in Communist circles, of stealing a word, a good word, a constructive word, and, by misappliance and distortion, changing its meaning completely. ACA stands for American Contemporary Art. I might go so far as to say that not only is the word "contemporary" stolen and misapplied, but so are the other two words, in that this so-called art is no more American than it is Russian; it is no more contemporary in the true sense than smallpox, cancer, and bubonic plague are contemporary. It just happens that the human race is afflicted with such ailments in our present day. I might say further that it is not even art in its true sense. It signifies a caricature of art, art that is abortive, that is distorted, and that is repulsive. The word "contemporary" has been stolen, as the word "modern" has been stolen, by the same Marxist advocates, but it would be truer to say that the art of the Communist and the Marxist is the art of perversion, just as communism itself is political perversion, and as depravity is moral perversion. God forbid that I should admit or charge for one instant that the great throng of illustrious, competent, distinguished, patriotic American artists, modern and contemporary in the true sense of the word, are afflicted with this Marxist disease of art perversion.

This so-called American Contemporary Art Gallery, of which I now speak was organized just 17 years ago by a man named Herman Baron who still guides its destiny.

A somewhat casual scrutiny discloses to me the fact that Herman Baron first receives official mention in the reports of the Special Committee on Un-American Activities under a date in the year 1936, when he was one of the signers of the "call," which was directed to radical artists throughout the United States to assemble and unite in solidarity. This "call" was essentially communistic in its form and largely so in its subject matter, protesting against oaths of allegiance, investigation of colleges for radicals, discrimination against foreign-born, demanding preservation of civil liberties, and deploring the imprisonment of revolutionary artists and writers. The "call" resulted in the organization of the American Artists Congress in December of 1936. In the book titled "Citations," by official Government agencies, and on page 5 thereof, the American Artists Congress is classified as "typical of Communist created and controlled organizations."

I next find Baron mentioned in the reports of the Special Committee on Un-American Activities as being a sponsor of a meeting held in October of 1942 by the Artists Front to Win the War. The official report states that many of the sponsors of the Artists Front to Win the War were leading sponsors of the American Artists Congress, which I have just mentioned. Among these sponsors of the American Artists Congress is Comrade Herman Baron, and also many of those individuals whom I have mentioned in my previous remarks as being prominent among the radicals in art organizations. It was at this meeting of the Artists Front to Win the War that Charles Chaplin, its honorary chairman, addressed his audience as "comrades," and I have no doubt that Chaplin was right in his designation. The individuals in the art section of the Artists Front to Win the War are 42 in number. Thirteen of these individuals, namely: Paul Burlin, Philip Evergood, William Gropper, Chaim Gross, Minna Harkavy, Joe Hirsch, Sidney Hoff, Rockwell Kent, Leon Kroll, Anton Refregier, Raphael Soyer, Paul Strand, and Max Weber, who were associated with Baron back in 1942, were sponsors for the pro-Soviet cultural and scientific conference held at the Waldorf Astoria in March of the present year.

We next find Herman Baron as one of the sponsors of a meeting of the American Russian Institute. This was held at the Commodore Hotel in New York City. The American Russian Institute is twice designated in the book Citations, by official Government agencies, as "a Communist organization supported by intellectuals" and again as "a direct agent of the Soviet Union engaged in traitorous activities under the orders of Stalin's Consular Service in the United States."

I think these references to Comrade Herman Baron give a pretty clear picture of him and the purposes which motivate him, but perhaps it would be more interesting to see what he, himself, has to say about his connection with the American Artists Congress, designated as "typical of Communist created and controlled organizations." Comrade Baron published a little booklet about the ACA Gallery, and on page 7 thereof he writes, when speaking of the American Artists Congress:

> Aside from the fact that the congress was organized at the ACA Gallery, the two were too closely related to separate them.

In this little booklet Comrade Baron sets forth the aims of the ACA Gallery as he sees them. He says: "Behind the ACA lies the idea of building a people's art gallery," and in explanation of his use of the descriptive phrase "a people's art gallery," he continues, "above all, those who direct a people's art gallery must be convinced that art serves a social function." He enlarges upon the meaning of "social function" by saying: "The ACA is proud of having been the cradle of the social content movement." Further explaining the scope of "social content," he adds, "social protest is only one aspect of the social content school of art."

Now this would seem to be a very frank statement, in plain language, and one might be persuaded readily that this

ACA Gallery went into business to meet a popular demand and give a constructive service. Any thought to this effect, however, may be destroyed completely if one finds that in practice the gentle sounding phrase of "social content" is sinister and destructive of our inherited and traditional values. We are certainly justified in further exploring how the ACA Gallery and Comrade Baron practiced their announced credo.

The first exhibit was held at an address on Madison Avenue from August 15 to September 6 in 1932. This was the original address of the ACA Gallery. The display of paintings was very meager and entirely unimportant. The first real exhibit in which the gallery expresses pride is that which was held from November 7 to November 20 of the same year. This exhibit was under the aegis of the John Reed Club, which is three times cited in the official Government agencies publication "Citations," and is unquestionably a Communist Party organization. If there could be any shadow of doubt that this early exhibit was for the purpose of foisting Communist propaganda on the American public under the guise of social protest, one has only to cast an appraising eye on the 20 individuals who exhibited their works. Six of them were members of the International Workers Order, listed eight times in "Citations" as Communist, subversive and un-American. At the time these members of the International Workers Order were exhibiting their paintings at the ACA Gallery, the president of their organization was William Weiner, an individual who paid large sums to Samuel Carr, the head of the atom spy ring in Canada.

Of the 14 additional individuals displaying their works at that time at the ACA Gallery, 13 are cited 81 times in the reports of the Committee of the House of Representatives on Un-American Activities, and they were active in no less than 23 different organizations or publications found by this committee to be Communist or Communist front, and cited as such in the committee's report dated December 18, 1948.

At that early date the ACA Gallery was favored with very little publicity in the press, but the New York Evening Post of that time stated:

> The paintings concern themselves more with social propaganda than with aesthetic ideas. On the aesthetic score there is little to be recommended.

But this critic lets the cat out of the bag, if there ever was much of a bag around the cat, because the critic names "social content" in art by its true name—"propaganda."

During that year the ACA Gallery held many auctions and gave benefit shows, the purpose of which was to render financial assistance to "causes which had social implications." Some of the organizations helped were the Spanish Aid Committee, Russian War Relief, the American Artists Congress and the New Masses. It does not take any amplification from me to reveal to you the true character of these causes which were aided—you know them, and they are all Communist. The booklet from which I have quoted when speaking of the John Reed Club exhibition states:

> It settled the fate of the ACA as far as its Madison Avenue location was concerned. The propaganda label proved too much for the neighborhood.

I applaud the neighbors who forced them to get out, bag and baggage.

For 2 weeks in March of 1935 the ACA Gallery housed an exhibition which was sponsored by the John Reed Club, the Artists Union, the League of Struggle for Negro Rights, and the International Labor Defense, which exhibition was undisguised political propaganda for the Costigan-Wagner antilynching bill. It has always been a part of the Communist Party line to cultivate discontent and unrest among our Negro citizens, and in promoting this exhibition the ACA Gallery was adhering strictly to the Communist Party line. The sponsoring organizations are cited as Communist and subversive.

The first one-man show held by the ACA Gallery was during May and June of 1935. The exhibitor was Joe Jones, and Comrade Baron recites that "this exhibition helped to establish 'social content' as a dominant school in art." Now this Joe Jones clutters up the record of the congressional Committee on Un-American activities to such an extent that it would be a waste of a lot of time for me to recite details of his Red activities. He is recorded on 16 different occasions, and he has not deviated from activities in Communist movements, activities in Communist front organizations and general conduct that is subversive and un-American.

According to the November 1937 issue of New Order, a publication of the International Workers Order, Joe Jones is a member of the IWO, and so popular with that organization that branch 521 held its meeting on November 12 at the ACA Gallery, where they not only admired the art of their fellow member, but conducted their regular business affairs and had a doctor present to examine new members. Continuing to quote an article from this publication it is said:

> Of course, this couldn't happen in the average snobby art gallery. The ACA Gallery is devoted to the work of social conscious artists. Its director, Herman Baron, an IWO member himself, has the great desire of bringing art and culture to the masses of people, and he was happy to see the gallery filled with workers.

There was another exhibition in the ACA Gallery in 1935, of which I wish to speak briefly. It was the first exhibition of the American Artists Congress, and established a precedent which was continued in subsequent years. It was in the exhibition of 1937 by this organization at the ACA Gallery that there was an exhibit which indicates as accurately and clearly as possible the true meaning of art with social protest. Comrade Baron recites that "one of the works on exhibition was a Fascist head under glass with live ants crawling all over it." For my part, I do not know of any way to distinguish the detached head of a Fascist from, let us say, the detached head of a martyr such as that of John the Baptist. It seems to me that in death all political evaluations cease most definitely. I cannot contemplate that the brutal, cruel, repulsive, and repugnant can ever cease to be abhorrent to all decent persons and become "art with a social content," or any other kind of art.

The year 1936 was outstanding in the history of the ACA Gallery, because in February of that year there was featured the exhibition of the paintings of William Gropper. This is the individual whom I mentioned in my recent speech concerning the Artists Equity Association, and I have little to add to his record as it was then given, namely, connections with over 60 radical movements, other than to say that he, likewise, is a member of the International Workers Order.

The outstanding exhibition of 1937 at the ACA Gallery was sponsored by such persons as George Seldes, who bartered his soul to the Communist Party; Rockwell Kent, president of the IWO, the man who cursed his own country, damned as traitorous its legislators and applauded the brutal and aggressive acts of Russia; John Howard Lawson, a Communist who even now is under indictment for contempt of this congressional body; Van Wyck Brooks, cited 15 times in the 1948 issue of the Tenney Report on Communist and Communist front organizations; and Lewis Mumford, cited 3 times in this same Tenney Report.

The year 1938 was a milestone in the history of the ACA Gallery because it marked the exhibition of the works of Philip Evergood, who is regarded by the radical element as a master of social protest propaganda. To recite his complete history of Communist affiliations is unnecessary, and I have only to point out that he was one of those individuals who sponsored the recent pro-Soviet gathering at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, and that he is a contributing editor of the Communist publication, Masses and Mainstream.

In 1940 the ACA Gallery presented for public exhibition a collection of woodcuts and colored cartoons purported to depict phases of the Chinese struggle for liberation. That liberation into Russian-dominated Communist servitude is now being effected before the eyes of the world. But in July and August of 1940, when this exhibition was held, Russia was an ally of Germany and the Communists throughout the world were naming World War II a capitalistic and imperialistic war of aggression. The exhibition at the ACA Gallery opened on an unbearably hot night, but nevertheless the gallery was crowded, and why do you suppose so many persons came to the gallery, and what was the lodestone of attraction? Comrade Baron in his booklet on the ACA Gallery says, and I quote: "The guest of honor was the late Constantine Oumansky, then Soviet Ambassador to the United States." Comrade Baron comments lightly that, "Soviet Russia was unpopular in many American circles in those days," but that the men and women present at the gallery "surrounded him"—Oumansky—"with warmth and good fellowship." Evidently the Fascist head crawling with ants, which had been on exhibit earlier, must have been removed to spare the delicate sensibilities of the Russian Ambassador when so viewing his ally.

My remarks are becoming more lengthy than I intended, and I shall speak but briefly on the exhibits of 1941, 1942, 1943, and 1944. These years featured the works of Harry Gottlieb, another member of the International Workers' Order; Robert Gwathmey, contributing editor of Communist publications and quite recently a sponsor of the pro-Soviet conference at the Waldorf Astoria; Hugo Gellert, another member of the International Workers' Order; and Moses Soyer, art critic for the Communist publication New Masses.

Can there now be in your minds any least shadow of doubt that this so-called American Contemporary Art Gallery is, in fact, a hotbed of Communist-inspired impulses, thinly veiled propaganda that is intended to undermine and destroy the fine heritage and traditions which have been built up over the generations of our existence as a great Republic? I believe it to be the hub, the gathering point of Marxists in art, where subtle, nefarious un-American schemes receive their prime incitement. It should be shunned like a plague center of infection.

On the last page of the booklet from which I have made quotations there appears a list of 39 individuals who are noted as ACA artists. Many of these names have already been mentioned, but I wish to classify them generally so that we can better judge their motives.

Of the 39 individuals named as ACA artists by Comrade Baron in his booklet, 24 have a total of 123 references to their names appearing in the index volumes of the congressional committee investigating un-American activities in the United States. A study of the references reflects that these persons were affiliated with 23 different organizations and publications found by the committee to be Communist or Communist fronts and cited by the committee as such in its Citations Report, dated December 18, 1948. While the names of the remaining 15 ACA artists do not appear in the committee's index volumes, they have, with few exceptions, been equally active in the Marxist movement in distorted art and have participated in the activities of such organizations as the American Artists' Congress, the International Workers' Order, and the National Council of Arts, Sciences, and Professions.

The pamphlet by Comrade Baron, from which I have made these selections and which I have now laid aside, is not the only booklet which has been published by the ACA Gallery. I do not know that I have the complete list, but there are several which have been brought to my attention. There is a booklet devoted entirely to David Burliuk. In the Communist clique Burliuk is an heroic figure. Born in Russia in 1882, he came to America when he was 40 years of age. Among Communists he is accredited with being the friend, discoverer, and teacher of the Russian Communist poet, Mayakovsky, who is heralded as the poetic instrument of the revolution. The pamphlet on Burliuk was written by Michael Gold, who is a self-confessed, militant Communist. He says of Burliuk, "He lectured on the new art, published manifestos, encouraged other young rebels, and in every other conceivable manner maintained an offensive barrage against traditions and the academies."

There is a booklet on Robert Gwathmey, whose Red record I have called to your attention, and this pamphlet is written by Paul Robeson, Communist, who has avowed that he would fight for Communist Russia against his own native land, if he had that choice to make.

A booklet on the John Reed Club member, Jan Matulka, was written by Dr. Isaac Kloomak, cultural director for the International Workers Order. There is another booklet put out by the ACA Gallery, which deals solely with the works of Benjamin Kopman. He is another of the radical group in art, and not worthy of any particular attention, but it is important to know that this book was written for the ACA Gallery by Clifford Odets. Probably every member of this body has heard this name, generally present whenever Communist infiltration, Communist front organizations, and subversive activities are the subjects of consideration. In the Tenney report there are 21 references to Clifford Odets, and in the report of the Congressional Committee on Un-American Activities he is mentioned 48 times.

It is obvious that the persons who have written these books for the ACA Gallery are comrades of the first order. I am amazed to find another name in this company, and to me it is a startling indication of the degree to which Marxist influence in American art has been promoted and foisted upon a complacent public. I find the name Elizabeth McCausland, who has written several booklets, especially that on the Spanish Communist artist Picasso. Picasso, as you will recall, is that individual concerning whom the retiring President of the Royal Academy of England, Sir Alfred Munnings, recently expressed a desire to kick hard in a certain part of his anatomy. Winston Churchill voiced his complete willingness to add his boot to the treatment.

Miss McCausland is the art critic of the Springfield Republican, of Springfield, Mass., and of the Magazine of Art. She has long been a devotee of Marxism in art and has given a great deal of aid and comfort to this debasing influence to American art standards. This art critic is prolific in her writings, and is credited with having written the report on which was formulated the socialized art plank in the platform of the Henry Wallace party. More recently she was one of the sponsors for the pro-Soviet conference held at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel in New York City. She was one of those persons whose name appeared in the Daily Worker of March 5, 1941, as defending the Communist Party. She was a member of the advisory board of the Photo League School, denominated a Communist front, and like all sponsors of radicalism, she was one of those who opposed the renewal of the Congressional Committee on Un-American Activities. She is six times mentioned in the reports of the Un-American Committee.

This matter of favorable press for perverted art is, to my mind, a very serious matter indeed. For some reason, art critics seem to enjoy complete freedom from directional supervision. Many of them have gone overboard for Marxist art and have given aid and support to an enemy which is undermining the traditions of our academies. With many of them it has become the fashion to sneer at that which is long established and of high quality, or to ignore it completely, and to give great space and laudatory comment to an influence which is principally destructive.

In this connection I must again refer to the history of the ACA Gallery in which Comrade Baron states that—

> The first show which broke the ice in the metropolitan press was that of Joe Jones in the spring of 1935. Since then news of the ACA in art columns has increased in volume and favorableness.

For a time the ACA Gallery published regularly a news pamphlet, but this was discontinued in the spring of 1946. In looking through this publication, we find that in the year 1945, 10 years after the ACA Gallery first crashed favorably into the metropolitan press, Comrade Baron caused a survey to be made to show graphically how favorably the reviews in the metropolitan press had become. There is a chart published which measures the favor with which the critics viewed the shows of six art exhibits at the ACA Gallery. These exhibits were by the following painters: Benjamin Kopman, Harry Sternberg, Margaret Lowengrund, Anton Refrigier, Moses Soyer, Mervin Jules.

If there were time, I would like to give you the list of Communist-front and subversive organizations to which these six have subscribed, but there is no difference in them, except that of degree. Margaret Lowengrund is mentioned in the reports of the Committee on Un-American Activities only three times; once as a member of the American Artists Congress, to which has been appended the official Red tag, whereas Anton Refrigier has many references. All of these individuals are left-wingers, and as painters they all produced work which creates social unrest. The chart shows that in this year, 1945, the exhibitions were reviewed by the art critics of the New York Times, the Herald Tribune, the World Telegram, the New York Sun, the Brooklyn Eagle, the New Yorker Magazine, Art News, Art Digest, and Pictures on Exhibition. The New York Times gave one courtesy mention, three favorable reviews, and two very favorable reviews; the Herald Tribune gave a favorable review in every instance; the World Telegram gave one favorable review and otherwise all very favorable reviews; the New York Sun gave one very favorable review, two favorable, and three with mixed favorable and unfavorable content; the Brooklyn Eagle gave one very favorable and two favorable criticisms; Art News gave one favorable criticism and two that were mixed favorable and unfavorable; the New Yorker gave two reviews which were partly favorable and partly unfavorable; Art Digest gave one very favorable review, two favorable reviews, and one of mixed content; Pictures on Exhibition gave two complimentary mentions and two favorable reviews.

Now, I must admit that the evaluation of the criticisms and reviews is that of the ACA Gallery, but taking their own estimate of the situation, it is apparent that the metropolitan press was generally very kindly in its attitude toward these left-wing so-called artists. It is an amazing condition to discover that the World Telegram, which has fought communism and Communist infiltration in an outstanding manner, to win the applause of the entire Nation, gave not one single review, according to this chart, which was in any degree unfavorable; in fact, the publicity varied from favorable to very favorable.

One of the artists among these six on the chart is noted as Margaret Lowengrund. Since that time she has become associate editor of the Art Digest, and it is not unexpected that she should now laud and magnify the work of the left-wingers with whom she has associated in the past.

It is not my purpose to suggest that newspapers should clap censorship on their art critics, but I do say that, if this condition of overemphasis and an attempt to glorify the vulgar, distorted, and the perverted has come about due to neglect and lack of proper supervision, then it is high time that some of our newspapers start cleaning house in the smaller compartments of their organizations.

When I commenced my remarks today, I said that there were two things I felt it my duty to do, and I think I have accomplished the first by casting the bright light of publicity on an unhealthy and un-American condition which I know to exist, and I wish now to present the second part of my premise.

It is my conclusion that this unhealthy condition in the American field of culture has come about primarily because the hard-working, talented, reserved, patriotic proponents of academic art in the United States have been reluctant to engage in an argument or a quarrel with the highly organized minority group which has invaded their associations and preempted their offices, or set up new organizations with false standards. I well know that there are thousands of able artists in the United States who abhor the conditions which I have been discussing. Some of them are unaware of the magnitude of the invasion; others are unwilling to act alone. It is my firm conviction that the time has come when the loyal, patriotic, clean-minded, right-thinking artists of this country must rouse themselves, band together and purge their establishment of this social disease. The labor organizations of the country are doing a noble task in throwing out the Communists and the Communist sympathizers head over heels, and it would indeed be an admission of transcendent weakness and feeble manhood if such powerful and healthy organizations as the National Academy of Design, the American Artists Professional League, the Allied Artists of America, the Illustrators Society, and the American Watercolor Society were unwilling, or reluctant, now to gird themselves for battle in a common cause, and throw the Marxists out.

Where the radicals and proponents of communism have taken over organizations as a minority group in control, let the right-thinking members, or a militant part of them, organize themselves and fight these traducers of our American inheritance with their own weapons, if need be. It is time that those persons and organizations which believe in the American tradition reestablish their standards of work, and that there be no appeasement at any time which will permit a form of art distortion and perversion to further lower our standards. It is time for the reluctant warriors of the right and center to take up their swords and not to sulk in their tents, and where they find that the lists and the juries are loaded against them, as many are, to smite for the right and purge them, as it is their duty to do. Let them meet their obligation and regain for America that which belongs to Americans.

The SPEAKER. Under the previous order of the House, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BYRNES] is recognized for 20 minutes.

GOVERNMENT FINANCING

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to use the full 20 minutes that have been allotted to me, but I cannot help making a few statements on what to me seems to be the most serious program confronting this Congress and confronting the Nation: the problem of determining upon a sound fiscal policy. The spending and taxing procedure of the Federal Government certainly demand our attention, and its importance to us today is certainly amply demonstrated by what is happening in this first session of the Eighty-first Congress. We see even today a recognition of the fact that we have already outappropriated our anticipated revenues, and any neutral observer of this Congress can only conclude that we have let the appropriating processes run wild; we have spent money with little thought to where it is coming from, how much it will total, or what its effects will be upon our economy and our national life. Unless Congress corrects its spendthrift habits by a sounder method of budgeting and appropriating, we shall shortly be faced, in my judgment, with fiscal disaster.

We hear a good deal today, Mr. Speaker, about the reorganization of the executive branch of our Government; and I, for one, sincerely hope that the recommendations of the Hoover Commission are carried out and carried out very promptly and at the earliest possible date; but I wish the Members of the Congress would think back to 1946 when we passed the Congressional Reorganization Act. Many forward steps were taken in the passage of that legislation, but I believe we all recognize today that if it had any weaknesses its principal one was in the field of reorganization of the spending procedures of Congress. In that act we set up a provision for a legislative budget. That budget was to be submitted to the Congress by a Committee on the Legislative Budget on the 15th of February. This year, Mr. Speaker, when the 15th of February arrived, the date for the submission of that budget, it was put off and postponed until May 1; and since May 1 we have heard nothing about it. In other words, it is just another piece of legislation on the statute books that we are completely ignoring but which in itself could have the possibility of being of value to us if proper corrections were made.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I am happy to yield to the distinguished gentleman from Oklahoma who was the vice chairman of the committee which set up the Reorganization Act of Congress back in 1946 and who did a splendid job in that regard.

Mr. MONRONEY. I appreciate very much what the gentleman has said.

I feel that the principal task facing any Congress is to plot its financial chart before it starts the session, to know how much it expects to spend and how much it expects to take in. That is the purpose, as the gentleman has well described, of the legislative budget. It has not worked this year, it did not work last year, and it did not work the year before; but I do believe that the principal reason for its failure to work is that the men who were supposed to make it work were not enthusiastically supporting it and that a sufficient staff was not provided to do the necessary work to make it effective. I hope the gentleman may have some suggestions by which the procedure can be tightened up so that we shall be able to file a flight plan before we take off and know where we are going before the time comes when we must land.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I appreciate the gentleman's attitude on this subject. I would say, however, that at least the Eightieth Congress did make an attempt to have the legislative budget work, but this year we have even discarded the idea of trying to make an attempt to make it work.

I propose, Mr. Speaker, that this Congress, instead of condemning the legislative budget to a lingering death or abandonment, breathe new life into it by correcting its defects and providing it nourishment and giving it its rightful place in the sun.

As a basis for further investigation by the Congress I would like to make here today a series of proposals leading toward the reform of our budgetary and appropriation processes. Some of these proposals, I should say, are not new; many of them have been suggested before; but my attempt today is to try to collect them into one place along with some suggestions of mine as the basis for a comprehensive program of reform that we can at least start out from.

I made three principal categories for reform:

First. Changes in the budgeting procedure.

Second. Change in the appropriation procedure.

Third. Reform in reporting and considering legislation authorizing the expenditure of funds.

First, let us look at the matter of budgeting procedure. We get in this Congress various reports from the executive branch and from our own committees which have to do with either appropriations or with the establishment of a budget. I believe, Mr. Speaker, that much advantage can be gained by a new timetable for the receipt of these reports and I, therefore, suggest the following timetable:

(a) The President's state of the union message: First day of regular session.

(b) The President's Economic Report: January 15.

(c) Report of the Joint Economic Committee: March 1.

(d) The President's budget message: March 15.

(e) Report of the Legislative Budget Committee: April 15.

(f) Report of the Appropriations Committee: May 1.

With this timetable, we could reasonably expect the following:

The state of the Union message would be studied without the competition of the economic report since the latter would be submitted 2 weeks later. Similarly, the President's Economic Report and the report of the Joint Committee on the Economic Report, reflecting the economic situation with its important bearing upon governmental income and outgo, would be available to Congress unhampered by the budget document.

Postponing the President's budget message to March 15 would remedy two defects in present timing, as reported by the Hoover Commission task force, on fiscal, budgeting, and accounting activities. The present timing "requires a budget to be submitted by an outgoing President whenever there is a new President" and makes for "poor estimates and incomplete budget recommendations"—see pages 72–74, appendix F, Hoover Commission reports. Submission of the budget message on March 15 does not preclude, however, earlier submission of budgets for individual agencies and departments to the Appropriations Committees as they become available. The Appropriations Subcommittees would begin work, as at present, early in the session.

The report of the Legislative Budget Committee would come 1 month after receipt of the budget message, or on April 15. Through reconstitution of the committee and adequate staffing—discussed later—1 month should be sufficient time for this committee to report. Since it is suggested that this committee should study the budget picture continuously, the 1-month period might be considered as a time to put the final touches to its recommendations, which would take into consideration all of the important reports which have preceded it.

It should be emphasized here, perhaps, that the most we can expect of the legislative budget report, and its subsequent adoption by Congress if that is politically possible, is to focus the attention of Congress and the people upon governmental income and outgo and its relation to increased taxation and the national debt. Congress cannot require future Congresses to adopt the legislative budget, but it should be morally binding upon congressional leadership to bring the legislative budget to the floor for debate. At an extremely important time in the appropriations process, it focuses public opinion and congressional attention upon the important questions involved in Government spending and taxation. Therein lies its vital contribution to sound procedure.

A REVISED MEMBERSHIP ON THE JOINT COMMITTEE ON THE LEGISLATIVE BUDGET WITH PROVISION FOR AN ADEQUATE STAFF TO PROVIDE YEAR-ROUND OPERATION

I propose that the Joint Committee on the Legislative Budget be composed of the following members:

(a) The members of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

(b) The members of the Joint Committee on Appropriations—to be discussed later.

(c) Five members from the Joint Committee on the Economic Report, three from the majority party and two from the minority party, appointed by the chairman of the committee.

This would provide a 25-member Joint Committee on the Legislative Budget instead of the present unwieldy one-hundred-odd-man committee. It would contain the top fiscal-policy makers and would have representation from the top economic committee. It would be almost evenly weighted between House and Senate, equally weighted between the spending and taxing committees, and it would have a 15–10 majority-minority ratio. Its staff would be small, but expert, and would draw largely upon studies being continuously made by the Joint Committees on Taxation, appropriations and Economics. Its job would be to collate rather than collect facts.

THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A JOINT COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS

This committee would consist of the three members of the majority party and two members of the minority party from both the Senate and House Appropriations Committees, 10 members in all, with the chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations as chairman and the chairman of the Senate Committee on Appropriations as vice chairman.

At present, the Appropriations Committees of the House and Senate are divided into subcommittees concerned with separate agencies and departments. This is necessarily so. As a consequence, it is difficult, if not impossible, for these committees to look dispassionately at the whole picture, nor do they have the staffs which permit this.

It would be the duty of this committee to determine the over-all expenditure aspects of the budget, based upon continuing and exhaustive studies of an effective professional staff. It would not trespass upon any functions of the separate committees but would work closely with them. It would set goals for the subcommittees in the light of its knowledge of over-all requirements. It is to be hoped that it can be made as continuously effective as the present Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation. Like that committee, it should be in close touch with executive agencies in its field.

SUMMARY THUS FAR

I have attempted to provide for the orderly submission of pertinent data to the Congress; for a workable Joint Committee on the Budget, well-staffed and having available to it expert and exhaustive information provided from a joint committee on taxation and a joint committee on spending; for all of the machinery necessary for a report on the legislative budget which will represent the sum total of exhaustive study and expert advice from the best minds that Congress can bring to bear upon the subject. An objective is, in short, a report on the legislative budget which will receive serious consideration by Congress because it will be backed by prestige, competence, authority, and experience.

It should be emphasized again that, thus far, we have only arrived at a budget. It represents what we think we will receive and what we think we should spend. It does not represent what we will actually receive and what we will actually spend. It does provide the Congress, however, as a family budget provides for the family, attainable objectives set up in advance.

CONSOLIDATION OF APPROPRIATIONS INTO A SINGLE BILL

This is the Byrd proposal. It has the merit of providing an exact comparison between the goal, as established in the legislative budget, and the actual appropriation itself. Any attempts to increase individual appropriations in the bill would concentrate attention upon the effect of such action upon the grand total of the bill, and upon the legislative budget.

Any attempt to strengthen the legislative budget would be largely nullified if we retain the present system of appropriating funds in a dozen different bills and at a dozen different times. If we are to establish a goal, then we must know whether or not we are reaching that goal. This cannot be done unless we consider the total of all appropriations in one bill and at one time, so that our action can be mathematically compared with our budget.

Under the revised time schedule here proposed, the Appropriations Committee of the House would have been considering individual appropriations as they were made available after the beginning of the session and would have the Presidential budget document by March 15. The same information would, of course, be available to the Senate Committee and the Joint Committee on Appropriations. Likewise, a goal would have been established, taking into consideration the substance of the appropriations requests, in the legislative budget on April 15.

It is suggested, therefore, that the single appropriation bill be scheduled for House debate during the first 2 weeks of May, so that it might be reported to the Senate by May 15. In the meantime, there is nothing to prevent the Senate Committee on Appropriations from conducting its own hearings on the President's requests so that it might be prepared to report the House-originated appropriations bill as quickly as possible to the Senate Chamber. In fact, the present role of the Senate Appropriations Committee as a "court of appeals" on budget cuts leaves much to be desired. Too often, because of this role, the committee is subject to intense pressure on isolated items and is prevented from giving over-all appropriations requests the diligent study which is the essence of sound fiscal control by Congress. The only solution to this problem and to the time problem is for the Senate committee to hold hearings during the same period as the House committee.

At any rate, it is important that the single appropriations bill be on the Senate floor by June 1 or thereabouts, permitting its passage by the end of the fiscal year. Definite scheduling of the single appropriation bill during the latter days of the session by the leadership would have the subsidiary effect of a more precise programing of other legislation during the earlier days.

ADOPTION OF RULES IN THE HOUSE AND SENATE TO PREVENT THE CONSIDERATION OF AUTHORIZING LEGISLATION WITHOUT KNOWING ITS COST AND EFFECT UPON THE BUDGET

Too often authorizations for new programs are approved by Congress without adequate consideration of the immediate and projected cost of such programs. Too often the prevailing attitude on the floor is to let the Appropriations Committee determine the cost and appropriate the funds. This not only makes for bad budgeting but for bad legislation as well. It is impossible to legislate intelligently unless benefits can be related to costs.

For this reason I propose:

(a) That all bills authorizing appropriations, or involving the expenditure of Federal funds, be referred, after having been reported by the legislative committee concerned, to the Joint Committee on the Budget for a report.

(b) That the joint committee's report shall contain the estimated immediate and projected cost of the legislation, the number of employees required for its implementation, its effect upon the legislative budget, and a statement as to whether or not, in the committee's opinion, implementation of the legislation would require an increase in the national debt or increased taxation, or both.

It is contemplated that the report on authorizing legislation would be largely factual, the staff, for the most part, gathering the data and preparing the report. Hearings would be permitted, if necessary, and the committee would work closely with the Bureau of the Budget and any other agencies of the Government which might be involved.

The legislation could not be held in the committee longer than 21 days. It could be discharged by unanimous consent, but in normal practice neither body would consider the legislation until the cost analysis had been made by the joint committee and a report had been issued.

ADOPTING THE PERFORMANCE BUDGET, AS RECOMMENDED BY THE HOOVER COMMISSION

The compelling reasons for the preparation of a budget based upon functions, activities, and projects are discussed fully in the Hoover Commission Report on Budgeting and Accounting—page 8. Submission of a budget in this form will give new meaning to the proposals already mentioned.

I hope, Mr. Speaker, to have legislation covering a major share of the proposals I have made today ready for introduction at an early date.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. O'SULLIVAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include an editorial.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. LICHTENWALTER (at the request of Mr. GRAHAM), indefinitely, on account of illness.

To Mr. HOBBS (at the request of Mr. ANDREWS), through the week of May 30, on account of illness.

SENATE

WEDNESDAY, MAY 18, 1949

(Legislative day of Monday, April 11, 1949)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou God of grace and glory, in hours of perplexity and confusion we are sure of no light but Thine, no refuge but in Thee. With swift and unpredictable events tumbling upon us without warning in a violent and chaotic world, O Thou God of the changing years, in a still moment like this as we bow at our noontide altar, may a holy hush within our spirits whisper words of courage and fortitude and fidelity. In these days of decision and destiny may we not miss the things belonging to our peace and to the peace of the world. In the Redeemer's name. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. LUCAS, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Tuesday, May 17, 1949, was dispensed with.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT OF AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ACT OF 1938, AS AMENDED

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a letter from the Secretary of Agriculture, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended by the Agricultural Act of 1948, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

Petitions, etc., were laid before the Senate, or presented, and referred as indicated:

By the PRESIDENT pro tempore:

A joint resolution of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii; to the Committee on Appropriations:

"Joint Resolution 14

"Joint resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States of America to provide funds for the maintenance and care of veterans' memorial cemeteries in the Territory of Hawaii

"Be it enacted by the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii:

"SECTION 1. The Congress of the United States of America is hereby respectfully requested to provide $40,000 annually for the maintenance and care of veterans' memorial cemeteries on each of the islands of the Territory of Hawaii, as follows:

Kauai	$10,000
Hawaii	10,000
Maui	10,000
Molokai	10,000

"SEC. 2. Duly authenticated copies of this joint resolution shall be forwarded to the Delegate to Congress from Hawaii, the Secretary of the Interior, and to each of the two Houses of the Congress of the United States.

"SEC. 3. This joint resolution shall take effect upon its approval.

"Approved this 4th day of May A. D. 1949.

"INGRAM M. STAINBACK,
"Governor of the Territory of Hawaii."

A joint resolution of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii; to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs:

"Joint Resolution 13

"Joint resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States of America to undertake the development of water storage facilities for the production of hydroelectric power and for the irrigation of certain upper land areas at Waimea, County of Kauai

"Whereas in the upper land area of Waimea, near Kokee, County of Kauai, there is approximately 15,000 acres of land which would be suitable for agricultural purposes if irrigated; and

"Whereas there is sufficient water available, amounting to a flow of nearly 2,000,000 gallons per day, for irrigating such lands but lack of water storage facilities prevent its use for controlled irrigation; and

"Whereas there have been studies completed showing the feasibility and practicality of constructing reservoirs and of providing irrigation for such lands; and

"Whereas it is also both feasible and practical to include as part of the water storage facilities and irrigation project facilities for generating hydroelectric power: Now therefore

"Be it enacted by the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii:

"SECTION 1. The Congress of the United States of America is hereby requested to appropriate adequate funds for and to provide for the undertaking of the development of facilities for the impounding of water in the upper land area of Waimea, near Kokee, County of Kauai, such water to be used for generating hydroelectric power and for irrigating land in the area. It is requested that included in the project be three reservoirs to be designated, to have the approximate capacities, and to be located in the County of Kauai, as follows:

"1. Kawaikoi reservoir, to be located below the junction of the east fork and the north fork of the Kawaikoi stream, at an elevation of approximately 3,431 feet and to have a capacity of at least 2,400,000,000 gallons of water; and

"2. Kokee reservoir, to be located near Kokee, at an elevation of approximately 3,500 feet, and to have a capacity of at least 140,000,000 gallons of water to be derived from the waters of the Kokee stream, the Noe stream, and the Waineke stream; and

"3. Kanaloholuhulu reservoir, to be located north and west of Kokee at an elevation of approximately 3,620 feet, and to provide storage facilities for at least 280,000,000 gallons of water naturally accumulating in that area, which water is to be subsequently discharged into the Waineke stream.

"SEC. 2. Certified copies of this joint resolution shall be forwarded to the President of the Senate and to the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States of America, to the Secretary of the Interior and to the Delegate to the Congress from Hawaii.

"SEC 3. This joint resolution shall take effect upon its approval.

"Approved this 29th day of April A. D. 1949.

"INGRAM M. STAINBACK,
"Governor of the Territory of Hawaii."

A joint resolution of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii; to the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare:

"Joint Resolution 17

"Joint resolution requesting the Congress of the United States of America to enact legislation in regard to the stoppage or curtailment of sea-borne commerce between ports of the continental United States and ports of the Territory of Hawaii due to labor disputes

"Whereas the Territory of Hawaii, not being self-sufficient, and being located over 2,000 miles from the continental United States, and deriving much of its food and other essential supplies therefrom, as well as shipping much of its products thereto, is largely dependent upon sea-borne commerce between ports of the continental United States and ports of the said Territory for such food and essential supplies, as well as for the transportation for such products; and

"Whereas such commerce has been stopped or greatly curtailed from time to time, by reason of labor disputes between employers, on the one hand, and labor unions representing maritime workers or harbor workers, on the other hand, as a result of which labor disputes the economy of the said Territory has been injured, its productive effort has been damaged, and its people have suffered from protracted shortages of food and other essential supplies; and

"Whereas the best interests of the said Territory and its people are served by the prompt and orderly settlement of the aforesaid labor disputes; and

"Whereas the Congress of the United States of America enacted the Federal Railway Act (title 45, U. S. C., ch. 8) for the prompt and orderly settlement of labor disputes between railway employers and railway employees, but has enacted no similar legislation for the settlement of labor disputes between the aforesaid employers and the aforesaid maritime workers and harbor workers, although both classes of labor disputes equally affect the public interest and the health, welfare, and safety of the people: Now, therefore,

"Be it enacted by the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii:

"SECTION 1. That the Congress of the United States of America be, and it is hereby respectfully requested to enact legislation similar, in principle, to the said Federal Railway Labor Act for the prompt and orderly settlement of labor disputes between employers, on the one hand, and maritime employees on ships engaging in commerce between ports of the continental United States and ports of the Territory of Hawaii and harbor workers in said ports, on the other hand, to the end, that such commerce will not be stopped or curtailed, and all such disputes will be settled as promptly and orderly as possible.

"SEC. 2. That certified copies of this joint resolution shall be transmitted to the President of the United States, to the President of the Senate and to the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States, to the Secretary of the Interior, to the Secretary of Labor, to the United States Maritime Commission and to the Delegate to Congress from Hawaii.

"SEC. 3. This joint resolution shall take effect upon its approval.

"Approved this 5th day of May A. D. 1949.

"INGRAM M. STAINBACK,
"Governor of the Territory of Hawaii."

A letter in the nature of a petition signed by Edward R. Burke, counsel, Hawaii Statehood Commission, of Washington, D. C., relating to statehood for Hawaii; to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

A resolution adopted by the Common Council of the City of Bellaire, Ohio, favoring the enactment of legislation proclaiming October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

A paper in the nature of a memorial from the Association of Interstate Commerce Commission Practitioners of Washington, D. C., signed by Chester C. Thompson, president, remonstrating against the action of the United States Civil Service Commission in reducing the number of hearing examiners employed by the Interstate Commerce Commission; to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

COMPULSORY HEALTH INSURANCE — RESOLUTION OF HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF DELAWARE

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I present for appropriate reference House Resolution No. 42 of the One Hundred and Fifteenth General Assembly of the State of Delaware, petitioning the Congress to refrain from imposing upon the citizens any form of compulsory health insurance.

The resolution was received and referred to the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare.

(See text of resolution printed in full when presented by the Vice President on May 16, 1949, p. 6204, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.)

PROHIBITION OF LIQUOR ADVERTISING IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE — PETITION

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I present for appropriate reference a petition signed by 56 citizens of Lewes, Del., in support of H. R. 2428, to prohibit the transportation of alcoholic-beverage advertising in interstate commerce and the broadcasting of alcoholic beverages over the radio.

The petition was received and referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

FEDERAL REGIONAL OR VALLEY AUTHORITIES — RESOLUTION OF NATIONAL WILDLIFE FEDERATION

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, I have in my hand a resolution unanimously adopted by the National Wildlife Federation at its annual meeting on March 6 here in Washington. This resolution, representing the viewpoint of over 5,000,000 sportsmen and conservationists in the United States, opposes formation of any additional Federal, regional, or valley authorities. According to David A. Aylward, president of the federation, its membership believes that it would be better to handle the Nation's resources through interstate compact rather than further Federal valley authorities. There is, of course, a considerable amount of legislation now pending in the Congress for setting up additional valley or regional authorities, and I believe that the congressional committees evaluating this legislation should, while reviewing all of the facts in the matter, consider the viewpoint of the Nation's conservationists.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the National Wildlife Federation resolution be appropriately referred and printed at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the resolution was referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

RESOLUTION SUBMITTED BY THE IDAHO WILDLIFE FEDERATION

Whereas the National Wildlife Federation favors the maximum feasible conservation of America's natural resources; and

Whereas we believe that the creation of any Federal Valley Authority would interfere with the inherent rights of States in the management and conservation of their natural resources; and

Whereas there are now before the Congress of the United States bills to create additional valley authorities: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the National Wildlife Federation, a national organization in regular annual meeting assembled at Washington, D. C., March 6, 1949, is unalterably opposed to the creation of any additional Federal regional or valley authorities as being unjustified, unnecessary, and a dangerous departure from our American form of Government.

PRO-COMMUNIST SPEECH BY HONOLULU (HAWAII) HIGH-SCHOOL GIRL—LETTER AND RESOLUTION OF HAWAII EDUCATION ASSOCIATION

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I hold in my hand a letter which I have just received from James R. McDonough, executive secretary of the Hawaii Education Association. This letter submits to me a resolution unanimously adopted by the Hawaii Education Association in convention assembled on April 14, 1949. The purport of the resolution is to declare that the pro-Communist speech made by a school girl in Honolulu, to which I called the attention of the Senate some weeks ago, does not represent the attitude of the student body at this particular high school.

I am very glad to have this assurance, and I am happy to comply with the request that this resolution be inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Accordingly, Mr. President, I now ask unanimous consent that the letter to which I have referred, together with the accompanying papers, including the list of signatures to the petition, may be appropriately referred and printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the matters were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE HAWAII EDUCATION ASSOCIATION,
Honolulu, Hawaii, U. S. A., May 4, 1949.

The Honorable PATRICK MCCARRAN,
Senator from Nevada, Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR MCCARRAN: I respectfully submit herewith a resolution unanimously adopted by the Hawaii Education Association in convention assembled April 14, 1949.

Truly yours,

JAMES R. MCDONOUGH,
Executive Secretary.

Whereas the action of Senator PATRICK MCCARRAN in reading into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD an ill-advised speech on communism delivered by a 16-year-old school girl on the assigned topic, The Russian Problem, in a contest sponsored by the Daughters of the American Revolution, and the Senator's remarks upon this occasion, appear calculated to cast doubts upon Hawaii's teachers and students; and

Whereas the declaration framed by the student body of Kaimuki High School, dated April 8, 1949, which was read on the floor of the Territorial Senate on Wednesday morning, April 13, 1949, a copy of which is appended to this resolution, expresses what we believe to be the sincere convictions of the youth of Hawaii; and

Whereas the Territorial Senate voted to send to Congress this declaration and the remarks of Senators Herbert K. H. Lee and Eugene S. Capellas, Sr., with the request that it be inserted into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Hawaii Education Association in convention assembled this 14th day of April 1949 heartily endorse the statement by the Kaimuki High School students and the comments by the Territorial senators; and be it further

Resolved, That the Hawaii Education Association add its request to that of the Territorial Senate that this statement be inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, supporting this request with the assertion of its confidence in the loyalty, patriotism, and Americanism of Hawaii's public-school teachers and pupils; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the President of the Senate of the United States, to the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, to Hon. JOSEPH R. FARRINGTON, Delegate to Congress from Hawaii, and to Senator MCCARRAN.

HAWAII EDUCATION ASSOCIATION.
Adopted April 14, 1949.

KAIMUKI HIGH SCHOOL STUDENT GOVERNMENT,
Honolulu, Hawaii, April 8, 1949.

DECLARATION

Because we are students of Kaimuki High School and loyal American citizens devoted to the American way of life;

Because there appears to be some damage to our school reputation because of a student speech given in a school assembly in November 1948, which speech did not and does not represent our school or our beliefs and attitudes;

Because the ideas of communism play no part in our lives, and any assumption to the contrary is unfair, unjust, and with no basis in fact;

Because Kaimuki High School has been on record since 1947–48 as favoring statehood;

Because the speech and publicity given to it may have injured the cause of statehood for Hawaii;

Therefore, we the undersigned representatives of the student body of Kaimuki High School respectfully submit the following declaration:

We resent and we reject all implications that communism has any hold whatsoever on the students of Kaimuki High School, and we reaffirm our undivided loyalty to the United States of America and our devotion to the American way of life.

And we therefore are sending copies of this declaration to the following: The Honorable Ingram M. Stainback, Governor of Hawaii; the Honorable Wilfred C. Tsukiyama, president of the Senate, Territory of Hawaii; the Honorable Hiram L. Fong, speaker of the House of Representatives, Territory of Hawaii; the Honorable Alben W. Barkley, Vice President of the United States of America and President of the Senate of the United States of America; the Honorable Samuel Rayburn, Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States of America; the Honorable Joseph R. Farrington; Delegate to Congress from Hawaii; Dr. W. Harold Loper, superintendent of public instruction, Territory of Hawaii; Mr. Edward N. Sylva, chairman, board of commissioners of public instruction, Territory of Hawaii; Mr. Julius Krug, Secretary, Department of the Interior, of the United States of America; Mr. Robert M. Faulkner, supervising principal of Honolulu schools.

Henry Au Hoy, Student Government President; Walter Ito, Student Government Vice President; Nancy Oyama, Student Government Secretary; James Nohara, Student Government Treasurer; Robert Sasaki, Sergeant-at-Arms; Fujiko Zukeran, Inter School Council Chairman; Yuriko Hisano, Room 7 Representative; Alice Sakai, Room 19 Representative; Helen Higa, Room 38 Representative; Thelma Kaneshiro, Room 9 Representative; Dorothy Haitsuka, Room 15 Representative; Lillian Okuhara, Room 14B Representative; Sadie Ono, Chairman, Archives Committee; Edna Yamamoto, Chairman, Assembly Board Committee; Helen Fuchise, Room 4 Representative; Robert Freitas, Police Chief; William Kaneshiro, Representative, Library; Leighton Anderson, Room 7 Representative; George Gasper, Cafeteria E Representative; Joyce Matsuda, Room 11 Representative; Lottie Kobayashi, Room 9 Representative; James Hare, Room 26 Representative; Rickey Hamasaki, Junior Class President; Herman Ping; Room 34 Representative; Jean Kashiwamura, Cafeteria K Representative; Patsy Minatodani, Room 21 Representative; Jan Jo, Editor—Annual; Gail Omura, Identification Bureau Chairman; Mabel L. Kam, Handbook Committee Chairman; Nancy Onaga, Newspaper Editor; Harold Abe, Room 31 Representative; M. Freitas, Room 16 Representative; Oi Wun Young, Room 21 Representative; Katherine Niau, Room 18 Representative; Violet Oki, Room 17 Representative; James Kurashige, Room 24 Representative; Veronica Lim, Room 24 Representative; Grace Oshima, Room 24 Representative; Rebecca Goodness, Junior Class Adviser; Cathryn M. Irvine, Senior Class Adviser.

THE SPANISH MUDDLE—EDITORIAL

Mr. MCCARRAN. Mr. President, there has been considerable discussion recently, on the floor of this body, with respect to our attitude toward Spain.

In that connection, I hold in my hand an article from the Paris edition of the London Daily Mail, dated Friday, April 22, the title of which is "The Spanish Muddle," and the author of which is Sir Duff Cooper, former British Ambassador to France.

Because I believe this article will be of special interest to many Senators, I ask unanimous consent that it may be printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the body of the RECORD, as follows:

THE SPANISH MUDDLE—WHY TREAT SPAIN WORSE THAN OUR EX-ENEMIES?—BRITAIN SHOULD ABANDON INDEFENSIBLE POLICY

(By Sir Duff Cooper, former British Ambassador to France)

The political situation is subject to perpetual change. Men who refuse to recognize the changes that take place are doomed to failure. Those who in 1949 adhere obstinately to a policy that was defensible in 1945 are the stupidest sort of diehards. They fail to understand that in foreign affairs a complete revolution has taken place in 4 years.

When the war ended, Britons of all parties were anxious for continued close collaboration with their Russian ally. Today men of all parties, except Communists and crypto-Communists, have reluctantly come to the conclusion that such collaboration is, at present, impossible.

It is the Russians who have driven them to that conclusion and who, in doing so, have created a gang of police states, each ruled by minority governments, who defy the principles of the United Nations, who are arming in defiance of the peace treaties they have signed, and whose attitude constitutes a menace to the peace of the world.

To meet this menace the free nations are wisely pursuing two methods. They are forming a union of the powers of western Europe, and are concluding a pact with their great ally on the other side of the Atlantic Ocean. At the same time this great ally, in order to prevent her friends in Europe from collapsing under the strain of postwar economic conditions, is extending toward them generous financial assistance.

NEVER INVITED

The following, therefore, are now the four main features of the situation—Communist menace, western union, Atlantic Pact, and Marshall aid. Four years ago the first of these was not generally recognized as existing, and the other three did not exist. So the change in the situation is immense, and the change in our attitude toward it should be commensurable.

In the lists of nations belonging to the western union and the Atlantic Pact, and in that of those receiving Marshall aid, there is one name conspicuously absent. Spain has never been invited to associate herself with her neighbors, and although she is in dire financial straits, no helping hand has been extended toward her.

Whenever it is suggested that there should be some alteration in the anti-Spanish policy adopted 4 years ago, Britain's prim, little leftist politicians purse up their lips in disapproval, like that of maiden aunts toward the bad girl of the family, and exclaim: "Spain! Oh, no, we never mention her."

In more sensible circles there is a growing uneasiness about this attitude. To nurse a grudge is foolish in an individual—it is unpardonable in the government of a great country. To send a member of society to Coventry is schoolboy justice, and should be abandoned by those who have left the schoolroom.

Britain says that it is not the Spanish people but their government with whom she is angry; yet, it is the people who are suffering and the government who are gaining as the result of Britain's policy. Heaven forbid that Britain should seek to appeal to the Spanish people over the head of their government, that elementary political blunder, which President Wilson made in the case of Italy 30 years ago, but Britain should make some attempt to explain her policy to Spaniards, and she cannot explain it without changing it, for as it stands it is inexplicable.

Her whole policy toward Spain is based upon dislike of her present government. That Britain has grounds for her dislike may be granted, but whether such dislike constitutes in itself a sufficiently sound basis for the policy of one country toward another must be questioned.

PROUD PEOPLE

If we are to succeed in the formation of unions and pacts comprehensive of many nations, it can hardly be expected that each one of those nations will entirely approve of the form of government existing in each one of the others. It is even possible that Britain's Government may arouse no particular enthusiasm among some of her closest friends.

Both great political parties in the United States detest socialism, yet Britain's Socialist government demands and obtains unfailing sympathy and assistance from those who deplore its principles. The British Government would be outraged, even those of us who do not support it would be deeply offended, if the Americans were to say one morning: "If you wish to retain our friendship, you must change your government." Yet this is precisely what Britain is saying every morning to Spain.

The Spaniards are a very proud people. They are not going to make excuses, nor to ask Britain questions, but there are many good excuses they could make which would clarify the situation, and many questions they could ask which would be hard to answer.

RESISTED THREAT

Admitting that their attitude in the war was more friendly to Britain's foes than to Britain, they might remind Britons that they had just emerged from a civil war in which they had lost more killed than Great Britain lost either in the Second or in the First World War; that Hitler, triumphant, was standing on their frontiers, using all the pressure at his command to persuade them to come into the war on his side, and promising them Gibraltar and much else beside as their reward.

Yet they resisted both the threat and the bribe, and remained neutral, so that we learn from the recently published official papers of Ciano how the Germans were complaining in the fateful year of 1940 of the lack of cooperation from Spain, and comparing it unfavorably with the valuable support they were receiving from Russia.

Spaniards cannot believe it possible that they should be thought to have behaved worse toward the Allies during the war than either Germany or Italy. Yet they are being worse treated today.

They see the Allies making gigantic efforts to feed the Germans and yet they are hungrier than the Germans, but nobody ever thinks of feeding them. Italy has been forgiven, as though she had never been guilty, and is a highly respected member of the western union and of the Atlantic Pact.

Spaniards know that we do not like dictatorships. Nor do they. But they know also that there is a dictatorship in Portugal, and they suspect that the methods of the Turkish Government are not always strictly democratic. Yet these facts have not, fortunately, interfered with Britain's friendly relations with these countries.

They have been told that the ambassadors of the democracies were withdrawn from Madrid because it was considered that Spanish political offenders had been treated with excessive severity. Yet they have seen the heroic Petkov judicially murdered in Bulgaria and the saintly Mindszenty unjustly condemned to lifelong imprisonment in Hungary, and they know that Britain is still represented by fully accredited diplomatists in both countries.

These are some of the questions that Spaniards would be justified in asking Britain, and that Britain would find it very difficult to answer. They might also add that, if Britain is afraid that she may have to fight communism, they have already fought it, and defeated it—a fact that should entitle them to some consideration.

TWO ATTITUDES

It is high time that Britain abandoned a policy, for which there may have been some justification 4 years ago, but which is indefensible today. The main objective of the new policy should be to bring Spain back to the community of nations, and the first step toward that objective should be the appointment of ambassadors.

There are only two attitudes which a sensible man can adopt toward others. Either he must be polite or he must refuse to speak to them. No sensible man would adopt the policy of being perpetually rude.

To be represented by a chargé d'affaires and to refuse to appoint an ambassador is a policy of incivility. It may be permissible as a temporary expedient, but when it is prolonged over a period of years it becomes ridiculous. It is the worst of all policies to adopt toward the most courteous of nations.

When the ambassadors have been appointed and when they have got into touch with the Spanish Government, as only ambassadors can do, they should report to their own governments as to the next steps that should be taken in order to arrive at the end desired.

REPORT OF A COMMITTEE

The following report of a committee was submitted:

By Mr. HILL, from the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare:

H. R. 858. A bill to clarify the overtime compensation provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, as amended, as applied in the longshore, stevedoring, building, and construction industries; with amendments (Rept. No. 402).

By Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado (by request):

S. 1888. A bill to amend the Federal Airport Act; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

CONSTRUCTION AT MILITARY AND NAVAL INSTALLATIONS

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I am about to introduce a bill to authorize certain construction at military and naval installations, and for other purposes. In view of the fact that the bill will provide authorizations for $623,125,682, I shall take the liberty of reading a short letter, so that it may appear in the RECORD and put Senators on notice, because the projects are scattered all over the United States, as well as in Canada and in our possessions. I shall first read the letter.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the reading of the letter? The Chair hears none, and the Senator may proceed.

Mr. TYDINGS. The letter reads:

THE SECRETARY OF DEFENSE,
Washington, May 17, 1949.

Hon. MILLARD E. TYDINGS,
Chairman, Armed Services Committee,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: There is transmitted herewith a draft of a proposed bill authorizing the Secretaries of the Army, Navy, and Air Force to proceed, under the direction of the Secretary of Defense, with the construction of certain public works and for other purposes.

The purpose of the proposed legislation is to authorize the appropriation of necessary funds for the immediate and critical housing and public-works requirements of the National Military Establishment.

The proposed bill consists of four titles. The first three titles enumerate the projects sought to be authorized for each of the services, grouped according to specific station or locality. Title IV contains general authority for the three Secretaries to acquire lands or interests therein by donation, purchase, or otherwise, in connection with the construction under the proposed bill, provides that appropriations may be made available until expended and authorizes the granting of contract authority in lieu of appropriations.

Sections 404 and 405 of the bill have been included therein as a result of Bureau of the Budget review of the legislation. Section 404 would limit the net floor area of the family quarters authorized to 1,080 square feet per unit. Section 405 would provide a limit of not to exceed $14,000 cost per family unit including kitchen range, refrigerator, telephone, architectural and engineering services and all contingencies, as well as a limit of not to exceed $2,500 per family unit for site development and outside utilities including architectural and engineering services and all contingencies.

There would be authorized under section 402 of this title, total appropriations of not to exceed $623,125,682, including $25,000,000 for emergency projects specifically authorized by the three Secretaries and $14,529,000 for the special weapons project, with the balance allocated as follows:

	Army	Navy	Air Force
Inside continental United States	$69,889,700	$98,493,300	$175,540,500
Outside continental United States	81,177,700	89,219,501	69,275,981

This bill has been developed as a result of the studies of Mr. Donald F. Carpenter, Chairman of the Munitions Board, who has been designated my personal representative in this matter. It represents the minimum requirement for authorizations which are immediately necessary and critical in the light of the over-all strategic considerations of the services as indicated in Mr. Carpenter's report to me. As my representative, Mr. Carpenter is available to furnish any information which may be desired and is authorized to act for me in this matter.

I earnestly request on behalf of the National Military Establishment favorable consideration of this legislation.

The National Military Establishment has been advised by the Bureau of the Budget and there is no objection to the submission of the proposed legislation to the Congress for its consideration.

With kindest personal regards, I am,

Sincerely yours,

LOUIS JOHNSON.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. Did I understand the Senator from Maryland to say that the bulk of the money was for housing on or off the bases?

Mr. TYDINGS. I would not like to answer that question "yes" or "no," but I can say that a great deal of it is for housing. I have not recapitulated the figures so as to be able to give the Senator a positive answer to his question.

Mr. WHERRY. Does the distinguished Senator know whether the bill provides for the construction by the military itself of space to house military personnel, that is, single men, such as a barracks, or does it provide simply for the building of homes?

Mr. TYDINGS. It includes homes, family quarters, public utilities, and various other matters related to homes, as well as a great many critical projects such as, for example, construction of facilities for rocket development.

Mr. WHERRY. I am interested primarily in the housing construction.

Mr. TYDINGS. Let me say to the Senator that one of the items which quickly catches my eye—and I mention this because the Senator has presented to me the need for it many times before—is the Sioux Ordnance Depot in Nebraska. Family quarters and utilities to the extent of $99,000 are provided at that one place. That is for the Army. There may be other Nebraska items in the bill. That is the thing the Senator and I have been discussing in part heretofore.

Mr. WHERRY. So if I correctly understand the provisions of the bill, it contemplates that the military will construct these facilities either on or off the base, and they will be rented, I imagine, to the personnel under their allowances. Is that correct?

Mr. TYDINGS. I think the Senator's observation is accurate.

Mr. WHERRY. This is not a private enterprise housing bill. It provides money which the military itself expects to expend. The military itself will control the housing, will it not?

Mr. TYDINGS. The military may have private persons do the building, but the military will supervise the work.

Mr. WHERRY. The military will own it, and there will be no loans issued against it?

Mr. TYDINGS. That is correct. This is a straight-out preparedness and critically needed list of projects, both in the field of housing and in the field of ranges, test laboratories, and the like.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the Senator.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. MURRAY. I should like to inquire whether the bill provides for the construction of housing facilities at the Army air base at Great Falls, Mont., which has been in great need of a program of that kind for a number of years.

Mr. TYDINGS. The bill is so long, and contains so many provisions, it would take me a little while to find out. I will tell the Senator privately whether it contains that item in a moment.

Mr. MURRAY. If it contains provisions of that character it would influence me a great deal.

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be printed in the RECORD following my remarks, for the information of Senators.

There being no objection, the bill (S. 1875) to authorize certain construction at military and naval installations, and for other purposes, introduced by Mr. TYDINGS, was read twice by its title, referred to the Committee on Armed Services, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc.—

TITLE I

SECTION 101. The Secretary of the Army, under the direction of the Secretary of Defense, is hereby authorized to establish or develop military installations and facilities by the construction, installation, or equipment of temporary or permanent public works, including buildings, facilities, appurtenances, and utilities, as follows:

CONTINENTAL UNITED STATES

Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.: Climatic testing facilities, air-to-ground rocket-firing research facilities, high explosives loading and dissassembly facilities and compressor building for supersonic windtunnel; $2,930,000.

Arlington Hall, Virginia: Extension between wings 1 and 2, building No. 450, extension of wing No. 1, building No. 450; $94,000.

Army-Navy General Hospital, Arkansas: Ground storage water reservoir; $65,000.

Army Chemical Center, Maryland: Process laboratory, radiological "cold" laboratory, low temperature test chambers, experimental loading and filling building, test chamber for aerosols, radiological "hot" laboratory, protective equipment laboratory, explosion test chamber, collective protector and air filter laboratory, facilities for assembly of clusters and fire bombs, high pressure laboratory, storage building for radiological equipment laboratory for radiological defense school; $2,861,000.

Army Receiving Station, La Plata, Md.: Family quarters and utilities barracks, receiving building, power house and garage; $634,500.

Army Transmitting Station, District of Columbia Area: Improve roads, land acquisition, power facilities, power house and garage, telephone facilities, transmitter building, barracks, family quarters and utilities; $1,285,500.

Fort Belvoir, Va.: Communications building, $118,000.

Benicia Arsenal, Calif.: Improvements to water system; $243,800.

Fort Benning, Ga.: Family quarters and utilities, repair shops, dispensary, magazines, storage facilities, administration building, gasoline station and pump house, central heating plant, obstacle and test course, testing pool, lavatory building, target house, range facilities; $6,512,000.

Black Hills Ordnance Depot, S. Dak.: Family quarters and utilities, improvements to water system; $249,000.

Fort Bliss, Tex.: Mechanical laboratory, X-ray laboratory, carbon disulfide storage tank, two gas cylinder storage buildings, two chemical storage buildings, storage igloo in ordnance area, components assembly building, fence, family quarters and utilities; $1,024,000.

Fort Bragg, N. C.: Family quarters and utilities; $6,666,000.

Brooklyn Army Base, N. Y.: Fire protection of piers; $150,000.

California Institute of Technology, California: Test cells, hazardous propellant storage, construction modification and relocation of facilities; $685,000.

Deseret Chemical Depot, Utah: Family quarters and utilities, barracks; $497,700.

Camp Detrick, Md.: Family quarters and utilities, civilian dormitory, decontamination facilities, munitions building, aerobiological building, basic science building, meteorological building, pilot plant for crop studies, surveillance building laboratory, storage facilities, maintenance shops; $3,313,500.

Fort Dix, N. J:. Family quarters and utilities; $924,000.

Frankford Arsenal, Pa.: Improvements to water system; $127,000.

Camp Hood, Tex.: Family quarters and utilities, battalion motor park, highway bridge, improvements to water system; $9,100,000.

Fort Jackson, S. C.: Family quarters and utilities, $528,000.

Fort Knox, Ky.: Family quarters and utilities; $924,000.

Camp Lee, Va.: Family quarters and utilities; $3,135,000.

Fort Lewis, Wash.: Family quarters and utilities, removal of structures and relocation of post office and finance building, telephone exchange building; $4,793,000.

Lima Ordnance Depot, Ohio: Heat and power plant, connection with city water supply and utilities; $290,000.

Malta Test Station, N. Y.: Additional garage space, additions to electrical distribution system; Quonset huts and platforms; fencing, drainage, roads, fire lanes and clearings, vehicle storage sheds, well, pump and water distributing system, addition to test structure No. 6, chemical test structure and test cells, oxygen pump and turbine test buildings, extension of nitrogen and oxygen gas lines to pits 1 and 2 and chemical pit, fire alarm system, increase storage for new type fuels, stockroom addition, extension engineering and laboratory building, water pipe wall for pits 3 and 4, addition to ram jet structure: $840,000.

Marion Engineer Depot, Ohio: Sprinkler system, special storage facilities; $533,000.

Midwest Chemical Depot, Ark.: Storage sheds; $551,000.

Fort Monmouth, N. J.: Family quarters and utilities; $3,069,000.

Muroc Air Force Base, Calif.: Improvement to range bombing facilities; $144,000.

Murphy General Hospital, Mass.: Family quarters and utilities, land acquisition; $241,000.

Navajo Ordnance Depot, Ariz.: Utilities for Navajo Village; $225,000.

Oliver General Hospital, Ga.: Family quarters and utilities; $396,000.

Picatinny Arsenal, N. J.: Construction of facilities for rocket development and test purposes and utilities (Loki project); $601,000.

Princeton, N. J.: Acquisition of Rockefeller Institute Facilities for Chemical Corps research; $3,000,000.

Redstone Arsenal (Huntsville), Ala.: Chemical laboratory and administration-engineer buildings and rocket motor test stand; engineer building, administration building, laboratory buildings; four rocket motor test stands; storage facilities; flight test range; nitroglycerin plant; two temperature conditioning buildings; modification of eight buildings; modification of one building for machine shop; expansion and modification of utilities, roads and fences; $4,250,000.

For Riley, Kans.: Underground magazines, family quarters and utilities; $143,000.

Rossford Ordnance Depot, Ohio: Fire-proofing of warehouses; $500,000.

St. Louis Medical Depot, Mo.: Modification of medical laboratory building; $125,000.

Schenectady General Depot, N. Y.: Base maintenance shop building facilities and utilities; $749,000.

Sharpe General Depot, Calif.: Equipment-processing building; $184,900.

Fort Sheridan, Ill.: Beach-erosion protection; $150,000.

Sierra Ordnance Depot, Calif.: Family quarters and utilities; $165,000.

Fort Sill, Okla.: Family quarters and utilities, control tower; $660,000.

Sioux Ordnance Depot, Nebr.: Family quarters and utilities; $99,000.

Tooele Ordnance Depot, Utah: Family quarters and utilities; $132,000.

Two Rock Ranch, California: Family quarters and utilities; $231,000.

Valley Forge General Hospital, Pa.: Family quarters and utilities, enlarge sewage collection and pumping facilities, acquisition of land (30 acres); $435,000.

Vint Hill Farms, Virginia: Family quarters and utilities; $759,000.

White Sands Proving Ground, New Mexico: Family quarters and utilities; barracks, extension of field instrumentation, automotive-maintenance shops, fuel stations, improvements to airfield facilities, meteorological station, refrigeration and ice plant, utilities shops, storage facilities, extension of water-supply system, and electric-power system, and bachelor officers quarters; $4,321,400.

Yuma Test Branch, Ariz.: Family quarters and utilities, barracks, cold-storage ice plant, and commissary; $215,400.

SPECIAL WEAPONS PROJECT

Construction at classified installations; $14,529,000.

OUTSIDE CONTINENTAL UNITED STATES

Alaska: Survey Valdez pipe line; $315,000.

Elelson Air Force Base, Alaska: Petroleum terminal storage; $6,800,000.

Fort Richardson, Alaska: Ordnance shops, water intake, petroleum terminal storage and dock, design of 400-bed station hospital, water supply, warehouses, heat and power plant, water treatment, enlisted men's service club, outside utilities, bachelor officers quarters, barracks, family housing and utilities; $46,720,000.

Whittier, Alaska: Outside utilities, central heat and power plant, composite bachelor housing, service and recreation building; $12,645,700.

Okinawa: General depot facilities, road net, water-supply system; $1,439,000.

Naha, Okinawa: Sewers including sewers at Machinato, ship basin; $1,139,000.

Sukiran, Okinawa: Signal and telephone system, utilities, roads, site preparation, family quarters and utilities; $11,305,000.

Helemano, Oahu, T. H.: Land acquisition, $6,000.

St. Thomas, V. I.: San Jose project, $808,000.

TITLE II

The Secretary of the Navy, under the direction of the Secretary of Defense, is hereby authorized to establish or develop naval installations and facilities by the construction, installation, or equipment of temporary or permanent public works, including buildings, facilities, appurtenances, and utilities, as follows:

CONTINENTAL UNITED STATES

Naval Air Station, Alameda, Calif.: Jet overhaul building and accessories; $950,000.

Naval Research Laboratory, Anacostia, D. C.: Research laboratory building and accessories, correction of deficiencies to existing facilities; $1,570,000.

Naval Engineering Experiment Station, Annapolis, Md.: Submarine propulsion test facility; $2,000,000.

Naval Ammunition Depot, Bangor, Wash.: Mine assembly facilities, including buildings and accessory construction; $1,000,000.

Naval Training School, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge, Mass.: Combustion test and development facility; $682,000.

David Taylor Model Basin, Carderock, Md.: Alter 24 inch variable pressure water tunnel, wind tunnel and associated facilities, completion of 3 meter wind tunnel, free surface test facility; $2,344,000.

Marine Corps Air Station, Cherry Point, N. C.: Family quarters and utilities; $1,765,500.

Naval Aviation Ordnance Test Station, Chincoteague, Va.: Family quarters and utilities, guided missile range and facilities; $1,165,000.

Naval Auxiliary Air Station, Chincoteague, Va.: Family quarters and utilities; $346,500.

Naval Proving Ground, Dahlgren, Va.: Interior ballistics measurements building; $410,000.

Naval Ordnance Aerophysics Laboratory, Daingerfield, Tex.: Addition to test chamber to increase capacity of wind tunnel and additional laboratory facilities; $864,500.

Naval Ammunition Depot, Earle, N. J.: Mine assembly facilities, including buildings and accessory construction; $1,100,000.

Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill.: Addition to main power plant, including boilers and accessory construction, conversion of barracks to family quarters and utilities; $1,575,000.

Naval Ammunition Depot, Hawthorne, Nev.: Additional water storage facilities; $320,000.

Naval Ordnance Test Station, Inyokern, Calif.: Morris Dam under water test facilities, static firing facilities for liquid fuels, aerodynamics ballistic track range, ballistic ground ranges and additional instrumentation for and modification of guided missile range, ballistics range facilities, family quarters and utilities; $10,992,000.

Naval Air Station, Jacksonville, Fla.: Aircraft berthing, turning basin and approach channel, Mayport, Fla.; $4,920,000.

Naval Fuel Storage Facility, Jacksonville, Fla.: Acquisition and expansion of residual terminal facility, including tankage, pipe lines and accessory construction; $3,175,000.

Naval Air Development Station, Johnsville, Pa.: Extension of runways for jet operations, acquisition of aviation easements in runway approach zone, development and test facilities; $5,253,500.

Naval Station, Key West, Fla.: Dredging at submarine basin; $739,000.

Naval Aeronautical Rocket Laboratory, Lake Denmark, N. J.: Rocket test and development facilities; $7,500,000.

Marine Barracks, Camp Lejeune, N. C.: Family quarters and utilities; $5,808,000.

Naval Hospital, Camp LeJeune, N. C.: Family quarters and utilities (conversion); $128,000.

Naval Auxiliary Air Station, Miramar, Calif.: Aircraft maintenance hangar, parking utilities, services and gasoline storage; $2,230,000.

Submarine Base, New London, Conn.: Additional torpedo storage, $135,000.

Naval Base, Newport, R. I.: Acquisition of land on Conanicut Island for small-boat landings; $9,000.

Naval Air Station, Norfolk, Va.: Test cells for turbine engines; $485,000.

Headquarters, Commander in Chief, Atlantic Fleet, Norfolk, Va.: Combined antisubmarine warfare plot and administration building; $650,000.

Naval Communication Station, Norfolk, Va.: Communication facilities for Headquarters, Commander in Chief, Atlantic Fleet; $11,650,000.

Naval Air Test Center, Patuxent River, Md.: Family quarters and utilities; $775,500.

Naval Electronics Laboratory, Point Loma, Calif.: Laboratory supply and utility buildings, including services and accessories; $3,450,000.

Naval Air Station, Quonset Point, R. I.: Completion of two engine test cells; $300,000.

Naval Air Station, San Diego, Calif.: Turbo prop engine test cells; $530,000.

Special Devices Center, Sands Point, Long Island, N. Y.: Acquisition of land and buildings; $350,000.

Naval Shipyard, San Francisco, Calif.: Conversion of building No. 301 for radiological laboratory; $1,000,000.

Naval Communications Station, Skaggs, Island, Calif.: Family quarters and utilities; $495,000.

Naval Civil Engineering Laboratory, Solomons, Md.: Laboratory building and associated facilities; $2,000,000.

Thirteenth Naval District: Radio direction-finder facilities for supplementary communication requirements; $211,000.

Twelfth Naval District: Vacuum-system housing at Naval Ordnance Activity; $85,000.

Naval Air Station, Whidbey, Island, Wash.: Acquisition of rocket target range (314.62 acres); $35,600.

Naval Ordnance Laboratory, White Oak, Md.: Model test tank, ballistics laboratory; $1,540,000.

Navy Communication Station, Winter Harbor, Maine: Addition to radio operating building, permanent remote control high-frequency direction finder facilities, family quarters and utilities; $509,000.

Location to be determined: Advanced undersea warfare school, $275,000. Naval experimental range (vertical firing range for VT fuses and range for aircraft damage trials); $850,000.

Various locations: Additional aviation fuel storage to support jet operations, $5,000,000. Extension of runways for jet operations at Naval Air Station, Alameda, Calif.; Naval Auxiliary Air Station, Charleston, R. I.; Marine Corps Air Station, Cherry Point, N. C.; Marine Corps Air Station, El Toro, Calif.; Naval Air Station, Norfolk, Va.; Naval Auxiliary Air Station, Oceana, Va.; and/or at such stations as changes in strategic dispositions indicate; $11,320,000.

OUTSIDE CONTINENTAL UNITED STATES

Adak, Alaska: Permanent communication facilities, including buildings, collateral equipment, and accessory construction, magazine buildings and accessory construction, permanent facilities including buildings, collateral equipment, and accessory construction of communication supplemental activity, family quarters and utilities; $22,616,000.

Naval Operating Base, Kodiak, Alaska: Extension of runway, family quarters, and utilities; $2,548,000.

Submarine Base, Balboa, C. Z.: Family quarters; $1,498,000.

Fourteenth Naval District: Communication control links, including equipment and land; $527,000.

Naval Operating Base, Grondal, Greenland: Marine railway, machine shop and accessories; $90,000.

Navy communication supplementary activity, Guam: Permanent facilities for communication supplementary activities, interim operating building and accessory construction; $8,870,000.

Naval Supply Center, Guam: Additional petroleum storage facilities; $14,200,000.

Agana Naval Air Station, Guam: Water, electric and sanitary systems; $1,850,000.

Naval Operating Base, Guam: Extension of power generation, transmission and distribution system, water supply and distribution system, family housing, and completion of civil-service bachelor quarters; $21,936,000.

Oahu, Hawaii: Acquisition of part of Oahu railroad; $1.

Naval Operating Base, Kwajalein: Water supply and distribution, power plant, and water distillation, refrigerated storage, sewage disposal system, barracks, mess and gallery; $5,958,000.

Argentia, Newfoundland: Permanent communication facility, family quarters and utilities (conversion); $3,193,000.

Pacific: Naval government facilities in Trust Territories; $1,000,000.

Roosevelt Roads, P. R.: acquisition of land (4,170 acres); $330,000.

Naval station, Tutuila Island, Samoa: Acquisition of land (11 acres); $3,500.

Various: Additional communications facilities, $1,000,000. Aviation gas storage (200,000 bbls.); $3,600,000.

TITLE III

The Secretary of the Air Force, under the direction of the Secretary of Defense, is hereby authorized to establish or develop installations and facilities by the construction, installation, or equipment of temporary or permanent public works, including buildings, facilities, appurtenances, and utilities, as follows:

CONTINENTAL UNITED STATES

Bakersfield, Calif.: Purchase and rehabilitation of Mohawk Oil Co. plant, including land; $141,000.

Bergstrom Air Force Base, Austin, Tex.: Family quarters and utilities; $1,551,000.

Biggs Air Force Base, El Paso, Tex.: Additional aviation fuel storage and airfield pavements, family quarters and utilities; $4,717,000.

Campbell Air Force Base, Hopkinsville, Ky.: Control tower and security fence, family quarters and utilities; $496,000.

Castle Air Force Base, Merced, Calif.: Airfield pavements, land for runway extension, and aviation fuel storage facilities, family quarters and utilities; $6,171,000.

Chatham Air Force Base, Savannah, Ga.: Aviation fuel storage facilities, airfield pavements; $1,275,000.

Davis-Monthan Air Force Base, Ariz.: Family quarters and utilities; $2,244,000.

Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.: Family quarters and utilities; $1,584,000.

Ellington Air Force Base, Houston, Tex.: Celestial navigation training buildings; $57,000.

Fairfield-Suisun Air Force Base, Calif.: Family quarters and utilities; $1,584,000.

Great Falls Air Force Base, Great Falls, Mont.: Aviation fuel storage facility and airfield pavements, family quarters and utilities; $7,051,000.

Griffiss Air Force Base, Rome, N. Y.: Shelter and laboratories for automatic radio grid direction finder, alterations of buildings for Watson laboratories, development of instrument landing system, NAVA globe system building, $3,114,500.

Hamilton Air Force Base, San Rafael, Calif.: Airfield pavements, aviation fuel storage facilities, family quarters and utilities; $2,192,000.

Holloman Air Force Base, Alamogordo, N. Mex.: Instrumentation building, telephone circuits to instrumentation sites, utilities, conversion of electrical distribution system, water supply and storage facilities, missile assembly buildings, photo laboratory, commissary, sales store and warehouse, tracking device, telemetering and radar, access trails in range area, technical building, family quarters and utilities, upper atmosphere research station; $7,679,725.

Hood Air Force Base, Temple, Tex.: Family quarters and utilities, operation building, control tower and fire crash station, night lighting, transformer building, fuel storage, oil storage, electrical distribution system, gas mains, water mains, sewage-disposal facilities, grading and seeding, roads and parking areas, gatehouse, obstruction lighting, airfield pavement; $2,309,467.

Kirtland Air Force Base, Albuquerque, N. Mex.: Family quarters and utilities; $792,000.

Lawson Air Force Base, Columbus, Ga.: Airfield pavement reconstruction; $500,000.

Limestone Air Force Base, Limestone, Maine: Family quarters and utilities, barracks, aviation fuel storage facilities, heating plant and extension to existing heating facilities, warehouses, maintenance shops, fire and crash station, bomb handling and storage facilities, airfield pavements, oil storage facilities, commissary, nose hangars, training school building, utilities, roads and parking areas, administrative telephone system, communications and electronic facilities; $25,134,200.

MacDill Air Force Base, Tampa, Fla.: Aviation fuel storage facilities and airfield pavements, family quarters and utilities; $4,412,000.

McGuire Air Force Base, Trenton, N. J.: Aviation fuel storage facilities; $700,000.

March Air Force Base, Riverside, Calif.: Family quarters and utilities; $528,000.

Moses Lake Air Force Base, Moses Lake, Wash.: Barracks, family quarters and utilities; $5,230,000.

Mount Washington Weather Station, N. H.: Climatic projects laboratory, $363,600.

Muroc Air Force Base, Calif.: Quartermaster warehouse, experimental parachute facilities, electrical system, land for base expansion, unconventional fuel storage, water system, armament engineering test facilities, radar and telemetering station, hangars, pavements, runway and taxiway, warehouse and railroad spur, hangar shop and warehouse, rocket static test facilities, barracks, family quarters and utilities; $30,832,580.

Norwalk, Calif.: Rehabilitation and provision of additional operating facilities, purchase of Wilshire and Sunset Oil Co. plants; $767,000.

Offutt Air Force Base, Omaha, Nebr.: Reconstruction of barracks for troop housing; $300,000.

Otis Air Force Base, Falmouth, Mass.: Aviation fuel storage facilities and hangar; $1,150,000.

Panama City, Fla.: Purchase and rehabilitation of Panama City Oil Co. plant; $537,339.

Rapid City Air Force Base, Rapid City, S. Dak.: Family quarters and utilities; $2,376,000.

Scott Air Force Base, Belleville, Ill.: Land acquisition, family quarters and utilities; $1,167,000.

Selfridge Air Force Base, Mount Clemens, Mich.: Aviation fuel storage facilities and airfield pavements; $600,000.

Smoky Hill Air Force Base, Salina, Kans.: Family quarters and utilities; $2,244,000.

Spokane Air Force Base, Spokane, Wash.: Purchase of land, airfield pavements, aviation fuel storage facilities, barracks; $6,645,000.

Tacoma, Wash.: Purchase and rehabilitation of General Petroleum Terminal No. 2 facilities; $200,000.

Topeka Air Force Base, Topeka, Kans.: Family quarters and utilities; $1,452,000.

Torrence, Calif.: Ram jet test facilities; $250,000.

Walker Air Force Base, Roswell, N. Mex.: Aviation fuel storage facilities, airfield pavements, family quarters and utilities; $6,672,000.

Westover Air Force Base, Chicopee Falls, Mass.: Family quarters and utilities; $1,584,000.

Williams Air Force Base, Chandler, Ariz.: Family quarters and utilities; $1,584,000.

Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Dayton, Ohio: Structure branch storage, addition to electrical distribution system for engineering laboratory building, modification to shop and office (Wind Tunnel Building 24C), addition to film storage building, compass test building, modification of wind tunnel (Building 24B), addition to radar test building, high-powered electric whirlrig, extension to electric system, coal handling facilities (Area C), extension to engineer shops, vibration test building; $3,340,010.

Location to be determined: Additional strategic bulk petroleum storage facilities; $14,200,000.

Various locations:
Conversion of engine overhaul and test facilities	$ 7,990,000
Airways navigtional aids and communication facilities	10,823,080
Repair and replacement of airfield lighting	1,000,000

OUTSIDE CONTINENTAL UNITED STATES

Alaska: Warmup shelters for aircraft, $1,000,000.

Eielson Air Force Base, Alaska: Theater, maintenance docks, utilities, utilidor and tie-in to new power plant, refrigeration building, power and steam plant, telephone exchange, truck fill stands, barracks, bachelor officers quarters, family quarters and utilities; $28,156,200.

Elmendorf Air Force Base, Fort Richardson, Alaska: Telephone system, outside utilities, warm storage for vehicles; $3,664,600.

Ladd Air Force Base, Fairbanks, Alaska: Family quarters and utilities; $5,610,000.

Kindley Air Force Base, Bermuda: Completion of bridge; $600,000.

Johnston Island Air Force Base: Petroleum storage facilities, salt water flushing system, fresh water supply system, airfield lighting, dock repair and replacement, electrical distribution system, electric power plant, communications facilities; $2,031,000.

Naha Air Force Base, Okinawa: Sewage facilities; $1,361,250.

Kadena Air Force Base, Kadena, Okinawa: Sewage system; $2,825,000.

Dhahran Air Transport Station, Saudi Arabia: Additional facilities; $4,500,000.

Various locations:
Weather broadcast and point to point communications facilities	$1,181,661
Northeast Loran Chain	2,850,000
Ground control approach facilities	722,934
Air-ground radio stations	2,595,737
Three multichannel single side band stations	3,741,183
Radar set facilities	436,415
Demountable or low-cost family housing	8,000,000

TITLE IV

GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 401. To accomplish the above-authorized construction, the Secretary of the Army, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of the Air Force, under the direction of the Secretary of Defense, are authorized to acquire lands and rights pertaining thereto, or other interests therein, including the temporary use thereof, by donation, purchase, exchange of Government-owned lands, or otherwise, without regard to section 3648, Revised Statutes, as amended. When necessary, the Secretary of the Army, under the direction of the Secretary of Defense, is authorized to commence construction authorized in title I hereof for the special weapons project prior to approval of title to such lands by the Attorney General as required by section 355, Revised Statutes, as amended.

SEC. 402. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, such sums of money as may be necessary for the purposes of this act, but not to exceed:

(1)	For public works authorized by title I:
	Inside continental United States	$69,889,700
	Outside continental United States	81,177,700
	Special weapons project	14,529,000
(2)	For public works authorized by title II:
	Inside continental United States	$98,493,300
	Outside continental United States	89,219,501
(3)	For public works authorized by title III:
	Inside continental United States	$175,540,501
	Outside continental United States	69,275,980

(4) For such emergency construction projects within and without the continental United States as may be authorized, under the direction of the Secretary of Defense, by the Secretary of the Army, $9,000,000; by the Secretary of the Navy, $6,000,000; and by the Secretary of the Air Force, $10,000,000.

SEC. 403. The approximate cost of each project enumerated and authorized by titles I, II, and III of this act may, in the discretion of the Secretary concerned, be varied upward 10 percent, but the total cost of work for each title as authorized in section 402 shall not be exceeded.

SEC. 404. No family quarters shall be constructed under the authority of this act which are in excess of a net floor area of 1,080 square feet per unit.

SEC. 405. No family quarters shall be constructed under the authority of this act at (1) a cost per family unit in excess of $14,000 for construction, including kitchen range, refrigerator, telephone, architectural and engineering services, and all contingencies; nor at (2) a cost per family unit in excess of $2,500 for site development and outside utilities, including architectural and engineering services therefor and all contingencies: Provided, That when such units are constructed outside the continental United States, or in Alaska, the limitations on unit costs as specified in this section shall be applicable to the average costs of all units so constructed, and said average unit costs may each be increased by not more than 100 percent.

SEC. 406. Appropriations made to carry out the purposes of this act shall be available for expenses incident to construction, including administration, overhead planning and surveys, and shall be available until expended when specifically provided in the appropriation act.

SEC. 407. Any projects authorized herein may be prosecuted under direct appropriations, or authority to enter into contracts in lieu of such appropriations.

UNIFORMED SERVICES PAY BILL

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, at the request of the National Military Establishment, I introduce for appropriate reference a bill covering various aspects of military pay and retirement. For some months exhaustive studies have been made on this subject by various groups and the bill as introduced represents the results of those studies. For some 40 years there has been no careful or systematic study made of our military-pay structure and it appears that there is a vital need for consideration of this problem at this time.

I do not propose to discuss the matter in detail at this time because the Armed Services Committee plans to study the matter carefully before making recommendations to the Senate. I would like to state, however, that in the opinion of responsible people in the Military Establishment, the President and myself, this problem of pay and personnel is one of the most pressing matters facing us today. Our military machine can be no better than the personnel who man it. The record shows clearly that we have been losing large numbers of competent personnel whom we may vitally need in the event of war. Such legislation will aid us in attracting and retaining the high-caliber personnel which we need in these days of highly technical military science and activities.

The bill (S. 1876) to provide pay, allowances, retirement, and survivor benefits for members of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, Public Health Service, the reserve components thereof, the National Guard, and the Air National Guard, and for other purposes, introduced by Mr. TYDINGS, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Armed Services.

AID TO PERSONS MIGRATING TO REPUBLIC OF LIBERIA

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I introduce for appropriate reference a bill to provide aid to persons in the United States desirous of migrating to the Republic of Liberia, and for other purposes, and I ask unanimous consent that the bill together with a letter addressed to me from the Universal African Nationalist Movement, New York City, N. Y., dated May 17, 1949, signed by Benjamin Gibbons, president, be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the bill will be received and appropriately referred, and, without objection, the bill and letter will be printed in the RECORD.

The bill (S. 1830) to provide aid to persons in the United States desirous of migrating to the Republic of Liberia, and for other purposes, introduced by Mr. LANGER, was read twice by its title, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That it is hereby declared to be the policy of Congress to cooperate with the Republic of Liberia in furthering the interests and welfare of large numbers of persons who are residing in the United States and who desire to emigrate to and settle permanently in the Republic of Liberia. It is the intent of Congress that the benefits and provisions of this act shall apply to citizens of the United States, and aliens who are lawful residents in the United States, who may qualify as eligible for citizenship in the Republic of Liberia, and who by character, physical fitness, and climatic adaptability may qualify as migrants to be permanently settled in the Republic of Liberia, and who shall have voluntarily expressed a desire to become migrants under the provisions of this act.

SEC. 2. The President is hereby authorized and directed to enter into negotiations with the Government of the Republic of Liberia for the purpose of obtaining the consent of that country to the migration and permanent settlement of individuals assisted in accordance with the provisions of this act. The President shall further negotiate with the Government of the Republic of Liberia to secure reasonable guaranties that safety of life and limb and freedom of action for the migrants while under Liberian rule will be assured; that the Government of the Republic of Liberia will earnestly prohibit and punish any act or acts of intolerance or persecution, either political, social, or economic, of the migrants because of their condition as migrants; and that the migrants while aliens in the Republic of Liberia shall enjoy all the privileges and immunities of any other aliens resident in the Republic of Liberia, and that, after naturalization, they shall enjoy all the privileges and immunities of other citizens of the Republic of Liberia. The provisions of this section shall be a condition precedent to other provisions of this act.

SEC. 3. There is hereby created a Commission to be known as the Liberian Migration Commission, consisting of three members to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice of the Senate, for a term ending June 30, 1954, and one member of the Commission shall be designated by him as chairman. Each member of the Commission shall receive a salary at the rate of $10,000 per annum. The Commission may employ necessary personnel, including technicians, without regard to the civil-service laws or the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, and make provision for necessary supplies, facilities, and services to carry out the provisions and accomplish the purposes of this act. It shall be the duty of the Commission to formulate and issue regulations, necessary under the provisions of this act, and in compliance therewith, for the migration of eligible persons to the Republic of Liberia. It shall also be the duty of the Commission to report on February 1, 1950, and semiannually thereafter to the President and to the Congress on the situation regarding the migration of eligible persons to Liberia. At the end of its term the Commission shall make a final report to the President and to the Congress.

SEC. 4. (a) Under such regulations as the Commission may prescribe, any citizen of the United States, and any alien who is a lawful resident of the United States, who is in good physical condition and is capable by reason of his training, adaptability, intelligence, and ambition of becoming a self-sustaining settler in the Republic of Liberia, and who desires to become a migrant and settler in such country, may file an application on blanks prepared and supplied by the Commission requesting assistance in migrating to and permanently settling in the Republic of Liberia. Such application shall furnish such information as will enable the Commission to properly assess and evaluate the qualifications of the applicant. If the applicant is a householder, he may make application for all the members of his household as a unit. The application of a person responsible for the support and maintenance of children under the age of 16 years shall not be favorably acted upon unless such children are to accompany such applicant on his migration, or unless he has made adequate provision for their support and maintenance pending their transfer to join the applicant in the Republic of Liberia.

(b) The following persons shall not be eligible for migration under this act: Escaped convicts or fugitives from justice, persons under indictment and awaiting trial, persons who by reason of past criminal offenses are poor risks of becoming law-abiding and self-sustaining settlers in the Republic of Liberia, persons applying for migration for the purpose of defrauding creditors, and such other persons as the Commission may reasonably believe are likely to become public charges or social liabilities in the Republic of Liberia or who are otherwise unacceptable to the Government of the Republic of Liberia. The findings of the Commission with respect to the eligibility of any person for migration under this act shall be final.

SEC. 5. (a) The Commission is authorized to lease, furnish, and equip such office space in the District of Columbia and elsewhere as it may deem necessary; order goods and services from private individuals or concerns in the ordinary course of trade; requisition any department, board or agency of the United States for any available goods, services, or facilities which may be necessary in carrying out the provisions of this act, without affecting the proper operation of such department, board, or agency; provide transportation by land and by sea to qualified applicants migrating under the provisions of this act, and to their households, from the initial point of departure in the United States to the point of settlement in the Republic of Liberia, and to contract with land and maritime transportation companies for such purposes to the extent necessary by reason of the fact that such transportation facilities are not available from the Government of the United States; and provide adequate subsistence, medical care, and other necessities of life for the migrants during transit and until finally settled at the point of settlement.

(b) With the consent of the Government of the Republic of Liberia, the Commission is authorized to select or approve suitable sites for settlement of migrants in the Republic of Liberia; to establish and operate reception and disembarkation centers, supply depots, commissaries, temporary housing at points of settlement, dispensaries, pharmacies, and first-aid stations, and such other buildings and facilities as are necessary and proper to safeguard the health of the migrants and to carry out the purposes of this act, together with all necessary equipment and personnel.

(c) The Commission is further authorized, within the limits of such funds as may be appropriated to it to supply tools, equipment, materials, and technical assistance and advice, to the migrants when necessary to assist them in becoming self-sustaining members of their communities; to make loans to individuals, partnerships, or corporations composed of migrants, in meritorious cases, not to exceed $1,000 in any case, on reasonably liberal terms and conditions, as initial capital for business and industrial enterprises in Liberia; and to cooperate with and render technical and other assistance to the Government of the Republic of Liberia, or its responsible agencies, in the establishment of towns and rural districts, improvement of conditions of public sanitation, construction of public works and facilities, reclamation of land, development and improvement of utilities, schools, hospitals, and transportation facilities, encouragement of business enterprise and capital investments in the Republic of Liberia, and the construction, development, or encouragement of such other public works or projects as will tend to raise the standard of living and increase the productivity of the Republic of Liberia.

SEC. 6. Such sums as are necessary to carry out the provisions of this act are hereby authorized to be appropriated.

SEC. 7. The authority conferred by this act shall expire on June 30, 1954. This act shall become effective upon the date of its enactment.

The letter presented by Mr. LANGER is as follows:

UNIVERSAL AFRICAN NATIONALIST MOVEMENT, INC.,
New York, N. Y., May 17, 1949.

Hon. WILLIAM LANGER,
United States Senator,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.

HONORABLE SIR: Receipt of your letter of May 12, 1949, with enclosure of proposed bill is hereby acknowledged with much thanks and appreciation.

We have gone over the contents thereof and have given it much consideration, and wish to state that it meets our hearty approval.

If there is anything within our power that will help to further its passage, we would be only too glad to contribute thereto, and we do sincerely hope that you will be able to obtain the necessary support to enable its successful enactment.

May we express to Mr. Reynolds and all those who helped to frame this bill our greatest appreciation, for through your kind direction, it is all that one can expect it to be; may God ever bless you with longevity of life that you may continue to do much good for humanity.

While hoping to hear from you in the very near future, with the very best of wishes, I have the honor to be,

Most respectfully yours,

BENJAMIN GIBBONS,
President.

CONSERVATION OF ORES, METALS, AND MINERALS—AMENDMENT

Mr. MURRAY (for himself, Mr. HAYDEN, and Mr. MCFARLAND) submitted an amendment in the nature of a substitute, intended to be proposed by them, jointly, to the bill (S. 240) to stimulate the exploration, production, and conservation of strategic and critical ores, metals, and minerals and for the establishment within the Department of the Interior of a Mine Incentive Payments Division, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

CLASS IV AND LARGER AIRPORT PROJECTS (S. DOC. NO. 77)

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President, on May 2 there was laid before the Senate a letter from the Acting Secretary of Commerce transmitting a request of the Administrator of Civil Aeronautics for authority to undertake certain projects for the development of class IV and larger airports during the fiscal year 1950.

I ask unanimous consent that the letter from the Acting Secretary of Commerce together with the accompanying papers be printed as a Senate document.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

INVITATION TO ROOSEVELT PARK DEDICATION

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to address the Senate for 3 minutes, in order to extend an invitation to the Members of the Senate to attend the dedication of Roosevelt Park, at Medora, N. Dak., on June 4.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Senator from North Dakota may proceed.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, the Roosevelt National Memorial Park, established in honor of Teddy Roosevelt, as authorized by Public Law 38 of the Eightieth Congress, will be dedicated at Medora, N. Dak., on June 4, and, on behalf of the citizens of my State, I am extending an invitation to my colleagues to attend this auspicious occasion and to visit the park on the day of its introduction to the entire Nation.

This national park has been established in the Badlands in western North Dakota in memory of Theodore Roosevelt.

I quote from House Report No. 49 on House bill 731:

It was to this area that 25-year-old Theodore Roosevelt came in 1892 for a hunting trip, to drown his sorrow and recover his health after serving an arduous term in the New York Legislature and saddened by the loss of his mother and wife. He became so attached to this scenic area and its possibilities for stock raising that he decided to remain. He purchased the Chimney Butte, or Maltese Cross, ranch south of Medora for $45,000 and later established the Elkhorn ranch 40 miles north of the Maltese Cross ranch and north of the village.

At the latter ranch and in Medora several of his books on hunting trips were written. He was deputy sheriff of Billings County and took an active part in civic affairs in this area. He invested about $125,000 in his ranching enterprises in the vicinity. * * *

The Badlands of North Dakota have a distinct value from a recreational, scenic, and historical viewpoint. The nature of the terrain of this area is not mountainous; it is an area where the wind and water have eroded the soft earth away, causing that portion of the land and rock formations that were slightly harder to stand out, forming canyons, peaks, spires, eroded hills, and mesas.

This is truly rugged, scenic territory, where the imagination may perceive most any shape or semblance. There is a great deal of agate and petrified wood in this area. The people of North Dakota have been advocating a national park in the Badlands for many years and it is now being dedicated on June 4 to the memory of one of our most prominent citizens and former Presidents.

It is believed that this park will preserve for posterity an area of great interest and benefit to the citizens of the entire Nation. This area is about midway between the heavily populated sections in the Great Lakes region and the Yellowstone and other national parks. Its scenery is different from that of any other national park.

In my opinion it is more beautiful than the Grand Canyon.

Many tourists have pronounced it as more interesting and alluring than any other national park they have visited.

I can assure the Members of the Senate that they will experience genuine North Dakota hospitality if they can attend the ceremonies on this occasion.

THE LONGSHOREMEN'S STRIKE IN HAWAII

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the body of the RECORD a letter which I received from a distinguished citizen of Honolulu under date of May 12; that following the letter there be published in the RECORD an editorial entitled "Mr. Schmidt's Loose Tongue," published in the Honolulu Advertiser of May 11, 1949; and that following the editorial there be published in the RECORD a letter addressed to me under date of May 13, 1949, by a prominent citizen of Honolulu. The letters and editorial will give the Senate some information with reference to the situation which exists in Hawaii at this time. I have omitted the names of those who sent me the letters, but I can assure Senators that they were written by very responsible individuals.

There being no objection, the letters and the editorial were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

HONOLULU, HAWAII, May 12, 1949.

Senator HUGH BUTLER,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR BUTLER: Enclosed is an editorial clipped from yesterday morning's Advertiser.

This man Schmidt is one of the leading Communists on the coast, a right-hand man of Harry Bridges. He, in his remarks, made it clear that it is the intention of the Communists on the coast to take their spite out on the Territory.

Mr. FARRINGTON has said that there are no more Communists in proportion in Hawaii than there are on the mainland. That is not the point at all. In no State has one Communist leader the power to starve the people of that State. Harry Bridges has, and has demonstrated that power many times.

It is my sincere belief that if an election in Hawaii did not go to suit him that he would call a strike simply to punish the people here. He has called them for much less in the past.

The Honolulu Record (a Communist paper which is run by a Japanese Communist inspired through Dr. John Reinecke) is continuously trying to create race hatred and has succeeded very well in the past. They have gone back to the days of the monarchy in an attempt to prove racial discrimination.

Plainly speaking, the coast Communists have us by the throat, and the disastrous strike now in progress here is simply to prove the power that the Communist leaders have over their followers here.

So long as we are under the control of the United States Congress, there is some hope of relief for our troubles. If we were a State, there could be no interference.

Sincerely.

[From the Honolulu Advertiser of May 11, 1949]

MR. SCHMIDT'S LOOSE TONGUE

Imported strike leader Henry Schmidt talked with a loose tongue aboard the Lurline Monday. He told with brutal frankness how the longshore strike leaders are wearing down the community, expect to reduce it to submission within a few weeks, and how they are making gestures to fool the public. Here are some of the things he said:

"They (Hawaii's people) can't take it much more than a month."

"The Lurline (whose crew supposedly is not on strike) was tied up here to boost the morale of the striking longshoremen."

The longshore union's offer to help stranded passengers get hotel accommodations was "merely a gesture to the public (to) take the heat off the union and put it on Matson."

When he called some 300 Lurline employees into the ship's dining room to hear him talk, Mr. Schmidt did not recognize two reporters, one from the Advertiser and one from the Star-Bulletin, among them. When both these reporters quoted him accurately, Mr. Schmidt did not like it. He called the reporters liars, tried to crawl out of what he had said. But that was of no avail. Both are men whose credibility has long been established. Both men heard the same things, both of them printed the truth.

Now the public knows just how Mr. Schmidt and his fellow strike leaders are directing this strike straight at the people of all Hawaii. It is information that came directly from Mr. Schmidt himself.

HONOLULU, HAWAII, May 13, 1949.

Senator HUGH BUTLER,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR BUTLER: I am enclosing the front and back page of this morning's Advertiser.

You will note that our people are becoming quite disturbed by their letters to the paper. It is said there are only a few hundred Communists here. Thank God there are no more.

One Communist on the mainland, Harry Bridges, has it in for our people here and is doing us tremendous harm. There is no doubt but that his stooges here control from thirty to forty thousand votes.

The threat has already been made that at the next election we will show them something. They are already showing us what they can do. Were we a State, they would be in control.

Leading citizens here admit that this is true. Fear keeps them from talking.

Sincerely.

ISSUANCE OF VISAS TO PERSONS OF GERMAN ETHNIC ORIGIN—STATEMENT BY SENATOR WILEY

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be printed in the body of the RECORD a brief statement which I have prepared on the subject of expelled persons of German ethnic origin and their admission to our country.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COMMENTS BY SENATOR ALEXANDER WILEY ON ISSUANCE OF VISAS TO PERSONS OF GERMAN ETHNIC ORIGIN

On previous occasions I have called the attention of the Senate to the critical situation involving the lagging in the issuance of visas to persons of German ethnic origin, that is, to the so-called expellees under the displaced-persons law. Although the DP law is almost a full year old right now, only a tiny trickle of expellees have come in thus far. Some 400 quota numbers were allocated for issuance to persons of German ethnic origin in April. Consular offices have thus far reported issuance of 104 of these numbers.

Five hundred quota numbers have been allocated for May issuance and 400 allocated for June issuance. Consulates have been informed that additional numbers are immediately available upon request. If 500 represents a peak achievement almost a full year after the passage of the law, it can easily be seen that the progress under the expellee portion of this law is hopelessly slow, even in relation to the tardiness in handling the over-all DP law.

Under the DP law, half of the regular Austrian and German quotas are made available to expellees, amounting in summary to around 13,000 annually in the case of the German quota and a little over 700 in the case of the Austrian quota. Obviously, these numbers will hardly be filled by expellees on the basis of the present lagging condition.

I can well understand some of the administrative complications involved in trying to set up machinery for admission of the expellees. The very problem of the definition of persons of German ethnic origin, the time necessary for screening, the problem of adequate personnel—these and other questions I do not for one moment underestimate. At the same time, it is obvious that this is a tremendous matter of heartache and heartbreak to the families involved, and every passing day causes that much more woe and, yes, financial and personal anxiety.

In making these comments I do not for one moment underestimate the importance of speed in connection with the regular categories of displaced persons. Throughout the discussion on this subject I have pointed out that the problem is not a matter of securing justice for displaced persons or expelled persons, but rather securing justice for both of these groups to the greatest extent possible in accordance with our humanitarian obligations to all suffering people regardless of the cause of their suffering.

Along a somewhat related line, I have contacted the Post Office Department and urged that immediate action be taken for resumption of the private gift-package service to the Soviet zone in Berlin and the Soviet zone in Germany, now that the Berlin blockade has been ended. During the blockade, of course, normal shipment of these private gift packages ceased both to our zones in Germany and Berlin as well as to the Soviet areas. Now, however, I am hoping that the Post Office Department will take immediate steps to contact the Soviet officials in order to have this humanitarian service resumed. Not only is it a matter of essential food supplies being sent in, but also vital medical equipment and other items which are essential for the sustaining of life and health.

AMENDMENT OF WAR CLAIMS ACT OF 1948

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 326) to amend the War Claims Act of 1948, which was, in lines 10 and 11, to strike out "January 15" and insert "March 31."

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nevada explain the purport of the amendment?

Mr. McCARRAN. It is merely a minor amendment which changes the date of the effectiveness of the bill, and does not change the jurisdiction or the subject matter.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Nevada.

The motion was agreed to.

RELIEF OF CERTAIN OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES OF OFFICE OF UNITED STATES HIGH COMMISSIONER TO THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1152) for the relief of certain officers and employees of the Office of United States High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands who suffered losses of personal property by reason of war conditions, which was, on page 2, line 12, to strike out "James" and insert "Janet."

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, let me say by way of explanation that the amendment merely corrects what may have been a clerical error by changing the name from "James" to "Janet." I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

THE SPREADING THREAT OF COMMUNISM IN THE FAR EAST

Mr. JENNER. Mr. President, no one can possibly watch the spreading threat of communism in the Far East gather momentum without a feeling of disgust and alarm.

No real American can anticipate a Communist conquest of China without terrible misgiving. There are some in our midst who are overjoyed at the prospect of a Communist victory in China. This is what they have been working for for years, right in our own midst.

There is another group that is preparing the American people to accept a wholly new propaganda line concerning the issues that are at stake in the Far East.

This new line first broke into print in respectable circles in a New York Times article of January 28, 1949, carrying the sentiments expressed by Prof. Edward C. Acheson, the brother of our Secretary of State, who is quoted as saying:

> In a few weeks we will have to write off China as a 100-percent loss. * * *
> If the Russians get into China they will have the same miserable experience they had when they sent Michael Borodin there in the 1920's.
>
> Borodin got nowhere then, and I see little prospect of the Russians getting anywhere now. * * *
>
> I do not think that the Chinese Communists are Moscow Communists.
> Even if they were, they will still have their hands full administering the vast territories they have overrun.

A few weeks later, Mr. President, echoing these administration thoughts, Mr. C. L. Sulzberger, writing in the New York Times, said:

> Quite plainly, the policy makers of the United States are counting upon the historic forces of Chinese nationalism to assert themselves strongly under a Mao Tze-tung government vis-à-vis the U. S. S. R. as they did under a Chiang Kai-shek government vis-a-vis the United States.

In a recent letter to my distinguished colleague the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN], no less a person than our own Secretary of State attempted to quiet the rising fears of the American people by echoing this same propaganda line, and at the same time insisted that there was nothing more the United States could do to save the situation.

How closely all of this follows the pro-Communist line is reflected in a recent book, now documented, titled "The Situation in Asia," by Owen Lattimore, in which he insists that although China is certain to go Communist, it will continue to function as an independent state, because it will be impossible for Russia to step in and control the Chinese Communist leaders.

Yet, Mr. President, the ink was not dry on the proof copy of this manuscript when, on April 3, a United Press dispatch from Nanking quoted a Communist broadcast of a statement signed by No. 1 Communist Mao Tze-tung and other Chinese Communist leaders denouncing the North Atlantic Pact and pledging to fight on the side of Russia in the event of any war between the Soviet Union and the North Atlantic Treaty nations.

However, Mr. President, a great number of Americans are becoming increasingly alarmed over the real implications of these ominous developments in China.

On May 4, 1949, William Henry Chamberlin recognized the seriousness of this situation when he wrote:

> The news from China represents one of the greatest diplomatic fiascos in American history.
>
> The open door to that vast country, one of the pillars of traditional American foreign policy, is slamming shut very hard.
> The most numerous people in the world are rapidly passing under the sway of a regime that is linked up by very close ties with Moscow, that makes no secret of its violent hostility to this country. * * *
> What has happened in China is tragic, from the standpoint both of the Chinese people and of United States foreign policy.

Even Walter Lippmann himself admits that matters have so deteriorated that—

> There can be no such thing as an American policy which "unsolves" the Chinese problem.
>
> Our policy, when we are again in a position to have one, will necessarily be limited to making such contacts as we can on the best terms that can be arranged with the Chinese authorities on or near the coast of China.
>
> Whether they will also have authority in the deep interior, no man can say.
>
> It is quite conceivable that there will not be for decades, perhaps for generations, any Chinese government which, except in name, is obeyed by all the Chinese.

And Mr. Chamberlin and Mr. Lippmann are in essential agreement when we find Mr. Chamberlin also saying:

> For the immediate future, we have little choice except to go isolationist as regards China.
> We might have been in a better position today if we had set our course in that direction 10 or 15 years ago.

The sorry truth is, however, Mr. President, that we now confront this tragic Communist conquest in China in face of the fact that we did not remain isolationist, that we did enter the most tragic war in history, throwing the tremendous resources of the American people into a struggle to preserve the independence and integrity of China.

This is why the economic, the political, and the military defeat that is now being inflicted upon the American people, after we won the war in the Pacific, carries such staggering implications.

The full measure of our defeat in China can be measured by the fact that there would have been no Pearl Harbor, no savage Bataans, no tragic and terrible victories on Okinawa, Iwo Jima, and no sweating, suffering, and dying by the American GI's in the plague-ridden jungles of the Orient, if it had not been for the determination of an American President to support the independence and the integrity of China against the savage aggression of Japan.

In his autobiography, On Active Service, Mr. Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War in the Roosevelt Cabinet, admits:

> A careful reading of the diplomatic negotiations that preceded Pearl Harbor can lead to no conclusion but that it was American support of China—American refusal to repudiate the principles of Hay, Hughes, Stimson and Hull—which proved the final cause of the break-down of negotiations and the beginning of war.
> If at any time the United States had been willing to concede to Japan a free hand in China, there would have been no war in the Pacific.

The reason, Mr. President, why such an increasing number of Americans are becoming so alarmed is that such a staggering defeat is being inflicted on the United States while the United States Government stands idly by, refusing further aid to our traditional friends and refusing to account for the disaster.

The surest way in the world to add chaos to tragedy is to fail to profit by the errors and the bloodiness and betrayals that produce the tragedy.

The leading editorial of the Wall Street Journal of May 4, 1949, points up the tragic dilemma in which we now find ourselves:

In 1940 this country was given the story that Chiang Kai-shek was a great military strategist, a great patriot, and a great idealist.

Today the version is that Chiang is a military moron, and is under the suspicion of being an absconder, or at least a man of wholly selfish motives.

And it is sad to say that our foreign policy is still supported by efforts to keep the American people from considering more than one view.

It is still being framed in an atmosphere of slanted information and withheld facts.

Mr. President, the American people are going to hold a day of reckoning. They expect their representatives in the United States Senate to do everything in their power to drag out into the open for all to see the facts that lie behind the collapse of China, together with all the implications, and to demand that America's interests, based on a restoration of basic American principles, be safeguarded within the framework of a genuine over-all foreign policy, the heart of which gives the American people control once more over their own destiny.

What lies behind the collapse of our policies in China? First, we now know that, in spite of all the terrible sacrifice and suffering, borne largely by American GI's, the conduct of the war and of American diplomacy during and since the war could not have been better designed to defeat our own vital interests and to play directly into the hands of the Communists in the Far East.

There can be no question that American policies in China have succeeded thus far only in destroying the one oriental nation that was strong enough to prevent Communist expansion in Asia, and in turning loose the Communist tyranny which the Japanese alone were able to hold in check.

Is it any wonder that the American people are now demanding an investigation of the personnel and policies of the State Department which laid the groundwork for such a tragic defeat?

In the second place the American people are just beginning to realize what a criminal betrayal of China took place at the Yalta Conference, where the following secret agreement concerning China took place without the knowledge, advice, or consent of any authorized Chinese Government representative. That part of the secret agreements made at Yalta pertaining to China and Japan is in full as follows:

1. The status quo in Outer Mongolia (the Mongolian People's Republic) shall be preserved;

2. The former rights of Russia violated by the treacherous attack of Japan in 1904 shall be restored, viz:

(A) The southern part of Sakhalin as well as all the islands adjacent to it, shall be returned to the Soviet Union.

(B) The commercial port of Dairen shall be internationalized, the preeminent interests of the Soviet Union in this port being safeguarded and the lease of Port Arthur as a naval base of the U. S. S. R. restored.

(C) The Chinese-Eastern Railroad and the South Manchurian Railroad, which provide an outlet to Dairen, shall be jointly operated by the establishment of a joint Soviet-Chinese company, it being understood that the preeminent interests of the Soviet Union shall be safeguarded, and that China shall retain full sovereignty in Manchuria.

3. The Kurile Islands shall be handed over to the Soviet Union.

It is understood that the agreement concerning Outer Mongolia and the ports and railroads referred to above will require concurrence of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Mr. President, note that Chiang Kai-shek was not there; no representative was there. But they pulled the rug out from under him and then tacked on that statement at the end.

I read further:

The President will take measures in order to obtain this concurrence on advice from Marshal Stalin.

Mr. President, to this moment the Yalta agreement, along with Tehran, Potsdam, and other secret agreements, form the basis of our international relations, although they have no standing whatever as treaties. They have never been submitted to the Senate for acceptance, amendment, or repudiation. They certainly cannot be classified as executive agreements. They are neither bird, beast, nor fish, and the American people are now demanding that their representatives in the United States Senate refuse longer to be bound by these outrageous betrayals of American principles in the future handling of our international relations.

For all we know now, until the status of these agreements has been decided with the knowledge, advice, and consent of the United States Senate, American Government representatives can continue to sell America down the river with their left hand, while they continue to wave the flag of international cooperation above our heads with their right hand.

This is just such a condition as existed during and since the war, as is described by Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, who told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on November 27, 1945—8 months after the Yalta sell-out:

The astounding feature of our foreign policy is the wide discrepancy between our announced policies and our conduct of international relations.

The professional Foreign Service men sided with the Chinese Communist armed party and the imperialist bloc of nations whose policy it was to keep China divided against herself.

I requested the relief of career men who were opposing the American policy in the Chinese theater of war.

These professional diplomats were returned to Washington and placed in the Chinese and far eastern divisions of the State Department as my supervisors.

In such positions, most of them have continued to side with the Communist armed party and, at times, with the imperialist bloc of nations.

Mr. President, until the status of these outrageous secret agreements is cleared up, and we can start anew with a clean and clear record, we cannot possibly prevent a repetition of double talking and double dealing by those representing us in international affairs, who either want to sell us down the river, or who want to continue to cover up the part they have played in the outrageous betrayal of American principles that has led to a catastrophe in China.

Of this much we can be sure, Mr. President: As matters now stand, the Chinese Communist conquest of Asia was not made possible in China. It was engineered right here in Washington, by the top policy makers of this Government, who are now sorrowfully wringing their hands behind their backs and mouthing futile formulas of nonintervention as the only course of action left to us.

The third implication, Mr. President, of the tragedy that is in the making in the Far East is that, with China's loss, we face a complete defeat in the Orient.

In the spring of 1948, Gen. George Marshall told Congress that if Manchuria were lost to the Chinese Communists, the United States position in southern Korea would be untenable.

In the fall of 1948, Gen. Douglas MacArthur warned the Joint Chiefs of Staff that if the Chinese Communists took the lower Yangtze Valley and Shanghai, the American military bastion on Okinawa would be outflanked and his position in Japan would be as exposed and untenable as it was in the Philippines during 1941.

When we realize that General Bradley just recently told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that our system of military defenses in the Pacific was based on Japan, the Philippines, and Okinawa, we get a better understanding of the threat to our own military security which the continued Communist advance in China carries.

Then, Mr. President, in his recent book, Way of a Fighter, Gen. Claire Chennault warned:

A complete Communist victory in China will channelize the undercurrents of native unrest already swirling through Burma, India, Malaya, and Indonesia into another rising tide of Communist victories.

The ring of red bases can be stretched from Siberia to Saigon.

Then the stage will be set for the unannounced explosion of world war III.

It is perfectly obvious, Mr. President, where this steady spread of Communist aggression will end.

The avowed aim of the Chinese Communists and of the Communist movements throughout the Asiatic Continent is to drive the white man and every last vestige of western imperialism out of Asia.

This means French Indochina, Indonesia, the Malayan States, and even India will be swallowed up.

The fourth implication, Mr. President, of what lies ahead is what the loss of both the raw material resources of the colonial areas will mean, both to the western imperial powers we are supplying with Marshall plan aid, as well as to ourselves.

If these raw material resources are lost to the nations embraced within the Atlantic Pact, the additional burden placed upon the United States to try to stretch its own resources to share with the western European nations that will be deprived of these materials will automatically put the American economy into the strait-jacket of a ration system that will make the OPA seem like a utopia.

In addition, the loss of these areas to Communist domination will make a mockery of the President's plan to raise the standard of living of the underdeveloped areas of the world as potential markets for the increased industrial potential which we are subsidizing under the Marshall plan in western Europe.

A fifth implication, Mr. President, of this expanding Communist threat in the Orient lies in the fact that since we have already committed ourselves under the Marshall plan to assisting in the reimposition of British, French, and Dutch colonial imperialism in Asia, continued guaranties of support of such policies will help to spread the Communist plague even further and more rapidly.

We will put ourselves in a position where we will be continually blackmailed by our own associates, who will use the threat of Communist fifth-column activity in their colonial possessions as a basis for continued demands on our resources to underwrite the perpetuation of conditions that give the Communist propaganda knife its cutting edge.

No one has more clearly seen the nature of this dilemma than has Walter Lippmann, who wrote in the Washington Post of January 12 1949:

> Our friends in western Europe should try to understand why we cannot and must not be maneuvered, why we dare not drift into general opposition to the movements for independence in Asia.
>
> They should tell their propagandists to stop smearing these movements.
> They should try to realize how disastrous it would be to them, and to the cause of western civilization, if ever it could be said that the western union for the defense of freedom in Europe was in Asia a syndicate for the preservation of decadent empires.

In the sixth place, a recent Christian Science Monitor article of April 6, 1949, reveals the additional danger to American security by the success of the Communists in China by analyzing a demand by Communist representatives for recognition by the United Nations.

Note, Mr. President—recognition by the United Nations.

This same demand was made during the San Francisco Charter Conference—a demand which was turned down by our insistence that we were backing the Nationalist regime.

But the Security Council, with the veto provisions, was set up on the basis of a continued recognition of the Nationalist regime in China.

Since we ourselves are committed to a policy of noninvolvement in the internal affairs of another nation, we have already taken the position in this international booby trap that we shall be the first ones who are obligated to recognize the Chinese Communist de facto government, which will join the select circle within the Security Council, and add its veto to that of Russia, where America's vital interests and polices are at stake.

Is not that something?

Mr. President, another implication of this China collapse lies both in the field of economic and military strategy, so far as Russia is concerned.

Russia will take over control of the raw materials and the markets of the Far East, with which she can increase her bargaining power with the western European nations to neutralize Europe at her back while she takes over Asia which lies before her.

Russia will also be able to make up for the greatest single liability she confronts in Europe, namely, her fear to permit Russian soldiers to contact the higher standards of living of western civilization.

She will be able to take ten or twenty-five or fifty million Chinese Communists, train and equip them, and ship them to the eastern frontiers of the European countries, to be turned loose without any fear of domestic upheaval when the time comes in Russian strategy once more to press her advantages in Europe.

Then, incredible as it may seem, Mr. President, we find that we are also obligated to furnish China with the majority of reparations from Japan. It will be remembered that this is the same deal which we have in Italy. We send our Marshall-plan dollars to Italy, under the treaty which we ratified with Italy. Italy, in turn, takes our products and our wealth and sends them on to Russia in reparations. We are committed to the same thing in China, which means that we are obligated to subsidize the Communist regime if and when it takes over in China.

Mr. President, while all these implications are involved in the steady expansion of the Communist threat in China, there is another implication which is far more serious and imminent than this administration dares to admit.

I am speaking of the immediate possibility of involvement in an undeclared war with the Chinese Communists on the Asiatic mainland, because of a conflict between the Chinese Communists and our so-called western allies who have already signed the Atlantic Pact, and through such involvement to be drawn into a conflict with Russia.

I have already mentioned the Communist broadcast of April 3 of a statement by Mao Tze-tung denouncing the western treaty and pledging aid to fight on the side of Russia in the event of a war.

Furthermore, Mr. President, the Christian Science Monitor of May 5, 1949, revealed that the Chinese Communists have joined in a Russian-sanctioned alliance with Korean and Burmese Communists as part of "the joint struggle against American and British imperialism."

Immediately following this announcement, a United Press dispatch of May 7 in the Washington Post revealed that President Rhee, of the Republic of South Korea, had inquired of the United States Government whether it would regard an invasion across the 38th parallel by the Soviet-dominated North Korean Republic as "tantamount to an attack on the American people." President Rhee specifically asked, "in case of an attack by an outside power, would the Republic of South Korea be able to count on all-out military aid?"

Then we learn, Mr. President, that it has become necessary for the French Government to ship additional reinforcements into Indochina in order to stop the current infiltration of Communist Chinese guerrilla forces.

On April 19, 1949, another dispatch to the Christian Science Monitor revealed that the French are shipping 15,000 additional troops, in north African and Senegalese contingents, to Indochina, bringing French military forces to 125,000—forces which are supplied with matériel acquired from United States surplus military stocks.

On May 5, a United Press dispatch from London revealed that Britain's Defense Minister, A. V. Alexander, was greeted in the House of Commons by a stormy demand for a Pacific pact similar to the Atlantic Pact, within which it would be stated that:

> Any attack against Hong Kong would be regarded as an attack of aggression as against Britain.

Do Senators realize the situation into which we are getting ourselves?

Moreover, Mr. President, we learned from this same dispatch that the British were sending additional air, sea, and land reinforcements to the defense of Hong Kong against the threatened Communist attack.

We also learn that these forces will augment existing British military forces in the Far East, which have been reorganized into an entirely new defense setup in the Far East.

Over the ticker in the Senate anteroom on May 9, 1949, in a Tokyo dispatch via Hong Kong, we were informed that:

> Some American officials in Japan are wondering if the United States would be obligated under the Atlantic Pact to help defend Hong Kong if the Chinese Communists attack it.
>
> Reliable British quarters here are sure that the Communists will attack the British crown colony.
>
> One informed British source said it is not a question of if it will be attacked, but of when.
>
> Neutral observers say the Chinese Communists appear to hold no fear of the British.
> The Communists have repeatedly demanded the elimination of all foreign influence from China.

It must be obvious to the American people by now, Mr. President, how grave these implications are, particularly when we realize that in the face of this imminent conflict between the Chinese Communists backed by Russia and the western European imperial powers who have become signatories to the Atlantic Pact, this Government is already acting as though the ratification of the pact is a fait accompli.

The uneasiness which such a situation has aroused has been given expression by one of the outstanding members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, my distinguished colleague, the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], who announced his whole-hearted support of a reservation to be attached to the Atlantic Pact in the Senate which would spell out the fact that the United States, by ratification of the pact, is not committed to give aid to pact members who are having colonial troubles.

The Senator is quoted as saying:

I don't see how we can be concerned with a revolutionary attack in the colonies of other signatories.

That point is left in some doubt, and it ought to be cleared up.

On that point, Mr. President, if we give the Dutch arms and equipment and they send them to the east, or if we give them to France and they send the arms and equipment and men to Indochina, or if we give them to Britain, for our own defense and our own security, and they ship them to Hong Kong, I ask, are we not actually involving ourselves in the far eastern struggle?

My own uneasiness and my own vigorous protest against any easy acceptance of a notion that we are committed to underwrite the colonial areas of the signatories of this pact are based on the document prepared by the Secretary of State entitled "The North Atlantic Pact," publication 3462, which reveals on page 5, the following interesting provision:

The treaty will come into force when the ratifications of the majority of the signatories, including Belgium, Canada, France, Luxemburg, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom, and the United States, have been deposited.

For the other signatory states, and for those states which become parties at a later date, the treaty will come into effect on the date of the deposit of their individual ratifications.

Mr. President, it is time the implications of this provision were clearly presented to the American people, for until this is done, we are, for all intents and purposes, actually committing ourselves to underwriting the Brussels military defense pact, which was drafted by the western imperial powers with a view not only to preserving the status quo in Europe, but the status quo in their colonial possessions around the world.

Mr. President, that is the purpose of the Brussels Pact, and as the North Atlantic Treaty now stands, even in its present status, we are becoming inescapably involved in moral commitments, at least, to defend with American resources and manpower not only these western imperial powers, but their colonial possessions, upon the maintenance of which their whole political, economic, and military security is based.

Proof of this charge lies behind an admission by our own Ambassador Jessup, who, on March 17, 1949, in speaking of the Atlantic Pact, said:

It has, as you know, a rather immediate background—

And I ask my colleages to note this—

It has, as you know, a rather immediate background in terms of the Brussels Pact, the Vandenberg resolution, and the Rio Pact.

So we recognize it, do we not?

Mr. President, in support of this charge, I want to enter into the RECORD four specific events that are memorable because of the sequence in which they have taken place within recent weeks.

The first is Mr. Churchill's speech in early April in which he said that only the deterrent of the atomic bomb in the hands of the United States holds Soviet imperialist expansion in check.

I do not know how much we have got it in our hands after reading the morning newspapers about the carryings on of Mr. Lilienthal and others. I do not know whether we still have it in our hands. Anyway Mr. Churchill in April thought we had.

Just a few days later, on April 6, President Truman, referring to his decision in July 1945 to use the atomic bomb, said:

Now, I believe we are in a position where we will never have to make that decision again, but if it has to be made * * * I wouldn't hesitate to make it again.

On the same day Secretary Royall told a Chicago mass meeting that the Atlantic Pact nations are counting on American arms for their own troops and also counting on the support of an American army overseas.

Then, on May 3, former Under Secretary of State Will Clayton, flying in the face of all the optimistic propaganda of how we were winning the cold war with Russia, testified before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that Russia is winning the cold war by frightening democratic governments into excessive expenditures for defense, waging this war on all fronts simultaneously at a relatively small cost to herself.

Then he went on to say that so far the Soviet efforts to undermine the democracies appear to be succeeding and offered as a solution the proposition—and note this, Mr. President—that this Atlantic Pact treaty be used as a base for the development of a federal union, of a political union, of the signatory nations—in other words, a semisuper state.

Mr. President, it is perfectly obvious where this trend is leading, and it is time that the United States Senate refuse longer to lend its support to policies which get us more deeply involved with every day that passes in commitments under which we are rapidly losing any power of self-direction.

The time has come for a clarification of the basic intentions of this administration, where they put all the facts out in the open for us all to see.

For myself, as matters now stand, I believe it is the duty of the Members of the United States Senate to carry out an exhaustive investigation of the policies and personnel that have brought the Chinese catastrophe upon us.

And that we serve notice now to the President and to the other signatory powers of the North Atlantic Pact that we are determined to straighten out the mess we are in, put solid ground beneath our feet once more, and clarify the areas wherein lie our crucial interests and security before we commit ourselves to the further squandering of American financial, economic, and military resources.

This road—the road we are traveling—can only lead to a deeper involvement in the vicious power politics in which we are already caught, and the final destruction of our form of government and our way of life.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point an article by George Sokolsky published in the Washington Times-Herald of May 12, 1949.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THESE DAYS

(By George Sokolsky)

Just before each of the international conferences, a terrific advertisement campaign is launched upon the American people to convince them that this is the conference to end all conferences, that a sure and lasting peace is about to be achieved, that whatever money we have to pay to get that sure and lasting peace will be the final payment.

Well, it has never worked out that way. Instead, the American people have been lied to by their own officials, who made shameless as well as shameful agreements, condoning even slavery.

They have obligated us to enormous expenditures of our wealth to little avail either in the attainment of peace or in the rehabilitation of peoples.

Secret agreements, secret contracts, under-the-table arrangments have bound us, most of which we have only come to know by accident or by the course of events.

Therefore, let us watch this four-power conference distrustingly. The fact that the same people who produced Tehran, Yalta, Potsdam, Bretton Woods, San Francisco, the various London and Paris talkfests, the British loan, are going to this one, counsels caution.

The point is not that they are unfit or unworthy; it is rather that we have been fooled so often by the same people.

For instance, you read in the newspapers that President Truman invited Senators STYLES BRIDGES and KENNETH WHERRY to the White House to discuss our China policy. The President singled out two Republicans for a private conference, the sort of thing that is usually limited to the highest level of Democratic leadership.

Actually, the President intervened in a quarrel within the Republican Party where Senators BRIDGES and WHERRY gave Senator VANDENBERG a going-over on the subjects of China and Germany, Senator VANDENBERG having maintained the State Department position, which is as untenable as it is dangerous for the welfare of this country.

So the President took time off to try to convince the Republican Senators that it was Chiang Kai-shek, and not Generals Stilwell and Marshall, advised by John S. Service, Owen Lattimore, Lauchlin Currie, John Carter Vincent, W. Walton Butterworth, Jr., and several representatives of the Treasury Department suspected of Communist Party associations, who confused that situation.

The President was drawing a red herring across the trail.

Apparently, he failed to convince Senators BRIDGES and WHERRY, who are still hammering away at getting at the truth of the China and German situations, just as Senator PAT MCCARRAN is demanding the truth and calling for an investigation of both problems.

The President and the State Department seem to resent congressional intervention in these matters, although when they think it might help them they arrange for a congressional committee to go somewhere to see for themselves, as they did with the delegation led by Representative CHRISTIAN HERTER, in anticipation of the organization of ECA.

Neither the President nor the State Department has favored a congressional investigation of our far eastern policies on the spot.

In fact, I heard from China that during two recent trips to the Far East, Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, our leading military authority in that field, was importuned by Chiang Kai-shek to meet him, Chiang offering to go anywhere on Chinese soil for the purpose.

But Wedemeyer was not permitted to see Chiang, to hear his side, to listen to a proposal. In a word, we insist upon being blind, deaf, and dumb.

It is interesting, in this connection, to note that the postponements in the Alger Hiss trial are requested by our Government. Were that trial held, it is beyond doubt that information would be disclosed which American officials prefer to have kept secret from the American people.

Alger Hiss' defense, if the charges stand, may be that he followed instructions, he being on a subordinate level. What were those instructions and who gave them and why did the Government suppress the Chambers-Hiss story, of which they had full knowledge for 10 years?

So, let us beware of the four-power conference, a secret session, and support Senator PAT MCCARRAN'S investigation. We need to know the truth.

This country is still the property of the American people, and the officeholders are still employees accepting our wage.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3083) making appropriations for the Treasury and Post Office Departments and funds available for Export-Import Bank and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, and for other purposes; agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. GARY, Mr. FERNANDEZ, Mr. PASSMAN, Mr. CANNON, Mr. CANFIELD, and Mr. COUDERT were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

The message notified the Senate that Mr. LOVRE had been appointed a manager on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2361) to provide for the reorganization of Government agencies, and for other purposes, vice Mr. RICH, excused.

The message also announced that the House of Representatives having proceeded to reconsider the bill (H. R. 1036) for the relief of R. C. Owen, R. C. Owen, Jr., and Roy Owen, returned by the President of the United States with his objections, to the House of Representatives, in which it originated, it was

Resolved, That the said bill pass, two-thirds of the House of Representatives agreeing to pass the same.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION, 1950

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3997) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SPARKMAN in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendment lettered "A," offered by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. LANGER], on page 58, line 8, to strike out "$6,063,000" and insert "$7,063,000."

Mr. LANGER. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Johnston, S. C.	Myers
Baldwin	Kefauver	Neely
Bricker	Kem	O'Mahoney
Butler	Kerr	Pepper
Capehart	Kilgore	Reed
Chapman	Knowland	Russell
Cordon	Langer	Saltonstall
Donnell	Lodge	Schoeppel
Ellender	Long	Smith, Maine
Ferguson	Lucas	Sparkman

Mr. MYERS. I announce that the Senators from New Mexico [Mr. ANDERSON and Mr. CHAVEZ], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. GRAHAM], the Senators from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN and Mr. MCFARLAND], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. HUNT], the Senator from Iowa [Mr. GILLETTE], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. JOHNSON], the Senators from Idaho [Mr. MILLER and Mr. TAYLOR], the Senator from Texas [Mr. JOHNSON], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN], and the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS] are detained on official business in meetings of committees of the Senate.

The Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] and the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] are necessarily absent.

The Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. EASTLAND], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. O'CONOR], and the Senator from Virginia [Mr. ROBERTSON] are absent on official business.

The Senator from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON] is absent on public business.

The Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], and the Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS] are excused by the Senate for the purpose of attending sessions of the Committee on Foreign Relations, which is holding hearings on the North Atlantic Pact.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I announce that the Senator from Vermont [Mr. FLANDERS] is absent by leave of the Senate.

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH] is absent because of illness.

The Senator from Utah [Mr. WATKINS] is absent by leave of the Senate for the purpose of being present at a meeting of the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] and the Senator from Iowa [Mr. HICKENLOOPER] are excused by the Senate for the purpose of attending sessions of the Committee on Foreign Relations holding hearings on the North Atlantic Pact.

The Senator from Maine [Mr. BREWSTER], the senior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], the Senator from Washington [Mr. CAIN], the Senator from Montana [Mr. ECTON], the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. GURNEY], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MALONE], the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. MUNDT], and the junior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY] are detained on official business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A quorum is present.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that my amendment "A" and my amendment "C," which I now submit, both of which are offered by me in behalf of the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. HUMPHREY], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. JOHNSTON], and myself, be considered together.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. For the information of the Senate, the amendment "C" of the Senator from North Dakota will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 58, in line 14, it is proposed to strike out "$150,000,000", and insert in lieu thereof "$350,000,000."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from North Dakota that his amendments "A" and "C" be considered together? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, these amendments deal with rural electrification. I am delighted that the distinguished junior Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL], who is in charge of this bill, is here.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LANGER. I yield.

Mr. RUSSELL. I hope the Senator from North Dakota does not mean to infer that the Senator from Georgia has not been here throughout the consideration of this bill. I have been here at all times during its consideration.

Mr. LANGER. I said that I am delighted that the Senator from Georgia is here, so that I can discuss this matter with him.

Mr. RUSSELL. Yes.

Mr. LANGER. I may say that I originally went to the distinguished Senator from Georgia and tried to get him to agree to report the amendments from the committee. The Senator from Georgia is a very good friend of agriculture and a very good friend of the REA; and I was somewhat surprised when he would not accept these amendments. It is my considered opinion that the reason why he has not accepted them is that I have been unable to make perfectly clear to him exactly what the amendments would do for the farmers of the United States.

Mr. President, there are really three classes of farmers who are concerned with the REA. First, there are the farmers in States where 9 out of 10 farmers already have REA.

As a matter of fact, there are four States which have no REA at all, because those States were thoroughly electrified before the establishment of REA.

Today in the States of California, Connecticut, Idaho, Indiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Rhode Island, and Washington more than 95 farmers out of every 100 already have REA.

Then we have States which at present need REA very much. In Alabama, approximately 40 out of every 100 farmers do not have REA. In Florida, only 65 farmers out of every 100 have REA. In Iowa, approximately 20 farmers out of every 100 do not have REA. In Kansas, 50 farmers out of every 100 do not have REA. In Kentucky, 50 farmers out of every 100 do not have REA. In Louisiana, 45 farmers out of every 100 do not have REA; in Mississippi, more than 60 farmers out of every 100 do not have REA; in Minnesota, 31 farmers out of every 100 do not have REA; in Missouri——

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. LANGER. I yield for a question.

Mr. FERGUSON. Do those figures mean that the number of farmers indicated out of every 100 do not have electricity of any kind on their farms?

Mr. LANGER. That is correct; they have neither electricity nor power of any kind, unless they have a small generator that is turned by a windmill or unless they have a Delco plant. However, I am talking about electricity and power.

I say to my friend the Senator from Michigan that in the United States 2,000,000 farm homes are without electricity of any kind. I have here the exact figures bearing on that situation. In other words, today our country is only a little more than one-half electrified.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LANGER. I yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. DONNELL. I think the Senator from North Dakota started to give the figures for Missouri, and I shall be pleased if he will do so.

Mr. LANGER. Missouri is a little more than one-half electrified, the figure being 53.4 percent.

Mr. DONNELL. I thank the Senator.

Mr. LANGER. Mississippi is only a little more than one-third electrified; in Nebraska, only 43 farmers out of 100 have REA; in Nevada, 41 farmers out of 100 do not have it; New Mexico is less than one-half electrified; in Oklahoma, only 44 farmers out of 100 have REA; in South Dakota, only 23 farmers out of 100 have REA; in Tennessee, only 50 out of 100 have REA. Texas is only two-thirds electrified; West Virginia is just a trifle more than one-half electrified; in Wisconsin, 15 farmers out of every 100 do not have REA. In North Dakota—I call these figures particularly to the attention of my distinguished friend—not quite 23 farmers out of every 100 have REA.

It will be noticed by examining the figures that the areas lacking REA are generally concentrated in two sections of the United States. I have before me maps which have been prepared by the REA. From them it will be observed that the lack of electricity is concentrated in the north Plains area and in the Southern States, such as Mississippi and Arkansas. Anyone who is interested in the matter and who wishes to examine the maps, will note from an REA map for June 30, 1937, which I now have before me, that in States such as Montana and Alabama there was practically no REA at all, at that time.

The map for 1940 shows how REA had been developed up to that time, although it still was lacking in many of the Southern States.

The REA map for 1944 shows how the REA was then concentrated in the East and in the middle section of the country, but was almost totally lacking in the north Plains area.

Finally, Mr. President, I have the map for 1947. It will be noticed that very little was done between 1944 and 1947. That was due primarily to the lack of material. Most of the supplies had been used during the war. It was impossible to obtain a conductor or a transformer. The result was that construction was very much delayed.

The pending bill, on page 58, in line 9, provides as follows:

For loans in accordance with sections 3, 4, and 5 of said act, and for carrying out the provisions of section 6 thereof, $350,000,000—

Three hundred and fifty million dollars, offhand, looks like a large amount of money—to be borrowed from the Secretary of the Treasury in accordance with the provisions of section 3 (a) of said act, and such additional amounts, not to exceed a total of $150,000,000, to be borrowed under the same terms and conditions if and to the extent that the Secretary of Agriculture shall certify, from time to time, to the Secretary of the Treasury that such additional amounts are required during the fiscal year 1950.

I call the attention of my distinguished friend from Georgia to the peculiar situation which we face. I desire to cite the difference between conditions in North Dakota and certain of the other north Plains States and the conditions in the South. The only way I can do that, to make absolutely certain the Senator has the best possible proof of what I am saying, is to quote Claude Wickard, the man who has charge of REA, in whom I am sure the Senator from Georgia has confidence, as I have. I think Mr. Wickard has done a very fine job. I call the attention of my distinguished friend to an ordinary newspaper clipping, from a little newspaper published in Oliver County, N. Dak., stating what must be done by farmers in the county in order to obtain REA. It is typical of the situation in Montana, South Dakota, Wyoming, Nebraska, Kansas and other States. It says:

The Center Construction Co., of Center, N. Dak., arrived at Hazen on Thursday morning and immediately started to string copper conductor on the 3-phase line north of Emil Malke's farm. About six farm folks of that area turned out to assist in stringing this conductor. With the high snow banks and deep snow it was very difficult to do without the aid of the farmers of this area. They assist in carrying the four heavy strands of wire up and above the snow banks over to the poles where the linemen climb poles and hoist the wire on up to the crossarm. It was felt that by getting this strung over some of the pot holes and lakes that would be filled up with water as soon as the snow melts that there would be no further delay in energizing the area north of Hazen, and toward Pick City.

In the South it is possible to dig post holes throughout the year. In that area there is no snow, such as there is in the north Plains area, to cause a delay of 3, 4, or 5 months in some years in carrying on any construction work at all. Our construction work must be done within a period of 5, 6, or 7 months, depending upon the weather.

As I said a moment ago, anyone reading the bill could say, "Why, there is $350,000,000. That means there is going to be ample money to take care of the Southern States as well as the States in the north Plains area." But how is the money to be divided? Certain States, such as Montana, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, Missouri, and others, are less than one-half electrified; in some instances, only one-fifth. How much of the $350,000,000 would those States get? How much would it be possible for them to get under the bill? Mr. Wickard had this to say on the subject:

I shall now show how the REA program works. The amount which REA is authorized to lend annually is fixed by Congress, and REA then borrows the amount of its loan authorization from the United States Treasury.

We begin, in the event the bill is passed, with an appropriation of $350,000,000, which is available for REA loans. Proceeding now to the north Plains area, the quotation continues:

Half of the amount available for loans in any given year—

That is, $175,000,000 of the amount—is reserved for loans in the various States on the basis of the proportion that each State's unelectrified farms bear to the total number of unelectrified farms in the country.

We can imagine the small amount of money any particular State will get.

The other half of the fund may be used for loans at the discretion of the Administrator, but not more than 10 percent may be loaned in any one State or Territory.

I want to make it plain to the distinguished Senator from Georgia that the States about which I am talking are suffering from another great handicap in comparison with the States that now have REA. The States in the latter category got it when the price of materials was low, when it cost to build REA but half as much as it costs today. I have the figures to show exactly the difference in cost. In some instances the cost has risen more than 115 percent—again referring to figures furnished by Mr. Claude Wickard. In other words, let us assume that the State of Connecticut is electrified 100 percent, and that the State of Kansas today wants to construct a line similar to the one in Connecticut. Because of the increased cost of materials, the cost of the line in Kansas would be 115 percent more than the cost of the line constructed in Connecticut originally.

I think it important to consider the situation of the north Plains States, to show the desperate plight in which they find themselves. Let us take North Dakota and South Dakota, which are typical of certain of the other States, although they happen to be at the bottom. Of them it is said:

Although good progress is being made in bringing electric power to North Dakota farms, the State lags far behind most other States in the percentage of farms served by electric lines.

This situation is brought out in a report released by the Rural Electrification Administration to the North Dakota Extension Service.

According to the tabulation, made as of June 30, 1947, North Dakota ranks last in percentage of farms having electric service. The State had 58,689 farms, or 84.4 percent of its total number of farms, without electricity on this date.

South Dakota is in about as bad shape as North Dakota in percentage of electrified farms, according to the summary. In South Dakota 81.8 percent of the farms have no electric service. Minnesota has only 37.6 percent of its farms, which is less than the national average, without electricity. Montana has 58.6 percent of its farms without power lines.

The information supplied by REA to the North Dakota Extension Service shows two and one-quarter million farms in the United States, or 39 percent of all farms, without electric power lines.

It is pointed out that North Dakota has a challenging job ahead in bringing electricity to its farms. The REA states that a minimum of $2,890,099 in new loans will be available to rural electric groups in North Dakota before June 30, 1948. Congress has made available $225,000,000 in loan funds for national use during this fiscal year, of which half is allotted to the various States in direct proportion to their needs. The other half is available on a flexible basis, with no single State getting more than 10 percent of it.

Claude R. Wickard, REA Administrator, pointed out that "for the most part, the areas easy to electrify have been electrified. Only a policy of full area coverage, such as has been adopted by the more than 1,000 REA-financed cooperatives and power districts, gives assurance that the two and one-quarter million unserved farms ultimately will get power."

Mr. President, I wish to make very plain to the Senate what the farmers in the sparsely settled communities are up against. First of all, Mr. Wickard says that where there are many farms in a valley there is REA service, but where there is one farmer within a mile or a mile and a half, the service is not only more costly than formerly, but, in some instances, it is 115 percent as costly as was constructing a line in 1935. When the farmers are located in sparsely settled areas the cost to the individual farmer is much greater.

Mr. President, we are not asking for a gift. There is not a farmer in any of the States I have mentioned who wants something for nothing. All they are asking for is an opportunity to borrow money with which to get electricity installed on their farms. I have not the slightest doubt that some Senators here today, who were farm boys, were able to get an education because their mothers were able to save the butter money and egg money to assist in getting an education for their sons. But in the sparsely settled areas everything is against the pioneer mothers today. They have no electric lights; they have no electric power. Instead of being able electrically to operate their churns for the purpose of making butter, they have to do it by hand. Instead of having a deep-freeze in which to keep their meat so it will not spoil, and a place to keep their milk and cream where they will not get sour, they have to lower the cream and butter down into a well, where the temperature may be a little bit lower than it is on the surface. I know the drudgery through which the womenfolks on the farm have to go when there is no REA service on the farms.

That is not all, Mr. President. The States to which I have referred have been losing population in the past few years. North Dakota has lost 121,000 persons, more than 21 percent of its population, during the past 6 or 7 years. In the State of South Dakota the situation is almost as bad. Kansas is third in the Nation in loss of population from the farms.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LANGER. I yield to the Senator from Montana.

Mr. MURRAY. In the State of Montana we have lost 12 and a fraction percent of our population. There are fewer persons in the State than there were 30 or 40 years ago. It is because of the lack of development and the failure to provide a balanced economy. People are leaving the State for that reason. After the First World War many of the boys who went to fight for their country did not return to the State, because there was nothing to which to return. The same situation followed World War II.

There is one point to which I should like to invite the Senator's attention. I appreciate the fact that he is making a very able argument in favor of the extension of the rural-electrification program, but one of the difficulties is the matter of getting transmission lines to bring the power into the back territories of the States. I hope the Senator will cover that point, because it is very important.

Mr. LANGER. I shall cover that point.

Mr. President, I want to refer to another matter, if the Senator from Montana will indulge me. There were millions of farm boys in the war. When they got over to barbaric Japan, as it was called, they found that more than 95 percent of the Japanese farmers had electricity upon their farms. When they went to Germany they found approximately 90 farms out of every 100 had electricity. When they reached Norway, Sweden, and Denmark, they found the percentage even higher than that, 97 or 98 farms out of 100 having electricity. Only farms in the most isolated portions of those countries did not have electricity.

One of these boys comes back home and wants to get married and to rent a farm. His girl says, "I want to go some place where I do not have to milk by hand, some place where I do not have to undergo the slavery and drudgery of farm work. So let us look around and find a farm which is electrified."

There are only 23 farms out of 100 in South Dakota, and 23 out of 100 in North Dakota, which are electrified. In Montana the figure is less than that. The young folks do not want to rent a farm which is not electrified. They read in the newspaper that in the State of Washington, where the Coulee Dam is located, 60 or 90 out of 100 farms are electrified. So the girl says, "Let us move out there where we shall not have to work so hard." Or they go to California, or to some of the other States which I have named this afternoon, where electrification is approximately 100 percent.

That, Mr. President, is one reason why we have lost the population which my distinguished friend from Montana has mentioned.

I shall not take all afternoon, because I want to make my remarks as brief as I possibly can. Mr. Wickard testified before the committee. I want to refer to his testimony, to show, again, that $350,000,000, which looks large in the beginning, does not amount to so much by the time Mr. Wickard gets through analyzing it. He says, "half of the amount available for loans in any given year is reserved for loans in the various States on the basis of the proportion that each State's unelectrified farms bear to the total number of unelectrified farms in the country. The other half of the fund may be used for loans at the discretion of the Administrator, but not more than 10 percent may be loaned in any one State or Territory."

Mr. President, I call attention to the fact, for example, that in the State of Connecticut, in the State of Rhode Island, in the State of Massachusetts, and in the State of West Virginia none of the money set aside by the Congress was used. Therefore, that money remained in the Treasury. In my opinion, the Administrator should have the power to use, in his discretion, any money not used, because it can readily be seen that when the Appropriations Committee meets, or when the political committee of either the Democratic or Republican Party meets, it gets a report from the REA Administration which says, "There is $5,000,000, $10,000,000, $50,000,000 available which has not been used," when as a matter of fact that is not strictly true, because either it has already been assigned to projects which are in the course of being constructed or it is set aside for those States which are not going to use it, and the Administrator knows it is not going to be used. So this provision, that the other half of the fund may be used for loans in the discretion of the Administrator, but not more than 10 percent may be loaned in any one State, is not quite sufficient, and the law should be changed as provided in the bill I introduced.

I introduced a bill, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, providing that out of the money appropriated the Administrator should have authority to allot to the 10 lowest States—and some were in the South, one being Mississippi, and some were in the Great Plains area—more money than was allotted to the other States, which already had 60 or 70 or 80 or 100 percent electrification. I could not get the bill reported from the committee. The committee said they were going to take care of the matter, and they did try, and I wish to compliment the Senator from Georgia for endeavoring to take care of it by the additional $150,000,000 recommended. On page 58 of the pending bill it is provided that $150,000,000 may be used whenever the Secretary of Agriculture certifies that applications are pending.

Now I wish to make another matter clear to the Senate, namely, that one group of people are paying back to the Government every dollar they borrowed. Mr. Wickard says in the letter:

The REA borrowers have paid the Government $176,301,661 in principal and interest. Of this $18,504,792 was paid in advance—

It was paid before it was ever due—and less than 1 percent is delinquent more than 30 days.

Mr. President, that is a perfectly remarkable showing. The letter is so illuminating that I wish to read all of it. This REA is one Government agency of which every man, woman, and child in the United States can be proud. Mr. Wickard said in this letter, dated December 21, 1948:

We are pleased to send you the enclosed progress report on rural electrification. These statistics, based on the latest reports we have from our borrowers, show that the program is continuing to move forward in every part of the country at a rapid pace. During the first 9 months of 1948, REA borrowers set a new all-time record for miles of power line placed in operation. During this period a total of 108,806 miles of line was built. The size of the job is indicated by the fact that the 9-month total this year exceeds the entire year of 1947 by 13 percent. The number of consumers connected likewise is at a high level, and 1948 promises to be the best in this respect of any year since the program was inaugurated. A total of 368,150 consumers was connected during the first 9 months of the calendar year 1948.

Even with progress of such proportions, there is still a tremendous job to be done. As will be noted on page 4 of the enclosed bulletin, nearly one-third of the Nation's farms still lack electricity. It is estimated that 1,800,000 farms and an even larger number of other rural establishments are still unserved. The difficulty of bringing service to these people is recognized, but REA borrowers are facing up to the challenge of providing area-wide coverage. Applications for REA loans on hand and in process total approximately $411,000,000, and applications are being received at the rate of about $41,000,000 a month.

The problem of reaching the unserved rural people—

That brings up the very question propounded by the distinguished Senator from Montana a few minutes ago.

The problem of reaching the unserved rural people, many of them in thinly settled areas, is paralleled by the growing problem of providing adequate power for the new consumers as well as for those already being served. As the energy statistics on page 1 of the bulletin indicate, the consumption of power on farms is increasing at a rapid rate.

A most serious obstacle to further development is the current power shortage. REA-financed cooperatives in many areas are finding it difficult to obtain from the present suppliers the additional amounts of power they need.

Another problem with which REA borrowers are concerned is that of heavying-up existing facilities to care for the growing loads.

Mr. President, that is one of the most important things in this entire problem. The people in western North Dakota get together to establish an REA, or the people in Kansas get together, as at Victoria, Kans., to build an REA. Let us assume they get an allocation of only three or four million dollars. Then, of course, the generating plant will be too small, because as the load becomes heavy, as the months and years go by, it will mean that instead the capacity of the small generating plant will have to be increased, or it will have to be torn down and a new one put up.

We were up against that problem at Grand Forks, N. Dak. Two units were built. Three years later, as I remember, two more were added. Later those were torn down and a generator was built with about 10 units. Last summer it was found that did not begin to take care of the load, so $6,197,000 was appropriated for a generating plant. In a conversation I had with the manager there he said that if a sufficient amount of money had originally been available so that the engineers could have said, "We are not limited by two or three million dollars, we are going to build the kind of generating plant that is going to take care of the whole area when all the farmers are hooked up," it would have meant a much larger appropriation at the beginning, but in the long run it would have saved the farmers a very large sum of money.

Mr. Wickard continued:

Indeed, many REA-financed co-ops are now engaged in this work to a considerable extent. During the last year, nearly every loan made to an existing borrower included an appropriate provision for increasing the capacity of present facilities.

While carrying forward the program of building new lines and improving facilities, REA borrowers are continuing their excellent financial record.

Mr. President, there was a time when it was not possible to get material, and I anticipate that the distinguished Senator from Georgia will say, "What is the use appropriating and setting aside a lot of money, when it is not possible to get the material?" I say to him that today it is possible to get all the material needed to build lines all over the United States of America. We had a full and complete hearing before our committee, and I have the report of the hearing here with me, if the Senator from Georgia or any other Senator is interested in referring to it. The record shows the names of those who were subpenaed, and also the testimony they gave the committee. Every manufacturer of transformers appeared before the committee. We had before us every important manufacturer of aluminum wire or copper wire. We had before us, as I previously said, those who furnish the conductors, and we had before us those who furnish the transformers. There was only one small shortage, and that was a shortage of transformers for substations. Three months ago there was still a shortage of transformers. The testimony given at that time showed—and I have the testimony before me—that it might be a year before that shortage for the substations could be supplied. That testimony was given 3 months ago, so that shortage will be supplied in 8 or 9 months from now. At that time the testimony was that it might be at the most a year before the transformers could be furnished.

Mr. President, I simply cannot conceive that my friend the Senator from Georgia, who has done so much for the farming population of America, would take the position that if we increase the amount from $150,000,000 to $350,000,000 we would do any harm. I say that because a reading of the bill will show that not one penny of that amount of money, assuming the increase to $350,000,000 were made, would be spent unless "the Secretary of Agriculture shall certify, from time to time, to the Secretary of the Treasury that such additional amounts are required during the fiscal year 1950."

Let us view the situation in the most pessimistic light. Let us assume that the shortage of the large transformers should continue 1 or 2 months longer than I stated. Even so there is no reason why the lines from the individual farms cannot be built, so they can be energized immediately after the transformers are installed in the substations.

My other amendment would raise the administrative expenses from $6,063,000 to $7,063,000. If the loan authorization is increased it will mean that more engineers must be employed. I refer once more to the fact that we need a large number of engineers in the Great Plains area for the 6 or 7 months during the year when they can work. For the remainder of the year they can work in the South. During the time the Northern States have snow and cold weather it is almost impossible for the engineers to build REA lines.

Mr. President, I hope the Members of the Senate may accept my two amendments, which are being considered together, and help the farmers, chiefly those located in the sparsely settled areas, who are on their farms by themselves, widely separated from other farms and communities, where they badly need light and power, much more so than do those in more congested areas.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I deem it unnecessary to state here that I have been interested in the program of rural electrification. I supported the first bill for this purpose which was ever introduced in Congress. It so happened that I was a member of the standing Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and handled on the floor of the Senate the legislation under which the Rural Electrification Administration is operating at the present time. I have served on the Subcommittee on Agricultural Appropriations during the entire life of the Rural Electrification Administration. In the years gone by, back in 1938 and 1939, I offered in the Senate committee amendments, which were brought to the floor of the Senate, to increase the loan authorizations for the Rural Electrification Administration. I do not know of any program inaugurated during the days of the so-called New Deal which has made a more permanent contribution to improving life in the United States than the rural electrification program. It has enabled us to keep upon the farms of the Nation the ambitious young men and women who were heretofore rushing to the cities because they could see their cousins who live in town enjoying the good things of life which were not available to them on unelectrified farms.

Mr. President, with that background, I wish to say that, in my judgment, the Senate should not accept the amendments proposed by the distinguished Senator from North Dakota.

It so happens that in this bill at the present time there are provided administrative expenses and funds for loans in excess of any amount which has ever been provided in any appropriation bill, or in any one year through the regular appropriation bill and by way of deficiency appropriations. The bill carries or makes available the sum of one-half billion dollars for rural electrification. Ardently as I believe in the program, I think it would be most unwise, almost to the point of folly, for the Senate to add $200,000,000 additional to these authorized funds.

Mr. President, in addition to this one-half billion dollars, there has been allotted the sum of $528,000,000 to rural-electrification cooperatives which has not been drawn from the Treasury of the United States. Certainly, with this sum of more than $1,000,000,000 available for the work program in expanding rural electrification during the coming year we would not be justified in accepting, or the Senate in adopting, the amendment.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KEFAUVER in the chair). Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. CAPEHART. Are we to understand that there is over $500,000,000 in the fund at the moment which has not been spent?

Mr. RUSSELL. That is correct.

Mr. CAPEHART. And we are appropriating another $500,000,000 under the bill?

Mr. RUSSELL. It is not a direct appropriation, I may say to the Senator from Indiana. It is a loan authorization. I think it occupies a somewhat different status from an appropriation.

Mr. CAPEHART. I understand.

Mr. RUSSELL. But we are making available $350,000,000 outright, with an additional $150,000,000 which will be available in the event the Secretary of Agriculture certifies to the need of it, and that it can be wisely spent.

Mr. CAPEHART. That is above the $500,000,000 which is now available from previous appropriations?

Mr. RUSSELL. I stated that there was a total of more than a billion dollars which has not been expended, which will be available if the fund of $500,000,000 provided by the pending bill is approved.

Mr. CAPEHART. How much has been spent on REA since the beginning of the Rural Electrification Administration?

Mr. RUSSELL. The total authorization, not including the funds contained in the pending bill, is $1,875,000,000 in round figures.

Mr. CAPEHART. Does that mean that up to this time we have spent $1,800,000,000?

Mr. RUSSELL. No, because $528,000,000 of that money has not yet been expended. There has actually been expended or advanced to the cooperatives $1,220,000,000, in round figures.

Mr. CAPEHART. In other words, we have accomplished the fine results we have today with the expenditure of $1,250,000,000?

Mr. RUSSELL. $1,220,000,000.

Mr. CAPEHART. Now, with the money that is left over from last year—

Mr. RUSSELL. That is an accumulation. It is not all from last year.

Mr. CAPEHART. The accumulation the Senator spoke of, plus the $500,000,000 contained in the present bill, will mean a total of nearly $1,000,000,000, which is almost as much as the REA has used in 14 years.

Mr. RUSSELL. That is true, but, of course, it would stand quite a bit of explanation. There has been a very large increase in the cost of material and labor for installing REA lines. I suppose the increase in these costs is about as marked as it is in any other commodity on the American market today; but there is a very substantial sum of money available.

Mr. CAPEHART. One other question. Is it not almost impossible for REA to spend in the next 12 months $1,000,000,000?

Mr. RUSSELL. I do not think they can spend it or will spend it, I may say to the Senator from Indiana, but because of the peculiar formulae under which these funds are allocated some States will be able to spend it all, while other States will not be able to spend it, and some of the money will eventually be returned to the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. CAPEHART. But it is the able Senator's opinion that the $1,000,000,000 available from this year's appropriation plus the money which has accumulated over a period of years is absolutely ample?

Mr. RUSSELL. In my judgment there is as much money available in the hands of the agency as the Congress ought to make available to any agency of this size at one time. That is my own view.

Mr. CAPEHART. Did the Administrator, Mr. Wickard, ask for more money?

Mr. RUSSELL. No; Mr. Wickard did not ask for more money. He was bound somewhat by the budgetary limitations imposed on any administrator. Mr. Wickard is an enthusiast for REA. I suppose that if all restrictions were removed, he might support the amendment of the Senator from North Dakota. I do not know what his views are. I am giving my views. I think there is ample money in the bill for this purpose. As a friend of REA, who fought the battles of REA on the floor for 15 years, I think there is plenty of money available for REA for 1 year's expenditures.

Mr. CAPEHART. If it is impossible to spend $1,000,000,000 in the next 12 months, what would be gained by appropriating more money?

Mr. RUSSELL. I do not think it would result in substantial advancement in rural electrification. As the Senator from North Dakota has pointed out, we do not now have shortages in equipment which slowed down the program for 2 or 3 years. That fact has contributed to the carry-over. Material was not available.

Mr. CAPEHART. The fact still remains that the money is available now.

Mr. RUSSELL. The money is available now. There are some shortages in equipment. I think there is now plenty of wire, and poles are available, but with respect to certain generator parts there is a shortage, and there will remain a shortage for perhaps 12 or 15 months.

Mr. CAPEHART. The REA has spent only one and a quarter billion dollars in 14 years. Is that correct?

Mr. RUSSELL. I think so. It started in 1935. As I recall, the law was enacted in 1935.

Mr. CAPEHART. That would make it 15 years. If the REA has spent only one and a quarter billion dollars in 15 years, and it will have available after this appropriation, plus the appropriation for loan purposes, $350,000,000, plus $150,000,000 authorized, or a total of $500,000,000, plus the $500,000,000 which has been accumulated, or a total of a billion dollars, that certainly should be enough for 1 year. It has spent only $1,250,000,000 in 15 years.

Mr. RUSSELL. I think it is sufficient. For that reason I am opposing the amendment of the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. MURRAY. The Senator realizes, does he not, that at the present time unemployment is developing in many of the areas involved in this debate? It seems to me that if it is possible at the present time to expand rural electrification in any areas because of the fact that material is now available which has not been available during the past 3 or 4 years, there is no reason why the States which have lacked development of rural electrification during the past 4 or 5 years should not now have the opportunity to go forward with their programs, which at the same time would afford relief in the unemployment situation.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I do not look upon the rural electrification as a make-work program. It contributes to the economy. I am delighted that it does add to employment in the country, but this would be a rather expensive method of providing work, because of the great costs involved in building the lines. I have the utmost sympathy with the States which are not up to the national average in rural electrification, but if we are going to be frank and not undertake to deceive ourselves, we must recognize the fact that the States which are deficient have only themselves to blame. Some of the States about which we hear so much today, including the State represented by the distinguished Senator from North Dakota, as well as the State of South Dakota, did not inaugurate any program of any significance until 2 or 3 years ago, and, of course, they are behind the rest of the country.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. LANGER. Let me inform the distinguished Senator from Georgia that when I was Governor of my State it was the first State in the United States to adopt the program. The second REA project in the United States was built at Kindred, N. Dak., but we could not get the money. We came to Washington and tried to get it. The Senator is familiar with many of the good reasons why we could not get it. I am not condemning anyone. But the men who were here representing North Dakota at that time were not interested. I will concede that. However, our farmers got together, and the Kindred Cooperative is one of the largest in America. I assure the distinguished Senator from Georgia that we could not get the money. I have a farm located in that cooperative area. We begged for the money, but we could not get it.

Mr. RUSSELL. I do not know the specific reasons why the Senator's State did not get the money; but I have kept up with this program since its inception. At least the allotments were not made to the State of North Dakota to which it was entitled under the division of funds provided in the authorization. I presume that that was for good and sufficient reasons which appealed to the Administrator. The Senator's State may have had the first REA cooperative in the United States, but if the Senator from North Dakota will check back on the figures he will find that there were several years when North Dakota did not make use of all the funds allotted to it in Washington under the authorization.

Mr. LANGER. The same situation prevails in South Dakota, Montana, Minnesota, Kansas, and Nebraska. All through the plains States area the situation is almost identical. Mr. Wickard told us the reason why. He told us, for example, why Wyoming jumped from the forty-seventh State to the twenty-sixth. He stated that it was because in Wyoming there were thickly populated valleys, so he used the discretion which he has under the act, and put the money into Wyoming. Wyoming advanced and Nebraska went back. The figures will show the difference between Wyoming and Nebraska during the past 3 years. I assure the distinguished Senator that we did everything we could think of, at least during the time I was Governor, to get REA aid for our State.

Mr. RUSSELL. I am quite sure that the Senator did; but the fact remains that the percentage of farm electrification in the Senator's State is comparatively low. I do not carry the figures in my head, but, as I recall, it is much higher in Kansas and Minnesota than it is in the State of North Dakota. I am quite sure that the charts prepared by the Agency will bear out that statement.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. CAPEHART. Why is it not possible for North Dakota and other States which are so low on the list to get sufficient funds from the $1,000,000,000 which will be available to do what they want to do?

Mr. RUSSELL. They can get only the amounts to which they are entitled under the formula prescribed in the basic act. I do not know what those amounts are.

Mr. CAPEHART. Let us change the formula, then, instead of appropriating more money.

Mr. RUSSELL. I know that time and again the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. LANGER] has spoken about his interest in rural electrification and his efforts to obtain more money for his State and area. The fact that he has offered this amendment is proof of his diligence. I have served on the committee with the distinguished junior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. YOUNG], and I know of his great interest in the problem. He has been energetic, both in the committee and on the floor, in getting sufficient funds. I do not believe that the mere fact that there happens to be a shortage in the Senator's State justifies making available $200,000,000 which is not needed over the country as a whole.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. REED. I wish to invite the attention of the Senator from Georgia to the figures which appear in the most recent monthly publication of the REA. I also invited the attention of the Senator from North Dakota. He is either misinformed, or he does not grasp the facts.

On the 30th of June 1948, the loans approved in North Dakota were $38,670,000. On February 28, 1949, 8 months later, the loans approved in North Dakota were $64,122,000. That is an increase in 8 months of 70 percent. I do not know why the Senator from North Dakota would not be satisfied with that.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I shall be glad to yield if the Senator from Kansas has concluded his statement.

Mr. LANGER. I am perfectly aware of the fact that there was such an increase. A representative of the REA was in North Dakota, and we had 23 meetings. North Dakota is getting the money. When the REA spends the $520,000,000——

Mr. REED. What is the Senator complaining about?

Mr. LANGER. I want to help Kansas. I want to help Nebraska. I want to help South Dakota. I want to help Montana. I want to help Mississippi.

Mr. REED. I thought the Senator was wailing about North Dakota.

Mr. LANGER. I am not. I am talking about the other States. I want them to be taken care of in the same way that North Dakota has been taken care of. When this money is spent, in North Dakota, 79.9 farmers out of 100 will have REA service. But similar development is not occurring in South Dakota and some other States. I am interested in seeing that the other States also have a chance to borrow REA money. In my State the power companies have endorsed this program. They say they do not have enough money to build the transmission lines, and they are perfectly willing to have the REA build them and give them a chance to help out. The people want it; the power companies want it; everybody is in favor of it.

Mr. RUSSELL. And we will build it.

Mr. LANGER. I certainly cannot see what harm it will do to make a sum of money available to a group of farmers who organize a cooperative, so as to give them a chance to borrow the money. The Secretary of the Treasury says the amount of money available is not sufficient to meet the needs of the great number of applications which have been filed. Certainly these people should have a chance to borrow what they need.

We do not have a billion dollars available for this purpose. Mr. President, $520,000,000 has already been appropriated.

For instance, let me read from a news item which I have before me now:

> Two REA jobs total $717,960.

That is the headline of an article appearing in the Renville County Farmer of March 31, being in reference to the North Central Electric Cooperative at Bottineau, N. Dak.

That money is a part of the $20,000,000 which already has been allocated by REA.

Mr. CAPEHART. It has been allocated, but it has not been spent, and the facilities have not been completed.

Mr. LANGER. But in a majority of the cases the contracts have been let.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, magnificent progress is being made in this direction, but I think it would be most uneconomical and would tempt the administration to indulge in great extravagance if we were to add the proposed $200,000,000 to the amount already recommended for this purpose.

The REA has undertaken to build many facilities; but we know that in many cases the cooperatives are not equipped to handle expensive machinery. If the proposed increase in the amount of money to be made available were made, the only change would be to permit the purchase of expensive machinery which the REA cooperatives are not generally equipped to handle.

When Mr. Wickard appeared before the House committee, he said:

> When we drew up the budget estimates we estimated that we would only be able to loan about $375,000,000 during this fiscal year.

That was the full amount of the new loan.

Then he said:

> Now we have raised that estimate by $50,000,000, to $425,000,000.

The bill provides $75,000,000 more than what Mr. Wickard estimated he could loan. However, he made a fairly good guess, because the figures which I secured this morning from the Rural Electrification Administration show that the applications being submitted are running a little less than $42,000,000 a month. That is the total of applications which are being made. Of course, I do not assume that the REA will give every one of the cooperatives every dollar it requests. However, if that rate is maintained, and if the REA were to approve every application for 100 percent of the amount applied for, the amount now provided in the bill would just about be used up.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield, and I apologize to the Senator from Kansas for having kept him on his feet so long.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. That is quite all right.

I wish to say that I think the rural-electrification program in Kansas is coming along very satisfactorily.

I should like to ask the distinguished Senator from Georgia one question. There has been some talk and certainly some discussion in the press to the effect that the technical staffs of the rural electrification program probably were not adequately financed. What is the judgment of the distinguished Senator in regard to that matter, as respects the appropriations which are set forth in this measure? Will they be sufficient, in his judgment and in the judgment of the committee?

Mr. RUSSELL. I wish to answer the Senator frankly. I say that of course this bill does not provide as much money as the REA wants for administration, but it provides more money than the bill last year provided. Last year the budget recommended $250,000,000 for REA. The Congress allowed $5,675,000 for administration, which as I recall was slightly less than the budget estimate, and was based on a $250,000,000 loan authorization. However, with that administrative fund, the REA handled $400,000,000 of loan authorizations which were made available to them.

This bill makes available $6,063,000 for administrative purposes for the coming fiscal year, with loan authorizations of $500,000,000. In my opinion that would keep approximately the same burden of work upon the administrative staff as it has at the present time. It is true that the bill this year will provide more money, but the REA is making larger loans. So the total effect will be that not a great deal more work will be involved. Somewhat more work may be required; for instance, no doubt more engineering work is required on a $50,000,000 loan than on a $40,000,000 loan.

So the number of loans probably will not be much greater, although the amounts to be authorized will be considerably greater. The result may be to place a somewhat heavier burden upon the administrative staff and the technical employees of the Rural Electrification Administration, but in my judgment, they will be able to come through all right with the $6,000,000 provided in the bill for administration.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. I thank the Senator. That is one of the things in which I was very much interested, because if the REA is allowed sufficient funds to cover the over-all situation in regard to loans, certainly the REA should be allowed adequate funds for the administration of the loans, by way of engineering work, and so forth.

Mr. RUSSELL. This is a hard-working organization. In my judgment, it does a good job. I wish to see it obtain adequate funds without having the Congress be extravagant in advancing funds to it.

I intend to be perfectly frank with the Senator, and I say that I think the administrative staff of this agency does work somewhat harder than do the administrative staffs of some other agencies of the Government, but I doubt very much whether the health of the members of the REA staff is being endangered by the amount of work that is done.

I yield the floor.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, there has been so much misconstruction, misapprehension, and misunderstanding about this matter that I shall take the next 10 minutes to see if some of it can be cleared up.

I trust that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] will agree with me that a burden rests upon a local community to form a cooperative under the proper rules and regulations and standards, before it will be eligible to receive a loan. If a State does not move fast enough, the States which move faster will originally benefit in that way. I have no doubt that the trouble in North Dakota was because of slowness and delay in taking action in that respect.

The Senator from North Dakota has not used quite correctly the figures to which he has referred. The Senator from Georgia has touched upon that point.

One billion eight hundred and seventy-five million dollars has been authorized. As the Senator from Georgia knows, there is a lag between the time of the making of the authorization by Congress and the time when the loans are approved, and a further lag between the approval of the loan and the actual expenditure of the money.

As against the $1,875,000,000 which has been authorized, as of February 28 of this year—and let me at this point ask the Senator from Georgia, who read from a letter, when he obtained from the REA the figures he used earlier today.

Mr. RUSSELL. These are figures as of May 6, 1948.

Mr. REED. I am using the last printed figure, I believe; but the Senator from Georgia used a later figure, which he received today.

Mr. RUSSELL. Yes, as of May 6.

Mr. REED. But as of February 28 of this year—the figure for that date being the last printed figure available—the loans approved amounted to $1,651,000,000. Congress had made an authorization of $1,875,00,000. The REA had approved loans of $1,651,000,000. The difference represents the lag between the amount of money authorized and the amount of money advanced or spent. After Congress makes the authorization—in this case, $1,875,000,000—the REA has to approve the loans, which thus far has been done to the extent of $1,651,000,000. There is a lag of more than $200,000,000 between the authorization and the approval of loans. Furthermore, the funds advanced—that is, where the REA furnishes the cash to go ahead and do the work—amounted to $1,152,000,000 on February 28. The program is moving as fast as it reasonably and efficiently can.

I agree with every word the Senator from Georgia has spoken in the course of the debate. I have served with him throughout my years of service in the Senate. The REA has no better friend in Congress than the Senator from Georgia. He has done all that can be done. I have been delighted to help him. I cannot claim to rank with him, but I have been a consistent supporter of REA.

Mr. RUSSELL. I want to say the Senator from Kansas has been not only a consistent supporter, but he also has had a fine understanding of the problems of the local cooperatives.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. LANGER. I want to make it plain that I myself said at the beginning of my remarks, the Senator from Georgia is one of the best friends of REA we have in the United States. I am not criticizing him in any way whatever.

Mr. RUSSELL. I thank the Senator. I did not take as personal criticism anything the Senator said.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, the Senator from Georgia stated the facts. It is possible to get materials only as they become available. During the war it was impossible to get them at all. At times REA has been from 18 months to 2 years behind on transformers. Nothing could be done. The complaints which come to me in Kansas are not complaints about the progress of REA, or about its getting started. The complaints are that they are so far behind in some cases by reason of the shortage of materials. But they will catch up in the course of time.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I am glad the Senator brought out the facts regarding the shortage of materials. In a State where the population is not too dense, it means that many poles are required in order to construct a line to an individual home. The same thing is true with respect to wire and other materials. That means a greater pinch will be felt in such a State than will be experienced in more densely populated States. That is the trouble in South Carolina.

Mr. REED. About half the farms in Kansas are energized; but, Mr. President, one-half of that half is furnished by private utilities. The REA serves only about 25 percent of the Kansas farms; private utilities, 25 percent.

Mention was made of conditions in Massachusetts and Connecticut. The REA is not operating in Massachusetts at all, nor is it operating in Connecticut. It is not operating in Rhode Island at all. The reason is that the farms are small and they are already connected up with private utilities. There is a different situation in California, where 94.7 percent of the farms are connected up with electric energy, though California has but five REA cooperatives connected. Ninety-four percent of the farms in California are connected up; yet there are but six REA projects, which serve 7,000 farms. Of the millions of farmers in California, only 7,000 are connected up with REA. The rest of them are not furnished electric energy. A similar situation prevails in Colorado, which is energized 79 percent, yet there are but 32,000 REA customers.

Mr. President, I highly esteem the Senator from North Dakota, but he had just as well confine his sympathy to his own State. The farms in the State of Kansas are being connected up. Our State was a little slow in getting started, but the work is now progressing at full speed. The private utilities in Kansas have helped. One-half the farms in the State have electric energy, obtained in part from private utilities, that, with two or three minor exceptions, have cooperated almost perfectly. Nebraska, I think, is slow; South Dakota, I think, is slow; perhaps for the reason mentioned by the Senator from North Dakota in connection with his State. But there is nothing in the whole situation to cause concern. There is no earthly reason why the amendment offered by the Senator from North Dakota should be adopted. As the Senator from Georgia pointed out, between the authorization and the approval of funds, there is $500,000,000 provided in the bill. I may ask the Senator from Georgia, is that not correct?

Mr. RUSSELL. The amount was $528,000,000 as of May 5.

Mr. REED. Five hundred and twenty-eight million dollars is available. There is a sum in excess of $1,000,000,000 to carry forward the program. It simply does not make sense to bring in a proposition to increase the authorization $200,000,000. There is no possible need of it; there is no possible justification for it.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I wish that every Senator upon the floor would get it into his head that I am not here fighting for North Dakota alone. The cold-blooded record shows that in Kansas every other farmer is without light and power. If the senior Senator from that State is satisfied with that condition, so am I. If he is satisfied to let every other farmer go without light and power, that is all right with me. That is his own State. I am following his suggestion in keeping my nose out of the State of Kansas. I shall put my nose into the other 47 States.

Today there are 2,250,000 farms without light and power. I shall not stand on the floor of the Senate and see the poor farm women in those States slaving as my mother slaved, without light and power. I shall not stand here, seeing in mind mind's eye, poor farm women in West Virginia, Texas, South Dakota, North Dakota, or Georgia operating a churn by hand, when a small motor would do the work for them. I favor refrigeration of meat to keep it from spoiling. There are, of course, certain States that are in better shape than others. For example, I notice that in Virginia, a State of which the distinguished senior Senator formerly was Governor, there are far more farms electrified proportionately than in West Virginia—73 percent in Virginia, with only 50 percent in West Virginia.

But, Mr. President, are the poor farm women to blame because in some States the State officials went all out for REA, and in other States there were officials who reneged on their job? It seems to me it is the duty of a Senator to fight for the entire Nation and not simply for one State. I took care of North Dakota, Mr. President. Last November I traveled all over the State. We held 23 meetings and had enormous crowds. The result was that the REA gave us approximately $30,000,000. When that money is expended it will mean that approximately 80 out of every 100 farms will have electricity furnished by REA. I think that is a very good record. We shall get the other 20 percent, so that every woman who wants electricity will have a chance to have it. We shall certainly make it 100 percent if we can.

But, Mr. President, I am greatly interested in the other States——

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LANGER. I yield to the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Does the Senator from North Dakota think that efforts to get REA service will be cut off? We shall continue them, shall we not?

Mr. LANGER. There are applications which are 9 years old. Some Senator made the statement that North Dakota was not on the job. I have here letters, thousands of them——

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. LANGER. One moment. One question at a time.

I have letters showing applications made in 1939, 1940, 1941, 1942, and 1943. I have one here which is typical, if the Senator will bear with me a moment.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Certainly.

Mr. LANGER. This letter is from a group of farmers in Ransom County, N. Dak., requesting me to apply for action on their applications made in 1945.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. I can show the Senator letters with reference to applications made in 1939, 1940, and 1941.

Mr. LANGER. The letter says their applications were made in February 1945, at which time they paid $5 and that—no action has been taken, to our knowledge.

I will show the Senator the names.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, will the distinguished Senator yield further?

Mr. LANGER. I yield.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Does the distinguished Senator feel that with the impetus which has already been given, and the reception which this great improvement has received all over the rural areas of the United States, within the next 3 or 4 or 5 years some of the States which the Senator has mentioned will be in the 80- and 90-percent columns?

Mr. LANGER. In 4 or 5 or 10 years, or 50 years——

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. I said, 3 or 4 years.

Mr. LANGER. Does not the Senator believe that a group of people who made application in 1941, 1942, and 1943 are entitled to action?

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LANGER. I yield to the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. CAPEHART. The Senator says they have not received action. That was not because the money was not available, was it?

Mr. LANGER. It was not until last year, through action of the Eightieth Congress, that, for the first time, there was sufficient money. In the Eightieth Congress there was a recommendation from the President for $300,000,000. My distinguished colleague [Mr. YOUNG] and I went before the committee and got $100,000,000 more than the President had recommended.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. LANGER. I yield.

Mr. CAPEHART. Whatever the reason may be that the persons to whom the Senator has referred did not receive the service, it was not because the funds were not available.

Mr. LANGER. That is correct.

Mr. CAPEHART. Materials were not available.

Mr. LANGER. That is correct.

Mr. CAPEHART. It was brought out a moment ago that there is $500,000,000 available at the moment, in addition to the appropriation now requested.

Mr. LANGER. May I once again make it clear? I thought I had previously made it clear——

Mr. CAPEHART. The money has been allocated, but has not been spent.

Mr. LANGER. That is correct. That is because of the fact that the cost has increased enormously. In Mr. Wickard's testimony he stated that in 1939 the average cost of stringing a power line was $744 a mile. Today the cost of a mile of line is approximately $1,600, representing an increase of 115 percent.

The people in Indiana are very fortunate. Ninety-six and a fraction percent of them have REA service. I know that, as a Senator, the Senator from Indiana is anxious to see persons in other States get light and power on their farms. The farmers of Indiana got their light and power at a time when it was possible to construct a line for $744 a mile.

Mr. CAPEHART. I am in favor of REA, and always have been in favor of it. I enjoy it on my farm. I have both REA service and privately owned electrical service. But the big question in my mind is, How can REA spend more than a billion dollars in the next 12 months?

Mr. LANGER. Mr. Wickard answered that in his testimony. I asked him at the time of the hearing, and he said:

> We could use that, and more, too, if we had it.

That was his response to my question.

Mr. CAPEHART. I presume he could use enough money in 1 year to put power on every farm, which we hope eventually to do, but I am just wondering——

Mr. LANGER. Mr. Wickard said he was satisfied with $300,000,000. We increased that amount $100,000,000 more. I have not the least doubt that Mr. Wickard is satisfied with what he requests now. He has certainly told me nothing to the contrary. One year ago the amount was increased 25 percent. Practically all the money was allocated.

Last December there were sufficient applications to take more than the $400,000,000 allotted last year.

Mr. President, I now come to another point which I think is very important. That is the matter of power. It is necessary to build generating plants. In one instance it cost aprpoximately $6,000,000, and in another case it was $4,000,000.

The money is not being thrown away. If the Secretary of Agriculture should certify that there are no applications, and no one wants the service, there will be no harm done. But why not make the money available?

Again, Mr. President, I want to say that I know the fine record of the Senator from Georgia. I did not intend in the slightest degree to criticize him. I do not know of a better friend of REA than is the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. RUSSELL. I can assure the Senator from North Dakota that it is simply a matter of a difference of opinion between the Senator from Georgia and the Senator from North Dakota as to how much money should be available in 1 year for a purpose which we both agree is most worthy and meritorious. The Senator from North Dakota believes that REA needs more money. I think it has more than it can spend. In my judgment, when the question comes up next year there will probably be approximately $145,000,000 which will not have been spent by the REA.

Mr. LANGER. In 1945, 1946, and 1947, after the war, we could not get materials. Now, for the first time, materials have become available. Now, for the first time, we need a large group of engineers. I have here the list of the force they have. The REA staff currently numbers about 925 persons, of whom 680 are employed in Washington and 245 outside. REA has field offices.

What happened in the Eightieth Congress. The junior Senator from Kansas inquired about personnel. It is a fact absolutely definitely established before our Civil Service Committee that there is not enough personnel. Last year, for example, with the shortage of engineers, in North and South Dakota and Minnesota there was one engineer. To me it seems utter nonsense to say they have enough personnel when, as a matter of fact, there must be a blueprint of every single line of REA that is built because that is the only basis on which they can borrow money. The engineers have to be available to lay out every single post. They can use local help, and have in some instances, but in the last analysis the engineer who is selected by the local REA and finally approved in Washington is a man who has to sign up before a loan is made.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LANGER. I yield to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. RUSSELL. The REA administrative funds are not used for paying engineers.

Mr. LANGER. I beg the Senator's pardon; the testimony of Mr. Wickard is here to that effect.

Mr. RUSSELL. I do not care what he testified; the Senator from Georgia knows that the rural-electrification funds do not go to pay the engineer for any local cooperative.

Mr. LANGER. That is correct.

Mr. RUSSELL. He is paid by the local cooperative.

Mr. LANGER. That is correct.

Mr. RUSSELL. There are no Federal funds appropriated for that purpose. They may borrow money and they are supposed to pay the engineer out of what they collect for the electricity, and I would be bitterly opposed to the Federal Government assuming the engineering costs of the local cooperatives. I am not in favor of giving the cooperatives engineering service.

Mr. LANGER. Is it not true that the local cooperative hires the engineer and pays him?

Mr. RUSSELL. Yes.

Mr. LANGER. But he has to be confirmed in Washington?

Mr. RUSSELL. That is correct, but it does not take any great amount of administrative money to check to see if he should be approved.

Mr. LANGER. The engineers in Washington are paid out of the administrative funds.

Mr. RUSSELL. The REA man who approves the blueprints is paid here, but the engineer actually working for the cooperative is not paid out of the administrative funds, he is paid out of the cooperative funds.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. Wickard says:

> The Engineering Division is responsible for all REA activities pertaining to engineering advice and assistance to borrowers in the design, construction, and technical operation of rural electric systems.

Mr. RUSSELL. That is true, but this matter has been pretty well standardized. I think there are rural electric cooperatives in every State of the Union except two, and everything is pretty well standardized. I am not saying anything disparaging about the engineers of the REA. They have done a superlative job, but those in the field with the cooperatives have no connection whatever with the administrative funds of the agency in Washington.

Mr. LANGER. Last year they did not have a sufficient number of engineers in Washington, according to the testimony of Mr. Wickard.

Let me say to the Senator from Georgia that last year the President recommended $300,000,000 for REA. The amount was increased by $100,000,000. But what did the Eightieth Congress do? It took away from administrative expenses $600,000. The result was that Mr. Wickard found himself with not enough money to pay his engineers and his other help. As I now remember, 172 were released, or quit, or were not paid enough money and did not remain. As a consequence, all over the Great Plains area, which includes Kansas, Nebraska, Wyoming, North and South Dakota, and Montana, the REA work was at a standstill. One reason why there is $528,000,000 available in approved loans today is because of the action of the Eightieth Congress which cut $600,000 from the administrative expense appropriation, so that no engineers were available. Contracts were let, but it was not possible to get the work done.

Mr. RUSSELL. The Senator should certainly not point the finger of responsibility at me. I led the fight in the committee, and the Senate restored the budget estimates so far as the administrative funds for REA were concerned, and it was done on the motion of the Senator from Georgia. But when we got into conference, we ran into almost insuperable difficulties and were compelled to yield on some of the funds. The REA was overstretched somewhat, because I do not think it had quite so much surplus as some other agencies had. So the President sent supplemental estimates recommending additional appropriations for administrative expenses, and the Senator from Georgia battled most valiantly, in his own opinion, for such appropriations, and managed to secure a great deal of the supplemental appropriations. So the Senator from Georgia was not responsible for the reduction in the administrative expenses.

Mr. LANGER. Let me say again that I praise the Senator for what he did. I have said now three times that he is one of the best friends the REA has.

Mr. RUSSELL. I know that, but I thought the Senator had forgotten what he said before. I assure the Senator that I did all in my power, as the ranking minority member of the Subcommittee on Agricultural Appropriations, to see that the REA's administrative funds were protected.

Mr. LANGER. I confirm that. The distinguished junior Senator from Kansas asked about having enough money for administrative expenses. When the Eightieth Congress got through, we were about $600,000 short. The result was that the projects were not completed and the works in the Great Plains area were at a standstill.

The Senator from Kansas says that we have the money now. But that money should have been spent. Instead of engineers being taken away, they should have been out in that area, and we would have had the money spent, whereas now we will have to wait 3 or 4 or 5 or 6 months, perhaps, before the money can be spent.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator from North Dakota yield?

Mr. LANGER. I yield to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. PEPPER. Do I understand correctly that the Senator offers two amendments, one to add a million dollars, or a little over a million, to the figure "$6,063,000" in line 8, page 58, and perhaps to make an addition to the figure "$150,000,000" in line 14, page 58? What is the amount of the addition?

Mr. LANGER. Two hundred million dollars more.

Mr. PEPPER. If I understand correctly, the larger part of the Senator's amendment, that is, the $200,000,000 item he would add, in the first place, is not a grant of funds, it is a loan. In the second place, these funds are loaned upon the same basis on which other loans are made. Is that correct?

Mr. LANGER. That is correct.

Mr. PEPPER. If the Senator will yield further, am I to understand that these loans not only will be made upon the same terms and conditions upon which other loans are made, but also shall be made only "to the extent that the Secretary of Agriculture shall certify, from time to time, to the Secretary of the Treasury that such additional amounts are required during the fiscal year 1950, under the then existing conditions, for the expeditious and orderly development of the program"?

Mr. LANGER. The Senator from Florida is exactly correct.

Mr. PEPPER. Does not the Senator think, then, that this is just a loan that is in the nature of a capital investment for a public improvement of a sound character and a useful purpose, and that the limitations that are imposed thoroughly protect the public? That is to say, no loan is made unless the Secretary of Agriculture certifies to the Treasury that the funds are needed, or, to use the language of the amendment, required for the orderly and expeditious development of the program in the next fiscal year. If all these safeguards are thrown around this advancement of Federal funds as a loan, can the Senator see anything but benefit to the public interest in such additional funds being made available?

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I may say to my distinguished friend that nothing but benefit could accrue to the public. It is not fair, in my judgment, for anyone to say that the farmer has as much money now or even more than he had a year or 2 or 3 years ago. Does not the Senator realize that the REA is now loaning money to farmers to wire their houses? We have more than 6,000,000 farmers in submarginal areas. The testimony given a few days ago was that 2,000,000 of them make in the neighborhood of four or five hundred to six hundred dollars a year. They have no money with which to wire their houses.

I read from a letter I received from Mr. Wickard a short time ago:

> This is in response to your letter dated February 14, 1949, regarding an inquiry which you have received from Mr. Leo Otte, Verona, N. Dak., concerning the possibilities of obtaining a loan to finance the costs of wiring his farmstead for electric service.

Why should not a farmer be able to borrow money to wire his house? Mr. Wickard continued in his letter:

> The Congress, in passing the Rural Electrification Act of 1939 and subsequent amendments to the act, charged REA with the responsibility of lending funds to rural people through its borrowers at low-interest rates, to speed the wiring of rural farmsteads and the purchase of plumbing and electrical equipment.
>
> Loans made to borrowers for this purpose bear the same rate of interest as all other REA loans, 2 percent. The Rural Electrification Administration has set 4 percent as the interest rate which its borrowers may charge members on all installation loans.
> Installation loans approved by the borrower to its members are subject to the following terms:

So, in addition to all the other things REA has done in the past, we find that they are now lending farmers who are poor and destitute, who live on submarginal lands, many of whom are broke, some of whom we know have not had a crop in 5 years—they are lending them money so they can get electricity and power in their homes and live like decent human beings.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LANGER. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. I want to join with what the Senator from North Dakota has said, that there has been no champion of this cause who has been more diligent in its behalf and furtherance than the able junior Senator from Georgia, and we all realize that any limitations imposed upon the Senator from Georgia come not from his own inner impulses but probably from external circumstances over which he has at present no effective control.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LANGER. I yield.

Mr. RUSSELL. I thank the Senator from Florida for his kindly comment, but I feel under no restraints here other than those dictated by sound judgment and the information that is before me. When the Administrator of this fund himself comes forward and says he can use but $475,000,000, when applications are running at a rate of only $42,000,000 a month, and when the Rural Cooperative Association, which certainly has not been backward in seeking to benefit the local cooperatives and the local farmers, asks for only $450,000,000 to be allocated for loans, and I find $500,000,000 in the bill, I think it would be an utterly vain and futile gesture to increase that amount. That is the reason I am opposing the Senator's amendment. I am not opposing it because I feel under any restraint by reason of any action of the committee. I have never hesitated to be frank with any committee of which I have been a member. I simply do not think the REA can handle any more than $500,000,000.

I appreciate the Senator's argument as to limitations placed on the Secretary of Agriculture. I think that if we are going to increase the amount at all we might as well take off the limit. In such event I do not see any reason why we should limit it to $200,000,000 more, as proposed by the Senator from North Dakota. Then we ought to say that as much money as the Secretary of Agriculture believes can be expended on rural electrification should immediately be authorized to him by the RFC.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, if the Senator thinks that should be done, I will offer an amendment to that effect.

Mr. RUSSELL. No; I do not think any such thing should be done. I do not think the REA can spend the money proposed to be given to it. I like to be somewhat orderly in my approach to the consideration of such bills.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LANGER. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. Will the Senator from Georgia show me the testimony of Mr. Wickard on the subject?

Mr. RUSSELL. I shall be glad to read it to the Senator and then hand it to him.

> When we drew up the budgest estimates—

I might say that certainly no one could charge this administration, or the administration which preceded it, with not being interested in the rural-electrification movement, and with not having dealt very generously with it.

Mr. Wickard testified before the House committee. We did not have him before the Senate committee because there was no request made for an increase, and we did not propose to reduce the amount allowed by the House. So we did not invite Mr. Wickard to appear before the Senate committee.

> When we drew up the budget estimates, we estimated that we would only be able to loan—

He used the word "only"—

> we would only be able to loan about $275,000,000 during this fiscal year. Now we have raised that estimate by $50,000,000 to $425,000,000.

Then we have here the resolution adopted by the association of all the REA cooperatives who met together. Certainly they have vigorously championed the cause of rural electrification. That association is composed of men who spend their time working for rural electrification. They are directors of the small farmers' cooperatives that have done such a wonderful work. Three thousand six hundred of them were gathered in New York, and adopted the following resolution.

> Be it resolved, That this association urge the Congress to authorize not less than $450,000,000 for the rural electrification program for the fiscal year 1950.

The bill contains $50,000,000 more than the association of cooperatives requested.

Mr. LANGER. I want to respond to that myself. The Senator will agree with me that a year ago the same bunch of cooperatives, when they met, set $300,000,000 as the figure.

Mr. RUSSELL. No; the Senator is in error about that. They came here requesting $400,000,000 and we allowed them $400,000,000 just what they requested.

Mr. LANGER. But that was after the distinguished junior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. YOUNG] appeared before the Senator's committee and urged that the amount be raised to $400,000,000. But the association at their convention adopted no resolution requesting $400,000,000.

Mr. RUSSELL. The Senator from North Dakota is not correct in that statement. The House placed the sum of $400,000,000 in the bill last year, and the Senate committee did not reduce that amount. The Senator's colleague [Mr. YOUNG] has been a very energetic and earnest advocate of rural electrification. He opposed very vigorously the effort which was made by a certain Senator, whom I shall not name, to cut the amount. A determined effort was made in the subcommittee of the Senate committee to cut the $400,000,000. The motion to that effect did not prevail. The Senator's colleague was very active in opposing that motion. This year the bill provides $50,000,000 more than the association by its resolution asked for.

Mr. LANGER. I should like to call attention to what I said last year, on February 17, 1948, as it appears in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 94, part 1, page 1375, when we discussed the testimony given by Mr. Wickard. I said at that time:

> Mr. President, all I can possibly do so far as REA is concerned is in my feeble, humble way, to keep on bringing to the attention of my colleagues on this side of the aisle the fact that Mr. Wickard says that at least $1,000,000,000 is needed for the purpose. He did not testify to that directly, because he said the President's budget called for $300,000,000, but he frankly admitted that $300,000,000 would not begin to take care of the amount which has been applied for. If Senators will read the exhibit showing the applications by States they will see that much more money has been asked for than is available.

Mr. RUSSELL. When was that testimony delivered?

Mr. LANGER. That testimony was given about in January.

Mr. RUSSELL. January of this year?

Mr. LANGER. No; January a year ago.

Mr. RUSSELL. Yes; of course it was true then. They had not had any construction at that time, and the Rural Electrification Administration had hundreds of millions of dollars which they were ready to apportion under loans and have approved. There is not a State of the Union at this very moment in which Rural Electrification projects are not going forward and being built under those funds, except, I believe, Connecticut and one or two others which have already been electrified.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I yield the floor so the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] may speak.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I will speak but a few minutes. I read the testimony of Mr. Wickard following that which was read by the Senator from Georgia. I assume Mr. Wickard, in his testimony, is referring to the present fiscal year.

> And I suspect that with our present force we will be out of funds in several States before the end of the year because we are now several millions ahead of what we thought we would be when we presented these estimates to the Budget Bureau.

Mr. RUSSELL. That is correct.

Mr. PEPPER. That indicates——

Mr. RUSSELL. The Senator knows what that means, of course.

Mr. PEPPER. I am not sure that I do.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. Wickard means that under the formula in the Rural Electrification Act there is a limit on the funds which can go to any one State. There is a formula, and some of the States had demands slightly in excess of the funds available to them under the formula. He means that under the formula he will have completed the allocation of all the funds to which the States are entitled.

Mr. PEPPER. What I wish to call attention to is the fact that Mr. Wickard says:

> And I suspect that with our present force we will be out of funds in several States before the end of the year.

That might not apply to all States, but at least it applies to several States. I do not know what the figures are, and I have not had an opportunity to get them.

I should like to know whether or not—and this is the pertinent question—the sums available under this item are equal to the total of the pending applications which are sound in character. Does the Senator from North Dakota have any facts on that subject?

Mr. LANGER. As I remember, the applications now being received total $41,000,000 a month.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. RUSSELL. I read the figures a while ago. Figures have been submitted by the Rural Electrification Administration showing that applications are now being received in the amount of approximately $42,000,000 a month. If that ratio is maintained throughout the year, and if the REA should approve every application submitted—which is most unlikely—we would be $4,000,000 short with the funds contained in this bill.

Mr. PEPPER. I am very glad to get that information. I should like to make this observation. First the able Senator from Georgia tells us that if the present rate of applications continues, the funds in the bill will be about $4,000,000 short.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. RUSSELL. The Senator left out a very important limitation. I said if every application submitted is approved, 100 percent, which I contend is most unlikely.

Mr. PEPPER. Perhaps so. At any rate, approximately the amount of money available is being applied for. We can put it that way, and agree upon that statement.

Mr. RUSSELL. That is correct.

Mr. PEPPER. I have observed a similar situation with respect to veterans applying for admission to veterans hospitals. That is a question which we shall have to consider a little later, when we consider the continuation of the program of construction of veterans' hospital facilities. Someone in the Bureau of the Budget discovered that the number of applications outstanding represented only about a 12-day intake in the veterans' hospital system, and he naturally concluded that if in 12 days the entire waiting list could be taken care of, there was no need for new hospitals. But when we brought witnesses here from every one of the States affected—I think there were 19—without exception the representatives of veterans, responsible citizens in the communities, pointed out that the experience of the veterans was that the hospitals were so far behind in taking veterans in that many veterans simply did not apply for admission to the hospitals, because it took so long to get in.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. We found that thousands of boys were being cared for in county hospitals, city hospitals, and local hospitals.

Mr. PEPPER. That situation was true all over the country. Some died in ambulances on the way to the hospitals. Some died in the vestibules of hospitals, and some in the waiting rooms. Some died who never could get any kind of medical attention because they could not get into the hospital until they became life-and-death cases. The average veteran thought to himself, "If I file an application, I do not know how long it will be before I get in." Human nature being what it is, he did not apply when he should have applied, and was not admitted when he should have been admitted to save his life. Incidentally, in many cases the Government was saved the expense of paying disability allowances for the remainder of the veterans' lives, because their condition became aggravated when it could have been helped.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Does the Senator from Florida remember the testimony that in the State of South Carolina we had a daily average of approximately 500 ex-soldiers who were cared for in hospitals other than veterans' hospitals?

Mr. PEPPER. I remember that testimony very well.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Does the Senator also recall that in the State Hospital for the Insane we had a daily average of about 100 ex-soldiers?

Mr. PEPPER. Yes; I remember that very well; and I remember what an imperative showing of need I thought was made, not only in South Carolina, but in the other States affected.

From that principle, and that known experience, I deduce a similar situation in respect to REA applications. The people learn, in a general way, about what funds are available. When the impression exists, or the information is in their possession that funds are not going to be available for them, I do not believe they apply in as large numbers as they would if they knew the funds were available and that the only thing they had to do was to show that the project was sound, and have the Secretary of Agriculture certify that fact to the Secretary of the Treasury.

In this case all the Senator from North Dakota is asking is that a cooperative make a sound case, a case which satisfies the same standards, conditions, and requirements that any other case must meet, and show that the Secretary of Agriculture should certify to the Secretary of the Treasury that the money is required. The language of this amendment is "required"; not "needed" or "desirable," but required, not in the remote future, but in the next fiscal year, the fiscal year 1950, for what purpose? For the expeditious and orderly development of the program.

If we open the door that wide to cooperatives throughout the country, it will not be a shortage of funds that will necessitate the declination of applications. For example, in my State a third of the farms still lack electricity. If we open the door, I believe that it will be simply a matter of passing upon the applications.

Mr. President, a great work has been done in the field of rural electrification. All honor and credit to every one who has had a part in it. I do not know of any greater contribution toward lightening the burdens of rural life and leading people from the congestion of cities back to the wholesomeness of the farms than what has been contributed by rural electrification to make living on the farm better and to lighten the burdens upon the housewife and make the home a more habitable place for the family. But, Mr. President, we still have a long way to go in this field.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. This is not a gift, is it?

Mr. PEPPER. No, indeed. As was pointed out a while ago, this is a loan. The funds proposed to be made available by the amendment of the Senator from North Dakota, if it prevails, are to be loaned upon the same terms and conditions as other funds provided under the law.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Is it not true that in the past the loans have been paid back on time?

Mr. PEPPER. I think everyone agrees that the record of repayment is phenomenally good. I believe the Senator from Georgia would testify that the record of repayment has been good.

Mr. RUSSELL. The record has been fine. Legislation enacted 3 or 4 years ago extended the time of repayment; but I believe that only about one out of a thousand of the cooperatives was in default, and the amount in default was very small. In many cases payments have been anticipated.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I should like to read one paragraph from a letter from Claude R. Wickard:

> While carrying forward the program of building new lines and improving facilities, REA borrowers are continuing their excellent financial record. The table at the bottom of page 1 of the bulletin shows that borrowers have paid the Government $176,030,661 in principal and interest. Of this $18,504,792 was paid in advance of due date and less than 1 percent is delinquent more than 30 days.

Mr. PEPPER. I thank the Senator. That is a fine testimonial to the character and responsibility of those who have applied for these loans.

Let me add another testimonial. The other day I was talking with one of the higher officials of the Federal Housing Administration. I may be a little in error in the figures I give, but the substance of what I shall say is true. In the course of the general conversation I said to this gentleman, "About how many loans did the Government make on homes under the HOLC during the days of the depression?" He said, "Oh, I think something over 2,000,000."

I said, "In other words, you saved something over two million homes from foreclosure and loss during those dark days, did you?"

He said, "Yes, something like that."

I said, "How much did you lose?"

He said, "Nothing."

I said, "Under FHA you have been building new homes, haven't you, for a great many Americans?"

He said, "Yes."

I said, "How many have you built?"

He said, "Oh, I judge 2,250,000, or something like that."

I said, "How much did you lose on that operation?"

He said, "We have $100,000,000 in the Treasury."

Mr. President, is not that a fine tribute to the wisdom of the program and the responsibility of the people who, in some instances, saved old homes which in many cases had been procured by the sweat and sacrifice of those families, and in other instances built wholesome, sanitary, safer new homes? Yet neither program cost the Government anything, and in one case there was $100,000,000 in the Treasury, as against future contingencies.

A few years ago many persons thought such a program could not be engaged in—the building of REA cooperatives, lending them money, and depending upon them to pay the money back. Yet the tribute which has just been read is the finest sort of testimony to their responsibility and character.

Mr. President, I spoke about the job ahead. Here is a paragraph from a statement which Mr. Wickard placed in the record when he was testifying on this matter before the House committee; I read from page 687:

> CURRENT ACTIVITIES
> REA borrowers, through REA financing and technical assistance, are working to bring about the electrification of an estimated 4,073,000 farm and other rural dwellings that are still without central station service, and to keep pace with the growing demands for power created by the sharp increases in farm uses of electricity. Many of the unserved farms are in areas most difficult to electrify, which materially increases the complexity of the task of reaching and serving them. The size and scope of the current REA program is indicated by the following data.

Then he told about the volume of applications on file. His statement is in support of what I said a moment ago about the increase in the number of applications when the funds are increased:

> 1. Volume of loan applications at an all-time high: Borrowers are applying to REA for loan funds at the rate of $41,000,000 a month. As of November 19, 1948, REA had applications on hand or in the field totaling about $422,000,000, the highest on record, notwithstanding the fact that loans made during fiscal year 1948 totaled $313,000,000; also the largest on record.

I wonder whether the Senator from Georgia would be kind enough to give me the figures for the last fiscal year, as compared with the figures for the previous fiscal year, in respect to the funds available. He said $313,000,000 of loans were made last year. My recollection is that the appropriation last year was larger than the previous one.

Mr. RUSSELL. The amount available in 1948 was the same as in 1949, being $400,000,000 a year, for each year.

Mr. PEPPER. What was the amount for the fiscal year 1947?

Mr. RUSSELL. Two hundred and fifty million dollars.

Mr. PEPPER. That is the point I wish to make: For 1947, the funds available amounted to $250,000,000.

Mr. RUSSELL. That was all we made available then, because during the war we had a tremendous, even stupendous, carry-over.

Mr. PEPPER. The point I was trying to make—and I think it is a sound one—is that as the funds available have increased, the number of applications and, of course, the number of loans have increased.

Mr. RUSSELL. Oh, no; the applications have greatly decreased.

During the war period, when equipment could not be obtained for these purposes, a large backlog of applications was built up. Since then, the applications have been fairly regular in number.

But during the war, various materials needed for this work—for instance, copper, and many other materials—could not be obtained, because they were needed for use in connection with the war and war industries.

Mr. PEPPER. But the Senator from Georgia has told us that the loan funds available in 1947 amounted to $250,000,000, and in 1948 and 1949——

Mr. RUSSELL. That was the amount authorized in those years. I did not mean that was the amount available. Much more than that was available, because of the accumulation during the war period. However, we authorized $250,000,000 of loans in 1947.

Mr. PEPPER. Very well; $250,000,000 in 1947, $400,000,000 in 1948, and $400,000,000 in 1949.

What is the amount carried in this bill?

Mr. RUSSELL. $500,000,000, in this bill.

Mr. PEPPER. Very well; there was an increase of $150,000,000 after 1947, so that $400,000,000 was made available in 1948 and in 1949, and now there is to be an increase of $100,000,000 over the amounts available in 1948 and 1949. The Senator from North Dakota proposes that we accelerate the increase, and make funds available as need may arise. That is the important point.

What about my State, where one-third of the farms are yet to be electrified?

Mr. RUSSELL. Does the Senator from Florida know the amount available for cooperatives in Florida?

Mr. PEPPER. I do not have the figures before me. Does the Senator from Georgia have that information?

Mr. RUSSELL. I have it somewhere here.

Mr. PEPPER. But I know that many people in Florida are saying that they want more money available for REA expansion and extension, and I know that various cooperatives are appealing to my office to help them to obtain more funds for the expansion of their programs.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HILL in the chair). Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. LANGER. The Senator from Florida also knows that in many cases the funds have already been allotted to the cooperatives, but they simply have not had time to expend them.

Mr. RUSSELL. Oh, yes. As I understand, $64,000,000 has been approved for distribution; and four million——

Mr. LANGER. I say it is not available to Mr. Wickard, for it has already been assigned.

Mr. RUSSELL. Yes; but I wished to say that the situation is not quite so bad as it would appear to be from the statement that 32 percent of the farms in Florida do not have electricity at this time. The people on those farms should not be entirely bereft of hope, because in many cases funds are available to them. Although I cannot know the circumstances in every case, yet I am not afraid to say as a matter of fact that houses are being electrified on Florida farms today.

Mr. PEPPER. Of course, there is no doubt as to that, and we are profoundly grateful for it. But I am speaking of the one-third of Florida farm homes that are not electrified, although the people on them want to have them electrified. I am asking about the situation in regard to them. Mr. President, when under this program we loan the money, rather than give it; when each loan has to be sound; and when the Secretary of Agriculture has to certify that the loan is required in order to bring about an expeditious and orderly development of the program in the next fiscal year, how can the Government be hurt? How can anything but the public interest be served by making the funds available within the range of reason—funds that are needed and are shown to be applied for by sound and responsible applicants.

Since such expenditures constitute capital outlays, since they will be for a useful public purpose, since the loans will be sound by hypothesis, and since the money loaned will be paid back, why not proceed with the program, at least within the bounds of reason, as fast as can be done in a sound and responsive manner?

Mr. President, signs of unemployment are beginning to appear. Even agricultural areas have their problems in that respect. If we are going to arrest that shrinkage of employment—which, if continued, will result in diminishing tax returns, and will tend to injure the whole public interest—how better can we serve the public interest than by providing for a sound outlay of capital public funds so as to permit cooperatives which make a satisfactory showing to obtain loans which will make possible the initiation or expansion of REA projects and programs?

A little while ago we for the first time liberalized the housing program so as to give aid to rural homes to which such aid had never before been available. The Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL], who always is active in aiding any matters affecting agriculture, as well as many other matters, had a great deal to do with that, and other Senators also did a magnificent job in that connection. The result was to extend aid for the first time to those at the bottom of the economic ladder, those in the submarginal class. By that program we made $1,000 available to such persons, respectively, to permit them to put screens on doors and windows and to install running water in their homes, so as to make life a little easier for them. Why could not we also make it possible for those persons to electrify their homes?

Of course, those who are in the next higher class, those who might be classified as farming on marginal land or on land a little better than marginal land, also would like to be able to have electricity on their farms. In such a family, the wife who bends under the burden of family toil would like some succor, some means of lightening the burden and strain which are imposed upon her.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, the present REA law provides that the Secretary may loan money to wire a home.

Mr. PEPPER. Certainly.

Mr. LANGER. Yet it is proposed to limit it to take care of comparatively few people, instead of 2,250,000 people who need it and want it.

Mr. PEPPER. The Senator from Georgia asked about the situation in Florida. Loans amounting to $22,000,000 were approved as of December 31, 1948. That is fine; that is helping a great deal; but what about all those who are not able to extend electrification to their farms? They are the ones I am talking about. I am sure that if we leave it up to the judgment of Mr. Wickard and the Secretary of Agriculture and the same authorities that administer the remainder of the program, they will be just as circumspect in the use of the funds as they would be in the use of the $500,000,000 available under the item as it now appears before the Senate.

So I say to the Senator from North Dakota, just as he was the one to initiate the increase in funds to be made available for building new farm homes and repairing old, which rendered a great service to the farmers of the country, to the home life of rural America, and to the strength of the Nation, so he today is trying to bring light to the little homes where the screen doors and the screen windows he was instrumental in providing are shielding the health of the child against the ubiquitous mosquito or other infection conveyors. Just as he has tried to save the life and protect the health of that family, he is now trying to bring light to that little home, to dispel its very darkness and put in place of the flickering candle or the smoking lamp the virtues and the blessings of electrification, and even to bring within the reach of the humble farm wife the modern aids which make her burdens less onerous.

NOMINATION OF MON C. WALLGREN

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, now that the nomination of former Gov. Mon Wallgren of the State of Washington as Chairman of the National Security Resources Board has been withdrawn by the President, I desire to make a brief statement, for the purpose of the record, of my action as a member of the Armed Services Committee in voting against the confirmation of Governor Wallgren.

Hearings were held at length by the committee on this nomination. I gave the utmost consideration of which I am capable to every phase of the qualifications of Governor Wallgren for this particular position. When I realized I had the deciding vote, on the Armed Services Committee, I felt keenly the responsibility that rested upon me. I made my decision entirely without political or personal bias and for what I regarded to be the best interests of our country. This position is of the most vital consequence in our national defense program. It is hardly second to the Secretary of Defense, as the Chairman of the National Security Resources Board has complete responsibility for the mobilization of the civilian forces of this country as a part of our national defense program. It is of such consequence that when the position was established, the Congress provided that the person to serve as chairman must be confirmed by the Senate and be paid $14,000 annually, only $1,000 less than a Cabinet officer.

As a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, I participated in the passage of the Security Act of 1947, which created the National Security Resources Board, and was therefore fully informed of the importance of the position as affecting our national defense.

Confirmation by the Senate of appointments made by the President is one of the checks and balances of our system of representative democracy. It should not be performed as a perfunctory act, but each individual appointment should be scrutinized with the utmost care, and no person should be confirmed for a position for which he is unqualified. This is particularly true in this day when the responsibilities of our Federal Government have assumed such gigantic proportions.

After the most careful consideration of all the factors involved, I reached the definite conclusion, as did a majority of the committee, that former Governor Wallgren was not competent to perform in a satisfactory manner the duties of Chairman of the National Security Resources Board. Therefore, as a member of the Armed Services Committee, I voted to lay this nomination on the table, and it was tabled by a vote of 7 to 6. This procedure has been criticized in some quarters, but, under the rules of the Senate, any committee has the right to table any matter before it, either a nomination or a bill, unless otherwise directed by the Senate itself. If a nomination is tabled, it can be brought before the Senate by a simple majority of those present and voting to discharge the committee—that is to say, if 49 Senators were present, constituting a quorum, 25 could vote to discharge the committee and bring the matter to the floor of the Senate. No such motion was made in the case of the nomination of Governor Wallgren, and it is, therefore, to be assumed that a majority of the Senate was not willing to discharge the Armed Services Committee.

In order to make my position fully clear, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to insert, as a part of my remarks, a statement I issued on March 15, when this matter was voted upon by the Armed Services Committee, and likewise a statement showing the responsibilities of the position of Chairman of the National Security Resources Board.

There being no objection, the statements were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR HARRY F. BYRD, DEMOCRAT, OF VIRGINIA, MEMBER OF THE SENATE ARMED SERVICES COMMITTEE, IN CONNECTION WITH THE CONFIRMATION OF THE APPOINTMENT OF GOV. MON WALLGREN AS CHAIRMAN OF THE NATIONAL SECURITY RESOURCES BOARD

Throughout my service as a Senator I have never regarded my duties with respect to confirmation of a Presidential appointment as merely perfunctory. At the same time, I believe the President should have a wide latitude in his appointees, and I have frequently voted to confirm officials whom I would not have appointed myself, if the responsibility had been mine. The confirmation authority of the Senate is one of the checks and balances of our democracy, and should be exercised by Members of the Senate temperately and courageously. No Senator should hesitate to oppose a Presidential nomination if he conscientiously believes the person appointed is unworthy, or incompetent to perform vital functions of major importance.

As a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, I have approached the appointment of former Gov. Mon Wallgren as Chairman of the National Security Resources Board without the slightest bias. In fact, my association with him in the United States Senate for 4 years was a very pleasant experience to me and, if anything, my bias would be in his favor.

We must first recognize that the National Security Resources Board is a very vital arm of our national security. If the functions of this Board are not effectively administered, it may be impossible for our armed forces to protect our national security. If another war should occur, it very likely would come by sudden attack, with the use of atomic weapons. In the future we will not have the time, as in the past, to prepare for our home defense. The industrial and civilian mobilization of our resources is the first step before our armed services can operate effectively. The National Security Resources Board, as at present constituted under the existing law, will perform all of the functions which have heretofore been vested in the War Production Board, the Petroleum Administration for War, the War Foods Administration, the War Manpower Commission, the Office of Defense Transportation, and the War Shipping Administration. It will have complete charge of plans concerning industrial and civilian mobilization, the stockpiling of strategic and critical materials, and likewise the strategic relocation of industries and other activities, which might be necessary by reason of the possibility of an atomic attack.

Never before have such tremendous responsibilities been vested by law in a single agency. The potentialities of its duties, in my judgment, make the appointment of the Chairman one of the most important that can come before the Senate for confirmation. This is particularly so because it is a one-man Board in the sense that excepting the Chairman, the members are ex officio, as they are members of the President's Cabinet and are fully occupied with their own duties, so that they could not give detailed attention to the work of the Board. The Chairman is the only active member.

Mr. Ferdinand Eberstadt, a man of great ability, who assisted in the preparation of the legislation to establish the Board, testified that: "The National Security Resources Board should be established at once. It should have the most competent chairman you could find who should be on the job all the time."

The responsibilities of this position are so vast and so vital to our security that we need a man of the caliber of Bernard Baruch. The competency, the breadth of vision, and the administrative capacity of the Chairman of this Board may be a powerful factor in the ability of this country to survive a future war. This position should be filled by the most competent and capable man available without regard for past political services or personal friendship.

It is because of these compelling reasons that, as a member of the Armed Services Committee, I have given the utmost consideration of which I am capable to the nomination of Mr. Wallgren now pending. I have reluctantly reached the conclusion that Mr. Wallgren does not possess the administrative qualifications from the standpoint of training, experience, and competency to perform the extremely important functions devolving upon him should his appointment be confirmed. I want to say that my decision has not been influenced by any unsupported charges made against him. I do not believe Mr. Wallgren is a Communist or that he has any sympathy with communism, and I do not impugn his integrity. But the testimony before the committee convinces me that he has been careless in some of his appointments as Governor of the State of Washington. I shall discuss this further, from the committee record, when the occasion arises.

I am unfavorably impressed by the fact that, even though Mr. Wallgren had not been confirmed by the Senate, Jack Gorrie, who served as Assistant Governor of the State of Washington under Governor Wallgren, John Ballew, who served as director of the department of finance, budget, and business, and John Davis, who served for Governor Wallgren as director of the State department of unemployment security, were employed by the National Security Resources Board some weeks ago, each receiving $50 a day and expenses, in anticipation of Mr. Wallgren's confirmation. These gentlemen, I assume, are to receive high positions in the National Security Resources Board organization.

This was significant to me, in that Governor Wallgren was defeated for reelection as Governor of Washington last November, notwithstanding the fact that President Truman swept the State in what may be termed a Democratic landslide. There is nothing dishonorable in defeat for public office, but, in this instance, it must be assumed that Mr. Wallgren's defeat in a Democratic year was occasioned by the widespread feeling throughout the State of Washington that his administration had been unsatisfactory to those who best knew him and those in his administration.

Yet immediately after they were given a vote of no confidence in their own State, it is proposed to move Governor Wallgren and three of his principal assistants to Washington at the head of a critical Government agency, with his three assistants precipitately installed there even before the confirmation of Governor Wallgren.

I have reached the definite conclusion that it is my duty as a Senator to vote against the confirmation of Governor Wallgren because of my sincere belief that he is not qualified to perform such vast responsibilities as will be placed upon him should he be confirmed as Chairman of the National Security Resources Board, where, I repeat, he would be the only active member and the most powerful influence in its operations and important decisions.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE POSITION OF CHAIRMAN OF THE NATIONAL SECURITY RESOURCES BOARD

By statute: The National Security Act of 1947 provides:

"It shall be the function of the Board to advise the President concerning the coordination of military, industrial, and civilian mobilization, including—

"(1) policies concerning industrial and civilian mobilization in order to assure the most effective mobilization and maximum utilization of the Nation's manpower in the event of war;

"(2) programs for the effective use in time of war of the Nation's natural and industrial resources for military and civilian needs, for the maintenance and stabilization of the civilian economy in time of war, and for the adjustment of such economy to war needs, for the maintenance and stabilization of the civilian economy in time of war, and for the adjustment of such economy to war needs and conditions;

"(3) policies for unifying, in time of war, the activities of Federal agencies and departments engaged in or concerned with production, procurement, distribution, or transportation of military or civilian supplies, materials, and products;

"(4) the relationship between potential supplies of, and potential requirements for, manpower, resources, and productive facilities in time of war;

"(5) policies for establishing adequate reserve of strategic and critical material, and for the conservation of these reserves."

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. BYRD. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. The able Senator from Virginia brought up the question of the right of the Senate to confirm an appointment made by the President. I certainly agree that confirmation is absolutely essential upon an important position such as the one that was before the Committee on Armed Services. But I am wondering whether the able Senator from Virginia would not favor a rule coming from the Committee on Rules and Administration which would permit the Senate to vote upon an appointment of this kind, even though there might be an adverse report by the committee.

Mr. BYRD. I may say to the Senator the rules already permit it. All the Senator from Illinois, as the majority leader of the Senate, had to do in this case was to move to discharge the committee, and, had he obtained the votes of a simple majority of the Senators present, the nomination would then have come before the Senate.

Mr. LUCAS. Yes, I understand. I may say to my good friend from Virginia, that that is the rule. But the Senator from Virginia well knows that unless the chairman of a committee is almost willing to go on the floor of the Senate himself and say, "I am willing, and will vote to discharge my own committee," it is almost impossible to discharge a committee under those circumstances. I am sure the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] never would have agreed to vote to discharge his own committee. As the Senator well knows, it is a very delicate and dangerous thing to discharge a committee from the consideration of any kind of bill or of an appointment by the President. I doubt that there is a member of the Armed Services Committee who would have voted to discharge the committee from the consideration of the appointment, after the position of the committee was disclosed by a vote of 7 to 6.

Mr. BYRD. I may say to the Senator that the distinguished chairman of the committee voted for the confirmation of Governor Wallgren.

Mr. LUCAS. I understand that.

Mr. BYRD. On the floor of the Senate, had he cared to do so, he would have had a perfect right to vote to discharge the committee and bring the nomination before the Senate.

Mr. LUCAS. That is correct; and the Senator from Maryland would have had a right, of course, to move to discharge his own committee.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator from Maryland would not have had to make the motion necessarily.

Mr. LUCAS. No; any Senator could have made the motion.

Mr. BYRD. Any Senator could make it.

Mr. LUCAS. That is correct.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator well knows that the privilege of a committee to lay a matter on the table applies not only to a nomination but to any bill. Any matter that comes before the committee can be laid on the table by a majority of the membership of the committee.

Mr. LUCAS. I thoroughly understand that. Let me say to my distinguished and able colleague from Virginia that the only point I raise—and I think it is a very important one—is that there was an appointment made by the President of the United States. We all know—it has been argued times without number on the floor of the Senate—that once an appointment is made by the President of the United States, it carries within itself great weight in assuring that the individual who is so appointed possesses the necessary qualifications to fill the position for which he is nominated. We have here a situation in which one individual Senator overrides the President of the United States, and the Senate of the United States has no opportunity whatever to pass upon the nomination, other than through the discharge of the committee. The Senator from Virginia well knows that when the able Senator from California [Mr. KNOWLAND] moved to discharge the Committee on Rules and Administration from the consideration of a resolution to amend the cloture rule, the Democrats met in caucus and discussed the subject; they discussed thoroughly the delicacy and seriousness of the question involved in the discharge of the committee. We agreed that the orderly business procedure of the Senate was involved in the motion. Every Democrat in the caucus voted not to discharge the committee, because of the importance of the principle involved in taking away from a committee something which had been assigned to it.

Mr. BYRD. But, under those peculiar circumstances, one Democrat voting against the confirmation, it would have been entirely proper for any member of the committee to have submitted a motion to discharge the committee from consideration, and it could have been argued on the basis that here was one Democrat who voted with the Republicans not to confirm the nomination. It would seem to me that if the President thought it was so vitally important to bring the matter before the Senate, the Senator should have made such a motion.

Mr. LUCAS. The Senator may be correct, but I still make the point that with respect to an appointment so important as is the one we are discussing, no committee should have a right to refuse to bring the nomination before the Senate. In other words, if the committee voted adversely on the appointment, the matter should come to the floor of the Senate. That was done in the case of the Honorable Raymond McKeough, a citizen from my State, who was appointed a few years ago to fill a position on the Maritime Commission. The committee voted 10 to 8 not to report the nomination favorably. But the committee did not table the nomination. It said, "Even though the committee does not favor the nomination of Raymond McKeough, we shall report it adversely, take it to the floor, and let the Senators themselves debate it and make the decision." That was done, and Raymond McKeough's nomination was confirmed by the Senate.

Mr. BYRD. In this instance why did not the Senator from Illinois, as majority leader, make the motion to discharge?

Mr. LUCAS. I will say to the Senator from Virginia that the majority leader did not make the motion for the simple reason that he was satisfied, from his slight investigation, that the Committee on Armed Services would not have stood with the majority leader in a motion to discharge the committee. If the Armed Services Committee would not stand with the majority leader in a motion to discharge the committee from consideration of the question, he would not have had much of a chance to get it to the floor.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator has said that the nomination was tabled by reason of the vote of one Senator.

Mr. LUCAS. That is correct.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator from Virginia assumes full responsibility for casting the deciding vote. He does not evade any responsibility whatever.

Mr. LUCAS. It could have been any one of seven Senators.

Mr. BYRD. Let me finish my statement, please. If the Senator from Virginia acted in an arbitrary manner or in a manner which showed bias or political prejudice, why should not the committee have been discharged and the question brought to the floor of the Senate? If the other Democratic members of the committee would not vote to discharge the committee, I think that is evidence that the committee thought the Senator from Virginia had not assumed a biased or partisan attitude.

Mr. LUCAS. Let me ask the able Senator this question: In all the Senator's experience, does he recall any other important appointment of this kind being tabled in the committee?

Mr. BYRD. In all the time I have been in the Senate I have never seen such a poor witness, such an incompetent witness, and one who was in such complete ignorance of his duties in the position for which he was nominated, as was the gentleman in question. Other members of the committee who voted in favor of the distinguished former Governor of Washington have told me the same thing. The testimony lasted a week, and the subject was gone into very fully.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, that does not answer my question. I am not at this particular time arguing the merits or the demerits of the former Governor of Washington, Mon Wallgren. I am inquiring with reference to a very vital, fundamental, and basic principle involving an appointment made by the President of the United States, irrespective of the qualifications of the individual. It is the first time, within my knowledge—and I cannot find a similar case in the records which I have searched—that a committee has ever tabled an important nomination to such a high position in the executive branch of the Government. In other words, the committee would not permit it to come before the Senate on an adverse report and take the chance of the Senate confirming the nomination. It was tabled, and that was the end of it.

Mr. BYRD. If the matter was so vitally important, the Senate of the United States has complete control of all legislation and of all nominations sent to the Senate, and the committee could have been discharged. The Senator from Illinois knows of many important bills which have been laid on the table—bills as important as are nominations.

Mr. LUCAS. Oh, no.

Mr. BYRD. I have not searched the records, but I am sure quite a number of nominations have been laid on the table. I know of some which have been kept by the committee for many months.

Mr. LUCAS. The Senator from Illinois does not agree with the Senator from Virginia that an inanimate bill is in the same category as an appointment of a human being to an important executive position.

Mr. BYRD. It seems to me to be very strange that the majority leader has remained silent all this time. He evidently thought he would be defeated, or he would have made the effort.

Mr. LUCAS. The able Senator from Virginia undoubtedly knew he would be defeated, or the motion to table would never have been made.

Mr. BYRD. I do not agree with the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LUCAS. Why was the motion to table made?

Mr. BYRD. I did not make the motion to table, but I shall tell the Senator why I voted for it. I regard this appointment as one of the most important sent to the United States Senate in a long time, and I regard former Governor Wallgren as being less competent for the position than any man ever nominated to a position of this kind. I thought it my duty as a Senator, in a matter vitally affecting the security of the country, affecting the lives of our boys if there should be another war, to use every parliamentary procedure I could to defeat the nomination. I proceeded strictly in accordance with the rules. I felt so keenly on the subject that I exercised that right.

Mr. LUCAS. I know the Senator felt keenly about it, and I am not objecting to that. But I submit that when an individual is nominated by the President of the United States for a position that has Cabinet standing there is a presumption that the person nominated has the necessary qualifications to fulfill the position, and it seems to me the Senate of the United States ought to have the right to vote upon it.

Mr. President, I shall soon offer a rule to prohibit a repetition of this type of parliamentary procedure. I am prepared to go before the Committee on Rules and Administration in an endeavor to make it absolutely necessary for the committee to report a nomination, regardless of whether it is good or bad, to the floor of the Senate and let it be argued out by the Members, instead of having a committee of 13 make a decision upon an appointment of this kind. I believe such a rule will be adopted by the Senate. I do not believe the Senate of the United States will permit any committee, from here on, to bottle up a Cabinet appointment, or an appointment of equal type and dignity, and not permit the Members of the Senate themselves to decide whether the President of the United States is right or wrong.

The Senator from Virginia says this man is not qualified. The President of the United States thought he was qualified, and a number of Senators believe he is qualified. I seriously doubt that there is a member of the Armed Services Committee who voted against Mon Wallgren who does not think he himself is well qualified to fill the position. I doubt that there is a Senator in the United States Senate today who does not feel he is qualified to fill the position. If any Senator now on the floor believes that he is devoid of the necessary qualifications to fill the position, I should like to have him stand and let his constituents know that he is not capable of filling the position.

Mr. BYRD. If our constituents think we are not qualified as Senators, we are not sent back. That is not the case with someone who is nominated by the President to fill a position of vital consequence, when the lives of Americans may be at stake.

Mr. LUCAS. He was a Senator and he was a Governor, and I do not believe there is presently a Member of the United States Senate, if the President should appoint him today, who would not be confirmed, regardless of who he is.

Mr. BYRD. I stand and say Governor Wallgren is not qualified.

Mr. LUCAS. Does the Senator from Virginia feel he is qualified to serve in that important post?

Mr. BYRD. I do not aspire to any office except that of Senator. My constituents appear to believe me to be qualified, because I have been elected in four elections, and I owe my allegiance to my constituents in Virginia.

I do not think a confirmation by the Senate is a perfunctory thing. I think that when the Constitution says that certain appointments shall be made by and with the advice and consent of the Senate it means something. It does not mean that we should approve blindly every nomination the President submits.

Mr. LUCAS. Why did we not have the opportunity to give advice and consent?

Mr. BYRD. Because under the rules of the Senate the Senator did not avail himself of the opportunity to move to discharge the committee. The Senator from Illinois was as much to blame as anyone for this matter not coming before the Senate, because he made no effort, he did not offer a motion, never said a word, never appeared before the committee asking that Mr. Wallgren's nomination be reported to the Senate, never mentioned the matter, so far as I know, in a public way, until now.

Mr. LUCAS. Will the Senator further yield?

Mr. BYRD. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. The distinguished Senator from Virginia was chairman of the Committee on Rules before the Reorganization Act was passed, and I was a member of the committee. He was a great chairman, he is a courageous Senator, and I have a great affection for him, but I know that anyone who had desired to have the Rules Committee discharged from the consideration of a matter at that particular time never would have gotten the vote of the Senator from Illinois. If anyone wanted to discharge the Committee on Finance, headed by the able Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], he could not get the majority leader's vote.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator never made an attempt.

Mr. LUCAS. The Senator knows how little good it would have done.

Mr. BYRD. If the Senator was leading in such a great cause, he could have made a motion to discharge the committee and bring the nomination before the Senate for discussion, but he knew he would be defeated, and that is why he did not do it.

Mr. LUCAS. No; the Senator from Virginia knew he would be defeated, and that is why the motion to table the nomination was made.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. GURNEY] made the motion to lay the nomination on the table. That is not the reason. I exercised the privilege I had as a Senator, under the parliamentary procedure of the Senate. I have no apologies to make to the Senator from Illinois, to the President, or to anyone else, for doing what I did.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATIONS, 1950

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3997) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, and for other purposes.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Brewster	Holland	Myers
Bricker	Humphrey	Neely
Bridges	Johnson, Colo.	Pepper
Butler	Johnson, Tex.	Reed
Byrd	Johnston, S. C.	Robertson
Chapman	Kefauver	Russell
Chavez	Kem	Schoeppel
Cordon	Kerr	Smith, Maine
Donnell	Knowland	Sparkman
Douglas	Langer	Stennis
Downey	Long	Taft
Ecton	Lucas	Taylor
Ferguson	McCarran	Thomas, Utah
Frear	McClellan	Thye
Fulbright	McFarland	Tobey
Graham	McMahon	Watkins
Green	Martin	Wherry
Hendrickson	Maybank	Williams
Hickenlooper	Millikin	Withers
Hill	Mundt
Hoey	Murray

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A quorum is present.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. LANGER].

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the two amendments may be voted upon separately. I ask for a separate vote on my amendment lettered "A" first. And on that amendment I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota asks unanimous consent to have a separate vote on his two amendments.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I wish to say that the Senator from North Dakota previously asked and obtained unanimous consent to have the two amendments voted on together. No objection was interposed. I thought it would be in the economy of time to have the two amendments voted on together. I have no objection to a separate vote being taken on each of the Senator's amendments, but I do not understand why the Senator desires it at this time.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I am inclined to think that if the two amendments are voted on separately I can succeed in having one adopted, even though the other is defeated.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I shall not object to the Senator's request, but I hope the Senate will not agree to either amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senate will vote separately on the two amendments offered by the Senator from North Dakota. The first amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 58, line 8, it is proposed to strike out "$6,063,000" and insert "$7,063,000."

Mr. LANGER. On this amendment I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from North Dakota.

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the next amendment offered by the Senator from North Dakota.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 58, line 14, it is proposed to strike out "$150,000,000" and to insert in lieu thereof "$350,000,000."

Mr. LANGER. On that amendment I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota has asked for the yeas and nays on his amendment lettered "C."

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from North Dakota.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I call up my amendment lettered "B," and ask to have it stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 58, between lines 20 and 21, it is proposed to insert the following:

> Extension of telephone service: To enable the Secretary of Agriculture to make such studies, surveys, and investigations as may be necessary to enable him to ascertain and develop methods of utilizing Rural Electrification Administration lines for the purpose of extending telephone facilities to farmers and persons living in rural areas who are not adequately supplied with telephone service, $50,000.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, my purpose in offering the amendment is to find out whether we can bring telephone service to farmers living in rural areas where there are no telephone lines of any kind or description; whether we can utilize the REA lines for the purpose of bringing telephones into these farm homes. I might add that at the present time an experiment along this line is being conducted in Macon, Mo. I understand there is not sufficient money available to enable those who are conducting the experiment to complete it. Therefore I hope the Senate will vote to adopt my amendment and provide $50,000 for such purposes.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, now that we have the Rural Electrification Administration in operation, there is nothing more important than some means of bringing telephone service or other means of communication to the farmers of the country. A number of bills dealing with the subject have been introduced. As I recall, the distinguished Senator who now graces the Chair as Presiding Officer, the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL], introduced a bill providing for rural telephone service; the distinguished Senator from North Dakota introduced a bill dealing with the same subject, and Representative POAGE, of Texas, has introduced a bill in the House, which has been reported to the floor of the House. Being charged with responsibility for this legislation I am enjoined by the rules to make a point of order against legislation on an appropriation bill. This is legislation, and I make the point of order that it is legislation on an appropriation bill and is out of order.

Mr. LANGER rose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota wish to be recognized?

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I concede the point of order is well taken.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The clerk will state the next committee amendment which was not disposed of yesterday.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 43, line 12, it is proposed to strike out "$8,975,000" and insert "$10,000,000."

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, does this represent the increased appropriation requested for flood control?

Mr. RUSSELL. That is correct. This amendment was passed over yesterday. I have since received a copy of the report to which reference was made yesterday, and I understand that earlier in the afternoon a copy of the report was furnished to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. WHERRY. Did I correctly understand the distinguished Senator from Georgia to say that he had received a copy of the report?

Mr. RUSSELL. Yes.

Mr. WHERRY. Perhaps that is the reason why my office is now trying to reach me. If the distinguished Senator from Georgia has received a copy of the report, I have no objection to the consideration of the committee amendment.

Mr. RUSSELL. I am advised that a copy of the report has been on the desk of the Senator from Nebraska since about 1 o'clock today.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the distinguished Senator from Georgia for notifying me that a copy of the report is on my desk. I have not been in the Chamber. I have been in attendance at an Appropriations Subcommittee hearing in connection with the independent-offices bill. I have just returned to the floor.

Mr. President, I have no objection to the present consideration of the committee amendment.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, I should like to ask the able Senator from Georgia a question in this connection. Is this the amendment which provides some money to employ an additional staff member to help get out the agricultural flood-control reports?

Mr. RUSSELL. No. The amendment which was passed over provides $10,000,000 for field work in the various watersheds in the country. The amendment providing a smaller amount for a man in the office of the Secretary was agreed to yesterday.

Mr. McCLELLAN. That item is not in the House language; is it?

Mr. RUSSELL. It is not. It was added by the Senate.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, I shall not ask that that amendment be reconsidered, but I ask the able Senator from Georgia, who is in charge of the bill, to look into that question before going to conference. In my judgment, there is some doubt about its being needed, in the first place; and in the second place, the reports have not yet been made available, unless the report which the Senator mentioned a few minutes ago is such a report.

Mr. RUSSELL. There has been widespread complaint that reports have not been made available. I have undertaken to communicate with the office of the Secretary of Agriculture with respect to the delay. Only today, after the question was raised by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. WHERRY], the report of the survey in the Missouri River Basin has been furnished to me, and I am advised that all the reports which have been concluded will be in the mail within the next day or two, and will be furnished to all Senators who are interested in the various watersheds.

Mr. McCLELLAN. If the reports have been concluded, why is an additional man needed to try to get them out?

Mr. RUSSELL. As I understand, the extra man in the office of the Secretary was not to handle the reports. He was to be an engineer, who was to undertake to coordinate the work done by field parties of the Soil Conservation Service.

Mr. McCLELLAN. I am willing to follow the judgment of the able Senator from Georgia, but the subject has been called to my attention. I am sure that the Senator from Georgia will look into it further before the bill goes to conference, or while it is in conference.

Mr. RUSSELL. The Senator knows that our hearings are largely ex parte. The House omitted this particular item. I assume that the House had what it considered to be a sound reason for doing so. Two or three witnesses appeared before our committee to request that the item be restored; and, on the basis of the case made before us, I thought it was worthy of consideration, and I supported its restoration. I assure the Senator that I will meet the House conferees with an open mind, and will be glad to hear any reasons they may have for omitting that provision.

Mr. McCLELLAN. The item may be fully justified, but I have received some complaints about it. I merely wished to call it to the attention of the Senator in charge of the bill so that he might look into the question further before going to conference.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, yesterday I asked the distinguished Senator from Georgia if he would not hold up this committee amendment until today, so that we might have another opportunity to see whether or not the Secretary would submit the report of the survey made of the Missouri Basin States, which survey was authorized by the last Congress. The Senator from Georgia agreed to do so. A moment ago I stated that I had no objection to the present consideration of the committee amendment. Of course, it has nothing to do with the report which I wanted.

I have just taken this question up with my office, and I have been informed that a report has been left there. It is marked "confidential." Inasmuch as it is confidential, I do not propose to comment on it at this time. However, I am informed by my secretary that a hurried examination reveals that it is not the report for which we asked. However, it is a report. I shall reserve my comments about it until later. I shall not object to the consideration of this amendment now, but I feel that this is one time when the head of an agency of Government has thwarted the will of Congress. I expect to make some remarks on the subject after the report has been released and is no longer confidential, to show what has been done to thwart the interests of Senators from the Missouri River Basin who might have something to say about flood-control appropriations in this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment on page 43, line 12.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the committee amendment on page 51, line 16, was agreed to. My purpose in moving to reconsider the vote is to offer an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the committee amendment heretofore agreed to.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 51, at the beginning of line 16, to strike out "$75,000,000" and insert "$87,500,000."

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the committee amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, did the Senator state the purpose which he has in mind?

Mr. LONG. Yes.

Mr. RUSSELL. I want to be agreeable, but I do not want to reconsider an item merely for the purpose of reconsidering it. I think some statement should be made as to what the Senator has in mind before we accede to the motion.

Mr. LONG. I shall be glad to state my purpose. I should like to offer an amendment, if I am able to obtain reconsideration of this amendment, to increase the amount for the school-lunch program from $87,500,000 to $100,000,000.

Yesterday the Senator from Georgia stated that in his opinion this program for an orderly increase could well stand as much as $115,000,000. I should like to see the item larger than that. I am proposing in my amendment to split the difference with the Senator from Georgia, as between what he thinks this program could use and the amount which the committee has authorized.

Mr. RUSSELL. If the Senator wishes to offer an amendment, we can have a vote on it one way or the other. If the Senate wishes to reconsider the vote by which the committee amendment was agreed to, the issue can be drawn on the amendment. If the Senate does not wish to reconsider the amendment, the Senator's amendment will stand where it is. I am opposed to the Senator's amendment, for reasons which I shall be happy to state. We might avoid the necessity of two votes by having the vote come on the motion to reconsider. Senators understand the issue involved. I think perhaps that would save us a little time.

The Senator is dealing with something that has always been dear to my heart. I have made many statements favorable to the school-lunch program. However, I do not believe that I stated that this was not an orderly increase in the program. The committee has increased the amount to $87,500,000. That is a very substantial increase, and is the largest amount ever allowed by any committee of either body for the school-lunch program.

Mr. LONG. I ask the Senator from Georgia to refer to page 6335 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for yesterday. The Senator from Georgia was asked the following question:

> Does he believe that the appropriation recommended is large enough to meet the school-lunch needs of the country?

To which the Senator from Georgia answered:

> Mr. President, since the Senator puts the question in that way, an honest answer, of course, would have to be "No." It does not meet all the needs of the school-lunch program. However, it is the largest amount that has ever been recommended by either body of the Congress for the school-lunch program, and I think it will allow for a healthy expansion and development of that program. There is no doubt that as much as $115,000,000 could be expended on the school-lunch program.

Mr. RUSSELL. Oh, yes. More than that could be expended.

I am not sure, but I thought I stated in the course of that discussion or colloquy that the evidence disclosed that many persons interested in schools thought $115,000,000 could be expended. I never charge the reporters with an error, but I thought I stated that the evidence before the committee was that all the representatives of the parent-teacher organizations and the representatives of the schools had suggested that $115,000,000 could be expended.

Perhaps the Senator from Florida may recall my remarks, because his statement elicited them.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. I ask the Senator from Louisiana, is it not to be hoped that the able Senator from Georgia, in view of the fact that the committee amendments were adopted in a rather short time yesterday afternoon, and that notice was given—although I gave it for myself, yet I am one of the Senators who joins the Senator from Louisiana in respect to the amendment he desires to present——

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, let me say that at the time I suggested that that be done.

Mr. PEPPER. Yes. I was going to suggest that it seems to me that it is to be hoped that the Senator from Georgia will permit the reconsideration of the vote by which the amendment was adopted, so that we may present this matter.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, the question of whether the Senate should reconsider the vote by which the amendment was adopted is a rather important and material one. Nevertheless, I ask unanimous consent that the vote by which the amendment was adopted yesterday be reconsidered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Georgia that the vote by which the committee amendment on page 51, in line 16, was adopted be reconsidered? The Chair hears no objection; the vote by which the amendment was adopted is reconsidered, and the amendment is before the Senate.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I offer and send to the desk an amendment to the committee amendment, and I ask to have it stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Louisiana to the committee amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. In the committee amendment on page 51, in line 16, it is proposed to strike out "$87,500,000" and insert "$100,000,000."

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, this amendment to the committee amendment is offered by me, in behalf of the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. JOHNSTON], and myself.

In speaking in support of the amendment to the committee amendment, I wish to say that in my State we very much appreciate the aid of the Federal school-lunch program. However, the pending amendment to the committee amendment probably would do my State less good than it would do almost any other State in the Nation, because in my opinion my State leads the Nation in its school-lunch program. The Federal Government is spending in my State approximately $1,500,000 of the $75,000,000 authorized for this purpose by the Eightieth Congress. That is about $1 for every $5 which we in Louisiana spend on school lunches. The amount being spent by the Federal Government on school lunches in my State is a mere drop in the bucket, as compared to the amount of money which my State is spending for that purpose. Of course, we can very well use the assistance proposed under this program.

I know that in the next year and in the years ahead we must find some way to try to dispose of our enormous agricultural surpluses. One of the strongest reasons why some Senators voted for the European recovery program was the amount of agricultural commodities which it is anticipated will be purchased in this country under that program. Certainly, Mr. President, if we can afford to spend billions of dollars in sending food to Europe, we can afford to spend a few million dollars additional to feed our own school children. If we have to economize, I would rather economize by making reductions in the program for European aid in the amount of ten times the amount carried by the amendment we are now considering, rather than by making reductions at the expense of our own school children.

I have received from the school authorities in my own State communications to the effect that since the school-lunch program has been commenced in Louisiana, great improvements in the health of our school children have been observed. That is the beneficial work the Federal Government is aiding with its meager assistance of $1,500,000 to Louisiana under the school-lunch program. If my amendment to the committee amendment is adopted, the result will be a slight increase in the amount of Federal assistance for the school-lunch program in Louisiana—increasing the aid for Louisiana to $1,800,000, which will be a mere drop in the bucket, but a good drop in a good bucket.

That being the case, I believe we should help in this way to improve the school-lunch program.

The committee amendment would do such a fragmentary job in supplying the need that it would result in very little help to the program. If I correctly interpret the School-Lunch Act and what its purpose seems to be, it was intended as a pump-priming action, with the result that eventually the States themselves would take over the program and improve it. Judging from the slow rate at which the program is being developed, it will be many years before the other States of the United States will have an adequate school-lunch program. My State can very well use the small increase in funds which it would obtain from the Federal Government under the school-lunch program.

It may be said that some Members of Congress cannot be interested in providing lunches for school children, but can be interested in a program which will help dispose of farm commodities. If that be the case, let us consider the program on the basis of what it will do to help dispose of farm commodities, rather than to help school children. In any case, I say we should increase by $12,500,000 the appropriation to provide lunches for school children.

At the rate at which we are now proceeding in connection with this program, I do not believe the Nation will ever have an adequate school-lunch program. I do not believe we shall be properly encouraging it to the extent that we should, even if my amendment to the committee amendment is adopted; but, in any event, by adopting my amendment to the committee amendment we shall at least be making a move in the right direction; in the direction of feeding hungry school children. If that step is taken, I am sure the good results which have been obtained in my State will be obtained in other States, if there is proper interest and proper Federal encouragement of the school-lunch program.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment to the committee amendment.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I am in hearty accord with the able Senator from Louisiana in offering this amendment to the committee amendment. The proposal is to increase by $12,500,000 the amount carried by the committee amendment, which in turn represents a $12,500,000 increase in the amount allowed for this purpose by the House of Representatives.

So if the amendment of the Senator from Louisiana, the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. JOHNSTON], and myself is adopted to the committee amendment, the result will be to add only an additional $25,000,000 to the amount allowed for this purpose by the House of Representatives.

Mr. President, we live in a practical world, and the Congress is a practical Congress. As this bill was passed by the House of Representatives, $75,000,000 was allowed for the program we are now discussing. The Senate committee has reported an amendment which would increase that amount to $87,500,000, which is an increase of $12,500,000 over the amount allowed by the House of Representatives. I doubt whether the conferees on the part of the Senate would be able to succeed in retaining the entire $12,500,000, in the conference with the House of Representatives. Certainly no one would contend that either $87,500,000 or $100,000,000 or even $150,000,000, as my distinguished colleague and I have sought to have provided by means of a bill we have introduced, would meet the needs of the school children. So we are not likely to approach anywhere near the full public need if we appropriate $100,000,000 for this purpose, as will be done if the amendment of the Senator from Louisiana to the committee amendment is adopted by the Senate and remains in the law as finally enacted.

Mr. President, the $75,000,000 allowed for this program by the House of Representatives is grossly inadequate. The House of Representatives is to be commended for taking the school-lunch appropriation out of the general fund of the Treasury and not out of section 32 funds, which were directly designed and intended by the Congress to be used by the Government to acquire surplus agricultural commodities which the farmers desired to dispose of. So the House of Representatives is to be commended for making this particular appropriation payable directly out of the Public Treasury, as in the case of other appropriations. Certainly that should be done. Then the section 32 funds, which were intended to be used to help the farmers dispose of surplus agricultural commodities, which otherwise would be sold in glutted markets, will be available for the purpose for which they were originally intended.

Mr. President, in the fiscal year 1948, only 21.5 percent of the schools of the United States participated in the school-lunch program. In other words, only approximately one-fifth of the schools of the United States were able to participate in the school-lunch program; the remainder were unable to participate in it, because of a lack of adequate and necessary funds. The result has been that only 21.1 percent of the 26,124,141 school children in the United States were able to participate in the school-lunch program in 1948. So what do we see? At the present time, with the $75,000,000 appropriation, which was the amount last year, only one-fifth of the schools and a fifth of the children of the country are able to participate in the school-lunch program.

Is the Senate satisfied with that, to feed one child out of five, to aid one school out of five? Is that enough? Is it extravagant, prodigal, and wasteful to attempt more than that, even a little more? I am sure we do not think it is. In Florida, fortunately, we were able to get the figures a little higher by a larger State contribution.

An estimated 972,000,000 meals were served in 1948, as compared with 911,000,000 in 1949. About 55 percent were nutritious meals, which are complete, furnishing the equivalent of about one-third of a day's nutritive requirements for children.

But, Mr. President, while the States and the local communities were spending $260,000,000, the Federal Government spent only $70,000,000 in trying to provide one nutritious meal a day for the children of the country. Furthermore, Mr. President, only 12 percent of the school children who participate receive free meals, or receive meals at less than cost. Only 12 percent of the children, a little more than one-eighth of the children, receive free meals, or meals at less than cost.

Here is something I have discovered in my State by visiting some of the public schools. I am told that in many cases, where there is more than one child in the family, the children have to get the lunches alternately, or every third day, because the family is unable to pay the required 23 cents a meal for each child every day.

At the present time, State appropriations are inadequate. Local public authorities do not have the funds. In order to supplement the Federal appropriation, they have to rely upon gifts by civic clubs and private citizens, to make it possible for children who cannot pay the real cost to get at least one nutritious meal a day.

So there is a need for these funds. I may point out one other fact. These funds have not increased in the past two fiscal years. The appropriation was $75,000,000 last year, which is the same amount the House provided this year. The Senate bill appropriates $87,500,000, representing only a small increase over last year. Yet the average cost per meal rose 47.5 percent between 1943 and 1948. In 1946 it was 15 cents a meal; in 1947, 20 cents, and in 1948, 25 cents. So the increase in the cost of a meal tends to offset the increase in the contribution.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at this point for a question?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. LONG. The Senator speaks of the increased cost of the meal. That relates back to what was required for school lunches. Can the Senator refer me to a time when we ever had a school-lunch program in this country that was in any way adequate?

Mr. PEPPER. Never. On the contrary, I may read from page 438 of the hearings in the House of Representatives. This relates to the volume of funds required to meet the demands for the school-lunch program:

Mr. STIGLER. Is your appropriation adequate to meet the demand of the program from the various States?

Mr. TRAINER—

He was representing School Lunch Program Division of the Department of Agriculture—

According to the reactions of the State agencies and their feeling about it and their representations to us, frankly, it is not adequate.

Mr. STIGLER. How much would it take to meet the present demand made upon you?

Mr. TRAINER. And permit normal expansion within the States?

Mr. STIGLER. Yes.

Mr. TRAINER. I would say today it would take within the neighborhood of $150,000,000.

And all we are asking in the Senate is $100,000,000, which will have to run the gamut of further conference with the House of Representatives.

Just one other fact. Scientific studies show, first, that children all over the country lack a proper daily diet. In Florida a survey of rural-school children revealed that less than 10 percent receive proper nutrition. In this appropriation we are dealing with the future strength of America. We are talking about the ability of the citizenship of tomorrow to work and to fight for America, and for what she stands. I am saying we are voting this afternoon on the amount of strength that goes into the bones of the school children of America. That is what we are voting here this afternoon, not for a few dollars. We are voting on the strength of the constitution and the stamina of the citizenship of America tomorrow.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. LONG. Does the Senator know that during the last war the draft boards found that 30 percent of the young men they examined could not physically qualify for the service, and that, among colored men, it ran as high as 50 percent of the young colored men they examined, who could not physically qualify? Does not the Senator realize that malnutrition had something to do with that?

Mr. PEPPER. Undoubtedly so; undoubtedly so.

The following are some of the more important deficiencies: Milk 97 percent, eggs 90 percent, vegetables 65 percent, citrus 64 percent—even in Florida, fats 77 percent. Another study of the effects of the school-lunch program in Florida shows that pupils with gross symptoms of malnutrition were given special vitamin and iron concentrates and a good lunch. In another school, anemic children were given iron and liver concentrate plus a good lunch. In both instances, the children showed excellent improvement in physical measurements, developmental age, general health, and school attendance, and marked decreases in ailments.

Mr. President, it would not be too much to say that the money we spend in bettering the diet of the children of America will be saved in hospital and doctor's bills. It is not too much to say that it is a fine investment in good citizenship. Healthiness and normality tend to make for the sort of citizenship that saves expenditures upon crime and juvenile delinquency in America.

It should be noted that in Minnesota, North Carolina, Iowa, Missouri, Michigan, Virginia, and New Mexico, surveys showed similar results. The National School Lunch Act has been most beneficial for our school children, even though they get only one decent meal a day.

Senators, of course, do not need to be advised upon this matter. I am only pleading for economy. I am pleading to prevent waste. I am pleading for the wise expenditure of our treasures. I am pleading for something far more valuable and important and productive than the dollars we spend. I am pleading not only for children but for a stronger and greater and a more productive America.

I need not remind this assemblage of sympathetic Senators of the admonitions concerning the dignity and the worth of those with whom we deal, when I quote what the Master himself said to those who would be inconsiderate of the children:

> Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me; for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven.

It might be added, of such is the future of the earth, as well.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, the increase proposed by the amendment is $12,500,000. It will be noted that there are in the United States approximately 26,000,000 children. That means that we shall be voting for only approximately 50 cents more a child a year. Under the present bill there is $87,500,000 provided. If we divide the 26,000,000 children into that amount we have only $3.25 a child. Think of that measly amount. If we add 50 cents more to it, it will amount to $3.75. Is not that a small amount?

I invite the Senate's attention to the fact that only a few days ago we gave to the people of other lands $5,500,000,000. I venture to say that, of that sum, many times the amount which is here involved will be given to the children of other lands. Shall we treat our children any differently from the way we would treat the children of other nations?

As I see it, Mr. President, this amendment will encourage the schools throughout the land to enter the school-lunch program. There are certain foods which are in surplus. I remember when there was a surplus of Irish potatoes which could be purchased very cheaply. When they were purchased, it helped the farmers. There were some places in which there were so many potatoes that they were being thrown into the gutter.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I yield.

Mr. LONG. Is not what the Senator and I are proposing, in effect, to take those potatoes and feed them to children instead of throwing them away or feeding them to the hogs? Is not that correct?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. That is correct. Food is bought up throughout the Nation where there is an overproduction or an oversupply, and, in many instances, when it would otherwise go to waste, it is bought and used for the school children.

Mr. FREAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I yield to the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. FREAR. What percentage of the 26,000,000 children mentioned are underprivileged or indigent or cannot afford to buy their school lunches?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. In some States the number is far greater than in others. I do not know the exact percentage throughout the United States. I do know, however, that in a great many sections of the Nation it is not possible for some of the children to purchase their lunches.

Mr. FREAR. Does not the Senator think it would be more equitable to limit the school-lunch program to the underprivileged children, rather than to consider the over-all picture and include those who can afford to pay, and give them free lunches?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Personally, I do not. We are only encouraging the program of the States. It helps out in that way. The schools cannot feed a child a week for $3.25.

Mr. FREAR. Do I correctly understand that the underprivileged school children do pay something for their school lunches?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. In some places they do and in some places they do not. That is up to the particular school involved. The Federal Government does not regulate that, as I understand.

Mr. FREAR. Who pays the difference? If a school child cannot afford to pay anything, and the Government contributes only a portion of the cost, who pays the difference?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. In some places there are different kinds of systems. Under some systems money is raised by various and sundry means in order to have a surplus fund. The Federal appropriation helps to buy the food. No school I know of makes one red penny. The meals are prepared at the schools and are given to the children at cost.

Mr. FREAR. I am in favor of indigent children having free lunches, and I encourage it. But the question I ask is, Why should the Federal Government give a part of the cost of a free lunch to those students who can afford to pay for it? Would it not be better to allot the money entirely to the indigent children instead of giving it to those who can afford to pay a part of the cost?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I would answer the Senator's question by saying that would be true if there were a sufficient number of students in each school to justify that end. But the great difficulty is that in each school it will be found there are very few who cannot afford to pay something and we cannot always draw the line without making some child feel embarrassed.

Mr. FREAR. I can appreciate that there might be some embarrassment with respect to some children accepting a free lunch, but I think, for the sake of the health of all the children, it would be better for the underprivileged children to have greater amounts contributed to them, and withhold the money from those who can afford to pay. Any school which has a sufficient number of children to put on a lunch program has underprivileged children as well as those who can pay a hundred percent for their lunches. There would be no distinction other than that the underprivileged would not pay, but those who could pay would pay in proportion.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I yield to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. PEPPER. Referring to page 425 of the House report, the Federal Government's appropriation was $70,000,000. That was 26.9 percent of the total cost of the meals furnished. Sources within the States contributed $138,232,000, or 53.2 percent of the total cost. That is broken down as follows:

State and local governmental appropriations, $29,052,000, or 11.2 percent.

Other local contributions, such as contributions by civic clubs and generously disposed persons, 8.7 percent of the total cost.

Total State contributions, $190,008,000, or 73.1 percent of the total cost.

My advice is that only 12 percent of the children received meals at less than cost, or free, so that those children who were considered by the local people, who knew the situation, to be unable to pay the full cost or anything toward the cost of the meals, were given their meals at what it was thought they could pay, or at no cost at all. So that what the Senator proposes, as I understand, is already being carried out. Those who can pay are paying the full cost of the meals, and those who cannot pay the full cost are given their meals free or are paying what they are able to afford.

Mr. FREAR. May I ask the Senator, is that true all over the country, or is it true by communities or States?

Mr. PEPPER. I dare say there is some variation in the program, because, as the Senator knows, the Federal Government puts up only 26.9 percent of the total appropriation. Most of it is local, so there is undoubtedly a variation.

Mr. FREAR. May I ask if in adding his figures the Senator got up to 100 percent?

Mr. PEPPER. Yes; I got up to 100 percent of the total $260,000,000. The total includes contributions by children, by the local communities and the States, and by the Federal Government.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, the Senator from Florida is correct. He will find that throughout the United States there are different patterns and different systems in different schools.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator from South Carolina yield?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I yield.

Mr. LONG. Is it not true that the school-lunch program is a good thing even if the children have to pay the price of the meal? If there is a school-lunch program, the children who go to school eat a balanced diet. Otherwise, if there is no school-lunch program, which is the case in an enormous number of schools, the family gives the little child the money to buy a lunch, and sometimes it goes into Crackerjack, popcorn, or peanuts, and the child never does have the good, nutritious food it should eat, such as he would have if there were a good, well-organized school-lunch program.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I think that what the Senator from Louisiana has said is true. Even though we were not caring for those who were not able to pay, if we would only encourage the system and care for them along with the others, we would find that the system itself was worth the money the Federal Government is paying out, to encourage a school-lunch program within the schools.

Mr. FREAR. Mr. President, I thought I made myself clear that I am in favor of the school-lunch program—100 percent in favor of it. But I am in favor of the underprivileged receiving more than those who can afford to pay, not putting them all on a par, whether it is under a State contribution, a Federal contribution, or other contribution.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I think the Senator will find that if his State wants to go into a State program, the Federal program would not keep it from doing so. It is left to the States to say what kind of a program they want to enter into. I am a great believer in leaving it to the States to run their own affairs.

Mr. FREAR. I agree with what the Senator has just said. I believe that there are some underprivileged children in Delaware, but I do not think our percentage is as high as it is in some of the other States, so when I am speaking of the underprivileged children, I am speaking perhaps for States which have a greater percentage of underprivileged children than does my own State.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, if I have ever felt cast out of character, it is this afternoon. I am occupying the very unusual position of opposing increases in the appropriations for the rural electrification program and the school-lunch program. It so happened that for a number of years I undertook to protect and nurture both those programs, particularly the school-lunch program. It originated in my committee. Year after year the bill would come from the other body without any provision for the school-lunch program, and we would be compelled to resort to various devices, such as finding some bit of legislation in the bill to which we could tie it without the necessity of obtaining a two-thirds vote.

I had something to do with the introduction and passage of the permanent school-lunch legislation. I think it has been a program of tremendous benefit to the Nation, and I favor its expansion as rapidly as is possible. However, Mr. President, I do endeavor to be reasonable about these matters. One would think from some of the remarks which have been made here this afternoon that the committee had been very penurious in its approach to the school-lunch program. It so happens that the largest item of increase the committee made over and above the budget was the committee amendment to the school-lunch program. We exceeded the budget by the sum of $12,500,000, and over half of the Senate increase to the totals of the bill is found in the amendment for the school-lunch program. The amount that is carried in the bill as it is presented to the Senate is greater than any appropriation that has ever been approved by a committee of any branch of the Congress for a school-lunch program.

There are other increases which are not immediately evident which will accrue from the way the bill is written. In the first place, it is common knowledge that food prices are coming down. Therefore the funds made available by the committee will purchase approximately, considering the increase, 33⅓ percent more food for the coming fiscal year than the $75,000,000 appropriation for last year would have purchased.

Furthermore, in our desperate effort to save this program—and we did have a very difficult time maintaining any school-lunch program in 1947—we were compelled to resort to the device of going into section 32 funds to get the money to carry on the program. We are not resorting to section 32 funds this year, and it is made a direct appropriation. That leaves available the sum of $125,000,000 from customs receipts for the purposes of section 32.

Witnesses appeared before the committee who advocated, with logic and merit, an additional appropriation to section 32 funds because some agricultural commodities are going to be confronted with great difficulties next year. That is particularly true of the products of horticulture. There are also rumblings of difficulty being encountered in the case of some of the commodities about which people complained so much during the war years. Prices of butter and milk and other commodities are declining very rapidly, and it will probably be necessary to use some of the $125,000,000 for the purpose of purchasing these foods.

Who will have a prior call on these foods when they are purchased under section 32 funds? It will be the school-lunch program. It will probably get grapefruit juice and other fruit juices from the State of Florida. It will get apples and figs and prunes from the great Pacific coast. It will get other foods from other sections. During the past year when the Department of Agriculture had its unfortunate experience with potatoes, enormous quantities of potatoes have been diverted to the use of the school-lunch program. So for the coming year it is in infinitely better shape than it has even been before.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield to the Senator from Lousiana.

Mr. LONG. What good is it going to do the schools all over the country if they are given whole boxcar loads of perishable food items when they have no kitchen facilities and no storage facilities to employ in preparing or preserving the foods, storing them until they can get around to using them? In my State we appropriate about four times as much as the Federal Government is giving us to do the job. We found we had to turn down the surplus commodities because we had no place to put them, and we did not have money to arrange for warehousing.

Mr. RUSSELL. The Senator's State should make arrangements for warehouses, as any other State should. I do not believe in the Federal Government going into the warehouse business to store food, although I have supported every other phase of the lunch program. If the Senator is going to propose an amendment to have the Federal Government build a warehouse at each school house, I cannot support any such venture.

Mr. LONG. How does the Senator feel about refrigerators, or adequate stoves?

Mr. RUSSELL. I think that would be very desirable. When we passed the legislation providing for the permanent school-lunch program we wrote in title II, a provision which allowed the appropriation of not to exceed $10,000,000 a year to assist the schools in providing equipment for the school-lunch program. If the Senate today wishes to take $10,000,000 out of this appropriation for that purpose it has a perfect right to vote such a provision into the bill. Experience demonstrated, however, that the amount of $10,000,000, when it was spread all over the United States, was not very beneficial or helpful, and that more good was derived from the program by devoting the whole appropriation to food program.

In all the history of American progress there has never been a matching program so broad in its provisions as the school-lunch program. We do not require the States to match the Federal contribution. The parent-teachers associations can match it. The Kiwanis Club can match it, and does, in some instances. The Lions Club can match it, and does, in some instances. We even wrote into the bill that the amount paid into the schools by the children who were able to buy their lunches could go into a matching fund, and $138,000,000 was so used last year. In my State, while, of course, we could use much better equipment, I do not know that the PTA's have built any warehouses, but local civic associations have assisted greatly in equipping kitchens in order that the schools could serve lunches for the school children.

Mr. LONG. Even if my amendment were adopted it would mean that only $4 for each school child would be provided by this appropriation. I would say that the Federal Government is very liberal respecting the conditions with respect to matching funds, but is extremely close in the matter of the amount it puts up. My State, for example, puts up $6,000,000 annually and the Federal Government puts up $1,500,000. The Federal Government, as I said, will match on liberal conditions, but not with considerable money.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I congratulate the Senator from Louisiana on what his State has done in this matter. It has done more than any of the 48 States I know about in providing a school-lunch program. I congratulate the State of Louisiana on the remarkable progress it has made. Louisiana is the 1 State out of the 48 that has done what we hoped would be done when the school-lunch legislation was passed originally.

It was never thought that the school-lunch program would be financed on a 50-50 basis. The program was adopted in order to encourage the States to come in. Therefore, we wrote the measure on a sliding-scale basis of 50 percent at the outset, and then the amount the Federal Government will eventually endeavor to match is increased $2, $3, and $4 a year.

Again I congratulate the State represented by the distinguished Senator from Louisiana for its accomplishment in providing State support for the school-lunch program. I say with profound regret that my own State has been very niggardly in appropriating funds for this program. My State has appropriated only some administrative funds. The burden has been borne by the local civic bodies, by patriotic superintendents of schools and by others who have undertaken to mobilize local interests in an effort to provide the required matching funds and also to provide the facilities needed in the school to prepare the lunches.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator again yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. LONG. I should like to read one paragraph from a letter by the State superintendent of education of my State, which more or less indicates the attitude of my State, which has expended considerable money on school lunches.

Mr. RUSSELL. I am glad the Senator proposes to read it. I hope it will be disseminated throughout the country and serve as an inspiration to the school superintendents and to the State legislative bodies in the other States of the United States. I make that statement without desiring to diminish the Federal program. I am not afraid of the program becoming a socialistic program. I think the Federal Government can well afford to participate in it on a permanent basis.

Mr. LONG. I read a paragraph from the letter from the State superintendent of education of my State, as follows:

An increased Federal appropriation for food assistance and an additional appropriation for equipment would certainly help the program in Louisiana. We need more heavy-duty equipment since more children are participating; Federal assistance in purchasing this equipment would be of real value to our program. For example, many schools serving 300 last year are now serving 1,500 children. You can readily understand that schools now serving such a large number of children need equipment in order to serve adequate lunches that meet the minimum nutritional requirements established by the Federal Government.

I may say to the Senator in that connection that one of the greatest difficulties we experienced in undertaking to expand the program in my State was that of finding larger lunch-room space, stoves, and adequate kitchen facilities.

Mr. RUSSELL. If the Senator's State has had any difficulties in that connection, I would say the difficulties are four times greater in other States, because I understood him to say that his State appropriated four times as much as the Federal Government allotted to his State. If the Senate wants to take $10,000,000 out of this fund for equipment, very well. But I should prefer that the bill be left as it is. Experience has shown that $10,000,000 for equipment would not be a sufficient amount to encourage the local communities along that line. The way to go about it is to provide them with funds with which to purchase food. As a rule, when the mothers of a community see that food is available the mother instinct oftentimes causes them to go to the school kitchen to prepare the food. In many of the communities of my State the mothers rotate in working in the school kitchen. Each mother will have a day of the week when she goes to the school kitchen to prepare the school lunch. It would certainly be a revelation to Senators if they were to visit a country school in Georgia and eat a school lunch prepared by the mothers of the children who attend the school. I can assure Senators such a lunch would compare favorably with any meal they have had for some time.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. DOWNEY. Does the Senator not think that his suggestion that a part of the appropriation might be used to buy facilities for refrigeration might be materially affected by the difference in the amount as affected by section 32? In other words, apparently there is going to be a large amount of food available, not only because of increased production and decreased prices but likewise because of the change of status under section 32. That also tends to make even more important the purchase of facilities by the schools.

Mr. RUSSELL. That argument might well be made. But I will say to the distinguished Senator from California that the witnesses from the Pacific coast who appeared before the committee with respect to surplus foods did not indicate that there would be surpluses of perishable foods. The surpluses are of foods which have been either dried or canned and have been offered for export in years past. I do not think that much of the foods we have of which there is an impending surplus are of the extremely perishable type. It is largely the dried foods and the canned foods which are in surplus.

As I said, I will have no quarrel if the Senate wishes to strike out the language on page 51, line 16. If the Senate strikes out that proviso, it can, if it wishes to do so, provide that a part of the money shall be used for equipment.

Mr. LONG. I have not moved to strike it out.

Mr. RUSSELL. No; but if the Senate wishes to go into the equipment phase, it can be done very simply by striking out the limitations commencing in line 16, on page 51. It is my judgment that the bill will serve more people, will be more beneficial, and strengthen the movement throughout the Nation if we leave the provision as it is. I think we will come nearer to getting the increased cooperation that is needed if we stand by the committee, and not try to go too far or too fast by adopting an amendment to increase the amount to $100,000,000, desirable as that would be to me personally.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. DOWNEY. I wish to make a comment. I thoroughly agree with the Senator from Georgia in his statement that a large proportion of the surplus of some products from the Pacific coast at least will be nonperishable.

Mr. RUSSELL. That was the evidence before the committee.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. RUSSELL. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. PEPPER. The Senator agrees, however, does he not, that the present Federal appropriation, with the present ratio of local matching, is extending the program only to something like 20 or 22 percent of the school children of the country?

Mr. RUSSLLL. I think that is true. But, of course, if we are going to extend it overnight to all school pupils it would require some two or three hundred million dollars. If the Senate were to adopt such an amendment, it would load up the bill and defeat the entire school-lunch program. We are moving forward. The Senate committee has increased the amount by $12,500,000. With declining food prices and surplus foods which are available we will be enabled to reach many school children never reached before. Once a school adopts the program it will never surrender it. I have never heard of a school—doubtless there have been some in the country, but I have never heard of one—which has adopted and maintained the school-lunch program for a reasonable length of time that would ever after that undertake to operate without it. We are going forward very rapidly, and I think that if in this program we can maintain the amount of $87,500,000, with the favorable prospect of lower food prices, and of surplus food available under section 32, this year's progress will probably be the greatest we have ever made in extending the program throughout the United States.

For that reason I ask the Senate to reject the amendment.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, reference was made by the able Senator from Georgia to the fact that prices have declined, and in some instances, of course, that is definitely true, but I think I should also call attention to the testimony of a witness, Mr. Trainer, from the Department of Agriculture, who dealt with the school-lunch program. He called attention to the growing school population of the country. This is what he said:

> We use, as you understand, the latest published figures of the Office of Education on enrollment. The latest figure for 1945–46 is 26,560,000 children enrolled. They estimate, however, in 1949–50 there will be 29,700,000 children in school. By 1954–55 they estimate 35,700,000 children will be in school.

In other words, there is a large increase in the school population every year, and, of course, that results in a growing demand upon the fund.

Mr. President, I have never been able to adapt my psychology to the sentiment and spirit of unnecessary compromise. It may be all right, when we are dealing with human nature and the reluctance of some people to make necessary progress, to say that we should be content with what we can get. I hope the last utterance I ever make will be aimed at striving to achieve what we ought to have; and if I am condemned as an unrealistic, impractical dreamer for saying that we ought to do what is right, I am willing to be condemned by that kind of criticism.

If the school-lunch program is right for one child out of five, it is right for five children out of five. If the United States Government is rich enough to help one child out of five to have a better body, it is rich enough to help five of its children out of five to have better bodies.

The school-lunch program is either right or wrong. If we are so niggardly, so penurious, and so bankrupt that we can help only one child out of five, we are unrealistic when we sacrifice four children to save a few hundred million dollars. That is all there is to it. Either we want the children of the country to have a good lunch, or we do not. If we want them to have it, we have the two or three or four hundred million dollars necessary to provide it. And I would like to vote the full amount now, but I know we cannot act. That is why we only have to make another small step in the right direction, above that recommended by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

According to the estimate of my able friend, I am sure that at the rate we are going the children of most of the children now receiving the benefits of this program will be the recipients of the expanded program. At least we can expect that the grandchildren of the present recipients will surely be included within the munificence of the Federal Government, at the rate we are going. It is a question of what generation we want to help.

I am for helping the children now in school. Their bodies are now building. Their bones are being formed. We can not wait until 5 years from now to put calcium in those bones and vitamins in those bodies. We are not saying. With our extravagant economy we are losing those children. I would just as soon not vote for any money at all as to make a discrimination, and help only one out of five, leaving four hungry. Surely we can provide a little more than the amount approved by the committee. Testimony has come to me from my State showing examples of families with as many as four children, because they could not put up the 25 cents apiece, and the local civic clubs had put up all they could provide, and the State and local agencies could put up no more, a child received a lunch only every third day; and yet those children were expected to keep up their work in school and have healthy, strong bodies, and be good citizens.

If that be impractical and unrealistic, I plead guilty. I am becoming sick and tired of having to overcome the barrage of "can't's" every time a proposal is made in the Senate for a good program. We are told "We are going too fast," or "We have not enough money. Let us be more realistic. Let us get a little now and some more next year, and perhaps an increase thereafter."

Why do we have to wait? Who says that we must wait to do right? We have not $5,000,000,000, either, but when we really want to provide it we find it. We have not one and a half billion for arms, but when we think it is in the public interest we dig it up. We did not have $16,000,000,000 to give the world, which was broken by the war from the end of hostilities to the beginning of the Marshall plan, but we found it, in spite of all those who spoke with alarm about the state of the budget. When the Marshall plan came along we received the shocking information that it would require $17,000,000,000, more than all the school lunches would probably cost for the next century. But we found the $17,000,000,000. If tomorrow we were impressed with the necessity of finding another $17,000,000,000, somehow or other we would find it. Congress finds the money to do what it wants to do, or what it feels to be imperative.

With all deference to the Marshall plan and its advocates, I say that it is no more important than the children of America. If we can meet the demands of the Marshall plan, I see no reason why we cannot give enough aid to provide one nutritious meal at cost to the children who can buy it, and provide whatever is necessary to furnish one nutritious meal a day to those who cannot buy it.

I do not think there is anything in this country worth more than its children. We are not spending nearly as much money on our children as we spend on livestock and on many other things in which we are investing our capital. Where is there a greater return? Look at the children who have had their emaciated bodies broadened out into the bodies of children, and who ceased to be waifs and haggard specimens who almost belied their Divine Creator. Let us ask ourselves whether or not that money was well spent. All I have to say, Mr. President, is that, thank God, I am not practical when it comes to a wise expenditure of the public money.

We are told that we need four times what we are appropriating. It is admitted that we are extending aid to only one out of five children. I say that if the one child needs it, so do the five. America is rich enough, if it is good enough, to provide it.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from Florida, with his usual fluency and eloquence and with more than usual vehemence, has attacked the committee's position in this matter as being a compromise. He states with great force that he would rather vote for no money at all than to provide for only one child out of five. Unless we provide for five out of five, he would rather not vote for any appropriation at all. That being true, the distinguished Senator will, of course, have to vote against his amendment, because that amendment would provide for only about one out of four and three-quarters. It would not reach five out of five. He says that we should provide forthwith for five out of five. His amendment is as much of a compromise as is the Senate committee amendment. It would not reach all the children for whom he has so eloquently pleaded, and whose case he has presented so well.

Mr. President, this provision in the bill was the very best the committee could do. It is a compromise, just as the amendment of the Senator from Florida is a compromise. I am amazed that he would join in offering the amendment and make a speech, if we had to provide for five children out of five, when his amendment would not reach more than one out of four and three-quarters, or perhaps one and a half out of four and three-quarters, at the very best.

Mr. President, we wrote this provision in the bill in the very best way in which we could write it. We recommended total appropriations slightly below the budget estimate. If the Senate wishes to increase it above the budget estimate by $8,000,000 or $10,000,000, it has the power to do so by adopting the pending amendment.

Whether we adopt the compromise suggested by the Senator from Florida or the committee compromise, we shall still not reach all the children. As a practical matter—and I have no fear of the word "practical"—we shall do more to expand the school-lunch program by adopting the committee amendment and endeavoring to make it stick in the conference, together with the surplus food under section 32, than we would by overloading the bill and getting it above the budget, and perhaps having it sent back to the committee where no one could predict what would happen to any item in the bill.

I think this is a reasonably well-balanced bill. A school-lunch program appeals to me as much as it does to the Senator from Florida or any other Member of the Senate. As the bill is now before us, it is a reasonable one, with the funds well distributed.

I do not know that the bill takes better care of the horses to which reference has been made, than it does of the school children. If it does, I have not located any item which would do so. There are in the bill certain appropriations of funds for the detection of diseases in animals, but such a program will also be of value to the children of the United States, for one bite of infected meat might kill a child outright, whereas otherwise the child would have a chance to get at least two nutritious meals a day.

So, Mr. President, I ask the Senate to reject the amendment which has been proposed to the committee amendment. By such action, I think Senators will be giving more real aid to the school children of the United States than they will if they overload the bill, so far as the appropriations for this program are concerned.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Louisiana and other Senators to the committee amendment.

Mr. PEPPER. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, on this question I simply wish to add my plea to that of the able Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] that the Senate stand by the amendment as reported by the committee. I have served for a number of years on the Appropriations Committee's subcommittee handling the agricultural appropriations bill, as well as on other subcommittees and committees, but I have never worked with any man, either in or out of the Senate, who is more sincerely interested in agriculture in all its ramifications, and who knows more about the subject in all its ramifications, than does the Senator from Georgia. I have never known anyone better equipped to do a good job in this connection or who has tried more sincerely to do a good job in bringing to the floor of the Senate a bill which will help agriculture, than has my friend, the Senator from Georgia.

Let me say that this particular item was, above all others, nearest the heart of the Senator from Georgia. When he put this figure in the bill, it represented his best judgment, as well as the best judgment of the other members of the committee.

So, I join him in asking that the Senate support the committee, and reject the amendment proposed to the committee amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Louisiana on behalf of himself and other Senators, to the committee amendment.

On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll, and Mr. AIKEN voted "yea," when his name was called.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry: Will the Chair state the pending question? Are we voting on the question of adopting the committee amendment, or on the question of adopting the amendment proposed to the committee amendment?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate is voting on the question of adopting the amendment proposed by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. LONG], for himself and other Senators, to the committee amendment, which proposal is to strike out "$87,500,000," and insert "$100,000,000," on page 51, in line 16.

Mr. REED. A vote of "yea" will be a vote to substitute "$100,000,000" for "$87,500,000"; will it?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is correct.

The clerk will resume the calling of the roll.

The legislative clerk resumed and concluded the calling of the roll.

Mr. MYERS. I announce that the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. EASTLAND], the Senator from Iowa [Mr. GILLETTE], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. GRAHAM], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. HUNT], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KILGORE], the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. MCGRATH], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. MILLER], and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] are absent on official business.

The Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] and the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON] is absent on public business.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I announce that the Senator from Vermont [Mr. FLANDERS] and the Senator from New York [Mr. IVES] are absent by leave of the Senate.

The Senator from Oregon [Mr. MORSE] is absent on official business.

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH] is absent because of illness.

The Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MALONE], the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. MCCARTHY], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG], the Senator from Utah [Mr. WATKINS], and the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY] are detained on official business.

The result was announced—yeas 14, nays 60, as follows:

So the amendment offered by Mr. LONG, for himself and other Senators, to the committee amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question now is on agreeing to the committee amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

HOUR OF MEETING TOMORROW

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I desire to make a brief announcement. I have received word from the Speaker of the House of Representatives that the joint session tomorrow in honor of General Dutra, the President of Brazil, will be at 12:15 p. m. When we recess today it will be until 11:45 tomorrow morning. I make the announcement so that, when the bell rings at 11:30, Senators will respond at 11:45.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATIONS, 1950

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3997) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, and for other purposes.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. FERGUSON. What is the status of the bill at the present time?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is open to further amendment.

Mr. FERGUSON. Have all the committee amendments been agreed to?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. All the committee amendments have been agreed to.

Mr. FERGUSON. On behalf of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] and myself, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk and of which notice has been given, which I desire to have read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the end of the bill it is proposed to insert the following:

SEC. 309. (a) The Secretary of Agriculture, with respect to appropriations made in title I of this act, is authorized and directed, with the approval of the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, to make such reductions in the amounts to be expended from the appropriations made in such title as will in the aggregate equal at least 5 percent of the total amounts so appropriated therein. The Secretary of Agriculture shall certify the reduction in each appropriation account to the Secretary of the Treasury and to the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and the House of Representatives. The amounts so certified shall not be expended but shall be impounded and returned to the Treasury.

(b) Such reduction shall be made in a manner calculated to bring about the greatest economy in expenditure consistent with the efficiency of the service.

(c) No item of appropriation contained in title I shall be reduced more than 20 percent.

(d) A statement of each reduction hereunder, including the amount thereof, shall be included in the annual budget for the fiscal year 1951.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, the amendment is similar to those which have been offered to the Labor-Federal Security and the Treasury and Post Office appropriation bills. It is now offered as an amendment to the Agriculture appropriation bill.

As was stated at the time this amendment was offered to the other bills, it was not the purpose to single out any particular bill in applying this reduction procedure. This is an effort to call to the attention of the Senate an attempt to arrive at a reduction of expenditures in order to meet present conditions, as they have become known. It may be considered as a persistent effort to reduce appropriation bills in the best possible way; that is, to give to the various Government departments and agencies specific directions but to permit discretion to them to reduce the amount of an appropriation in any way they may deem feasible in order to arrive at an over-all reduction of 5 percent, but not to reduce any one particular item more than 20 percent.

The amount of the bill reported to the Senate was $723,083,249. The Senate committee increased the bill which came from the House by $21,961,170. So the increase in this particular appropriation over 1949 becomes $149,194,296. It is under the estimate of the Budget Director by only $3,823,659. If the 5-percent reduction were allowed, it would be 5 percent of $723,083,249, or $36,154,162.45.

Congress has had many experiences in the interpretation of laws by Government agencies themselves, and unless we take specific action, such as the amendment proposes, I think we all realize we shall be unable to decrease expenditures.

Now it has been proposed by a bill introduced in the House, as another way out, that instead of reducing expenses, the way to avoid deficit financing is to compel corporations to pay their taxes in the first half of the fiscal year rather than over the entire 12 months. But that is merely a matter of bookkeeping. It dodges the issue. As I view it, that would not solve the problem of deficit spending we are facing. Next year, we would still face the deficit prospect and we would find ourselves in further difficulty. We now have a drop in employment. Such a plan as proposed in the House would merely accelerate the drop in employment. Only the small corporations would be hurt. For instance, let us say in Michigan there are 10 large corporations and 19,000 small corporations. It is known that of the corporations that pay about $11,000,000,000 in taxes, the small ones do not set up a reserve. They would not be able to pay out of a reserve. Many of them would find their assets only in inventory, and if they were compelled to liquidate their inventory in the first 6 months in order to meet taxes, we would find that unemployment would be accelerated rather than diminished. This is an example of what can happen if we try to find ways of dodging this problem, which can be solved only by facing it and reducing expenditures.

As I said, we cannot expect Government agencies to do this unless we are definite. To illustrate, it has recently been discovered that the United States Government has appropriated money for scholarships. We find that at least one of the persons receiving a scholarship is a Communist—two of them, as stated to the press by an able Senator who is not now on the floor. The great Government of the United States which is spending millions of dollars to fight communism at least halfway round the world is making a donation, a gift, in America, to educate a person who is an avowed Communist. That does not make sense.

Only a few years ago, the able Presiding Officer offered a resolution calling for the inclusion in each appropriation bill of a proviso that appropriated funds shall not be used for payment of wages or salaries to those who advocate the overthrow of the Government by force and violence. It was adopted. The provision has been included in each bill since reported by the Appropriations Committee, and it is in the pending bill. It was in the bill last year, which provided an appropriation for the Atomic Energy Commission. Money included in that appropriation is now being used to educate a known Communist.

In the appropriation act there is the provision I have mentioned. The able Senator from Wyoming is chairman of the Independent Offices Subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations, which handles appropriations for the Atomic Energy Commission. In that capacity, he reports that he has written a letter to the chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, David E. Lilienthal, in which he expressed the view that existing limitations on appropriated funds forbid payment to anyone who is a member of an organization which advocates overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence. The limitation on payments, as he views it, applies to scholarship or fellowship funds.

Mr. President, naturally it would be thought, in the discretion of those who are spending the appropriation, that the law provides when it cannot be used to pay any salary or wage to a Communist, it would not be used for the purpose of educating such a person in the science of atomic energy. No. That is not what they do. They use their own solicitor's office to obtain an opinion, not the office of the Attorney General. I should say, from a reading of the provision in the bill, the solicitor may be technically correct in his interpretation. Mr. Lilienthal has stated that the Commission's legal adviser holds that such a prohibition applies only to employees of the Commission, and that fellows are not employees. I should say, from a reading of the provision in the bill, that the solicitor may be technically correct in his interpretation. But the point is that the solicitor gave the sort of opinion the Commission obviously desired. It could not have been objective.

Mr. BRICKER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. BRICKER. Does the Senator from Michigan know whether the general counsel of the Atomic Energy Commission is the man who was first there as general counsel and was let out of the Navy because of his left-wing associations?

Mr. FERGUSON. I am unfamiliar with the name of the gentleman who is general counsel for the Atomic Energy Commission. The quotation from the Chairman does not give his name.

Mr. BRICKER. As the Senator remembers, the first general counsel was let out of the Navy because of what were said to be his left-wing associations.

Mr. FERGUSON. I remember very well the able junior Senator from Ohio bringing that fact to the attention of the Senate. There was no doubt as to what the record showed, and all Senators were advised as of that time.

But I raise this question, because it is very material and important that if money is to be expended in a particular way we must specifically show the purpose in the appropriation bill. Even though it could be classed as legislation on an appropriation bill, it is necessary that it be placed in the bill in no uncertain words. After the interpretation by Mr. Lilienthal's chief counsel, I feel we must place in the Atomic Energy appropriation bill, when it comes up, at least a limitation providing that no funds shall be used to educate in the science of atomic energy anyone who is a known Communist, when we are trying to prevent destruction by stopping communism elsewhere in the world.

I think, Mr. President, we must be specific in that legislation as we must now be specific in this legislation, when we seek reductions in expenditures.

We attempted to do something with reference to the Solicitor's office in 1948——

Mr. BRICKER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. BRICKER. Does the Senator agree with the junior Senator from Ohio that the Atomic Energy Commission is a far more dangerous place for the Government to employ Communists than is either the Army or the Navy, in which it was testified before the House committee there are a thousand trained Communists, or in the State Department, where it is well known that Communists show up every now and then as spies for a foreign government?

Mr. FERGUSON. On the basis of the knowledge possessed by the Senator from Michigan, I think the Senator from Ohio is correct. We have today read in the press an item with reference to the disappearance of a certain amount of the U–235 material used by atomic-energy scientists—either lost, strayed, or stolen. That has obviously dangerous implications. I think it is very vital to America that if we are to educate and train men in the science of atomic energy we should train only those who are loyal to the institutions of America. After all, we are making a donation, a gift, for the purpose of educating such students, in anticipation that they will become scientists who will apply their knowledge for the benefit of America and for the benefit of the institutions of America, not for the benefit of a conspiracy which would overthrow this great Government. Should we educate those who would destroy America? That is the issue which we have before us.

We speak of freedom of thought. What is freedom of thought? It certainly does not exist in the minds of Communists. A Communist is not able to think scientifically; he must think as he is told to think by the Communist Party. Therefore, anyone who advocates freedom of thought can certainly not advocate any such system as we have of trying to teach a person who is a Communist the science of atomic energy, with the Federal Government paying for his instruction.

Mr. President, this subject is very vital. There came before the Committee on the Judiciary a few days ago a man by the name of Crouch, if that is his correct name. He told of serving in our armed forces. He was an avowed Communist. He told the committee there were also other men in the armed services who were there for the sole purpose of receiving training as soldiers in order to overthrow the United States Government. In other words, they were being trained as soldiers to fight against the United States rather than as soldiers to fight for it. When witnesses appear before committees and testify that they entered the armed services of the United States not to get training to defend the Nation but to overthrow it, I think that fact answers the question of the junior Senator from Ohio.

Mr. BRICKER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a further question?

Mr. FERGUSON. I am glad to yield.

Mr. BRICKER. Is it the judgment of the Senator from Michigan, as it is that of the junior Senator from Ohio, that the Atomic Energy Commission is the most dangerous spot in this country or in the world in which a Communist could be placed?

Mr. FERGUSON. I agree wholeheartedly.

Mr. BRICKER. Does the Senator from Michigan know that the Chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission has said that he would not only object to discontinuing such training, but would discontinue it only if it were recommended by the committee?

Mr. FERGUSON. I understand that is correct, and I understand that is how he feels about it. He feels that way because he believes the Federal Government should not interfere in education. But it is not an interference with education. It is a grant to a specific person for a scholarship in order to train him to defend America through the science of atomic energy.

Mr. BRICKER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield.

Mr. BRICKER. Is there any other conceivable reason for the scholarship program of the Atomic Energy Commission than to train men to defend the United States and the peace-loving peoples of the world against tyranny?

Mr. FERGUSON. There is no other idea in mind at the present time than to defend America and those who believe as America does, and who would be on the side of America in any conflict.

Mr. BRICKER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. BRICKER. Then this program, as conducted and carried out by the Atomic Energy Commission and its Chairman, would defeat the very purpose of the appropriation for these scholarships, namely, to defend America, and it might ultimately, if carried out in the way suggested, by training Communists, result in the destruction of the very Government it is conceived to defend and protect.

Mr. FERGUSON. I think the able Senator from Ohio has stated the matter very well. If we train one man, what would prevent him from then taking a ship belonging to one of the satellite countries, let us say Poland because a Polish ship has been in the news lately, and going where he could give this information to that institution in which he believes, namely, communism? We would expect him to be able to get over there without a passport. It seems to be very easy to get on one of these ships and leave this country without even a passport.

The Commission talks about character. They say they go into the question of a man's character. I wonder whether America does not understand communism well enough to know that if a man is a Communist, that affects his character so far as being a good American is concerned.

Mr. BRICKER. Mr. President, does the Senator understand that if the uranium 235, was either lost, stolen, or in some other way got away from the Atomic Energy Commission laboratories at Chicago, that will reveal to any enemy into whose hands it might fall some of the most innermost secrets of the whole atomic-energy program and of the use of fissionable material in bombs?

Mr. FERGUSON. I answer by saying that, from what little I know, I should think it would be very dangerous. After we have done something with a substance as in the case of the particular ore referred to, I should believe it very dangerous to have it get into the hands of unknown scientists. They would have then the processed substance to work with. I think it would be very dangerous, especially in the case of this substance, which has been deemed so important that it is transported under armed guard.

Mr. President, I remember talking to a scientist who said the scientists felt that the Senate and the House were trying to compel them to "close their windows at night," and they objected. That is the way he expressed it. He said, "Are you going to treat us scientists in this way? Are you going to require us to close our windows? You are even going to require us to clean off our desks at night." He was saying that science was world-wide, and he thought any government arbitrary and dictatorial which would say to a scientist that he had to close his windows or clean off his desk at night, and lock up the things with which he had been dealing, that is, to take security precautions.

Is it any wonder that some of this very vital material was lost, strayed, or stolen?

In my opinion, as lawyers and as legislators, we owe a high loyalty, the highest loyalty there is, to the United States of America. And any scientist, if he is being employed by our Government, even though he thinks in world-wide terms, owes his first allegiance to the United States of America rather than to any foreign government.

Mr. JENNER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Michigan yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield to the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. JENNER. It would not make a great deal of difference what the scientist thought, if the head of the Commission refused to take the recommendation of the Commission's own security officer, who is placed there to determine what is best for the security of information relating to the atomic bomb. Is not that correct?

Mr. FERGUSON. I should have to answer the question in the affirmative. I think the reflection of what the Chairman of the Commission feels must go on down through the line. I think that all the Communists in America need to help them along is a little encouragement, and they seem to get it from many quarters.

Mr. JENNER. Does the Senator from Michigan know that Admiral Gingrich, the security officer of the Atomic Energy Commission, has made recommendations which have been completely ignored by the Commission?

Mr. FERGUSON. I have no knowledge as to that.

Mr. JENNER. Does the Senator from Michigan know that at this very moment there is not a security officer in the Atomic Energy Commission, because Admiral Gingrich, I am informed, resigned in disgust on May the 1st?

Mr. FERGUSON. I have not that knowledge, but I accept the statement of the able Senator from Indiana.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. I wonder how long the distinguished Senator expects to continue.

Mr. FERGUSON. Just a very few minutes.

Mr. WHERRY. I desired to ask the majority leader how long the Senate was to continue in session this evening.

Mr. LUCAS. I had hoped that we might continue until we concluded the consideration of the bill. If the Senator from Michigan is to take some time, I shall make a motion to recess.

Mr. FERGUSON. I did not bring this matter up in order to make a speech on it at this particular time. We were diverted from my original point that in the appropriation before us, as in other legislation, we must state our objectives clearly if we hope they will be accomplished.

Mr. WHERRY. I understand that, and I did not mean to interrupt the Senator at all.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I am very anxious to conclude with the bill this evening if possible. However, I do not wish to lose any parliamentary rights I have in respect to the amendment of the Senator from Michigan. The Senator from Michigan launched into a speech before I could make a point of order against his amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator can make the point or order at any time.

Mr. FERGUSON. I shall yield the floor in order that the Senator may make the point of order.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I wish to make a brief statement about the bill, to show why I make the point of order. I can make it tomorrow.

Mr. FERGUSON. I should like to conclude what I have to say.

Mr. LUCAS. May I inquire whether there will be any further motions?

Mr. WHERRY. There will be another motion or two.

Mr. FERGUSON. It depends on what happens to the pending motion.

Mr. LUCAS. After the Senator completes his remarks on this point, I think the Senate had better take a recess until tomorrow.

Mr. FERGUSON. I will yield the floor, then, with the understanding that I may have it tomorrow in order to conclude my statement on the pending amendment.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I believe I would prefer to make the point of order tomorrow. I desire to make a brief statement in connection with the point of order, and I should like to do it when all Senators are free to be away from their offices.

R. C. OWEN ET AL.—VETO MESSAGE

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives, which was read, as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, U. S.,
May 18, 1949.

The House of Representatives having proceeded to reconsider the bill (H. R. 1036) entitled "An act for the relief of R. C. Owen, R. C. Owen, Jr., and Roy Owen," returned by the President of the United States with his objections, to the House of Representatives, in which it originated, it was

Resolved, That the said bill pass, two-thirds of the House of Representatives agreeing to pass the same.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, the message from the House relates to a veto message from the President that was acted upon by the House of Representatives today and sent to the Senate. I respectfully suggest that the bill and the message be printed in the RECORD, and lie on the table until a later date, at which time I shall call it up.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is, Shall the bill pass, the objections of the President of the United States to the contrary notwithstanding? Without objection the message and the bill will lie on the table and will be printed in the RECORD.

The message from the President, and the bill, are as follows:

To the House of Representatives:

I return herewith, without my approval, the enrolled bill (H. R. 1036) for the relief of R. C. Owen, R. C. Owen, Jr., and Roy Owen.

The bill provides for payment of the sum of $8,437.98, to R. C. Owen, R. C. Owen, Jr., and Roy Owen, former partners doing business as R. C. Owen, of Gallatin, Tenn., which sum represents the amount they paid to the United States for internal-revenue tobacco stamps, which stamps were completely destroyed on December 24, 1945, when a fire destroyed claimants' factory, together with the equipment, tobacco, and tobacco stamps therein.

It appears that claimants' firm was a dealer in leaf tobacco and also a manufacturer of certain tobacco products in Gallatin, Tenn. On the night of December 24, 1945, one of the buildings belonging to the firm, part of which was used as a factory and part as a warehouse, was destroyed by fire. According to affidavits submitted by R. C. Owen, Jr., as a member of the firm, the chief of police, and the assistant chief of the fire department, the building, including its contents, was a complete loss. The firm filed a claim with the Bureau of Internal Revenue for the value of the tobacco stamps allegedly on hand in the factory at the time of the fire and therefore destroyed by it, but this claim was disapproved by that Bureau on the ground that under existing law refund could be made only where the stamps were submitted to the Bureau in a recognizable condition or were destroyed under the supervision of a deputy collector.

A person who loses currency through destruction by fire may recover such loss only to the extent that such currency can be submitted in a recognizable form for replacement. Such rule is necessary to protect the Government against fraudulent claims. A similar situation prevails with regard to postage stamps. The Government does not assume the obligation of an insurer at the time of selling internal-revenue stamps to a taxpayer for subsequent use in payment of a particular excise tax. Enactment of the bill would grant relief to this firm which is not granted to other persons similarly situated, and such special treatment would be discriminatory against taxpayers generally.

The regulations which prohibit refunds in cases of this type were promulgated with the view to preventing frauds upon the Government. The situation of claimant firm is not different from that of a number of other persons who have been refused refunds because of their inability to comply with the regulations pertaining to such refunds. The Government cannot make refund in the absence of satisfactory proof that the stamps in question were actually destroyed.

Accordingly, I am unable to approve the bill.

HARRY S. TRUMAN.

THE WHITE HOUSE, April 21, 1949.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to R. C. Owen, R. C. Owen, Jr., and Roy Owen, former partners doing business as R. C. Owen, of Gallatin, Tenn., the sum of $8,437.98. This sum represents the amount which they paid to the United States for internal revenue tobacco stamps, which stamps were completely destroyed on December 24, 1945, when a fire destroyed the said tobacco factory of said partners (registered as "Tobacco Factory No. 102, District of Tennessee"), together with the equipment, tobacco, and tobacco stamps therein: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

RECESS

Mr. LUCAS. I move that the Senate stand in recess until 11:45 o'clock a. m. tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 6 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Thursday, May 19, 1949, at 11:45 a. m.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate May 18 (legislative day of April 11), 1949:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

Harrison Parkman, of Kansas, to be purchasing agent for the Post Office Department. (A reappointment.)

The officers named herein for appointment in the Officers' Reserve Corps of the Army of the United States under the provisions of section 37 of the National Defense Act as amended:

To be brigadier generals

Col. Daniel Collier Elkin, Medical Corps Reserve, Army of the United States.

Col. Edward Taylor Kirkendall, Medical Corps Reserve, Army of the United States.

Col. Harry Paul Newton, Coast Artillery Corps Reserve, Army of the United States.

Col. Harry Hodges Semmes, Armored-Cavalry Reserve, Army of the United States.

Col. Lawrence Harley Whiting, Adjutant General's Department Reserve, Army of the United States.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

WEDNESDAY, MAY 18, 1949

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

Father Joseph C. Walen, director of Catholic Charities, diocese of Grand Rapids, Mich., offered the following prayer:

Direct, we beseech Thee, O Lord, our actions by Thy holy inspirations, and carry them on by Thy gracious assistance; that every prayer and work of ours may always begin from Thee, and through Thee be happily ended.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Carrell, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 3333. An act making appropriations for the Department of Labor, the Federal Security Agency, and related independent agencies, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the foregoing bill, requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. CHAVEZ, Mr. MCCARRAN, Mr. RUSSELL, Mr. FERGUSON, and Mr. GURNEY to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

MISSING ATOMIC COMPOUND

Mr. COLE of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. COLE of New York. Mr. Speaker, the Atomic Energy Commission is-gues a formal statement, after the story broke in the press and on the radio, that a quantity of uranium 235 cannot be accounted for at its Chicago laboratories.

The Commission says mildly that the missing atomic compound is not believed to have been stolen or lost.

Now, when nearly one-quarter of an ounce of uranium 235 is missing, whether lost or stolen, it is a matter for concern to the whole Nation, not alone Congress.

Something is wrong somewhere. What is the degree of laxity or inefficiency in the handling of this vital element? With all the security precautions supposed to be in effect, just how could such a thing happen?

An inventory early in February revealed a discrepancy of 32 grams of U–235. The Commission floundered around until the middle of March before calling in the FBI. Now the Commission says all but 7 grams, nearly one-quarter ounce, has been accounted for, and they are looking for the missing uranium which they do not believe was lost or stolen. But where is it?

The law says that the Atomic Energy Commission must keep the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy currently and fully informed of all developments and all the facts. So far as I am aware, the Commission has never reported the disappearance of this U–235 to the committee.

I just want to call the attention of the House to this:

In 1945 a British spy gave a Russian espionage agent 1 milligram of U–235 compound stolen from a Chicago laboratory. This was promptly flown to Russia.

Now a quarter ounce equals about 7,000 milligrams. So you can imagine the joy in Moscow if nearly 7,000 milligrams of U–235 could come into the hands of the Kremlin's scientists.

Mr. Speaker, the disappearance of this vital element, the core and heart of the atomic bomb, must not be lightly brushed off. Congress and the people cannot be kept in the dark on such incidents as the Commission reveals today.

Any time the FBI is called in, something is drastically wrong. I ask what is wrong in the security set-up in the Commission's laboratories? Congress has the right to know.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. COLE of New York asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an address delivered by General White.

PECOS RIVER COMPACT

Mr. REGAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 3334) to grant the consent of the United States to the Pecos River compact.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, may I ask the gentleman if this bill has a unanimous report from the Committee on Public Lands?

Mr. REGAN. It has.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman explain the bill?

Mr. REGAN. This bill grants the consent of the United States to a compact between the States of Texas and New Mexico regarding the Pecos River, on which several irrigation projects have been formed during the past 40 years. The river rises in the State of New Mexico and flows into the Rio Grande within the State of Texas. The projects are in both New Mexico and Texas, and both States are unanimous in asking the consent of the Congress to this compact.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. I should like to ask the majority leader or someone else in authority here with reference to a lot of the bills that are coming in here and being passed by unanimous consent, when some of us would like to have the opportunity to object to them and we are not here on the floor to do so.

The SPEAKER. No bill is called up that has not been discussed with the majority and minority leaders and the ranking members of the committee.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I would suggest to the gentleman that he always has the opportunity to object to a bill which comes up by unanimous consent.

Mr. RICH. The other day I was told by the minority leader that a certain bill had passed the House in reference to increased pay for Members of Congress. It would not have gone through without a complete hearing had we had the opportunity to be here while it was considered. However, we do have to eat lunch once in a while, and that applies to the majority leader and the minority leader and everybody else, so it is nothing for anyone to be off the floor when legislation of that kind comes up. I think the Speaker or the majority leader or the minority leader ought to notify the Members at least a day in advance before any legislation is considered on the floor. That would be only good, sound business procedure.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I would say in all fairness you cannot always tell 24 hours ahead what individual bills are coming up. In order to protect the rights of the individuals, if a minority Member will inform me at any time of any particular legislation to which he wants to object, I will be very happy to see that it is held up if he is not on the floor.

Mr. RICH. I may say to the minority leader that this is a pretty big organization here.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Of course it is, and its business must proceed.

Mr. RICH. The Members do not know what is coming up here. It seems to me it would only be courtesy and good business procedure to try to let the membership know what measures are coming up.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I withdraw my reservation of objection, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. RANKIN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, may I say to the gentleman from Massachusetts that I do not believe I have ever missed the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH] on the floor. He seems to be here all the time.

May I ask the gentleman from Texas if he has consulted the chairman of the Committee on Public Works, and if there is any objection on the part of that committee to this measure?

Mr. REGAN. I know of no objection from anybody, including the Bureau of Reclamation, the Public Works Agency, or any other agency. It is strictly a matter between the States of Texas and New Mexico. They have been unanimous in desiring this compact. It was ratified by the two States without a dissenting vote. I hope the Congress will give consent to the compact.

Mr. WILSON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do so solely for the purpose of making the record straight. I do not know where the gentleman from Pennsylvania got his misinformation. There was no bill which came before the House which was passed to increase the pay for Members of Congress. I think the RECORD should be made straight and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH] go back and read the RECORD and read it correctly and straighten out that observation himself.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I want to point out for the RECORD that under the Legislative Reorganization Act, which was passed by the last Congress, each Member of the other body was given an administrative assistant at $10,300 a year. No Member of the House was given that, except the leadership, and that was done, of course, because it was vitally essential and should have been done. I think the public should know the facts. Of course, we know that demands upon Members of the House are just as much of a strain as they are upon Members of the other body. I am sure there is no difference in that respect between the two Houses at all. We are all working from 14 to 18 hours a day from what I can see, and certainly I do not apologize for the hours that I put in, and I know that all of my colleagues are putting in long hours, the same as I am. We are not asking for any sympathy, but on the other hand, we want the facts known. I think that when the public knows them, they will appreciate our position. There was a feeling that administrative assistants ought to be provided for Members of the House. I think that should be done. Proposals were made to provide for $5,000 or $5,500, instead of the $10,300 salary, which the administrative assistants in the other body receive. Then a compromise was made on $3,000. I do not think any one of us needs to apologize for what was done, if we tell the facts to the people.

So far as I am concerned, I am in favor of an increase in our salaries. I think we ought to get $25,000 a year salary. That is my point of view. I offer no apologies for my position. I am not ashamed to go before the people of my district and tell them that I work, and that I am worth at least $50,000 to $75,000 a year in private practice of law, certainly I feel we ought to get a salary of $25,000 as a Member of Congress. In any event our salary should be increased.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I understood that was merely a measure to give each Member an extra clerk at $3,000 a year. I have introduced a bill to provide each Member of Congress and each committee with an electric typewriter. I would rather have that than an extra clerk.

I think if you will investigate the proposition you will find that an electric typewriter will do more to lighten the burdens of the office of the average Congressman than anything else that we can do at this time.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. REGAN]?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby given to the compact, signed (after negotiations in which a representative of the United States, duly appointed by the President, participated and upon which he has reported to Congress) by the Commissioners for the States of New Mexico and Texas, on December 3, 1948, at Santa Fe, N. Mex., and thereafter ratified by the legislatures of each of the States aforesaid, which compact reads as follows:

PECOS RIVER COMPACT

The State of New Mexico and the State of Texas, acting through their commissioners, John H. Bliss for the State of New Mexico and Charles H. Miller for the State of Texas, after negotiations participated in by Bereley Johnson, appointed by the President as the representative of the United States of America, have agreed respecting the uses, apportionment and deliveries of the water of the Pecos River as follows:

ARTICLE I

The major purposes of this compact are to provide for the equitable division and apportionment of the use of the waters of the Pecos River; to promote interstate comity; to remove causes of present and future controversies; to make secure and protect present development within the States; to facilitate the construction of works for, (a) the salvage of water, (b) the more efficient use of water, and (c) the protection of life and property from floods.

ARTICLE II

As used in this compact:

(a) The term "Pecos River" means the tributary of the Rio Grande which rises in north-central New Mexico and flows in a southerly direction through New Mexico and Texas and joins the Rio Grande near the town of Langtry, Tex., and includes all tributaries of said Pecos River.

(b) The term "Pecos River Basin" means all of the contributing drainage area of the Pecos River and its tributaries above its mouth near Langtry, Tex.

(c) "New Mexico" and "Texas" mean the State of New Mexico and the State of Texas, respectively; "United States" means the United States of America.

(d) The term "Commission" means the agency created by this compact for the administration thereof.

(e) The term "deplete by man's activities" means to diminish the stream flow of the Pecos River at any given point as the result of beneficial consumptive uses of water within the Pecos River Basin above such point. For the purposes of this compact it does not include the diminution of such flow by encroachment of salt cedars or other like growth, or by deterioration of the channel of the stream.

(f) The term "Report of the Engineering Advisory Committee" means that certain report of the Engineering Advisory Committee dated January 1948, and all appendices thereto; including, basic data, processes, and analyses utilized in preparing that report, all of which were reviewed, approved, and adopted by the Commissioners signing this compact at a meeting held in Santa Fe, N. Mex., on December 3, 1948, and which are included in the minutes of that meeting.

(g) The term "1947 condition" means that situation in the Pecos River Basin as described and defined in the report of the Engineering Advisory Committee. In determining any question of fact hereafter arising as to such situation, reference shall be made to, and decisions shall be based on, such report.

(h) The term "water salvaged" means that quantity of water which may be recovered and made available for beneficial use and which quantity of water under the 1947 condition was nonbeneficially consumed by natural processes.

(i) The term "unappropriated floodwater" means water originating in the Pecos River Basin above Red Bluff Dam in Texas, the impoundment of which will not deplete the water usable by the storage and diversion facilities existing in either State under the 1947 condition and which if not impounded will flow past Girvin, Tex.

ARTICLE III

(a) Except as stated in paragraph (f) of this article, New Mexico shall not deplete by man's activities the flow of the Pecos River at the New Mexico-Texas State line below an amount which will give to Texas a quantity of water equivalent to that available to Texas under the 1947 condition.

(b) Except as to the unappropriated floodwaters thereof, the apportionment of which is included in and provided for by paragraph (f) of this article, the beneficial consumptive use of the waters of the Delaware River is hereby apportioned to Texas, and the quantity of such beneficial consumptive use shall be included in determining waters received under the provisions of paragraph (a) of this Article.

(c) The beneficial consumptive use of water salvaged in New Mexico through the construction and operation of a project or projects by the United States or by joint undertakings of Texas and New Mexico is hereby apportioned 43 percent to Texas and 57 percent to New Mexico.

(d) Except as to water salvaged, apportioned in paragraph (c) of this article, the beneficial consumptive use of water which shall be nonbeneficially consumed, and which is recovered, is hereby apportioned to New Mexico but not to have the effect of diminishing the quantity of water available to Texas under the 1947 condition.

(e) Any water salvaged in Texas is hereby apportioned to Texas.

(f) Beneficial consumptive use of unappropriated floodwaters is hereby apportioned 50 percent to Texas and 50 percent to New Mexico.

ARTICLE IV

(a) New Mexico and Texas shall cooperate to support legislation for the authorization and construction of projects to eliminate nonbeneficial consumption of water.

(b) New Mexico and Texas shall cooperate with agencies of the United States to devise and effectuate means of alleviating the salinity conditions of the Pecos River.

(c) New Mexico and Texas each may—

(i) Construct additional reservoir capacity to replace reservoir capacity made unusable by any cause.

(ii) Construct additional reservoir capacity for the utilization of water salvaged and unappropriated floodwaters apportioned by this company to such State.

(iii) Construct additional reservoir capacity for the purpose of making more efficient use of water apportioned by this compact to such State.

(d) Neither New Mexico nor Texas will oppose the construction of any facilities permitted by this compact, and New Mexico and Texas will cooperate to obtain the construction of facilities that will be of joint benefit to the two States.

(e) The Commission may determine the conditions under which Texas may store water in works constructed in and operated by New Mexico.

(f) No reservoir shall be constructed and operated in New Mexico above Avalon Dam for the sole benefit of Texas unless the Commission shall so determine.

(g) New Mexico and Texas each has the right to construct and operate works for the purpose of preventing flood damage.

(h) All facilities shall be operated in such manner as to carry out the terms of this compact.

ARTICLE V

(a) There is hereby created an interstate administrative agency to be known as the "Pecos River Commission." The Commission shall be composed of one Commissioner representing each of the States of New Mexico and Texas, designated or appointed in accordance with the laws of each such State, and, if designated by the President, one Commissioner representing the United States. The President is hereby requested to designate such a Commissioner. If so designated, the Commissioner representing the United States shall be the presiding officer of the Commission, but shall not have the right to vote in any of the deliberations of the Commission. All members of the Commission must be present to constitute a quorum.

(b) The salaries and personal expenses of each Commissioner shall be paid by the government which he represents. All other expenses which are incurred by the Commission incident to the administration of this Compact and which are not paid by the United States shall be borne equally by the two States. On or before November 1 of each even-numbered year the Commission shall adopt and transmit to the governors of the two States and to the President a budget covering an estimate of its expenses for the following 2 years. The payment of the expenses of the Commission and of its employees shall not be subject to the audit and accounting procedures of either of the two States. However, all receipts and disbursements of funds handled by the Commission shall be audited yearly by a qualified independent public accountant and the report of the audit shall be included in, and become a part of, the annual report of the Commission.

(c) The Commission may appoint a secretary who, while so acting, shall not be an employee of either State. He shall serve for such term, receive such salary, and perform such duties as the Commission may direct. The Commission may employ such engineering, legal, clerical, and other personnel as in its judgment may be necessary for the performance of its functions under this compact. In the hiring of employees the Commission shall not be bound by the civil-service laws of either State.

(d) The Commission, so far as consistent with this compact, shall have power to:

1. Adopt rules and regulations;

2. Locate, establish, construct, operate, maintain, and abandon watergaging stations, independently or in cooperation with appropriate governmental agencies;

3. Engage in studies of water supplies of the Pecos River and its tributaries, independently or in cooperation with appropriate governmental agencies;

4. Collect, analyze, correlate, preserve, and report on data as to the stream flows, storage, diversions, salvage, and use of the waters of the Pecos River and its tributaries, independently or in cooperation with appropriate governmental agencies;

5. Make findings as to any change in depletion by man's activities in New Mexico, and on the Delaware River in Texas;

6. Make findings as to the deliveries of water at the New Mexico-Texas State line;

7. Make findings as to the quantities of water salvaged and the amount thereof delivered at the New Mexico-Texas State line;

8. Make findings as to quantities of water nonbeneficially consumed in New Mexico;

9. Make findings as to quantities of unappropriated flood waters;

10. Make findings as to the quantities of reservoir losses from reservoirs constructed in New Mexico which may be used for the benefit of both States, and as to the share thereof charged under article VI hereof to each of the States;

11. Acquire and hold such personal and real property as may be necessary for the performance of its duties hereunder and to dispose of the same when no longer required;

12. Perform all functions required of it by this compact and do all things necessary, proper, or convenient in the performance of its duties hereunder, independently or in cooperation with appropriate governmental agencies;

13. Make and transmit annually to the governors of the signatory States and to the President of the United States on or before the last day of February of each year, a report covering the activities of the Commission for the preceding year.

(e) The Commission shall make available to the governor of each of the signatory States any information within its possession at any time, and shall always provide free access to its records by the governors of each of the States, or their representatives, or authorized representatives of the United States.

(f) Findings of fact made by the Commission shall not be conclusive in any court, or before any agency or tribunal, but shall constitute prima facie evidence of the facts found.

(g) The organization meeting of the Commission shall be held within 4 months from the effective date of this compact.

ARTICLE VI

The following principles shall govern in regard to the apportionment made by article III of this compact:

(a) The Report of the Engineering Advisory Committee, supplemented by additional data hereafter accumulated, shall be used by the Commission in making administrative determinations.

(b) Unless otherwise determined by the Commission, depletions by man's activities, State-line flows, quantities of water salvaged, and quantities of unappropriated flood waters shall be determined on the basis of 3-year periods reckoned in continuing progressive series beginning with the 1st day of January next succeeding the ratification of this compact.

(c) Unless and until a more feasible method is devised and adopted by the Commission the inflow-outflow method, as described in the Report of the Engineering Advisory Committee, shall be used to:

(i) Determine the effect on the State-line flow of any change in depletions by man's activities or otherwise, of the waters of the Pecos River in New Mexico.

(ii) Measure at or near the Avalon Dam in New Mexico the quantities of water salvaged.

(iii) Measure at or near the State line any water released from storage for the benefit of Texas as provided for in subparagraph (d) of this article.

(iv) Measure the quantities of unappropriated flood waters apportioned to Texas which have not been stored and regulated by reservoirs in New Mexico.

(v) Measure any other quantities of water required to be measured under the terms of this compact which are susceptible of being measured by the inflow-outflow method.

(d) If unappropriated flood waters apportioned to Texas are stored in facilities constructed in New Mexico, the following principles shall apply:

(i) In case of spill from a reservoir constructed in and operated by New Mexico, the water stored to the credit of Texas will be considered as the first water to spill.

(ii) In case of spill from a reservoir jointly constructed and operated, the water stored to the credit of either State shall not be affected.

(iii) Reservoir losses shall be charged to each State in proportion to the quantity of water belonging to that State in storage at the time the losses occur.

(iv) The water impounded to the credit of Texas shall be released by New Mexico on the demand of Texas.

(e) Water salvaged shall be measured at or near the Avalon Dam in New Mexico and to the quantity thereof shall be added a quantity equal to the quantity of salvaged water depleted by man's activities above Avalon Dam. The quantity of water salvaged that is apportioned to Texas shall be delivered by New Mexico at the New Mexico-Texas State line. The quantity of unappropriated flood waters impounded under paragraph (d) of this article, when released shall be delivered by New Mexico at the New Mexico-Texas State line in the quantity released less channel losses. The unappropriated flood waters apportioned to Texas by this compact that are not impounded in reservoirs in New Mexico shall be measured and delivered at the New Mexico-Texas State line.

(f) Beneficial use shall be the basis, the measure, and the limit of the right to use water.

ARTICLE VII

In the event of importation of water by man's activities to the Pecos River Basin from any other river basin the State making the importation shall have the exclusive use of such imported water.

ARTICLE VIII

The provisions of this compact shall not apply to, or interfere with, the right or power of either signatory State to regulate within its boundaries the appropriation, use, and control of water, not inconsistent with its obligations under this compact.

ARTICLE IX

In maintaining the flows at the New Mexico-Texas State line required by this compact, New Mexico shall in all instances apply the principle of prior appropriation within New Mexico.

ARTICLE X

The failure of either State to use the water, or any part thereof, that use of which is apportioned to it under the terms of this compact, shall not constitute a relinquishment of the right to such use, nor shall it constitute a forfeiture or abandonment of the right to such use.

ARTICLE XI

Nothing in this compact shall be construed as:

(a) Affecting the obligations of the United States under the treaty with the United Mexican States (treaty series 994);

(b) Affecting any rights or powers of the United States, its agencies, or instrumentalities, in or to the waters of the Pecos River, or its capacity to acquire rights in and to the use of said waters;

(c) Subjecting any property of the United States, its agencies or instrumentalities, to taxation by any State or subdivision thereof, or creating any obligation on the part of the United States, its agencies or instrumentalities, by reason of the acquisition, construction, or operation of any property or works of whatever kind, to make any payment to any State or political subdivision thereof, State agency, municipality, or entity whatsoever, in reimbursement for the loss of taxes;

(d) Subjecting any property of the United States, its agencies or instrumentalities, to the laws of any State to an extent other than the extent to which such laws would apply without regard to this compact.

ARTICLE XII

The consumptive use of water by the United States or any of its agencies, instrumentalities, or wards, shall be charged as a use by the State in which the use is made: Provided, That such consumptive use incident to the diversion, impounding, or conveyance of water in one State for use in the other State shall be charged to such latter State.

ARTICLE XIII

This compact shall not be construed as establishing any general principle or precedent applicable to other interstate streams.

ARTICLE XIV

This compact may be terminated at any time by appropriate action of the legislatures of both of the signatory States. In the event of such termination, all rights established under it shall continue unimpaired.

ARTICLE XV

This compact shall become binding and obligatory when it shall have been ratified by the legislature of each State and approved by the Congress of the United States. Notice of ratification by the legislature of each State shall be given by the Governor of that State to the Governor of the other State and to the President of the United States, and the President is hereby requested to give notice to the Governor of each State of approval by the Congress of the United States.

In witness whereof, the Commissioners have executed three counterparts hereof each of which shall be and constitute an original, one of which shall be deposited in the archives of the Department of State of the United States, and one of which shall be forwarded to the Governor of each State.

Done at the city of Santa Fe, State of New Mexico, this 3d day of December 1948.

JOHN H. BLISS,
Commissioner for the State of New Mexico.

CHARLES H. MILLER,
Commissioner for the State of Texas.

Approved:

BERKELEY JOHNSON,
Representative of the United States of America.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SIKES asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a speech by James H. Allen.

So far as I am concerned, I am in favor of an increase in our salaries. I think we ought to get $25,000 a year salary. That is my point of view. I offer no apologies for my position. I am not ashamed to go before the people of my district and tell them that I work, and that I am worth at least $50,000 to $75,000 a year in private practice of law, certainly I feel we ought to get a salary of $25,000 as a Member of Congress. In any event our salary should be increased.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I understood that was merely a measure to give each Member an extra clerk at $3,000 a year. I have introduced a bill to provide each Member of Congress and each committee with an electric typewriter. I would rather have that than an extra clerk.

I think if you will investigate the proposition you will find that an electric typewriter will do more to lighten the burdens of the office of the average Congressman than anything else that we can do at this time.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. REGAN]?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby given to the compact, signed (after negotiations in which a representative of the United States, duly appointed by the President, participated and upon which he has reported to Congress) by the Commissioners for the States of New Mexico and Texas, on December 3, 1948, at Santa Fe, N. (ii) Construct additional reservoir capacity for the utilization of water salvaged and unappropriated floodwaters apportioned by this company to such State.

(iii) Construct additional reservoir capacity for the purpose of making more efficient use of water apportioned by this compact to such State.

(d) Neither New Mexico nor Texas will oppose the construction of any facilities permitted by this compact, and New Mexico and Texas will cooperate to obtain the construction of facilities that will be of joint benefit to the two States.

(e) The Commission may determine the conditions under which Texas may store water in works constructed in and operated by New Mexico.

(f) No reservoir shall be constructed and operated in New Mexico above Avalon Dam for the sole benefit of Texas unless the Commission shall so determine.

(g) New Mexico and Texas each has the right to construct and operate works for the purpose of preventing flood damage.

(h) All facilities shall be operated in such manner as to carry out the terms of this compact.

ARTICLE V

(a) There is hereby created an interstate administrative agency to be known as the "Pecos River Commission." The Commission shall be composed of one Commissioner representing each of the States of New Mexico and Texas, designated or appointed in accordance with the laws of each such State, and, if designated by the President, one Commissioner representing the United States. The President is hereby requested to designate such a Commissioner. If so designated, the Commissioner representing the United States shall be the presiding officer of the Commission, but shall not have the right to vote in any of the deliberations of the Commission. All members of the Commission must be present to constitute a quorum.

(b) The salaries and personal expenses of each Commissioner shall be paid by the government which he represents. The Commission may employ such engineering, legal, clerical, and other personnel as in its judgment may be necessary for the performance of its functions under this compact. In the hiring of employees the Commission shall not be bound by the civil-service laws of either State.

(d) The Commission, so far as consistent with this compact, shall have power to:

1. Adopt rules and regulations;

2. Locate, establish, construct, operate, maintain, and abandon watergaging stations, independently or in cooperation with appropriate governmental agencies;

3. Engage in studies of water supplies of the Pecos River and its tributaries, independently or in cooperation with appropriate governmental agencies;

4. Collect, analyze, correlate, preserve, and report on data as to the stream flows, storage, diversions, salvage, and use of the waters of the Pecos River and its tributaries, independently or in cooperation with appropriate governmental agencies;

5. Make findings as to any change in depletion by man's activities in New Mexico, and on the Delaware River in Texas;

6. Make findings as to the deliveries of water at the New Mexico-Texas State line;

7. Make findings as to the quantities of water salvaged and the amount thereof delivered at the New Mexico-Texas State line;

8. Make findings as to quantities of water nonbeneficially consumed in New Mexico;

9. Make findings as to quantities of unappropriated flood waters;

10. Make findings as to the quantities of reservoir losses from reservoirs constructed in New Mexico which may be used for the benefit of both States, and as to the share thereof charged under article VI hereof to each of the States;

11. Acquire and hold such personal and real property as may be necessary for the performance of its duties hereunder and to dispose of the same when no longer required;

12. Perform all functions required of it by this compact and do all things necessary, proper, or convenient in the performance of its duties hereunder, independently or in cooperation with appropriate governmental agencies;

13. Make and transmit annually to the governors of the signatory States and to the President of the United States on or before the last day of February of each year, a report covering the activities of the Commission for the preceding year.

(e) The Commission shall make available to the governor of each of the signatory States any information within its possession at any time, and shall always provide free access to its records by the governors of each of the States, or their representatives, or authorized representatives of the United States.

(f) Findings of fact made by the Commission shall not be conclusive in any court, or before any agency or tribunal, but shall constitute prima facie evidence of the facts found.

(g) The organization meeting of the Commission shall be held within 4 months from the effective date of this compact.

ARTICLE VI

The following principles shall govern in regard to the apportionment made by article III of this compact:

(a) The Report of the Engineering Advisory Committee, supplemented by additional data hereafter accumulated, shall be used by the Commission in making administrative determinations.

(b) Unless otherwise determined by the Commission, depletions by man's activities, State-line flows, quantities of water salvaged, and quantities of unappropriated flood waters shall be determined on the basis of 3-year periods reckoned in continuing progressive series beginning with the 1st day of January next succeeding the ratification of this compact.

(c) Unless and until a more feasible method is devised and adopted by the Commission the inflow-outflow method, as described in the Report of the Engineering Advisory Committee, shall be used to:

(i) Determine the effect on the State-line flow of any change in depletions by man's activities or otherwise, of the waters of the Pecos River in New Mexico.

(ii) Measure at or near the Avalon Dam in New Mexico the quantities of water salvaged.

(iii) Measure at or near the State line any water released from storage for the benefit of Texas as provided for in subparagraph (d) of this article.

(iv) Measure the quantities of unappropriated flood waters apportioned to Texas which have not been stored and regulated by reservoirs in New Mexico.

(v) Measure any other quantities of water required to be measured under the terms of this compact which are susceptible of being measured by the inflow-outflow method.

(d) If unappropriated flood waters apportioned to Texas are stored in facilities constructed in New Mexico, the following principles shall apply:

(i) In case of spill from a reservoir constructed in and operated by New Mexico, the water stored to the credit of Texas will be considered as the first water to spill.

(ii) In case of spill from a reservoir jointly constructed and operated, the water stored to the credit of either State shall not be affected.

(iii) Reservoir losses shall be charged to each State in proportion to the quantity of water belonging to that State in storage at the time the losses occur.

(iv) The water impounded to the credit of Texas shall be released by New Mexico on the demand of Texas.

(e) Water salvaged shall be measured at or near the Avalon Dam in New Mexico and to the quantity thereof shall be added a quantity equal to the quantity of salvaged water depleted by man's activities above Avalon Dam. The quantity of water salvaged that is apportioned to Texas shall be delivered by New Mexico at the New Mexico-Texas State line. The quantity of unappropriated flood waters impounded under paragraph (d) of this article, when released shall be delivered by New Mexico at the New Mexico-Texas State line in the quantity released less channel losses. The unappropriated flood waters apportioned to Texas by this compact that are not impounded in reservoirs in New Mexico shall be measured and delivered at the New Mexico-Texas State line.

(f) Beneficial use shall be the basis, the measure, and the limit of the right to use water.

ARTICLE VII

In the event of importation of water by man's activities to the Pecos River Basin from any other river basin the State making the importation shall have the exclusive use of such imported water.

ARTICLE VIII

The provisions of this compact shall not apply to, or interfere with, the right or power of either signatory State to regulate within its boundaries the appropriation, use, and control of water, not inconsistent with its obligations under this compact.

ARTICLE IX

In maintaining the flows at the New Mexico-Texas State line required by this compact, New Mexico shall in all instances apply the principle of prior appropriation within New Mexico.

ARTICLE X

The failure of either State to use the water, or any part thereof, that use of which is apportioned to it under the terms of this compact, shall not constitute a relinquishment of the right to such use, nor shall it constitute a forfeiture or abandonment of the right to such use.

ARTICLE XI

Nothing in this compact shall be construed as:

(a) Affecting the obligations of the United States under the treaty with the United Mexican States (treaty series 994);

(b) Affecting any rights or powers of the United States, its agencies, or instrumentalities, in or to the waters of the Pecos River, or its capacity to acquire rights in and to the use of said waters;

(c) Subjecting any property of the United States, its agencies or instrumentalities, to taxation by any State or subdivision thereof, or creating any obligation on the part of the United States, its agencies or instrumentalities, by reason of the acquisition, construction, or operation of any property or works of whatever kind, to make any payment to any State or political subdivision thereof, State agency, municipality, or entity whatsoever, in reimbursement for the loss of taxes;

(d) Subjecting any property of the United States, its agencies or instrumentalities, to the laws of any State to an extent other than the extent to which such laws would apply without regard to this compact.

ARTICLE XII

The consumptive use of water by the United States or any of its agencies, instrumentalities, or wards, shall be charged as a use by the State in which the use is made: Provided, That such consumptive use incident to the diversion, impounding, or conveyance of water in one State for use in the other State shall be charged to such latter State.

ARTICLE XIII

This compact shall not be construed as establishing any general principle or precedent applicable to other interstate streams.

ARTICLE XIV

This compact may be terminated at any time by appropriate action of the legislatures of both of the signatory States. In the event of such termination, all rights established under it shall continue unimpaired.

ARTICLE XV

This compact shall become binding and obligatory when it shall have been ratified by the legislature of each State and approved by the Congress of the United States. Notice of ratification by the legislature of each State shall be given by the Governor of that State to the Governor of the other State and to the President of the United States, and the President is hereby requested to give notice to the Governor of each State of approval by the Congress of the United States.

In witness whereof, the Commissioners have executed three counterparts hereof each of which shall be and constitute an original, one of which shall be deposited in the archives of the Department of State of the United States, and one of which shall be forwarded to the Governor of each State.

Done at the city of Santa Fe, State of New Mexico, this 3d day of December 1948.

JOHN H. BLISS,
Commissioner for the State of New Mexico.

CHARLES H. MILLER,
Commissioner for the State of Texas.

Mr. LYNCH asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a magazine article.

Mr. GARMATZ asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a speech by Hon. Thomas D'Alesandro, mayor of the city of Baltimore and chairman of the standing committee on legislation at the conference of mayors.

Mr. BRYSON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances and include therein brief newspaper excerpts.

Mr. MULTER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances and include extraneous matter.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

[Mr. MULTER addressed the House. His remarks appear in the Appendix.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. ANGELL asked and was granted permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include an editorial.

Mr. COUDERT asked and was granted permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include extraneous matter.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Mr. CASE of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I regret to announce that my colleague the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. CANFIELD] is detained at home on account of serious illness in his family. I ask unanimous consent that he be granted leave of absence from his official duties for such time as is necessary.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. CASE]?

There was no objection.

UNEMPLOYMENT—WHAT ARE WE DOING ABOUT IT?

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. PATTERSON]?

There was no objection.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. Speaker, a subject being granted too little attention in the Halls of Congress is that of the continuing unemployment of our citizens. Each succeeding day the problem becomes more real and pressing. In Connecticut alone almost 100,000 of our people are seeking work to keep themselves and their families in the necessities of life. Thousands have used up their total benefits under unemployment compensation, with no relief in sight. Our communities cannot absorb the welfare load being placed upon local agencies, but no solution is being proposed by the administration.

In the face of declining prices, decreased employment and production, the President maintains that the Congress should tax our people to the tune of $4,000,000,000 more. Let us consider the problems of our own people for a change before we continue to expend all our energies and resources on those of foreign countries.

Are the administration and the Democratic majority in Congress to continue ignoring the seriousness of the present unemployment picture? Are we to tell our people that we are too busy appropriating billions for aid overseas and for armaments to help them attain a decent living standard?

Call it disinflation or what you will, but the people need help and assurance, which has not been given by our Government. A man's primary concern is the immediate preservation of his family, and that should be the subject of Government concern as well.

Let us not forget that there is no greater seed for discontent than lack of employment. A man or woman working suitable hours for decent wages is a fruitful citizen.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATTERSON. I yield.

Mr. LODGE. The latest information which I have is that there are some 13,000 unemployed in the city of Bridgeport.

Mr. PATTERSON. That is correct; and that includes only those who are on the United States unemployment compensation rolls.

In Waterbury, Conn., there are at least 10,500 unemployed at this time. That is not a true picture, because there are a great many who are working only 1 day a week.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Connecticut has expired.

ADDITIONAL FBI PERSONNEL

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, the press today carries the story that uranium and other atom bomb secrets have been stolen. I think it makes us feel more and more the necessity for having enough FBI agents to apprehend these thieves, and to pay attention to every rumor that might lead to the capture of Communists and subversive people. I have warned and warned against subversive activities in the United States Government. It obviously still continues and very dangerously. According to the press the FBI were not notified promptly of the theft of the uranium. I do not know the details, of course, but I do state I feel very strongly the House will want to appropriate enough money to prevent thefts of this kind which affect not only the welfare of the United States but affect the welfare of all freedom-loving people in the world.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts has expired.

INVESTIGATIONS BY COMMITTEE ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN]?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, what we need is for the Committee on Un-American Activities to get busy.

We investigated these Communist-front organizations when I was a member of that committee. That investigation showed that the Southern Conference for Human Welfare was nothing in God's world but a Communist-front organization. Nothing has been done about it. We could get no response, if you please, from the Attorney General. When we undertook to get the Dr. Condon letter which the FBI wrote condemning Condon, the Attorney General even had it sent to the White House to keep the committee from getting it.

The American people are simply horrified to find that the Atomic Energy Commission is educating, at the expense of the Federal Government, a Communist at the University of North Carolina, teaching him how to blow up this country in the years to come.

I appeal to the Committee on Un-American Activities to get busy and investigate these subversive activities of all kinds, before it is too late.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN] has expired.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. FOGARTY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Rhode Island?

There was no objection.

[Mr. FOGARTY addressed the House. His remarks appear in the Appendix.]

SPEAKER EMPOWERED TO DECLARE RECESSES ON MAY 19

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it may be in order at any time on tomorrow for the Speaker to declare a recess subject to the call of the Chair.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

FLOOR RULES FOR JOINT SESSION, MAY 19

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to make a statement. After consultation with the majority and the minority leaders of the House and remembering the terrific jam we had upon this floor on previous occasions, with the consent and approval of the floor leaders the Chair announces that on tomorrow during the joint session the door immediately opposite the Speaker will be open and the doors on the Speaker's left and right and none other. No one will be allowed upon the floor of the House who does not have the privilege of the floor of the House.

AMENDING FEDERAL CROP INSURANCE ACT

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 3825) to amend the Federal Crop Insurance Act.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill, H. R. 3825, to amend the Federal Crop Insurance Act, with Mr. MONRONEY in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. When the Committee rose on yesterday the bill had been considered as read, and all the Committee amendments had been agreed to.

Are there further amendments to the bill?

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have the privilege of extending their remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

Mr. ABBITT. Mr. Chairman, the bill under consideration, H. R. 3825, has for its purpose the amendment of the present Crop Insurance Act by providing a formula for gradual expansion of crop insurance, which was not provided for in the revision of the act of 1947 which act placed the program on an experimental basis, and makes other important changes in the existing law to make it more applicable to the new program which has been developed since the 1947 revision of the act.

The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation came into being in 1938 for the purpose of insuring producers of wheat against loss due to unavoidable causes starting with the 1939 crop. In 1942 cotton was added. In 1944 flax was added on a national basis and other crops on an experimental basis. This program was not a success. Great losses were suffered by the Corporation.

In 1947 the entire crop-insurance law was changed, revamped, and put on a sound and experimentation basis in an endeavor to fulfill two basic requirements:

First. Sound from a business standpoint, that is, capable of paying its own way and operating without loss to the Government.

Second. Offer farmers a type of insurance they want and are willing and able to pay for.

As a result of the 1947 act the insurance program is on an experimental basis with the number of commodities insurable limited and the number of counties in which insurance could be offered limited.

The coverage was limited to an amount somewhere nearer the farmer investment in the crop.

Since the overhaul and revision of the crop-insurance law in 1947, the Corporation has been on a sound basis and has gone about the job of establishing a crop-insurance program under the new law in a forthright and businesslike manner.

Due to the restriction in the number of counties in which insurance could be offered under the experimental program, insurance has been denied to many farmers who wanted it, as well as to a good many counties who had a favorable crop-insurance record. It is believed that the Corporation, although still on an experimental basis, is ready for an orderly expansion of the program of the types of insurance which appear to be on a sound actuarial basis. The development of sound crop insurance is only part of the objective sought by Congress. The other part is the extension of crop insurance as fast as is justified to farmers to whom insurance is not now available. The bill under consideration provides a formula for such expansion. It authorizes as to each type of insurance an increase each year of not to exceed 50 percent of the number of counties in which that type of insurance was available the previous year, beginning in the year 1950. This, of course, does not mean that the insurance in each commodity in the program will be increased 50 percent each year, but this allows for an orderly increase not to exceed that amount, and it is contemplated that the expansion will take place only as the experience of the Corporation and the demand for the insurance justifies.

The present law limits the insurance to not more than seven agricultural commodities, including wheat, cotton, flax, corn, and tobacco and not more than three additional agricultural commodites in each year thereafter. Insurance is limited to producers in not to exceed 200 counties in the case of wheat, 56 counties in the case of cotton, 50 counties each in the case of corn and flax, 35 counties in the case of tobacco, 20 counties in the case of any other agricultural commodity. The present bill provides a new and promising type of crop insurance, tried experimentally in two counties during the 1948 crop year and being expanded to seven counties in 1949, to be known as multiple-crop insurance. In this type of insurance all major crops on the farm may be insured, although the crops are to be considered separately in considering the amount of coverage and premium rate, thereby guaranteeing the farmer a return from all insured crops equal to the amount of his insurance. In other words, if the return from all crops combined is less than this amount, the farmer is then indemnified the difference, which means that losses are not determined separately on individual crops.

This type of insurance is authorized in 50 counties with the same formula for expansion applying as in the commodity-insurance program.

As has been previously stated, prior to the new act of 1947 going into effect, the crop-insurance program was conducted at considerable loss. Since the new experimental program has been in effect, it has operated on a sound basis. It is thought, therefore, that it is only fair that the loss under the old program be charged off as part of the loss of developing crop insurance on a trial-and-error basis and that the experimental program on which the corporation is now engaged not be burdened with the deficit of the trial-and-error program.

This bill charges off the deficit of approximately $73,000,000 that was incurred under the old program.

The present law has a provision in it that, if the premiums and reserves on any commodity are not adequate in any year to meet the losses on any commodity, the losses would be paid only on a pro rata production basis which means that farmers would have no guaranteed protection in any widespread failure and it would not be possible to indemnify a farmer for any loss until the entire loss was known and the claims approved. The present bill remedies that situation.

The present law provides that, starting in 1950, the administrative expenses shall be limited to not in excess of 25 percent of the premium collected the preceding year, which provision was adopted in 1944 while the program was on a Nation-wide basis. We are now on an experimental basis, with the hopes that crop insurance will be expanded. This provision will greatly hamper the expansion program, and since the Congress appropriates annually to cover the needs for the Corporation it appears that there is no need for the present limitation and the bill eliminates this provision.

The present law does not cover insurance on livestock. We have recently experienced what can happen to livestock producers. No insurance is available to them. This act authorized the Corporation to conduct research on livestock insurance.

The present law provides that insurance shall be against loss of the insured commodity while in the field due to unavoidable causes. The present bill leaves out the words "while in the field," which will enable the Corporation to conduct its insurance protection until the crop is ready for market.

In most instances the crop is ready for market when it is threshed or otherwise housed in the field. But this is not true as to every crop, particularly tobacco, which crop is not ready for market until it has remained sometime in the curing barn. This amendment permits the Corporation to insure such crops until they are a marketable commodity and their value can be determined. There is no available private insurance to cover this phase of the curing of the crops. Due to the fact that disease or insects can cause much damage while the crop is in the barn being cured and made ready for the market.

All in all, it is thought that much progress has been made since the 1947 act. Provisions in this bill will be most helpful in carrying out the intent of the Congress and in expanding a sound, real insurance program that will be of help to the producers of this country.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. MONRONEY, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 3825) to amend the Federal Crop Insurance Act, pursuant to House Resolution 212, he reported the same back to the House with sundry amendments adopted in the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment? If not, the Chair will put them in gross.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. FARRINGTON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances, in one to include a letter.

TREASURY AND POST OFFICE DEPARTMENTS APPROPRIATION BILL, 1950

Mr. GARY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 3083) making appropriations for the Treasury and Post Office Departments and funds available for Export-Import Bank and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

Mr. COUDERT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, on behalf of the minority there is no objection, but I should like to point out that the Senate has raised the House bill beyond all reason and I certainly hope the conference committee will be able to bring back something closely resembling the House bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. GARY, FERNANDEZ, PASSMAN, CANNON, CANFIELD, and COUDERT.

RECESS

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House stand in recess until 1 o'clock.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 28 minutes p. m.) the House stood in recess until 1 o'clock.

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker at 1 o'clock p. m.

R. C. OWEN AND OTHERS

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I submit a privileged report (No. 611) from the Committee on the Judiciary on the bill (H. R. 1036) for the relief of R. C. Owen, R. C. Owen, Jr., and Roy Owen, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

CONSIDERATION OF H. R. 1036 OVER VETO MESSAGE

Mr. CELLER, from the Committee on the Judiciary, submitted the following report:

The Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1036) for the relief of R. C. Owen, R. C. Owen, Jr., and Roy Owen, former partners doing business as R. C. Owen, of Gallatin, Tenn., together with the objections of the President thereto, having reconsidered said bill and the objections of the President thereto, report the same back to the House with the recommendation that said bill do pass, the objections of the President to the contrary notwithstanding.

This bill, H. R. 1036, provides for payment of the sum of $8,437.98 to R. C. Owen, R. C. Owen, Jr., and Roy Owen, former partners doing business as R. C. Owen, of Gallatin, Tenn.; such sum represents the amount which they paid to the United States for internal-revenue tobacco stamps; such stamps were completely destroyed on December 24, 1945, when a fire destroyed claimants' factory, together with the equipment, tobacco, and tobacco stamps therein.

These stamps, which were in various denominations, were valued at $8,437.98, which was the price paid for them by the said manufacturer. The Treasury Department requires the manufacturer, through his collector of internal revenue, to always keep a record reflecting the amount of stamps on hand and that a report of this balance be returned to the collector once each month. The collector did not require that the records show the various denominations of the stamps but only their total value. The report to the collector reflected only the total value. These records were properly kept by the Owens and at the time of the fire showed stamps on hand of the value set forth in this bill, which were completely destroyed by fire. Not only did the records of the Owens show this but the records of the collector's office at Nashville, Tenn., showed the same thing.

Immediately after the fire, R. C. Owen filed claim on form 843 with the collector of internal revenue, Nashville, Tenn, seeking a refund of the value of the stamps or the stamps themselves replaced, as provided for in sections 156 and 3304, title 26, United States Code Annotated. This claim was filed January 10, 1946. At the time of the fire the records of R. C. Owen indicated the exact amount of the stamps on hand, as well as the amount with which R. C. Owen was charged by the collector of internal revenue. Soon after the fire, Mr. S. C. Willis, a deputy collector for the Nashville, Tenn., office, investigated the fire, acknowledged the loss of these stamps by the fire, and R. C. Owen was given credit against his inventory for these stamps and was no longer charged with them by the collector of internal revenue. This claim has been rejected by the collector of internal revenue and, in turn, rejected by the Commissioner in Washington. The reason given was that heretofore the Secretary of the Treasury ruled that no refund or redemption might be allowed unless the stamps themselves were submitted. However, in this instance, the fire was of an unknown origin and there was no way to submit the stamps or the destruction of the same being supervised by the Commissioner.

The Treasury Department in its report states: "As is commonly known, a person having the misfortune of losing an amount of currency through destruction by fire may recover his loss by claim upon the Government only to the extent that the currency can be submitted in recognizable form for replacement. Obviously, that rule is necessary to protect the Government against fraudulent claims."

The veto message states: "It appears that claimants' firm was a dealer in leaf tobacco and also a manufacturer of certain tobacco products in Gallatin, Tenn. On the night of December 24, 1945, one of the buildings belonging to the firm, part of which was used as a factory and part as a warehouse, was destroyed by fire. According to affidavits submitted by R. C. Owen, Jr., as a member of the firm, the chief of police, and the assistant chief of the fire department, the building, including its contents, was a complete loss. The firm filed a claim with the Bureau of Internal Revenue for the value of the tobacco stamps allegedly on hand in the factory at the time of the fire and therefore destroyed by it, but this claim was disapproved by that Bureau on the ground that under existing law refund could be made only where the stamps were submitted to the Bureau in a recognizable condition or were destroyed under the supervision of a deputy collector.

"A person who loses currency through destruction by fire may recover such loss only to the extent that such currency can be submitted in a recognizable form for replacement. Such rule is necessary to protect the Government against fraudulent claims. A similar situation prevails with regard to postage stamps. The Government does not assume the obligation of an insurer at the time of selling internal-revenue stamps to a taxpayer for subsequent use in payment of a particular excise tax. Enactment of the bill would grant relief to this firm which is not granted to other persons similarly situated, and such special treatment would be discriminatory against taxpayers generally.

"The regulations which prohibit refunds in cases of this type were promulgated with the view to preventing frauds upon the Government. The situation of claimant firm is not different from that of a number of other persons who have been refused refunds because of their inability to comply with the regulations pertaining to such refunds. The Government cannot make refund in the absence of satisfactory proof that the stamps in question were actually destroyed.

"Accordingly, I am unable to approve the bill."

The attention of the House is called to a report submitted to the Committee on the Judiciary, dated August 26, 1948, which states as follows:

"FOR THE RELIEF OF JAMES G. SMYTH (INTERNAL REVENUE COLLECTOR)

"The facts in the case are as follows: On April 6, 1948, Mrs. Idyl Acuff, stamp deputy of the Santa Rosa, Calif., branch office of the first California internal revenue collection district, received a shipment of wine stamps from the main office at San Francisco, Calif. The shipment consisted of 50,000 stamps of the 60-cent denomination, 50,000 stamps of the $1.44 denomination, 10,000 stamps of the $5 denomination, and 100 stamps of the $500 denomination. The stamps were unwrapped and counted by Mrs. Acuff and found to agree with the invoice. Pending verification of the count, the wrappings were preserved on top of one of the safes, of which there were three in the Santa Rosa office. In storing the stamps, the Santa Rosa office keeps those of large denominations, used for evidencing tax payment on tank lot withdrawals, in a separate manila envelope. To complete storage of the shipment in question, this envelope was taken from the safe for insertion of the $500 denomination stamps, consisting of 2 sheets of 50 each. The prior contents of the envelope consisted of 31 stamps of the $3,000 denomination. All evidence points to the fact that through some quirk of fate the envelope was associated with the shipment wrappings which were deposited in a waste basket after verification of their contents. Early the next morning the janitor dumped the contents of the office waste baskets into a pasteboard carton, without examination of the contents, and incinerated the carton in the building furnace.

"Later in the morning of April 7, 1948, the office had an order for a $3,000 denomination of stamp, and, not being able to locate the envelope, Mrs. Acuff and Deputy Collector Walter J. Butler went to the furnace room to examine the wastepaper collection, but which in the meantime had been incinerated. The ashes were raked out, but all paper had been completely consumed by fire.

"This stamp loss was thoroughly investigated by Special Intelligence Agent Anthony Sherman with the conclusion that the stamps were destroyed as stated.

"Shortly after the stamp loss was discovered the Santa Rosa office was checked and examined by Supervisor of Accounts and Collections Frank L. Blote, who found the stamp accounts in perfect condition, except for the shortage of 100 stamps of the $500 denomination and 31 stamps of the $3,000 denomination. There was no evidence of the safes having been tampered with or in fact of any theft. Acting District Supervisor J. F. Corridan, alcohol tax unit, will have all $500 and $3,000 wine stamps presented for cancellation in his district checked against purchase orders as a cautionary measure.

"This department is satisfied that the Government has suffered no loss in this case and recommends that bill H. R. 6562 for the relief of James G. Smyth be favorably considered."

The committee is unable to reconcile these two reports. Public Law No. 321 of the Eightieth Congress is as follows:

"That the General Accounting Office is authorized, after consideration of the pertinent findings and if in concurrence with the determinations and recommendations of the head of the department or independent establishment concerned, to relieve any disbursing or other accountable officer or agent or former disbursing or other accountable officer or agent of any such department or independent establishment of the Government charged with responsibility on account of physical loss or deficiency of Government funds, vouchers, records, checks, securities, or papers in his charge, if the head of the department or independent establishment determines (1) that such loss or deficiency occurred while such officer or agent was acting in the discharge of his official duties, or that such loss or deficiency occurred by reason of the act or omission of a subordinate of such officer or agent; and (2) that such loss or deficiency occurred without fault or negligence on the part of such officer or agent. This act shall be applicable only to the actual physical loss or deficiency of Government funds, vouchers, records, checks, securities, or papers, and shall not include deficiencies in the accounts of such officers or agents resulting from illegal or erroneous payments."

And relief has been given many Government employees under this law. However, there is no law to give relief to private business, and it would appear to the committee that it is discriminatory for the departments to give relief to Federal employees and to oppose legislation which passed the Congress for the relief of private business.

The report in connection with relief for James G. Smyth, collector for the Bureau of Internal Revenue for the west California district, is not consistent with the report and veto on H. R. 1036 for the relief of the R. C. Owen Tobacco Co. Also, in this report it is stated that the Department was satisfied that the Government had suffered no loss in this case and recommended that it be given favorable consideration. The Committee on the Judiciary is unable to see where the Government had any loss in the R. C. Owen Tobacco Co. claim. The amount in which the Treasury Department desires to relieve Mr. Smyth is $143,000, while the Owen claim amounts to only $8,437.98. The Treasury Department also states that to give the Owens relief would be giving special treatment in discrimination against taxpayers generally. It would appear that the same situation should apply to Mr. Smyth, the internal-revenue collector of California. However, the Department doesn't appear to feel that way about the matter.

[H. Doc. 161, 81st Cong., 1st sess.]

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, RETURNING WITHOUT APPROVAL A BILL (H. R. 1036) FOR THE RELIEF OF R. C. OWEN, R. C. OWEN, JR., AND ROY OWEN

To the House of Representatives:

I return herewith, without my approval, the enrolled bill (H. R. 1036) for the relief of R. C. Owen, R. C. Owen, Jr., and Roy Owen.

The bill provides for payment of the sum of $8,437.98, to R. C. Owen, R. C. Owen, Jr., and Roy Owen, former partners doing business as R. C. Owen, of Gallatin, Tenn., which sum represents the amount they paid to the United States for internal-revenue tobacco stamps, which stamps were completely destroyed on December 24, 1945, when a fire destroyed claimants' factory, together with the equipment, tobacco, and tobacco stamps therein.

It appears that claimants' firm was a dealer in leaf tobacco and also a manufacturer of certain tobacco products in Gallatin, Tenn. On the night of December 24, 1945, one of the buildings belonging to the firm, part of which was used as a factory and part as a warehouse, was destroyed by fire. According to affidavits submitted by R. C. Owen, Jr., as a member of the firm, the chief of police, and the assistant chief of the fire department, the building, including its contents, was a complete loss. The firm filed a claim with the Bureau of Internal Revenue for the value of the tobacco stamps allegedly on hand in the factory at the time of the fire and therefore destroyed by it, but this claim was disapproved by that Bureau on the ground that under existing law refund could be made only where the stamps were submitted to the Bureau in a recognizable condition or were destroyed under the supervision of a deputy collector.

A person who loses currency through destruction by fire may recover such loss only to the extent that such currency can be submitted in a recognizable form for replacement. Such rule is necessary to protect the Government against fraudulent claims. A similar situation prevails with regard to postage stamps. The Government does not assume the obligation of an insurer at the time of selling internal-revenue stamps to a taxpayer for subsequent use in payment of a particular excise tax. Enactment of the bill would grant relief to this firm which is not granted to other persons similarly situated, and such special treatment would be discriminatory against taxpayers generally.

The regulations which prohibit refunds in cases of this type were promulgated with the view to preventing frauds upon the Government. The situation of claimant firm is not different from that of a number of other persons who have been refused refunds because of their inability to comply with the regulations pertaining to such refunds. The Government cannot make refund in the absence of satisfactory proof that the stamps in question were actually destroyed.

Accordingly, I am unable to approve the bill.

HARRY S. TRUMAN.

THE WHITE HOUSE, April 21, 1949.

H. R. 1036

EIGHTY-FIRST CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AT THE FIRST SESSION, BEGUN AND HELD AT THE CITY OF WASHINGTON ON MONDAY, THE 3D DAY OF JANUARY 1949

An act for the relief of R. C. Owen, R. C. Owen, Jr., and Roy Owen

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to R. C. Owen, R. C. Owen, Jr., and Roy Owen, former partners doing business as R. C. Owen, of Gallatin, Tenn., the sum of $8,437.98. This sum represents the amount which they paid to the United States for internal revenue tobacco stamps, which stamps were completely destroyed on December 24, 1945, when a fire destroyed the said tobacco factory of said partners (registered as "Tobacco Factory No. 102, District of Tennessee"), together with the equipment, tobacco, and tobacco stamps therein: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

SAM RAYBURN,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
KENNETH MCKELLAR,
President of the Senate pro tempore.

[Endorsement on back of bill:]

I certify that this act originated in the House of Representatives.

RALPH R. ROBERTS, Clerk.

The SPEAKER. The question is, Will the House, on reconsideration, pass the bill, the objections of the President to the contrary notwithstanding?

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER].

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, it is with great reluctance that the Committee on the Judiciary asks that this action be taken, mainly to pass the bill H. R. 1036, the President's veto notwithstanding. I personally feel apologetic in asking this action but the merits of the case demand just such action. The bill provides for relief of a concern operated by R. C. Owen, his son, and brother in Tennessee, in pursuance of a bill offered by our distinguished colleague from Tennessee [Mr. GORE]. The Government has suffered no loss. There was a fire in which a number of tobacco stamps was destroyed. There was no evidence whatsoever of any negligence, any fraud, any deceit, or any chicanery on the part of these tobacco merchants. This was a clean-cut case. It is a most praiseworthy case and relief should be afforded. It is rather anomalous that in a number of these cases where the Committee on the Judiciary has given relief and the House approved the action of the Committee on the Judiciary, the Treasury Department has approved the granting of relief. Such cases were on all fours with the instant case. But here the Treasury, for some unknown reason, denies relief. I cannot understand such inconsistency. In cases where stamps and even currency was destroyed the Treasury agrees to restitution. In this case the Treasury stubbornly says "No."

Mr. JENNINGS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. I yield.

Mr. JENNINGS. Mr. Speaker, this is a case where a citizen loses by fire tobacco stamps for which he had paid the Government $8,437.98. The deputy collector of internal revenue admits that these stamps had been purchased and were in the hands of the purchasers in their place of business in Gallatin, Tenn., at the time they were burned and completely destroyed on the night of December 24, 1945.

In a similar case, James G. Smyth, internal revenue collector of Santa Rosa, Calif., lost by fire wine stamps of the value of and for which he was charged $143,000 by the internal revenue department. The department recommended the passage of a bill to relieve Mr. Smyth of all liability for said loss. Not only that, but in the last hours of the Eightieth Congress this House passed a bill that had been passed by the Senate, that had also been introduced and sponsored by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HARRISON] for the relief of one of his constituents who was a member of the armed forces of the United States and was captured on Corregidor, and who turned over $1,800 of his money to one of his superior officers who was also a prisoner of the Japanese on the ship on which he, along with many others, was being transported to Japan. The ship was sunk by the Japs. The money was lost. Of course, this soldier had no trace of the money. He was unable to offer it in evidence in support of his claim. Very properly this House passed the bill to reimburse him for the loss of his money, and the President signed the bill.

In my opinion, this is a meritorious claim, just as is another claim which the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HALLECK] has pending before the Committee on the Judiciary of this House. It is not a partisan matter. The question before us now is: Shall we deal justly with an American citizen? Here now, in this House, is the only place to which he can go for justice. Let us give it to him.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. COLMER. Did the Department of the Government admit that these stamps were in the possession of this man?

Mr. CELLER. Yes. They did admit it, and the Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue had supervision of this plant. He reported that there was a fire from unknown causes, which actually destroyed these stamps. And he recommended that the refund be made. But his chiefs in Washington repudiated his recommendation.

Mr. COLMER. This specific amount of stamps?

Mr. CELLER. Correct. Apparently, the officials in Washington refused to abide by the report of the local agent. Treasury said it would refund if evidence of the stamps, even if mutilated or marred, were produced. How can you produce any vestige of stamps if they were destroyed by fire? The Treasury is wrong, and unfortunately the President, urged by the Treasury, is in error. Our action in passing the bill over the President's veto is no reflection on our President, whom we honor and revere. His has been a mistake in judgment in following too closely on the matter the Treasury's recommendation.

Mr. Speaker, I now yield to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORE].

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GORE. Yes; I yield.

Mr. KEEFE. Is it not a fact that in a matter of this character, this tobacco merchant buys his stamps from the Bureau of Internal Revenue in the local collector's office where a record is kept?

Mr. GORE. That is right.

Mr. KEEFE. That is a record of the stamps purchased?

Mr. GORE. That is right.

Mr. KEEFE. And likewise a record is kept of the stamps used?

Mr. GORE. That is right.

Mr. KEEFE. So that in this case, dealing with a matter of revenue stamps, if there was a fire and the stamps were destroyed, the Bureau of Internal Revenue would have a record of the stamps sold and a record of the stamps used. So that the element of fraud would be out of this picture almost conclusively, would it not?

Mr. GORE. The gentleman states a situation which is the fact in this case.

Mr. KEEFE. I cannot see any reason why we do not support the committee on this matter.

Mr. GORE. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GORE. I yield.

Mr. WALTER. Do not the facts disclose that the record of the Department and the record of the claimant under this bill coincide to the penny?

Mr. GORE. Absolutely.

Mr. JENNINGS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GORE. I yield.

Mr. JENNINGS. The Department makes an adverse report in this matter on two grounds: First, that the people who lost these stamps in this fire could not reproduce the burned stamps; second, because the fire did not occur under the auspices and supervision of the Revenue Department.

Mr. GORE. I am grateful for the gentleman's contribution.

Mr. REED of New York. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GORE. I yield.

Mr. REED of New York. If I understood the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. JENNINGS] correctly, he gave an instance of a bill being passed in the last Congress to pay the claim of a soldier on Corregidor, who turned his money over to an officer, and then it was lost at sea, and that bill passed the House and was approved by the President. Now, why should we approve that bill and not approve this one?

Mr. GORE. I thank the gentleman from New York. I wonder if the Members would not let me first make a statement of the case. I know it is new to many Members of the House. Of course, I felt reluctant to request the Judiciary Committee to favorably report a bill to pass over the President's veto, which seeks to relieve only one citizen of this great United States of America. It is a small thing upon which to claim the attention of the House, but often the test of the efficacy of a democracy is the manner in which it can deal with small things, individual citizens, for instance.

Here is a just claim, in my opinion. I would like to say that, although this man is a constituent of mine, he is, upon occasion, of opposite political persuasion. I owe him no personal or political obligation, but he is a fellow citizen and a constituent, and, in my opinion, he has a just claim. When a citizen has a just claim he is entitled to relief some place. This citizen has been denied relief except on the floor of Congress.

What are the facts? He is a small manufacturer of smoking tobacco. He possessed certain Government revenue stamps, an obligation, mind you, which the Congress imposed upon him in consequence of the operation of his business. Also, we impose upon all private citizens having revenue stamps—and this differentiates between the case of currency destruction and revenue stamps as referred to by the gentleman from Wisconsin—the obligation of keeping an accurate inventory of the stamps in his possession; likewise, the collector of internal revenue is required to keep an accurate inventory of the revenue stamps in the possession of all citizens. On Christmas eve night, 1945, this small but old concern burned, burned completely. There is incontrovertible evidence that the stamps were burned; as a matter of fact, the deputy collector of internal revenue at Nashville, Tenn., came out and investigated the fire. His inventory compared to the penny with the inventory of this private citizen who possessed Government revenue stamps, not because he courted them but because his Government imposed upon him the obligation of placing such stamps upon his product.

After investigation, the deputy collector relieved this private citizen of the obligation of possession, crediting his inventory with destruction of stamps. Thereby, this agent of the Government recognized and acknowledged the destruction of these stamps by fire.

This is no partisan matter; I think enactment of this bill might serve well to bring some order out of chaos, this uncoordinated writing of veto messages by various Government agencies which, of course are—well, I do not see how the President of the United States could possibly give very much time and attention to a veto message upon so small a matter as this. Whether or not he actually wrote the message I do not know, but the message of the veto is on all fours with the statement of the Treasury Department in opposition to enactment of the bill. Despite the Treasury objection, this Congress passed the bill unanimously.

I find, however, that the Treasury Department sent up a recommendation for the passage of a bill providing relief in the amount of $143,000 to the collector of internal revenue of the State of California for revenue stamps which he said were lost. He lost them. He thinks they found their way into the waste basket, and in all probability burned. The Treasury now recommends under those circumstances, that because this internal revenue collector misplaced or lost stamps which may have found their way into the incinerator, they recommend giving that fellow relief. On what grounds? Because, as they say, the Government suffered no loss.

We know what happened to my constituent's stamps; they got burned up; and neither did the Government suffer any loss in this case. This manufacturer, this small-business man, bought the stamps from the internal revenue collector and paid for them. They are gone, now, transmuted into carbon and gas.

In the first instance, this claim is just; in the second instance, I think it is right for this Congress to give relief to an individual citizen who has a just claim who cannot get relief any other place.

Mr. EVINS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GORE. I yield.

Mr. EVINS. I merely wish to state that I know the parties who bought these stamps. They are honorable and upright citizens. They would not make a false statement. They are very honorable, outstanding citizens.

Mr. GORE. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. CHELF. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GORE. I yield.

Mr. CHELF. I may say to the gentleman that he is exactly right in his presentation here and he is supported and substantiated by the facts. The subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary that first had to do with this bill reported it favorably and unanimously. The full committee acting upon their recommendation did likewise. When the bill was vetoed and came back to our committee for decision as to whether it would be voted up or down, to the contrary of the President's veto, it was likewise unanimously voted that the bill should be brought before the House for decision.

I am a Democrat and I have a great amount of loyalty to my party and to my President, but if I have to make a choice between a friendship on the one hand and right or wrong on the other, I will vote to override the President's veto if I think he is wrong. The gentleman is right, his constituent is right and is entitled to a rebate, and I am going to vote to override the veto.

Mr. GORE. I thank the able and forthright gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GORE. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. KEATING. As a member of the Committee on the Judiciary Subcommittee dealing with this claim, it appears to me that it is a just claim and that the only distinction between the claim of the gentleman from Tennessee and that which was approved by a Government department is that the gentleman's constituent did not happen to be one of the boys.

Mr. GORE. The gentleman's assistance is appreciated.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GORE. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Is it not true, as a matter of fact, that the President does not personally pass upon vetoes of this nature; that they are written by someone down in a department?

Mr. GORE. In this case I do not know.

Mr. ANDERSON of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GORE. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. ANDERSON of California. I think the gentleman has made an excellent case; and if he will let the House vote, I believe we will pass his bill.

Mr. GORE. I thank the gentleman. Perhaps he has made a valuable suggestion.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is, Will the House, on reconsideration, pass the bill, the objections of the President to the contrary notwithstanding?

Under the Constitution, this vote must be determined by the yeas and nays.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 318, nays 49, not voting 64, as follows:

CHANGE OF CONFEREES ON GOVERNMENT REORGANIZATION BILL

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following communication, which was read by the Clerk:

MAY 18, 1949.

Mr. SPEAKER: On account of previous engagements over the week end I will not be in Washington and I have asked of my chairman, Mr. DAWSON, that another be selected in my place as conferee on the reorganization bill, H. R. 2361.

Thanks for your consideration.

I am,

Respectfully,

ROBERT F. RICH.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the resignation is accepted.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. LOVRE] as a substitute conferee; and the Clerk will notify the Senate of the change.

COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION AND LABOR

Mr. POWELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee of the Committee on Education and Labor considering the bill H. R. 4453 may sit during general debate during sessions of the House this afternoon.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. WOODRUFF asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and to include therein an address by Mr. Clark L. Brody, executive secretary of the Michigan Farm Bureau.

Mr. BURDICK asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include a statement in regard to payments to retired Army men.

Mr. LANE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include a letter from a constituent.

Mr. MITCHELL asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include two letters.

Mr. McKINNON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include an article appearing in the newspaper.

Mr. DAVIS of Georgia asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include a newspaper article.

Mr. VAN ZANDT asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD on the subject of shortage of doctors in the Department of National Defense.

Mr. SABATH asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances; in one to include an article from the Chicago Daily News on conditions in the country, and in the other a speech delivered by the Honorable James Farley to the Boys' Club in Chicago.

JOINT COMMITTEE ON LOBBYING ACTIVITIES

Mr. SABATH, from the Committee on Rules, reported a privileged resolution (H. Con. Res. 62, Rept. No. 612), which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of House Concurrent Resolution 62.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the concurrent resolution, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there is hereby established a joint congressional committee to be known as the Joint Committee on Lobbying Activities (hereinafter referred to as the committee), which shall be composed of seven Members of the Senate to be appointed by the President of the Senate and seven Members of the House of Representatives to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

SEC. 2. A vacancy in the membership of the committee shall not affect the power of the remaining members to execute the functions of the committee, and shall be filled in the same manner as in the case of the original appointment. The members of the committee shall select a chairman from among their number. The members of the committee shall serve without compensation in addition to that received for their services as Members of Congress; but they shall be reimbursed for travel, subsistence, and other necessary expenses incurred by them in the performance of their duties as members of the committee, other than expenses in connection with meetings of the committee held in the District of Columbia during such times as the Congress is in session.

SEC. 3. It shall be the duty of the committee—

(1) to make a full and complete investigation of all lobbying activities intended to influence, encourage, promote, or retard legislation;

(2) to make a full and complete investigation of all activities of agencies of the Federal Government intended to influence, encourage, promote, or retard legislation;

(3) to report from time to time to the Senate (or to the Secretary of the Senate if the Senate is not in session) and to the House of Representatives (or to the Clerk of the House if the House is not in session) the results of its study and investigation, together with such recommendations as it deems advisable.

SEC. 4. The committee, or any subcommittee thereof, shall have power to hold hearings and to sit and act at such places and times, to require by subpena or otherwise the attendance of such witnesses, and the production of such books, papers, documents, and tangible things, to administer such oaths, to take such testimony, to procure such binding and printing, and to make such expenditures as it deems advisable. Subpenas shall be issued under the signature of the chairman of the committee and shall be served by any person designated by him. The cost of stenographic services in reporting such hearings as the committee may hold shall not be in excess of 25 cents per hundred words.

SEC. 5. The committee is authorized to appoint and fix the compensation of such experts and such clerical, stenographic, and other assistants as it deems advisable.

SEC. 6. The expenses of the committee shall be paid one-half from the contingent fund of the Senate and one-half from the contingent fund of the House of Representatives upon vouchers approved by the chairman of the committee.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, after I conclude I will yield 30 minutes to my colleague the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BROWN].

Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether the Members heard the reading of this resolution, so consequently I will make a short explanation of what it intends to do. The resolution intends to appoint a joint committee of the House and the Senate, seven Members from each body, four Democrats and three Republicans from the House, and the same from the Senate, for the purpose of investigating the lobbyists that have infested this Capitol for these many years, especially the last few years. This resolution has been broadened by the Committee on Rules so that it will also embrace activities of the agencies of the Federal Government. It provides for making a full and complete investigation of all lobbying activities intended to influence, encourage, promote, or retard legislation, also to make a full and complete investigation of all activities of agencies of the Federal Government intended to influence, encourage, promote, or retard legislation.

From time to time we have heard from many of these gentlemen, some of whom draw as much as $150,000 a year, lobbying and trying to urge and retard various legislation for which they have been hired by corporations or groups. However, many times these lobbyists have succeeded in securing employment from various manufacturers and businessmen under the pretense that they can influence and sway the Members of Congress. In many instances these lobbyists obtain their money by fraud and misrepresentation, because I know of many of them, and I know they cannot deliver anybody, and further, I doubt very much that they can influence the membership. However, they are here annoying and harassing the Members from day to day. I feel that we should know just exactly what legislation should be enacted to put a stop to this infamous practice that has prevailed now for many years.

I remember years ago when the country was very excited over the legislation intended to affect the activities of the holding companies and power combines, as evidenced by the report that they spent over $2,000,000 under the leadership of Hopson in an endeavor to kill that legislation, which they designated as a death sentence to the power and utility companies. As many of you older Members recall, this legislation was eventually enacted and the power companies are still very much alive notwithstanding the fact that this law is on the statute books today.

I know that in the last few years many more millions have been spent on the part of many corporations and businesses who are endeavoring to enact legislation in their favor and stop legislation which they are opposed to. Many of you older members remember that I have attacked these professional lobbyists for years. I introduced a bill 4 years ago, the provisions of which are embodied in the present Legislative Reorganization Act but which unfortunately, is not clear enough and does not not go far enough, for the abuses still continue. This committee will recommend "teeth" that can properly be enacted into law thereby eliminating these abuses.

I am indeed gratified and it gives me sincere pleasure to support the resolution that has been introduced by the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BUCHANAN], a man of great ability and a person with an exceptionally fair mind. If appointed chairman of this committee to investigate lobby activities, as I believe he will, I am certain that he will make a thorough and honest investigation without any unjustified smearing of anyone, for I am confident that such an investigation will give us an opportunity and basis for proceeding further on corrective legislation designed to eliminate permanently these infamous lobbying practices. I intended to mention the names of some of these lobbyists but I will forego mentioning their names because I feel that after the committee has been appointed and makes its investigation, light will be shed on some of those things in this regard, which came to my attention during the last few years.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MICHENER].

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, I take this minute to inquire of the majority leader what the program will be for the rest of the week and for next week, insofar as he is able to state it.

Mr. McCORMACK. I am unable to state now the program for next week, but shall do so tomorrow.

The pending concurrent resolution is the last business for today.

Tomorrow there will be the joint session at which the President of Brazil will be the guest of the Congress. Following that will come the consideration of the Army pay-increase bill. If that bill is disposed of tomorrow, which I hope it will be, I expect to ask unanimous consent that the House adjourn over until Monday.

Mr MICHENER. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 10 minutes, and ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, as the gentleman from Illinois, the chairman of the Committee on Rules, has told you, House Concurrent Resolution 62, introduced by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BUCHANAN], provides for the creation of a Joint Committee on Lobbying Activities, to consist of 14 Members, 7 from the House and 7 from the Senate. It is my understanding that there will be 4 Members from the majority party and 3 from the minority party named from each branch of the Congress.

The duties of the committee are set forth under three particular paragraphs or provisions of the resolution.

First, it shall be the duty of the committee to make a full and complete investigation of all lobbying activities, intended to influence, encourage, promote, or retard legislation.

Second, and this particular provision, I might add, was written into the resolution by action of the Committee on Rules, which had original jurisdiction over this resolution, to make a full and complete investigation of all activities of agencies of the Federal Government intended to influence, encourage, promote, or retard legislation.

Third, the final duty and responsibility of this committee, if it is created, is to report from time to time to the Senate and to the House the results of its studies and investigations, together with such recommendations as it deems advisable.

Mr. Speaker, I recall that in the Seventy-ninth Congress the gentleman from Illinois, the chairman of the Committee on Rules [Mr. SABATH], introduced a resolution to investigate lobbying activities at that time. I supported that measure, but for some reason or other it was never acted upon by the Committee on Rules, and consequently no investigation was ever conducted.

I do not believe any fair-minded person in the Congress or out of the Congress can object to the proper kind of investigation of lobbying activities. We realize fully that in the minds of the public there is often some thing rather reprehensible connected with the words "lobby," or "lobbyist," or "lobbying." Yet, there are many good lobbyists. Under the rather complex economic system and governmental structure which we have created, perhaps it has become a necessity for different groups and organizations to have some representative spend a great deal of time keeping tab on the activities of the legislative branch of the Government. Since we passed the new Lobbying Act, there has been many questions raised as to just who, just what individuals and what organizations, are covered by that law, and who must register as lobbyists under the act. There are many individuals in and out of Washington who, of necessity, for their own protection, or for that of the business or industry in which they are engaged, must keep in rather close contact with the Congress and know exactly what is going on in a legislative way at the Capitol. Today any action taken by the Congress may vitally affect some business or industry or individual, as well as business or individual investments and incomes, and all of the varied activities of the business and industrial world. I want to express the hope that this committee, if authorized, will not engage in a witch hunt, or act for the purpose of embarrassing any individual or any representative group in America that has a legitimate right to keep in contact with the activities of Congress and to present the views of themselves individually, or of the organizations they represent to the various Members of Congress, so long as their activities are conducted in the proper manner. Certainly I would not support legislation, such as this, if I thought for one moment that the committee created by this resolution was for the purpose of smearing anyone, or scaring anyone, or saying to an individual businessman or to any business concern: "You had better not go down to Washington, or write a letter to your Congressman, or see him at his home about anything that Congress may have before it which will affect your welfare, or you are liable to get in trouble. Neither do I want any American to be made to feel he is liable to have a committee down here in Congress yank him before it and smear him all over the lot because he may have the temerity to tell his Representative in the Congress of the United States what he thinks about pending legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that such a policy is not to be followed. I might add that we were given assurances in the Committee on Rules by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BUCHANAN], the author of the legislation, that such is not his intent or purpose. Originally the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BUCHANAN] had introduced a House resolution to establish a special House committee to carry on this investigation. Later there was a similar resolution introduced in the Senate for the naming of a Senate committee for the same purpose. This concurrent resolution is before us providing that a joint committee be created so that both bodies will be represented as a better method of procedure than having two separate committees looking into the same situation.

I mentioned a moment ago that the Committee on Rules, acting or sitting as a legislative committee, had adopted an amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] to add a section to this resolution to authorize and require the joint committee, if it is created, to make a full and complete investigation of all activities of the various agencies of the Federal Government intended to influence, encourage, promote, or retard legislation. That amendment was adopted for a very, very pertinent reason. There are all sorts of lobbyists, when it comes right down to real lobbying activities, as you well know. I am rather convinced that the greatest lobbying I have ever seen, and the most influence I have ever felt in connection with legislation, since I have been a Member of Congress, has been by and from some of the bureaucratic agencies of our Federal Government. I say to you, we have no business attempting to put a halter on the activities of the representatives of private individuals, business, or industry in connection with legislation, unless we exert exactly the same restraining influence upon the various agencies of government who are conducting lobbying activities, or conducting pressure campaigns with the people's money, in the attempt to influence the people's representatives in their legislative work in the Halls of Congress.

We have had several examples of that. We certainly had a plain example, as developed by the House Committee on Expenditures, in connection with the activities of some of the agencies of Government interested in putting across a certain public health program, or, should I speak frankly and say, socialized medicine. I personally experienced the pressure a Government agency could exert on a Member of Congress in connection with universal military training legislation before the last Congress.

Recently there has been a great deal of cloak-room gossip as to just how certain aviation contracts, if I might mention one illustration, have been obtained. I am not at all sure that the committee created under this resolution could go into the question of influence used in connection with obtaining such contracts from Government agencies, but that is another form of lobbying—although outside of Congress.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself three additional minutes.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. McCORMACK. I suppose the gentleman also has in mind, although he has not expressed it, but I am sure that must be running through his mind, the reorganization bill as it passed the House and is now in conference. Certainly there has been one bureau or agency of Government that has been very powerful in retarding the passage of the legislation. There are many of us who are friends of that activity who are very much disturbed about the extent to which they have gone. I am referring to the United States Army engineers.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Yes. I do have in mind that particular activity, but I also have in mind the activities of a number of the other agencies of Government. Of course, you and I all know there is a law on the statute books which makes it a criminal offense for any agency of Government or for any public official to spend public funds for the purpose of influencing legislative action by the Congress. Yet that law has been violated time after time without any action being taken by our law-enforcement officers against those who have violated it. Yes, I do have those things in mind.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. HALLECK. I have been looking at section 3, subparagraph (1), of the resolution, which provides that it shall be the duty of the committee to make a full and complete investigation of all lobbying activities, intended to influence, encourage, promote, or retard legislation. I do not find anywhere in the legislation any definition of the term "lobbying." I take it that would be broader than the activities of registered lobbyists, under the Congressional Reorganization Act. I could well interpret the use of the word there in its generally understood meaning to include not only the efforts of registered lobbyists, in the Government or out of the Government, in any capacity, who are engaging in what is commonly known as lobbying to influence the passage or prevent the passage of legislation.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I am glad the gentleman from Indiana has brought up that particular point because I have been very much concerned over that same question. When this resolution was before the Committee on Rules, I suggested that we insert the word "paid" before "lobbying activities," so as to differentiate between those who come here representing themselves or their own private business and those persons who are receiving compensation for their activities as hired representatives of some organization attempting to influence legislation. I think that perhaps if that amendment were added to this legislation in conjunction with section 2 it would probably cover the practices we want to investigate without bothering any individual businessman or citizen who may come to Congress to express his individual opinion concerning his own efforts or industry.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. HALLECK. I am glad to hear the gentleman make the statement that he has just made because, speaking only for myself, I certainly would not want to be a party to anything that would undertake to deprive an American citizen, whatever his business, profession, or position, from petitioning the Congress for a redress of grievances or operating in his own interest in such a way as he sees fit in connection with Congress or the individual Members of Congress. In other words, what I am trying to say is that, in my opinion, we would not be doing the committee or the Congress a service if any such investigation as might be contemplated would be calculated to deprive the individual citizen of the right that he ought to have to make his voice heard and his influence felt in affairs of Government, so long as it is properly exercised.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I thank the gentleman from Indiana. If the Constitution of the United States still means what I have always believed it to mean, I rather question that any congressional committee can long violate the rights of any individual to petition his Congress; and I doubt that the courts can or will permit any program or investigation to be carried on which will prevent an individual citizen from exercising the constitutional right to petition the Congress. I join with the gentleman in expressing the hope that this committee will not in any way attempt to invade the rights or privileges of the individual citizen to make known his position on legislative matters to his representatives in the Congress of the United States. After all, we do represent the people here, and they have not only the right, but the duty, to tell us what they think.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. MICHENER. The purpose of the resolution is undoubtedly laudable. It would be very difficult to write language that would satisfy everybody everywhere in every way as we want them safeguarded, but I wish to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that in the final analysis no law is better than its administration. Whether or not this resolution is effective and just, will depend upon the action of the personnel of the committee. I feel sure that the Speaker, who will name the membership from the House side, will take particular interest in this particular resolution and select a committee which will do that which the House wants done.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I thank the gentleman from Michigan very much. It, of course, is my belief and my hope, that the personnel of this committee will be of such high character as the gentleman suggests. I am sure the Speaker on this body will name such a committee, and that without question the proper rights and privileges of all citizens will be protected during any investigation made by the committee. I hope, however, that before this debate is concluded, the sponsors of this legislation will give full assurances here on the floor to the House that the rights of all individuals will be properly safeguarded and protected, that there will be no attempt by the committee to in any way frighten, scare, or smear anyone, and that there will be a full and complete investigation of the activities of all Government agencies as well as of certain other organizations which seemingly have not paid any attention to our lobbying laws.

I hope there will be a careful investigation of all such activities, including the use of Government planes and transportation by those public officials who have been running around the country in the last few months busily engaged in building up pressure groups and pressure influence to control the actions of this Congress on several pieces of very important legislation. If that assurance is given, then I think we can all support the resolution.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. SABATH. This is merely giving the power to the committee to make an investigation but not to report legislation.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. The committee may make recommendations only, and not report legislative bills.

Mr. SABATH. As I stated to the House before, I am positive that the Speaker will appoint only competent men.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I have the same confidence in our great Speaker of the House that the gentleman has expressed.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK].

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BROWN] need have no fear about any investigation controlled by the Democrats being fair. The Democratic Party is noted for its fairness, for its decency, and when we investigate we do not undertake to smear. We seek the facts.

During the last few years I was a minority member of three investigating committees and I could write a book on what happened. So the gentleman from Ohio need have no fear along those lines. He knows because he served as a member of the Committee on Expenditures during the last 2 years, on which committee I served also, and I think we were together on one other investigating committee. We Democrats always do the right thing.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. The right thing in the wrong way.

Mr. McCORMACK. Well, of course, of one thing I am certain. I knew a bill was going through the other day although I was not on the floor. I knew it was going through, though. The gentleman was on the floor and did not know it was going through.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. That is right.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. May I just add that I think the Democrats do the right thing if we can get them to agree but it is like the situation today, it is a matter of getting the Democrats to agree on the right thing to do. The Republicans usually agree.

Mr. McCORMACK. I may say to the gentleman that there is harmony on this matter. Of course, there is an amendment in there which means nothing. I refer to the investigation of Government departments, which would come under this resolution anyway. In addition, there is a criminal statute against the use of public funds for propaganda purposes. So my Republican friends may have the consolation of going along with this resolution because someone offered an amendment which was covered by the original resolution anyway. The amendment does not add anything because it is already covered by law.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. GROSS. Is the gentleman in favor of this resolution or against it?

Mr. McCORMACK. I think I am the motivating influence for bringing it in.

Mr. GROSS. Perhaps this is not needed because, as the gentleman says, we already have criminal law on the subject.

Mr. McCORMACK. No. I referred to the amendment relating to the Federal agencies and departments. I said that was not necessary.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. VORYS. I hope what the gentleman said was facetious, because I am alarmed.

Does the gentleman mean that the section of this resolution referring to an investigation of the agencies of the Federal Government does not mean anything?

Mr. McCORMACK. It does not add anything to the resolution. I will withdraw the word "mean." It does not add anything to the resolution because the original resolution would cover it anyway.

Mr. VORYS. But the gentleman said that since it was covered by a criminal statute, that there would be no investigation in the matter.

Mr. McCORMACK. Oh, no.

Mr. VORYS. It is my hope that there will be an investigation as to whether criminal statutes are being violated by these agencies.

Mr. McCORMACK. I did not say that there would be no investigation.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman three additional minutes.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. MICHENER. My friend is generally so sound in his argument that I am rather concerned about his observation with reference to subsection 1. Subsection 1 would authorize this committee to make a full and complete investigation of all lobbying activities intended to influence, encourage, promote, or retard legislation. Now, the gentleman has indicated that that is just so much window-dressing; that it has no vitality; that it has no force or effect, because there is now a criminal law covering the subject matter. May I call his attention to this, that the criminal law to which he refers, fixes a penalty for a violation of a statute, and the investigating, if any, must be done entirely by the law-enforcing agency of the Government. This provision would set up a congressional investigation; that is, there might be two investigations at the same time—one by the Department of Justice and the other by the Congress.

Mr. McCORMACK. What I said was this, that the original resolution would cover the specific language put in by the Committee on Rules. I do not think there is any disagreement about what the gentleman from Michigan said and what I heretofore said in that respect. I agree with the gentleman from Indiana that a joint committee is highly advisable. It is only right and proper that it should be a joint investigating committee. I know that there will be no smearing. This will be as serious an investigation as possible. I know that the Speaker will appoint, and the minority leader will recommend to him on the Republican side, outstanding Members. This is a very important matter, not only concerning whether there are any amendments to existing lobbying statutes necessary, but whether there is any improper lobbying going on. Lobbying, in itself, is all right; there is nothing wrong with that if it is done legitimately.

Furthermore, it must be clearly kept in mind that there is a distinction between lobbying and the right of petition. The right of petition is one of the four cornerstones of personal liberty. I do not think any of our businessmen or labor men should be denied the right of petition. My friend from Ohio talked about small business; I also include labor, small business, the farmers, and everyone else. They are not violating any law by writing us or seeing us or contacting us in any way, and certainly none of them need be scared. One thing is certain. According to the records there have been about $40,000,000 paid in for some activities of this kind, and only $9,000,000 per year have gone for salaries. It might be interesting to know where the other money went.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. BURDICK].

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, I intended to take 2 minutes on this subject, but the majority leader has expressed my views exactly, so I will yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY].

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Speaker, no one can deny the need to do the job this resolution provides be done here in Congress. I compliment my colleague, a distinguished fellow member of the Committee on Banking and Currency, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BUCHANAN] on his interest in this matter.

I rise merely to express the deep regret that, as we undertake this important assignment on lobbying activities, we do not follow better organizational procedures and insist that the regular standing committee of the House having jurisdiction over lobbying activities, which is the Committee on the Judiciary, take that up as a part of its regular work, even operating as a joint committee with the Senate Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GRAHAM. Does the gentleman know that 43 percent of all the bills introduced in this House this year have been referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and that we have our hands full?

Mr. MONRONEY. I am very familiar with the work load the Committee on the Judiciary has. However, much of that is a private-bill load, which I believe they should divest themselves of by passing general legislation.

Mr. GRAHAM. Nevertheless, the gentlemen on the Reorganization Committee put that work on us.

Mr. MONRONEY. Indeed they did. They thought you would get rid of much of your work load of private immigration bills and private claims bills. Two or three things were missed in that Reorganization Act. We do think that if you would divest yourselves of much of that load of private bills, you would have more time for the general legislation.

Evidently the House is not going to try to follow this line of organization. I think it is unfortunate because when this committee does report its findings and recommends proposed changes in the Lobbying Act, it should have the powers of the standing committee to take that legislation right on through.

I again compliment my distinguished friend from Pennsylvania. The original resolution provided for such an investigation by the House Judiciary Committee. It is obvious the Judiciary Committee is too overloaded at this time to take up this added work. But I cannot help but express regret that we are not sticking closer to organizational lines, because the setting up of every single special committee, whether it be a special committee of the House or a joint committee of the House and Senate, tends to destroy and tear down the jurisdictional lines of the regular standing committees of the Congress.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Utah [Mrs. BOSONE].

Mrs. BOSONE. Mr. Speaker, I heard of this concurrent resolution for the first time this afternoon. I am sorry I cannot support this type of legislation. I am shocked at this measure. I have heard of bootleg whisky, and I have heard of bootleg cigarettes, and now, if this resolution is adopted, I am sure I am going to hear of bootleg lobbyists.

I wonder how we are going to touch the lobbyist who gets himself elected to a legislative body. What are we going to do with that one? The most vicious of all lobbyists is the selfish person who represents certain selfish interests and then gets himself or herself elected. That occurs not only in one legislative body but you and I know, since most of us have had experience in State legislatures, that it happens there, and maybe in the Congress of the United States.

If we pass this bill and vote "yes," we are casting aspersions upon our own intelligence, our own understanding, and our own integrity and courage, so I could not vote "yes" on this type of bill. If you and I, who have reached the national level of being Members of Congress, cannot withstand the individual lobbyists and the group lobbyists and the pressure lobbyists, we should not be here. So I shall vote "no" if that opportunity comes.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remaining time on this side to the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] and ask if the gentleman would yield to me for a moment.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I yield.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I would like to ask the gentleman, in view of the statement made by our distinguished friend, the majority leader, if it is not a fact that in the consideration of this legislation by the Committee on Rules, the sponsor of the legislation agreed that there was some question as to whether the measure, as originally drawn, would permit the proper study and investigation of the activities of the various agencies of the Federal Government in influencing legislation and that for that reason in order to make certain that the investigation could cover all attempts to influence legislation, the Committee on Rules, by unanimous vote, saw fit to adopt the amendment which added paragraph 2 to section 3 on page 2. Is that correct?

Mr. WADSWORTH. In reply to the gentleman from Ohio, I will say that that is my impression, to the best of my recollection of the discussions which took place in the Committee on Rules.

Mr. Speaker, I may seem somewhat unconventional as I proceed for a few moments, in that I shall not mention the name Republican or Democrat. This is a very, very difficult problem. The Congress embarked upon this legislative experiment 2 or 3 years ago with the best of intention. The best information that comes to us is that there is an element of uncertainty in the minds of thousands of people as to just what the present law means and how far it extends. Many persons in reading the law say "Well, it looks as if I will have to register." Other people, perfectly honest, reading the law, reach the conclusion that they do not have to register. I think this has never been construed with the degree of certainty that would be desirable. It is pretty hard to say just when a man is a typical lobbyist and when he is not. My conception of the meaning of the word "lobbyist" is that he is a person who is paid professionally to represent an interest. The interest in itself may be entirely legitimate. Yet, on the other hand, you may find a concern situated 500 miles from Washington that may say to its vice president or to its head, "We want you to go to Washington to talk to our Members of Congress and to our Senators and with others whom you may know, about certain legislation, and we will pay your expenses for going to Washington." Is he a professional lobbyist?

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I yield to the gentleman for just a moment.

Mr. VORYS. The word "lobbying" is defined in the existing law. Would this resolution not be defining it in terms of that definition?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Probably not.

Mr. VORYS. Has the Committee on Rules looked into that?

Mr. WADSWORTH. The Committee on Rules did its best to do justice to the problem. I cannot say to the gentleman from Ohio that the Committee on Rules knows all there is to know about it.

Just a moment ago I was giving my own impression of the public's impression of what a lobbyist is. There is a twilight zone and many people find themselves caught in it. There may be some evasion, and probably there is some evasion of the present law, or at least the spirit of the present law, which should be halted. On the other hand, there may be some other people who should not be under the provisions of this act, and who, leaning over backwards—if I may use that expression—would rather be regarded as coming under the provisions of the act than be under suspicion.

The gentleman from Massachusetts has said something about that paragraph which has to do with the investigation of the activities of governmental agencies. I have been in and out of Congress since 1915. I have seen, as you have all seen, the steady growth of the influence of what I may term the bureaucracy. It is inevitable as the Federal Government has assumed a new function, and it assumes three or four new functions in every session of Congress, that naturally those functions have to be administered by another agency created or already a part of the executive establishment. Their number has vastly increased. Their contracts with individual citizens all over the country have become more and more intimate. Obviously, they have become more and more influential with respect to legislation.

Reference has been made to the provision in the criminal statute which forbids the expenditure of Federal funds by any agent of the Federal Government for the purpose of influencing legislation. True, that law is on the statute books. Unfortunately, it has not been enforced in certain instances of which I have personal information. The committee to which reference has already been made, perhaps accidentally, stumbled upon some instances in which the traveling expenses and per diem allowances of Federal employees were paid out of the Federal Treasury for organizing meetings of citizens, scattered over the country, coaching speakers who were to address those meetings, supplying them with the material to be used in their speeches, and then arranging that a resolution should be passed in the public meeting petitioning the Congress to pass legislation for which the Federal agents were propagandizing. That is an absolute violation of the law. They were being paid by the Federal Government while doing that work.

The committee reported these violations to the Attorney General of the United States, with all the evidence in black and white, uncontrovertible; and no action was taken whatsoever. It may be that the Attorney General thought the exposure of those incidents would stop their repetition, and in two departments of Government the exposure did stop repetition of that practice. One was in the War Department. In that case Secretary Royall was most square and fair about the whole thing. My impression was that he did not know what some of his subordinates were doing in the expenditure of Federal money. In any event, he ordered it stopped, and it was stopped immediately.

Perhaps the same result was achieved in the Federal Security Administration with respect to lobbying for socialized medicine, which was being paid for by the Federal Government, and carried on by Federal employees professionally.

In our discussions before the Rules Committee, the author of the resolution, in the best of good faith, gave us the impression that the objective of this resolution was to investigate the workings of the lobbying law of 1947, a part of the Congressional Reorganization Act, and the activities of this committee would be confined to a search-out in that field alone. When reminded that there were other lobbyists, and the most powerful of all of them was the bureaucrat, no objection was made to having the thing made perfectly clear.

I do not envy the job that this committee is going to do. It is going to be a very, very difficult one to actually draw the line of demarcation through that twilight zone which I mentioned a few moments ago, and which will define what we mean in the law, and which will be certain to eliminate from its provisions citizens of the United States who, under the Constitution of the United States, are entitled to petition their Congressmen and the Congress as a whole.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I yield.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. It occurred to me that the instance which the gentleman has cited, where actual violations of law were going on, might be corrected if they were currently going on and were reported to the Comptroller General. As I conceive the responsibility of a man like Lindsay Warren, and the feeling he has about the law, he would put a stop to the payment of salaries or expenses used for illegal purposes if he knew about it in time to do it.

Mr. WADSWORTH. That may be true, but the Comptroller General is not a law-enforcement officer. He cannot bring suit against a violator. He might find ways of withholding his pay, but in the cases I have cited the pay has already gone out.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I understand that; that is why I was wondering. Subparagraph 2, section 3, makes it the duty of this committee to report from time to time to the Senate and to the House of Representatives the results of this study and investigation. The General Accounting Office, of course, is the agency of the Congress.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I assume that the committee, should it desire to do so, could call the attention of the Comptroller General to any irregularity it had unearthed.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BUCHANAN].

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Speaker, I wish to thank the chairman of the Committee on Rules and the members of the committee for their very deliberate discussion of this resolution and for reporting this measure at this time. As has been stated here, the intent and purpose of a committee of this character would be entirely objective in nature; and, as the gentleman from New York has stated, it is no easy task. I am certain that the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate, should the Senate also see fit to adopt this measure, will appoint men of high character, men who would approach the subject dispassionately, men who want to seek out and bring about a reasonable solution to a problem that has caused a lot of doubt and confusion.

Many public-relations firms engaged in legitimate educational activities have asked their legal counsel for opinions as to whether or not they could be compelled to register under the terms of the Lobbying Act of 1946, as to whether or not their activities were to be included; and in many cases they were advised not to. Referring then to the Department of Justice for an interpretation and opinion relative to the same activities the Department has advised them that they were included and that they had better comply with the law; and they have done so.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCHANAN. I yield.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I wonder whether it has been the experience of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, as it has been mine and that of almost every other Member of this Congress, I am sure, that constituents have contacted us to inquire as to their rights under this law and as to whether or not they would have to register if they came here as a member, perhaps, of an association when other members of the same association were coming to tell their own Members of Congress what effect certain legislation would have on their business. Has the gentleman had that experience?

Mr. BUCHANAN. I have; and I am sure every Member of Congress has had the same type of queries from various business groups.

Mr. Speaker, at the behest of many who have approached me on the subject I first introduced a House resolution; and then, as has been stated by a member of the Committee on the Judiciary, their work load was such that it would be rather difficult for that committee to take on a problem as great in scope as this problem really is.

There is no doubt there is a shadow area or twilight zone. If we can reduce the doubt and confusion to some degree, and clarify and amplify, and augment the law from basis of the past 3 years of experience we have had under the Lobbying Act of 1946, I am certain that the over-all objectiveness of this committee will be of great worth to the Members of the House.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCHANAN. I yield.

Mr. VORYS. I wish to ask the gentleman whether he feels that this committee should be limited solely to an investigation of lobbying as defined in the Lobbying Act, or whether he feels that it was broader and would cover the popular and dictionary definition so that the gentleman's committee would make a study of the activities intended to encourage or retard legislation on the basis of such activities with which the Congress should be familiar, and as to whether more legislation is needed in addition to merely clarifying the present lobbying law.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I may say in answer to the gentleman from Ohio that the present terminology of the Registration of Lobbying Activities Act passed in 1946 by the Seventy-ninth Congress, Public Law 601, does define to a degree, but as has been stated, there is still doubt and confusion as to how far that would go. We have had 3 years of experience under that act and I believe that the committee so chosen may recommend to the proper committee of the House for augmentation and simplification, if that is at all possible, and clarification of the terminology that now exists. It is with that thought and purpose in mind that such an investigation of this nature has been requested and I assure the Members that if I become a member of this committee all business groups, labor groups, consumer groups, or any other special-interest groups, as well as any Federal agencies, will be treated with due respect.

It is certainly not my intent that this committee would indulge in any "muckraking" campaign.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of the time on this side.

Mr. Speaker, all of you who have heard the gentleman from Pennsylvania and all of you who have served with him during the years he has been a Member of Congress I am sure recognize the fact that he is a fair-minded, sincere gentleman, and that if he becomes chairman of this committee, as I believe he will, there will be a fair investigation, as I said before.

This committee has no power to legislate. It has only the power to investigate, and report thereon.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. The gentleman will agree the committee also has the power to recommend legislation?

Mr. SABATH. Yes, it will have the power to recommend.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Then the proper legislative committee having jurisdiction will take control of any recommendation that is made?

Mr. SABATH. That is correct.

Mr. Speaker, I am of the opinion that this legislation is needed. Originally the resolution did not include the second paragraph that states: "to make full and complete investigation of all activities of agencies of the Federal Government intended to influence," but I agreed to that amendment because I believe that two wrongs do not make a right. All lobbying on the part of Government departments or individuals which tends to influence the action of this House should be investigated and stopped. By this I do not mean to infer that private individuals or businessmen should be deprived of their right to petition Congress or appeal and espouse their viewpoints and recommendations on various legislation. At the same time, I feel that this committee will clarify the doubt expressed by the definition and meaning of the term "lobby" or "lobbyist" to the end that the committee will, in its report, adequately define the term "lobby" and "lobbyist" so that there can be no misunderstanding thereon. I personally believe the term should apply to all individuals or groups of individuals who are paid or hired to stop or promote legislation by way of influencing Congressmen. In fact, the definition should be broadened to include lobbyists connected with the various agencies and departments of the Federal Government.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. McCORMACK. It should be clearly stated—and I would like to get the gentleman's reaction—for the RECORD that by the insertion of that language it is not intended and it does not in any way take away jurisdiction from the Committee on Expenditures in Executive Departments. Is that correct?

Mr. SABATH. I am satisfied the gentleman is correct, as usual.

Mr. McCORMACK. It is within the jurisdiction of that committee, of which my very valued friend the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN] was chairman the last 2 years. It certainly carried on any number of investigations of departments and agencies. I was a member of several subcommittees and they kept me busy all the time. It is distinctly understood that that language in no way is intended to take away any of the jurisdiction of the Committee on Expenditures; is that right?

Mr. SABATH. The gentleman is right as always.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, it has been called to my attention that in line 25, page 2, and in line 5 on page 3, the words "subpena" and "subpenas" are misspelled. I ask unanimous consent that the Clerk be instructed to correct the spelling of those words.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The concurrent resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

COMMITTEE ON BANKING AND CURRENCY

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the managers on the part of the House may have until midnight tonight to file a conference report on the bill S. 900.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. BEALL asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. BREHM asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mrs. NORTON, from the Committee on House Administration, reported that that committee did on May 17, 1949, present to the President, for his approval, bills of the House of the following titles:

SENATE

THURSDAY, MAY 19, 1949

(Legislative day of Monday, April 11, 1949)

The Senate met at 11 o'clock and 45 minutes a. m., on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Eternal Father, fountain of our being, light of all our seeing; for the beauty of the earth, robed in the blooming garb of spring and for the tint of the tiniest flower, we raise our hymn of morning praise. As in all the bewilderment of the world's fiery strife our burdened hearts seek the quiet sanctuary of Thy healing presence, wilt Thou refresh our souls and restore our faith.

As this day with warm friendship we welcome the head of a great nation of the southern continent, may this neighborly handclasp between two democracies of our hemisphere be a symbol of closer cooperation and deeper understanding. Together, as colleagues, believing in the dignity of the individual, may we plan wisely and well for the common welfare of our peoples and for the peace of the whole world. In the dear Redeemer's name. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request by Mr. RUSSELL, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Wednesday, May 18, 1949, was dispensed with.

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. FLANDERS] is absent by leave of the Senate.

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH] is absent because of illness.

The Senator from Maine [Mr. BREWSTER], the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MALONE], and the Senator from Kansas [Mr. REED] are detained on official business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. A quorum is present.

JOINT SESSION OF THE TWO HOUSES—VISIT OF THE PRESIDENT OF BRAZIL

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, the Senate is to meet in joint session with the House of Representatives at 12:15 o'clock, and I think the time has arrived when the Senate should proceed to the House Chamber. After the ceremony in the House, Members of the Senate will return to the Senate Chamber and resume consideration of the unfinished business. In my opinion Senators should return in a body.

I now move that the Senate proceed to the Hall of the House of Representatives for the joint session.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 12 o'clock and 2 minutes p. m.) the Senate, proceded by its Sergeant at Arms (Joseph C. Duke), its Chief Clerk (Emery L. Frazier), and the President pro tempore, proceeded to the Hall of the House of Representatives to receive the President of Brazil, Maj. Gen. Eurico Gaspar Dutra.

At 12 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m., the Senate reassembled in its Chamber, and was called to order by the President pro tempore.

TRANSACTION OF ROUTINE BUSINESS

By unanimous consent, the following routine business was transacted:

PETITION

A petition was presented and referred as indicated:

By Mr. PEPPER (for himself and Mr. HOLLAND):

A resolution of the Legislature of the State of Florida, relating to the enactment of legislation providing compulsory health insurance; to the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare.

(See text of resolution printed in full when presented by the Vice President on May 16, 1949, p. 6203, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.)

THE BUDGET—RESOLUTION OF NEBRASKA LEGISLATURE

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, 2 days ago, I made a few observations relative to a resolution adopted by the Legislature of Nebraska, memorializing the Congress in respect to the budget for the next fiscal year. I now have the resolution, and ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

The resolution was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, under the rule, as follows:

Legislative Resolution 27

Resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States in respect to the budget for the next fiscal year

Whereas it is the general consensus that sources of Federal revenue are seeking lower levels and this consensus is supported by all official calculations which have been made of the economic developments of the first calendar quarter of 1949;

Whereas new taxes at such times as these may accelerate a minor business decline into a major depression; and

Whereas if the President's budget were enacted, the Federal tax bill would amount to at least a fifth of the individual's income: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the members of the Nebraska Legislature in sixty-first session assembled:

1. That the Legislature of the State of Nebraska respectfully request the Congress of the United States to make a 10 percent cut in all Federal expenditures possible.

2. That Nebraska Senators and Representatives now in the Congress of the United States be and hereby are respectfully requested to use every effort at their command to obtain the reduction in the Federal budget for the next fiscal year.

3. That copies of this resolution be transmitted by the clerk of the legislature to the Vice President of the United States as presiding officer of the Senate of the United States, to the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and to each Member from Nebraska in the Senate of the United States and in the House of Representatives of the United States.

CHARLES J. WARNER,
President of the Legislature.

I, Hugo F. Srb, hereby certify that the above is a true and correct copy of Legislative Resolution 27, which was passed by the Legislature of Nebraska in sixty-first regular session on the 13th day of May 1949.

HUGO F. SRB,
Clerk of the Legislature.

NATIONAL COMMISSION ON INTERGOVERNMENTAL RELATIONS — EDITORIAL AND RESOLUTIONS

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, I have previously referred to the vital legislation now pending for the establishment of a National Commission on Intergovernmental Relations. It has been my privilege to serve as a cosponsor of this legislation in the form of S. 810 just as I have fought all through the years for decentralization of Federal functions to the States and localities.

In this connection, Mr. President, I have in my hand a splendid editorial from the largest newspaper in Wisconsin, the Milwaukee Journal. This editorial, published in the May 16 issue, entitled "The Plight of the Cities," endorses the National Commission legislation.

I also have copies of certain resolutions adopted by the Wisconsin Committee on Hoover Commission Findings. This committee has also endorsed the bill of which I am a cosponsor, S. 810, plus endorsing the Federal Property Act of 1949 and amendment.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the Milwaukee Journal editorial and the text of the two resolutions of the Wisconsin Committee on Hoover Commission Findings be appropriately referred and printed at this point in the body of the RECORD.

There being no objection, the editorial and resolutions were referred to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Milwaukee Journal of May 16, 1949]

THE PLIGHT OF THE CITIES

Spokesmen for American cities, appearing before the congressional subcommittee on intergovernmental relations, strongly urged passage of the Wiley bill to set up a national commission to study the problems created in one government by the actions of others.

The plight of the cities was graphically described by speaker after speaker. Among the problems cited were restriction of revenue sources, overlapping of services, competition for personnel, and the effect of Federal grants and Federal standards on local government.

A commission to study these complications, it was argued, might in time bring about agreement on a Federal-State-local fiscal policy, which would be advantageous to all levels of government. It might also result in merging in one government functions now carried on almost competitively by several.

The establishment of such a commission would be a good thing. There is no question that a problem exists and that it cannot be solved by the cities alone, or by the States alone, or by the Federal Government alone. It is a matter of the meeting of the best minds to arrive at the best solution.

One thing is sure. The present method of cities running to the States for aids and the States running to the Federal government for hand-outs is not the ultimate answer.

Whereas the Hoover Commission has found in its report to Congress that the question of Federal-State relations and the problems incident thereto are an important part of our governmental structure and operations; and

Whereas it is generally recognized by the Commission that there is a need for finding ways and means of establishing a more orderly and less competitive relationship between the several levels of Government, solving such problems as the overlapping and confused system of taxation and the increasing, patternless demands made upon the Federal Government and the States for tax-sharing and grants-in-aid; and

Whereas the Commission has recommended to Congress that a continuing agency on Federal-State relations be created with primary responsibility for study, information, and guidance in the field of Federal-State relations: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Wisconsin Committee on Hoover Commission Findings does hereby go on record as favoring bills S. 810 and H. R. 2369, which provide for the establishment of a National Commission on Intergovernmental Relations for the purpose of studying and making recommendations to the President and Congress to obtain the above objectives and aims; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to all Members of Congress from the State of Wisconsin.

Adopted, Madison, May 5, 1949.

Whereas the Hoover Commission has filed with Congress reports declaring that the Federal Government now operates one of the largest supply businesses in the world and is spending more than $6,000,000,000 a year for new materials, supplies, and equipment, and maintaining civilian and military inventories valued at $27,000,000,000; and

Whereas the report of the Commission on supply activities indicates clearly that the present deficiencies in Federal supply operations spring to a large extent from the lack of central direction and coordination due to the fact that these activities are carried on in several places within the executive branch with varying degrees of adequacy; and

Whereas the recommendations made by the Hoover Commission emphasize that all supply activities should be placed in one central office of the executive branch; and

Whereas there is now before Congress the Federal Property Act of 1949 (S. 990 and H. R. 2781), establishing a central supply office in accordance with the Commission's recommendations and providing the Government with an economic and efficient system for procurement and utilization of Government property and disposal of surplus property; and

Whereas amendment S. 859 to bill S. 990 provides for proper and expeditious disposal of surplus property: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That members of the Wisconsin Committee on Hoover Commission Findings do hereby go on record as favoring the Federal Property Act of 1949 (S. 990 and H. R. 2781) and amendment (S. 859) relating to the proper and expeditious disposal of surplus property; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to all Members of Congress from the State of Wisconsin.

Adopted, Madison, May 5, 1949.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following reports of committees were submitted:

By Mr. ANDERSON, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

S. 930. A bill to provide for the liquidation of the trusts under the transfer agreements with State rural rehabilitation corporations, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 403).

By Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

S. 1760. A bill to amend section 101 (b) of the Department of Agriculture Organic Act of 1944 (58 Stat. 734; 7 U. S. C. 429); with an amendment (Rept. No. 407).

By Mr. YOUNG, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

S. 1749. A bill to amend section 102 (a) of the Department of Agriculture Organic Act of 1944 to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to carry out operations to combat the citrus blackfly, white-fringed beetle, and the Hall scale; with amendments (Rept. No. 408).

By Mr. HOLLAND, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

S. 1464. A bill to amend the provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act relating to marketing agreements and orders; without amendment (Rept. No. 406).

By Mr. MURRAY, from the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs:

H. R. 1754. A bill extending the time for the completion of annual assessment work on mining claims held by location in the United States for the year ending at 12 o'clock meridian July 1, 1949; with amendments (Rept. No. 404); and

H. R. 3754. A bill providing for the temporary deferment in certain unavoidable contingencies of annual assessment work on mining claims held by location in the United States; with amendments (Rept. No. 405).

ADDITIONAL REPORT OF JOINT COMMITTEE ON REDUCTION OF NONESSENTIAL FEDERAL EXPENDITURES, RELATING TO CIVILIAN EMPLOYMENT IN EXECUTIVE BRANCH

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, as chairman of the Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures, I submit an additional report on civilian employment in the executive branch of the Federal Government for the month of March 1949, and in accordance with the practice of several years' standing, I request that it be printed in the body of the RECORD as a part of my remarks, together with a statement by me.

There being no objection, the report and statement were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

FEDERAL PERSONNEL IN THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH, FEBRUARY–MARCH 1949, AND PAY, JANUARY–FEBRUARY 1949

NOTE WITH REFERENCE TO PERSONAL SERVICE EXPENDITURE FIGURES

It should be noted that the latest expenditure figures for personal service shown in table I of this report are for the month of February, and that they are compared with personal service expenditure figures for the month of January, whereas the latest employment figures covered in this report are for the month of March and are compared with the month of February. This lag in personal service expenditure figures is necessary in order that actual expenditures may be reported.

(Figures in the following report are compiled from signed official personnel reports by the various agencies and departments of the Federal Government. Table I shows total personnel employed inside and outside continental United States, and pay, by agency. Table II shows personnel employed inside continental United States, by agency. Table IV gives by agency the industrial workers employed by the Federal Government. For purposes of comparison, figures for the previous month are shown in adjoining columns.)

PERSONNEL AND PAY SUMMARY

According to monthly personnel reports for March 1949 submitted to the Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures:

	Civilian personnel in executive branch
	In March numbered—	In February numbered—	Increase (+) or decrease (−)
Total	2,111,257	2,104,979	+6,278
1. Agencies exclusive of National Military Establishment	1,215,795	1,210,242	+5,553
2. National Military Establishment	895,462	894,737	+725
Within National Military Establishment:
Office of the Secretary of Defense	1,335	1,295	+40
Department of the Army	370,903	370,024	+879
Department of the Air Force	162,697	160,232	+2,465
Department of the Navy	360,527	363,186	−2,659

	Pay roll (in thousands of dollars) in executive branch
	In February was—	In January was—	Increase (+) or decrease (−)
Total	508,802	527,581	−18,779
1. Agencies exclusive of National Military Establishment	299,045	307,968	−8,923
2. National Military Establishment	209,757	219,613	−9,856
Within National Military Establishment:
Office of the Secretary of Defense	439	434	+5
Department of the Army	83,094	87,376	−4,282
Department of the Air Force	36,983	38,297	−1,314
Department of the Navy	89,241	93,506	−4,265

Table I breaks down the above figures on employment and pay by agency.

Tables II, III, and IV break down the above employment figures to show the number of employees inside continental United States, the number outside continental United States, and the number in the so-called industrial categories. This further breakdown in tables II, III, and IV does not include pay figures because pay-roll reports submitted to the committee by some agencies are inadequate for this purpose.

INSIDE CONTINENTAL UNITED STATES

(See table II)

Federal personnel within the United States increased 8,597 from the February total of 1,911,126 to the March total of 1,919,723.

Exclusive of the National Military Establishment there was an increase of 4,926 from the February total of 1,154,794 to the March total of 1,159,720.

Total civilian employment within the United States for the National Military Establishment for March was 760,003, an increase of 3,671 over the February figure of 756,332.

The Office of the Secretary of Defense increased 40 from the February figure of 1,295 to the March figure of 1,335.

The Department of the Army civilian personnel within the United States increased 2,066 from the February figure of 300,624 to the March figure of 302,690.

The Department of the Air Force civilian personnel within the United States increased 2,585 from the February figure of 132,985 to the March figure of 135,570.

The Department of the Navy civilian personnel within the United States decreased

1,623 from the February figure of 321,428 to the March figure of 320,408.

OUTSIDE CONTINENTAL UNITED STATES

(See table III)

Outside continental United States Federal personnel decreased 2,319 from the February total of 193,853 to the March total of 191,534.

An increase of 627 was reported by the departments and agencies other than the National Military Establishment, from the February total of 55,448 to the March total of 56,075.

Total civilian employment outside continental United States for the National Military Establishment decreased 2,946 from the February total of 138,405 to the March figure of 135,459.

The Department of the Army reported a decrease of 1,187 from the February figure of 69,400 to the March figure of 68,213.

The Department of the Air Force reported a decrease of 120 in its overseas civilian employment from the February figure of 27,247 to the March figure of 27,127.

The Department of the Navy reported a decrease of 1,639 in overseas civilian employment from the February figure of 41,758 to the March figure of 40,119.

INDUSTRIAL EMPLOYMENT

(See table IV)

Total industrial employment during the month of March decreased 1,631 from the February total of 574,746 to the March total of 573,115.

The departments and agencies other than the National Military Establishment decreased 419 from the February total of 19,488 to the March total of 19,069.

The National Military Establishment decreased its total industrial employment 1,212 from the February figure of 555,258 to the March figure of 554,046.

The Department of the Army reported a net decrease of 223 from the February figure of 207,865 to the March figure of 207,642. Inside continental United States the Army increased its industrial employment 940, while outside continental United States there was a decrease of 1,163.

The Department of the Air Force reported an increase of 1,801, from the February figure of 95,873 to the March figure of 97,674. Of this increase in Air Force industrial personnel 1,352 was inside continental United States and 449 was outside continental United States.

The Department of the Navy decreased its industrial employment 2,790 from the February figure of 251,520 to the March figure of 248,730.

The term "industrial employees," as used by the committee, refers to unskilled, semi-skilled, skilled, and supervisory employees paid by the Federal Government who are working on construction projects, such as airfields and roads, and in shipyards and arsenals. It does not include maintenance and custodial employees.

SPECIAL TABLE ON CIVILIAN AND MILITARY PERSONNEL OF THE NATIONAL MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT, JUNE 1945–MARCH 1949

Table V, carried at the end of this report, shows by months the civilian and military personnel of the National Military Establishment since the end of the war in 1945. This table is broken down to show the employment trends in each of the branches of the Military Establishment since the effective date of the Armed Services Unification Act of September 1947; pursuant to Public Law 253, Eightieth Congress, first session.

[The Air Force was divorced from the War Department as of September 1947, pursuant to Public Law 253, 80th Cong. The figures in this table for the period between the end of World War II and September 1947, when the Air Force was separated from the Army, are shown only in composite monthly totals. The figures for the period since the Unification Act became effective in the records of civilian and military personnel in the National Military Establishment are broken down to show not only the composite total but also the departmental totals within the Military Establishment, including the Office of the Secretary of Defense which was established under the reorganization. The Armed Services Unification Act of 1947 became effective with respect to personnel records in the Military Establishment as of October 1947]

STATEMENT BY SENATOR BYRD

Civilian personnel employed by the executive branch of the Federal Government inside continental United States has been increasing at an average rate of 322 a day for 15 months. The total increase since January 1, 1948, has been 146,541.

Adjusted for some reduction in employment overseas which has been largely among industrial workers employed abroad by the Military Establishment, the rate of net increase in civilian personnel employed by the executive branch all over the world has averaged 254 a day for 15 months.

At average civilian pay of more than $3,000 a year, every day we are adding more than $750,000 to the annual Federal pay roll.

The war emergency has been over 5 years and, although these increases could not have occurred without the tacit approval of Congress in the enactment of the numerous appropriation bills, I am convinced that a majority in Congress regards this continual increase in Federal employment as excessive and unwarranted.

Congress can act effectively in this matter by rejecting proposals for new functions, programs, policies and agencies, but it does not have adequate facilities for investigating the efficiency with which more than a thousand component Federal agencies are administered, and there should be no necessity for the legislative branch to undertake such a task. That is the first responsibility of the executive branch.

Yet, as indefensible as it may sound, the armed services are now employing three times as many civilians for every man in uniform as they did at the peak of the war; the Veterans' Administration has one employee on its pay roll for every 90 living veterans of all wars whether they are receiving any service from the agency or not; total civilian employment is still more than twice its prewar peak of less than a million.

Despite this situation, the latest personnel compilation by the Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures today shows another increase of more than 6,000 in March, bringing the total to 2,111,257.

The President's budget, now before Congress in the form of appropriation bills, requests funds for still further increase throughout next year.

It appears that the bureaucracy is out of control with respect to personnel, and drastic action is necessary.

It is my firm conviction that civilian employment in the executive branch can be reduced by at least 500,000 without impairment of a single essential function. This would still leave the total at 175 percent of the prewar peak.

The framework for orderly reduction already exists in the Byrd-Langer amendment to the Pay Act of 1945 under which the Director of the Budget is directed to fix quarterly employment ceilings for every agency.

The Budget Bureau, through its staff of examiners, has ready access to all information necessary, and the provision for quarterly determinations allows the necessary elasticity to meet minimum and maximum work requirements in all agencies.

The fact that this approach to employment reduction can be made effective without meat-ax results was demonstrated in fiscal year 1947 when a maximum ceiling was set, and reached during the year by means of quarterly ceilings fixed on a declining scale.

This reduction technique could be made effective again if Congress would repeal the exemptions which have been made to the ceilings and fix a new maximum to be reached by means of declining quarterly ceilings.

In this event I am confident that if the Director of the Budget exercised his best administrative judgment civilian employment in the executive branch could be reduced 20 percent or more during the coming year without impairment of any essential Federal service or policy.

AMENDMENT OF HOUSING AND RENT ACT OF 1947, RELATING TO HOUSING ACCOMMODATIONS IN HOTELS

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, from the Committee on Banking and Currency, I report favorably without amendment the bill (S. 1535) to amend the Housing and Rent Act of 1947, as amended, with respect to housing accommodations in hotels, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The Housing and Rent Act of 1947, as amended, defined transient occupancy as meaning an accommodation rented on a daily basis. The Banking and Currency Committee is in complete agreement that this definition is unreasonably restrictive. S. 1535 simply broadens the definition of transient occupancy to include accommodations rented on a daily, weekly or semimonthly basis. It is thought that the House of Representatives will recognize the fairness of the change provided by S. 1535, and it is hoped that S. 1535 will be approved by the Senate today and become law without delay.

Mr. MAYBANK. Mr. President, we took the matter up in our meeting this morning. What the Senator from Washington has said is correct. I hope the bill will pass.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Washington to proceed to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subparagraph (B) (1) of section 202 (c) (1) of the Housing and Rent Act of 1947, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(1) the term 'used for transient occupancy' means rented on a daily, weekly, or semimonthly basis, to a tenant who had not on March 1, 1949, continuously resided in the hotel for 90 days or more; and."

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION PRESENTED

The Secretary of the Senate reported that on today, May 19, 1949, he presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills and joint resolution:

S. 326. An act to amend the War Claims Act of 1948;

S. 392. An act authorizing the issuance of a patent in fee to Thomas A. Pickett;

S. 683. An act to relieve certain employees of the Veterans' Administration from financial liability for certain overpayments;

S. 716. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to sell the land of George Peters under existing regulations;

S. 1152. An act for the relief of certain officers and employees of the Office of the United States High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands who suffered losses of personal property by reason of war conditions; and

S. J. Res. 18. Joint resolution for the relief of the First Citizens Bank & Trust Co., administrator of the estate of C. A. Ragland, Sr.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGE REFERRED

As in executive session,

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States submitting the nomination of Abraham Conger of Georgia, to be United States District Judge for the Middle District of Georgia, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

As in executive session,

The following favorable reports of nominations were submitted:

By Mr. McMAHON, from the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy:

Gordon Dean and Henry DeWolf Smyth, to be members of the Atomic Energy Commission for the remainder of the term expiring June 30, 1950.

By Mr. CONNALLY, from the Committee on Foreign Relations:

Admiral Alan G. Kirk, United States Navy, retired, now Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to Belgium and Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Luxemburg, to be Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics;

George R. Merrell, of Missouri, a Foreign Service officer of the class of career minister, now Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Ethiopia, to be Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to Ethiopia;

Capus M. Waynick, of North Carolina, to be Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to Nicaragua; and William C. Foster of New York, to be deputy United States special representative in Europe, with the rank of Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED

Bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado:

S. 1889. A bill for the relief of Abraham Simon Chishelsky; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MURRAY:

S. 1890. A bill to authorize acquisition by the county of Missoula, State of Montana, of certain lands for public-use purposes; and

S. 1891. A bill to provide for the conveyance of certain land in Missoula County, Mont., to the State of Montana for the use and benefit of Montana State University; to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATIONS, 1950

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3997) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, and for other purposes.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. WHERRY. What is the amendment before the Senate at this time?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] for himself and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES].

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I ask the distinguished Senator from Michigan if I may suggest the absence of a quorum before he proceeds?

Mr. FERGUSON. I do not think that is necessary.

Mr. President, before the recess on yesterday I was making two points with respect to the effort to reduce Government spending as proposed by the pending amendment to the agriculture appropriation, which is the same amendment we have sought to attach to each of the other appropriations bills which have been brought before us. The first point was that we cannot meet this very vital and important issue by resorting to any hocus-pocus. I used as an illustration of such a proceeding the proposal to collect taxes in advance. There is only one way to avoid a deficit or a tax increase. That is to spend less money.

I have commented on one device which has been suggested, to collect corporation and other taxes in the first half of the calendar year next year, so that a deficit might be avoided. That is simply the familiar expedient of a man drawing his week's pay in advance. His pockets may then be full for the week, but the following week would be a very tight one. That is what we would be attempting to do under those circumstances, instead of trying to spend less. It is merely a device to postpone the day of reckoning. I say this is no time for postponement, or for subterfuges. The time has come when we must face the issue without flinching and decide it upon the facts and the merits.

I have pointed out that the reduction method proposed by my amendment is scientific and effective; that is, it is as scientific as such a proposal can be in any effort here to attain the particular objective of cutting the expenses of the Government. By the amendment the department or agency heads would be instructed to effect an over-all reduction of 5 percent in their appropriations. Leeway is given in the interest of efficiency by providing that any single item can be cut as much as 20 percent, but no more.

Those are specific instructions, and they leave no doubt of the objective we have in mind. Because it is his job to administer the spending, the department or agency head knows where the reductions can be made efficiently and effectively within the scope of his instructions, and he can be held responsible for his acts.

I have made the point that our purposes must be made clear, because otherwise, as we have discovered and know full well from the common practice of the past, the departments and agencies place their own interpretation on what Congress intended. I used as an illustration yesterday the ruling of the Atomic Energy Commission solicitor, who said that atomic energy funds may be used to support fellowships for Communists, because fellows are not employees and therefore not subject to the prohibition against wage and salary payments to members of subversive organizations. Such an interpretation is contrary to the understanding and the intention of the chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee who handled that appropriation. I am positive that it is in violation of the public policy of the Congress and of the people of the United States. I am sure it is contrary to the thinking and opinions of the great majority of this body. The solicitor's ruling then is by way of thwarting the will of Congress, because Congress was not sufficiently precise in stating its purposes with respect to the payment of appropriated funds to Communists.

I should like to say something about the solicitors in the particular department we are now discussing and in other departments. We are asked if we can point out Government offices where spending reductions might apply. I ask the Senate to consider the solicitors' offices as one such place. We have a Department of Justice which in theory is the legal arm of the executive branch of the Government. But instead of employing that Department for interpretation and counsel, each department and agency has its own solicitor's office.

In the agricultural appropriation bill now before the Senate there is an item of $2,235,000 for the office of the solicitor. Did anyone ever hear of a lawyer in the Department of Agriculture making two blades of grass grow where one grew before? Government lawyers are not engaged in research work.

Mr. President, it is very interesting to look at the record, on page 997, of last year's debate on the agricultural appropriation bill. The Eightieth Congress attempted to do something about the question of lawyers. In the fiscal year 1948 the personnel having to do with legal work amounted to an average of 462, of which 209 were lawyers, that is, in the professional grade of attorney, and 253 were in nonprofessional grades as administrative clerks, typists, and stenographers.

Mr. President, the number has started to creep up again. The pending bill calls for 213 lawyers and a proportionate number of other help. Prior to the 1948 appropriation there were 260 lawyers, that is, professionals, in the solicitor's office of the Department of Agriculture. The 1948 appropriation accomplished a reduction of 51 in the professional group, represented by 30 reductions from the Department forces and 21 from the field forces. So, Mr. President, as last year we brought about a reduction, we could again reduce the number in the Department of Agriculture, as well as in other departments.

It is very interesting to consider what has been happening in the legal divisions of various departments. I think it i very significant that the solicitors in the various departments are not under civil service. We attempted at one time to put them under civil service, but they are not under civil service. Therefore the door is wide open to political influence in the one place where men take care of the interpretation of all the laws for the various agencies. So when we vote an appropriation of $2,235,000 for the solicitor's office of the Agricultural Department, it occurs to me that a cut could be made in that expenditure without affecting the efficiency of government.

Lawyers in the various solicitors' offices are not only doing legal work, but public relations work; they are the ones who are sent out on the stump to make speeches, and they are the ones who attempt to make policy. Many people in the United States think the heads of departments make the policies. Oh, no; when we investigate we find three other divisions under the Secretary's office that are the real policy-making branches. Who are they? They are the solicitors, they are the lawyers. The next branch is composed of the economists. The third group, no less important to the bureaucrats, is composed of the planners of the Government. The charters, or planners, the economists, and the lawyers are the ones who control the Department.

In this particular branch, as I stated before, the Labor Department, had more than $1,085,000. The Department of Agriculture has $2,235,000.

Let us look at what has been happening. Twenty years ago the total appropriations for all purposes to the Department of Agriculture was $155,000,000. Today it is $723,000,000. Twenty years ago $202,000 was obligated for legal services, which covered 31 professional and 26 nonprofessional personnel. Percentagewise, 0.13 percent of the Department's funds were obligated for legal services.

By 1940 there were 389 professional and 683 nonprofessional personnel. Percentagewise, 0.18 percent of the Department's funds were obligated for legal services.

For 1948 the total funds available to the Department amounted to $969,000,000, of which $2,288,000 were obligated for legal services, which covered 209 professional and 252 nonprofessional personnel. Percentagewise, 0.24 of the Department's funds were being obligated for legal services.

Mr. President, this year it has risen to 0.30. In other words, it has gone from 0.13 to 0.18 to 0.24 to 0.30 percent. That shows the creeping upward of the amounts obligated for solicitors, which means an extension of bureaucracy's hand over America.

Mr. President, I speak from experience when I say that these are the men in the departments who create the rules and regulations. They are the control body. They are also the ones who are subject to reductions. Certainly the departments require legal advice, because the law should be interpreted for the various departments. But the law should be interpreted by one agency with some objectivity and independence, not by a division within the Department itself. If we look at the figures for the Office of the Secretary, we find there a great amount spent for legal services, which also should be subject to reduction.

I could point out various other departments in which I think cuts might be made. But under our proposal we are leaving that to the departments themselves, for the heads of the departments can best do it and still adequately serve the people of the United States.

Mr. President, the matter of reducing Government spending is not a question which concerns only special classes of the people, such as the large taxpayers. Some seem to think that the income tax affects only the rich. They therefore ask what difference does it make if we take from the rich alone and spend that money for Government.

No, Mr. President, I say to the Members of the Senate and to the whole American people that the small taxpayers are concerned with this question and in final analysis perhaps most affected. They pay income taxes. They pay the special excise taxes. Who use the greatest amount of talcum powder for their babies, a product of which we have heard much on the floor of the Senate, and who therefore pays the great share of taxes on that product? Who buy the movie tickets? Who are the people who buy railroad coach tickets daily? Who are the people who buy airplane tickets? Certainly not the rich alone. Every person who buys a can of baby powder, a movie ticket, a railroad ticket, or an airplane ticket has to pay an excise tax. By the way, the Senate may be interested to know that we find now that many people in the great city of Detroit are going across the border into Windsor, Ontario, Canada, in order that they may buy railroad or airplane tickets there because Canada has dropped its excise tax on transportation.

It is a problem, the solution of which means much to all our people. Every one of these taxes means something to the small taxpayer or the man who works with his hands.

Every American has an interest in Government economy and a healthy fiscal condition for the Government. Every taxpayer has a dollars-and-cents stake in the reduction of Government expense.

Who supports Government spending? The taxpayers.

And who are the taxpayers? As I have said, every single one of us.

Let us look at the record on income taxes, our principal source of revenue for the Government. These are rough calculations but I am satisfied of their substantial accuracy. They are based on the best information we have before us, the Senate Report on the Revenue Act of 1948. What do these figures show?

About 98 percent of those who pay income taxes have incomes of less than $10,000 a year after deductions. The President has called the mid-income individual one who earns about $6,000. About 95 percent of the taxpayers fall within or below that bracket. About 70 percent of the taxpayers earn less than $3,000 annually.

Naturally these individuals do not pay a corresponding percentage of the taxes, because of the sliding tax scale, and that is as it should be. But look at this. Those incomes of less than $10,000 pay about 60 percent of the income tax. Those below $6,000 pay about 51.5 percent of the tax. And those making less than $3,000 pay about 29 percent of the tax.

Now just what does Government economy mean? We should be able to hope that it would mean a reduction of taxes among all those groups whose share of the tax burden I have listed.

But what we are fighting for here, in seeking to cut down Government's spending, is not just that we may some day reduce taxes. We are making a fight here so that in the next fiscal year we may merely avoid new taxes.

The President keeps insisting that $4,000,000,000 in new taxes will be necessary. Considering the present trend of income and more importantly the present trend of expenditures, undoubtedly the President is right. At least that amount may be necessary if we do not go to deficit spending, unless we do something here to show our good faith in this matter of Government economy.

What would $4,000,000,000 in new taxes mean to the taxpayers I have mentioned? Naturally we do not know what a new revenue bill would provide. So we must project it on the basis of present tax rates. Better yet, let us project it on the tax rates which the President appears to prefer because he did not want to change them when he vetoed the Revenue Act of 1948.

Sixty-three and twenty-five one-hundredths percent of the $4,000,000,000, or $2,530,000,000, would be paid by people earning less than $10,000.

About $2,240,000,000 would be paid by those with incomes of less than $6,000.

And $1,278,800,000 would be paid by persons making less than $3,000.

Let us consider that figure alone. Let us speak about the workingman, who toils with his hands and earns $3,000 a year or less. If we do not do something about Government spending and we find it necessary to raise $4,000,000,000 by an increase in taxes, we can expect that $1,278,800,000 will have to be collected from persons making less than $3,000 a year. That would be an average of $39 for the taxpayer earning $3,000 or less. I hope that American citizens will ponder over that figure. The average would be $39 for the man or woman earning less than $3,000. What does $39 mean to the family budget of that person? How many pairs of shoes would that buy? How much clothing would it buy for the family? How much more food would it buy? How much better food would it buy for the family? I say that the standard of living of the American people is at stake when we are talking about reducing the expenses of government. Let us never forget that $39 means a great deal to the average American family. And let us not forget that the figure of which I am speaking is $39 of new expense to the family, and in a time when its income may be falling.

We are seeking today in this economy effort to avoid an additional out-of-pocket expense of more than one and a quarter billion dollars for the taxpayers of America who earn less than $3,000 a year. That is their stake in the fight we are making here today. What is our stake? Our stake is an obligation to do that which is best for the Nation, best for the people. We can add efficiency to the Government and save for the American taxpayer if we only look at this problem through the eyes we have today, the understanding we have, and the facts we have. We can cut the cost of Government without in any way reducing its efficiency, and we must.

If a point of order is made, and if the Chair rules that the point of order is well taken, I hope that more than two-thirds of the membership of the Senate will be on the side of the small taxpayer. I hope we will vote to allow him to retain, if he earns $3,000 or less, $39 a year to spend as he pleases, to spend for the things he wants and needs, rather than to have the Congress and those in Government spend it for their purposes.

Mr. President, it is time to give freedom to the American people to spend tneir money as they see fit, to as great an extent as possible. Therefore we should take this step today and add to the appropriation bill this rider, which would say to the bureau and to the agency, "Cut expenses at least 5 percent." Let us save this money and allow the American workingman to spend it in the way he desires to spend it.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from Michigan for himself and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] is very palpably legislation. Under rule XVI of the Senate rules it is not in order. The same rule charges me with responsibility for making the point of order against it. I therefore make the point of order that the proposed amendment is legislation on an appropriation bill, and I ask for a ruling from the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HUMPHREY in the chair). The Chair rules that the point of order is well taken. The point of order is sustained, under rule XVI, section 4, of the Standing Rules of the Senate.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold for a moment his suggestion of the absence of a quorum?

Mr. BRIDGES. Certainly.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, there is on the desk a notice in writing, filed in accordance with rule XL of the rules of the Senate, of intent to move a suspension of the rules with respect to the amendment to the Agriculture appropriation bill. Pursuant to that notice I move a suspension of paragraph 4 of rule XVI in order that we may proceed to the consideration of the amendment offered by the Senator from Michigan and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] to suspend paragraph 4 of rule XVI of the Standing Rules of the Senate.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, may I inquire when the notice was filed?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Notice was filed on May 10, 1949.

Mr. RUSSELL. Very well. It appears to be in order.

Mr. BRIDGES. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Hendrickson	Mundt
Anderson	Hickenlooper	Murray
Brewster	Hill	Neely
Bricker	Holland	Reed
Bridges	Humphrey	Robertson
Butler	Jenner	Russell
Cain	Johnson, Colo.	Schoeppel
Chapman	Johnson, Tex.	Smith, Maine
Cordon	Johnston, S. C.	Sparkman
Donnell	Kem	Stennis
Downey	Kilgore	Taft
Ecton	Knowland	Taylor
Ellender	Langer	Thomas, Okla.
Ferguson	Long	Thye
Frear	McFarland	Vandenberg
Fulbright	Martin	Watkins
Gillette	Maybank	Wiley
Green	Miller	Williams
Gurney	Millikin	Withers
Hayden	Morse	Young

Mr. ELLENDER. I announce that the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. MCCLELLAN], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. EASTLAND], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HOEY], the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. MCCARTHY] and the Senator from New York [Mr. IVES] are attending a conference on the bill H. R. 2361, the Reorganization Act of 1949.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NEELY in the chair). A quorum is present.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Mr. HICKENLOOPER asked and obtained consent to be excused from attendance on the session of the Senate for the remainder of today.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATIONS, 1950

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3997) making appropriation for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, and for other purposes.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I wish to address myself briefly to the pending motion to suspend paragraph 4 of rule XVI of the Standing Rules of the Senate, in order that the Senate may consider the amendment proposed by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON], on behalf of himself and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], which was ruled out of order, properly so, by the predecessor of the distinguished Senator now occupying the chair. I apprehend that if the motion to suspend the rule shall fail, as I hope and believe it will, a motion will then be made to recommit to the Committee on Appropriations the agricultural appropriation bill, with instructions to reduce the appropriation.

I take the time of the Senate to point out the difference between the agricultural appropriation bill as it now presents itself to the Senate, and the other general appropriation bills. I venture to say, and statistics will bear out the statement, that the agricultural appropriation bill is the only regular supply bill of the year that is today substantially below the prewar figures of the appropriation bills. Nothing could better show the fallacy of the idea of applying a straight across-the-board cut on all bills than a comparison between the agricultural appropriation bill and other general appropriation measures.

I should have thought, Mr. President, that our distinguished friends on the other side would have exercised some little caution in their efforts to cut the agricultural appropriation bill. I listened to the remarks of the distinguished Senator from Michigan when he pleaded for economy in government. I subscribe to that philosophy in general terms. I trust that before the Senate shall adjourn, and before the last general appropriation bill is enacted into law, we shall be able to adopt a formula which will result in a substantial reduction in the over-all budget.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. What possible formula could we adopt that would not be subject to veto by the President and to his opposition? How can we achieve the desired result, except as we go along? How can we afterward, over the President's opposition, which I assume we shall have, expect to adopt any such over-all bill? I should be delighted to go along with the Senator on any proposition which seems to be practical. But how, exactly, will it work?

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I could not, of course, give exact figures and details of a plan which I must confess is rather nebulous at this stage. I may be a Pollyanna and may be unduly optimistic, but, in my judgment, events of the past few weeks have considerably affected the opinion of the Congress and, I hope, of the President of the United States, toward the budget for the coming fiscal year.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. If the Senator will permit me to discuss this subject a little further, it is my hope that we shall be able to amend the last general appropriation bill which comes before the Senate and adopt a formula which will be realistic, in the light of conditions today, and which will result in a substantial reduction in appropriations.

I am not prepared to go into every detail of it, but what I have in mind is something that would not apply itself to an across-the-board reduction, such as is suggested, but would cut direct items of appropriation. In other words, I believe we could safely reduce all of the procurement items in all the bills by as much as 10 or 12 percent, in view of falling market prices. I think there could be a small reduction in personnel. I might be prepared to go further than what we might be able to accomplish, but I want as substantial a reduction as can be secured. If we can save as much as a billion and a half dollars, I think it would be a very substantial saving.

I think the figures show that there has been a material reduction in construction costs. I have on my desk a very well-considered article from the Business Week magazine, pointing out that in the past few months, for the first time, contractors' bids are running substantially below engineering estimates on an average of from 5 to 12 percent. Up to that time, for 5 years, all bids for construction of all kinds, such as houses, roads, and public projects in all categories, had been running substantially over engineering estimates. Therefore I think we can well afford to reduce by 7 to 8 percent all construction items in all appropriation bills, wherever they may be found, to make them conform to conditions as they now exist.

I have a number of other items in mind. I think we can apply reductions to all travel and communications items. I believe we would find it much easier to enforce reductions by such a scheme as that than by undertaking to cut certain items in certain bills 5 percent, without regard to their merits, leaving it to the administrators to determine where the cuts should be applied. In my opinion, it would be much more simple to reduce the items of expenditure by 5 percent and direct the administrators to reduce them to that extent.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. TAFT. Does the Senator make his proposal contingent on a change of mind on the part of the President of the United States?

Mr. RUSSELL. I did not, of course, do anything of the kind. I said I was an optimist and that I hoped even the President of the United States would see the change in conditions. His attitude will in nowise affect my intention. I am now working on the subject. It is very difficult to find persons who have a comprehension of the far-flung thing which we call the Budget of the United States. I thought I had some knowledge of it, because of my service on the Appropriations Committee, and I say with modesty, which may not be sufficient, that I know as much about the budget as does the average Senator. I am working at this time with some persons who, I think, have as much knowledge of the subject as has anyone else, in an effort to establish a realistic approach to the problem. I have talked to a number of members of the Appropriations Committee; I have talked to Senators on both sides of the aisle with reference to the subject, and, unless I am badly deceived, if we are intent on really reducing the budget so far as practicable, I think a reasonable method can be adopted in the Senate, even if it should require a two-thirds vote.

Mr. TAFT. I do not quite understand the Senator's hope for a two-thirds vote, but I think I understood the Senator's suggestion to be that we attach some such rider to one of the last appropriation bills——

Mr. RUSSELL. To the very last one.

Mr. TAFT. The President would be fairly free to veto the bill and blame us for trying to hitch a rider on after we had already appropriated definite sums. I cannot see that the Senator's plan is a practical one, if we want to make reductions, as we do. If we can do what the Senator suggests with reference to the last appropriation bill, why can we not do it with each bill? It seems to me that such an amendment should be attached to each bill as it is passed.

Mr. RUSSELL. I, of course, did not expect the Senator from Ohio to approve of the plan——

Mr. TAFT. I approve fully of the Senator's plan.

Mr. RUSSELL. Of course, the Senator from Ohio is the author of the plan which was adopted by the Senate recently, and then it was reconsidered by the Senate. But I hope the Senator from Ohio will give consideration to the amendment when it is brought forward. I believe the Senator will support it when it comes before the Senate.

Mr. TAFT. I shall support whatever method the Senator may propose, but I suggest to him that the fact there is such a plan in the offing is no good reason why the Senator should not support our plan to reduce the appropriations as we go along.

Mr. RUSSELL. While 5 percent, as it is embodied in the amendment, may look to be somewhat substantial, when it is boiled down it does not amount to a great deal of money. We are not cutting a great many items. While the amendment which I have in mind may not reduce as much as 5 percent the over-all budget, I am satisfied it will amount to much more substantial savings than would the amendments which have been proposed on the floor, subject to the limitations and exceptions involved.

The Senator from Ohio asked me about it. I was merely discussing the general subject, and I said I hoped we could bring about some economy. I did not intend to go into any details of the plan, because I have not worked it out completely. I do not want to claim any authorship for it. There are other Senators who have greater seniority than I have and who occupy higher positions than I occupy with respect to the Senate. I was simply saying that there is a better way to solve the problem than is the one which has heretofore been suggested. I was going on to show the difference between the agricultural appropriation bill and other appropriation bills.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield to the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. FERGUSON. I preface my question by saying that I shall join with the Senator from Georgia in any method designed to cut expenditures so we can keep within the budget and prevent deficit spending or an increase in taxes. I have no pride of authorship, but I ask the Senator whether his plan would not face the same difficulty which my amendment faced today, namely, a point of order, because it would involve legislation added to an appropriation bill, and would be, therefore, subject to a point of order.

Mr. RUSSELL. I am not sure about that. I rather apprehend that the last appropriation bill to come before the Senate will be the ECA appropriation bill. Heretofore there has always been some legislation in that bill. If that is the case, there may be a place to tie the amendment to it without the necessity of a two-thirds vote. If there is not, of course, it will be subject to hazards. I hope it will receive support, because I think it will be a much better approach to the problem than is the means proposed by the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. FERGUSON. Both plans are aimed at the same thing—to avoid deficit spending or tax increases, and therefore we should work together.

Mr. RUSSELL. Of course. I did not intend to go into a discussion of the subject at this time. The discussion was elicited by the questions of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT]. I want to make it plain that it is not an individual proposition with me. I hope it will be a bipartisan proposition and that we shall work out something which will be so fair that it will appeal to the common sense of all the Members of the Senate, no matter what their party affiliations may be.

Mr. President, as I was saying, there is a substantial difference between the several appropriation bills, and that is why I do not think, as applied to the agricultural appropriation bill, this 5-percent across-the-board or discretionary cut, to be vested in the head of the agency, can possibly be effective, and I know it cannot be fair.

What is the situation with regard to the agricultural appropriation bill? I have heard the cry of economy with respect to this bill before. I heard it here in 1947, and I heard it in 1948. We had economy drives then, and they wound up with most of the economy being effected in the agricultural appropriation bills.

What has happened to the pending bill? The bill as it is presented to the Senate today, even though it is substantially over last year's bill, is $470,100,000 less than the appropriation bill for 1940 for the Department of Agriculture. I challenge Senators to show any other departmental bill which is that far below the prewar average. Yet it is said a 5-percent cut across the board on all appropriations is fair. It cannot possibly be.

I do not think the Eightieth Congress was the worst Congress that ever assembled, as has been stated in some quarters, but I do say that so far as the agricultural appropriation bill was concerned, it was the worst Congress in which I ever served. It cut the heart out of the agricultural appropriation bill.

I hope that my brethren on the other side of the aisle will not feel as did the Bourbons of ancient France, who never forgot and never learned. They have not forgotten about attacking the agricultural appropriation bill, but, so far as this bill is concerned, it seems to me they would have learned something by the result of the election in 1948. The House of Representatives even eliminated completely the soil-conservation work. It took a desperate fight here in the Senate even to keep that activity alive in the bill, with a little pittance of $150,000,000, cut down from $500,000,000, as it had been shortly before.

I went to some of my friends on the other side of the aisle and said, "You do not know what you are going to do." They said, "Our farmers do not care anything about this; they do not want it." They had been talking to the aristocrats of agriculture; they had not been talking to the farmer who rises early and drives a tractor all day long. When farmers are sufficiently interested in the committees which manage the farm program over the country to come into town at night, without recompense, and after a day spent on a tractor bumping over a dusty field, it is ridiculous for anyone to claim they have no interest in this bill. So I hope my friends on the other side will learn something from the experience they had in 1948. I am not here advising them politically, but I merely express my opinion that the scant attention given to the soil-conservation program in the calendar year 1948, when the farmers found out what had been done to them just a few weeks before the election, contributed more to the Republican debacle than any other single thing. Yet we hear it said here now, "Let us cut the agricultural appropriation bill. Let us have economy. Let us make a cut in a bill affecting the farmer's activities," when the appropriations in this bill are already $470,000,000 below the 1940 level, $384,000,000 below the level of 1942, when we were in the war, and were not stressing soil-conservation benefits.

Mr. President, this is an agricultural appropriation bill in that it deals with the soil and those who live on the soil, but it contains much more than that. It deals with every known insect which attacks the sources of food or the sources of fiber in this country, or is depleting even today the already sorely reduced forest resources of the United States. It deals with insects which attack man and beast. It deals with the diseases of all the animals on the Nation's farms. Try to figure out some time what that is worth in terms of natural resources, in terms of the cows, and hogs, and horses, and mules, and sheep, and see just how important the agricultural appropriation bill is to the people of this Nation. Then, Mr. President, you will understand why the farmers were so aroused when they saw what was done to the conservation plans which they themselves had designed, which they, through their local committees, controlled in the local counties and in the local communities, and you will understand something of the reason for the resentment which caused them to forget the traditions of 40 years when they came to cast their votes.

It is said, "We have to economize, and here is the farm bill, a way below what it has ever been before, but let us apply a 5-percent slash, without any consideration whatever as to how much beating the agricultural activities have already taken in the past 2 years in the reduction of appropriations for these activities." I say it simply does not make sense. It is not fair, and it is not right. It is unjust to the agriculturists of the United States.

Now I wish to draw another comparison. In 1940, the year before the war, out of the funds Congress appropriated for the over-all budget for all activities, $1 out of every $4.50 was carried in the agricultural appropriation bill. Look at the budget today. For the next year only $1 out of every $5 appropriated by the Congress is carried in this bill, for all the ramifications and the far-flung activities of agriculture. Yet it is proposed that that be cut 5 percent across the board, just as all the other activities and departments of Government, which are swollen all out of any proportion, would be cut.

Mr. President, that is why I say it is folly to talk about applying this yardstick to the Department of Agriculture, whose appropriation is already so far below prewar expenditures and not only that, but is below the present-day needs of agriculture and allied interests in this Nation. For example, the forests are suffering because the bill, even as it is here today, does not contain a large enough appropriation to provide adequately for one of the greatest, one of the most essential, resources of our land. The forests are subject to being depleted by fire, and the roads and trails through them, which were built by the Civilian Conservation Corps, going to waste because we have not appropriated sufficient sums of money even in this bill. Yet it is proposed to cut an appropriation which is insufficient to provide for this heritage that belongs to every American citizen, wherever he may live and whatever may be his business.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Georgia yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Is it not true that while there is a proposal to reduce appropriations for this essential activity, in 1947, which up to that time had been the most prosperous year our farmers had ever experienced, the net income of the farm group was only one-half the net income of the nonfarm group, and possibly in 1948 that disparity was accentuated, because in the latter part of last year farm prices suffered a substantial decline?

Mr. RUSSELL. The Senator is correct in his statement. When we consider the total amount of agricultural income, and refer to so many billion dollars, some people say that all the farmers are becoming rich. But put the agricultural income alongside the national income and see what it reflects. Despite high farm prices, which are now going down and down, even at their very zenith and peak, the 20 percent of the people who live on the soil and till it never did get more than 10 percent of the national income. Yet we are told farmers are becoming rich, and we hear it said, "Let us economize, let us cut his poor little bill, which is already $470,000,000 below what it was in the prewar year. Let us cut it. Let us take it out of the farmer. He received pretty fair prices for his commodities. He was able to patch up his Ford. He painted his house. He managed to send his son to college. He is getting to be prosperous. Let us move in and cut out his poor little appropriation. Let us apply the same yardstick to that as we do to every other agency of the Government."

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Before the Senator from Georgia concludes his very splendid explanation of the bill will he be good enough to indicate some of the items, and especially items for agriculture, which will have to be cut if $36,000,000 is taken from the bill as his committee has reported it to the Senate?

Mr. RUSSELL. Of course, the first thing we would have to do would be cut the school-lunch program, because we have brought that item above the estimate of the Bureau of the Budget. That is the first item in the bill that is above the budget estimate. So there would have to be a very substantial cut made in the school-lunch program if we were to agree to the motion to suspend the rule and thereafter adopt the amendment. We then, of course, would have to take out of the bill what the Senate committee has undertaken to place in it in order to protect the national forests and maintain them in a condition approximating that of previous years. The appropriations for the national forests in the House bill were greatly below what they were last year.

Senators speak of applying to the agricultural appropriation bill the same rule they would apply to other bills. I do not see the distinguished Senator from New Mexico [Mr. ANDERSON] on the floor, but I wish to say a word about his services as Secretary of Agriculture. The permanent employee—and hear this, Senators, who are getting ready to cut the Department of Agriculture bill as they would cut other bills, though relatively the appropriation for the Department of Agriculture is far below the appropriation for other departments—the permanent employees in the Department of Agriculture are 20,000 fewer than they were in 1940. Can Senators name any other department of government that in anywise approaches that record? There are 20,000 fewer permanent employees in the Department of Agriculture than there were in 1940, the year before the war.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. ROBERTSON. There are approximately 73,000,000 acres in our national forests. They are a great reservoir of timber, affording protection to our watersheds, and are valuable to our Nation in many other ways. Is it not a fact that in recent years we have been consuming the timber resources of the Nation at a rate 50 percent greater than the replacement?

Mr. RUSSELL. I have covered that point in general terms. I appreciate the fact that the Senator has given the exact figure. I merely spoke of "the rapidly declining but priceless heritage of our national forests." So if we should recommit the bill, we would be obliged to cut the appropriation for the national forests. The Senate committee added the poor little sum of one and one-half million dollars for the national forests. That is a very small addition to the appropriation, considering the vast expanse and great value of our national forests. The Senate committee increased the amount provided in the budget estimate, but if the bill is sent back to committee that will be one of the first items to feel the ax, because that item was raised by the Senate committee above the budget estimate.

Mr. ROBERTSON. What statistical agency must our farmers depend upon to find the price trends and competitive trends of other products?

Mr. RUSSELL. The Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Mr. ROBERTSON. What did the House do about that Bureau?

Mr. RUSSELL. The Senate committee restored a part of the cut made by the House below the budget estimate.

Mr. ROBERTSON. If the bill were recommitted, it would be necessary to cut the appropriation for that essential, factual study agency for the farmer, would it not?

Mr. RUSSELL. If the Senate is going to make the agricultural bill subject to economy equal to that of other agencies which have swollen to several times their prewar size, we might as well do away with this very essential activity. It would not make any difference to the farmer then what his specific standards would be. He would be in such a deplorable condition that the Bureau would not be able to locate.

Mr. MAYBANK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. MAYBANK. Is it not a fact that an increased appropriation for the Forest Service would mean the bringing in of more revenue to the Treasury? Is it not true that a 5-percent cut to that Service would materially curtail the amount of logs, wood, and timber the Forest Service throughout the United States sells, and is it not a fact that all the income from the Forest Service, for agricultural products and forest products, goes straight to the Treasury, and is not shown in the bill?

Mr. RUSSELL. It does not show in the bill. I will say to the Senator that all of it does not go to the Treasury. Some is paid to the local communities in lieu of taxes, but the remainder comes to the Treasury. Of course, many persons familiar with the national forests, including distinguished Senators on the floor, have appeared before the committee and claimed that the Forest Service pays $5 in return for each $1 provided by Congress to enable it to handle timber in the national forests. I often thought that the estimate of a return of $5 for $1 spent was a little high, and that we could do a little better. But if we could have a return from any other Government department of $5 for every $1 spent for it we would be in a much better fiscal condition than we occupy today.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. In line with the question addressed to the Senator from Georgia a moment ago by the distinguished Senator from Virginia [Mr. ROBERTSON], I call attention to the language of the amendment, which, as I read it, takes the power away from the Appropriations Committee and gives it directly into the hands of the Secretary of Agriculture, with the approval of the Bureau of the Budget, to make the 5-percent cut. That is one of the things I have been objecting to all along in connection with a 5-percent arbitrary cut. The language is as follows:

> The Secretary of Agriculture, with respect to appropriations made in title I of this act, is authorized and directed, with the approval of the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, to make such reductions in the amounts to be expended from the appropriations in such title as will in the aggregate equal at least 5 percent of the total amounts so appropriated therein.

In other words, it is proposed to let the Secretary of Agriculture, to the tune of about $35,000,000, substitute his judgment for the judgment of the Appropriations Committee. In the bill considered a short time ago, in which $3,000,000,000 was involved, a 5-percent cut meant that three or four agencies of Government would have the right to deal with $150,000,000. The delegation of that authority into the hands of the so-called bureaucrats, of whom we have heard so much from the opposite side of the Chamber, it seems to me should give our Republican colleagues some concern in view of the previous arguments they have made respecting delegation of authority. No one can say what the Secretary of Agriculture or the Bureau of the Budget are going to do in the way of making cuts. In other words, as I view it, they may take an opposite position from that of the Appropriations Committee, in making the 5-percent reduction.

Mr. RUSSELL. They might cut something that, of course, would be dear to the heart of some Senator, and which is absolutely essential to the operation of the bill.

Mr. MAYBANK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. MAYBANK. Is it not a fact that the appropriation for the Forest Service has been so reduced that the public parks and the public playgrounds in the great national forests have practically no funds made available to keep them open and to keep them in proper shape and repair, and is it not a further fact that in some instances portions of the parks have even been rented because of the lack of funds appropriated?

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, of course, the forest recreational areas are the resorts of the people of modest means. I forget exactly how many million persons visit these magnificent forest areas. Although very simple arrangements have been provided in them, such as outdoor cooking places, and the simplest and most primitive sanitary facilities, yet they are visited by millions of American citizens. During the war not a dollar was spent on them. Since the war we have not been able to secure money for them, though I finally did prevail on the committee to provide $1,000,000 for this purpose in 1948. But I assert, unhesitatingly, that the recreational facilities in some of our national parks are a national disgrace to a Nation as strong and powerful and with the resources of the United States. Not only do we have a condition which is a national disgrace in connection with that item, but the same is true in connection with the item for the lands which were acquired under the submarginal program some years ago, some 7,000,000 acres, in 31 or 32 States, lands in connection with which the Government of the United States is sponsoring soil conservation. Those lands represent a disgraceful spectacle when compared with the lands of the private farmers alongside of them, because of the penurious policy of the Congress in appropriating money to maintain these properties by the Government of the United States.

Mr. WHERRY, Mr. TAFT, and Mr. ROBERTSON addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Georgia yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield first to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I ask the Senator to yield because I must go to a meeting of the Appropriations Committee.

Mr. RUSSELL. I apologize to the Senator from Nebraska for not yielding to him immediately. He was on his feet sometime ago. Then the Senator from South Carolina asked me to yield, and at that time the Senator from Nebraska was talking to another Senator.

Mr. WHERRY. I am very appreciative. I shall ask the Senator to leave the subject he has just been discussing for a moment. I trust that the distinguished Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] will later be yielded to by the Senator from Georgia.

I ask the Senator to turn to page 43 of the bill, line 12, and consider the item for flood control. I also invite attention to the basic law enacted by the Seventy-fourth Congress, Public Law 738. I read section 2 to the distinguished Senator:

> Federal investigations and improvements of rivers and other waterways for flood control and allied purposes shall be under the jurisdiction of and shall be prosecuted by the War Department under the direction of the Secretary of War and supervision of the Chief of Engineers, and Federal investigations of watersheds and measures for runoff and water flow retardation and soil-erosion prevention on watersheds shall be under the jurisdiction of and shall be prosecuted by the Department of Agriculture under the direction of the Secretary of Agriculture, except as otherwise provided by act of Congress.

In view of that basic provision, I ask the distinguished Senator, Who will administer the funds in line 12, which have now been increased from $8,975,000 to $10,000,000?

Mr. RUSSELL. I am sorry that I did not follow the Senator. I am not as familiar as I should be with the basic law which he has read, but it is my understanding that it is administered by the Secretary of Agriculture through the Soil Conservation Service.

Mr. WHERRY. I realize that we cannot write legislation in an appropriation bill; but does not the Senator from Georgia feel that the $10,000,000 item should be used by the Soil Conservation Service and the Forest Service in carrying out the provisions of the bill and the intent of Congress?

Mr. RUSSELL. As I understand, they are the agencies which use the funds. In the field the work is done by the Soil Conservation Service and the Forest Service. I have never heard anything to the contrary.

Mr. WHERRY. An amendment to an appropriation bill requiring that that be done would be subject to a point of order; but does the Senator see any reason why it should not continue to be administered by the Soil Conservation Service?

Mr. RUSSELL. I have heard nothing to the contrary. The Soil Conservation Service was the agency which appeared before the committee and offered testimony, along with the Forest Service. I believe that the Department of the Interior had some representatives there, because certain public lands under the jurisdiction of that agency are affected. However, as I understand, the actual field work is done by the Soil Conservation Service.

Mr. WHERRY. And that is our intention when we approve the appropriation.

Mr. RUSSELL. Yes. It is all under the general direction of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mr. WHERRY. Does not the Senator agree that it should be done through the Soil Conservation Service?

Mr. RUSSELL. It is the intention that the field work shall be done through the Soil Conservation Service and the Forest Service. The Forest Service does some of the work.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. ROBERTSON. I wish the Senator would emphasize a remark which he recently made about the value, from the standpoint of perpetuating democracy, of the recreational opportunities which are to be found in the national forests. The Senator will recall, of course, that our colonial ancestors came from countries where the use of forests was largely the prerogative of kings and the nobility—those on horseback. When our ancestors came over here they were determined that the state, meaning the organization of the people, should have those rights. Does the Senator know of any better investment in the peace, happiness, and contentment of the people than the opportunities which we can give them in our national parks and our national forests if we maintain those areas as they should be maintained?

Mr. RUSSELL. I have always strongly believed in maintaining and improving the recreational facilities of our national forests and all the land that is the common property of the United States. Millions of people enjoy vacations in those beauty spots who otherwise would be denied the right of having that little period of recreation which is so essential to every human being.

Mr. President, I am nearly through. I merely wish again to point out that this bill is $470,100,000 below the 1940 appropriation. I wish to emphasize that the full-time employees for this year are 55,372, as compared with 75,833 in 1941, the year we were thrown into war. The total, including temporary employees, is 71,000, as compared with 108,000 in the year 1941. Yet, it is proposed to subject this bill, important as it is, already reduced as it has been, particularly by the past two Congresses, by the same reduction that would be applied to other bills, which are swollen to two or three times their prewar size.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Did I correctly understand the Senator to say that the bill is $470,000,000 less than the appropriation was in 1947?

Mr. RUSSELL. No; in 1940.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Am I to understand that the present appropriation figure is far under the Department's requests of the Appropriations Committee?

Mr. RUSSELL. Oh, yes.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. About how much?

Mr. RUSSELL. It is only $4,300,000 below the budget, but requests were made of the committee which would, I am quite sure, have run three or four hundred million dollars above this amount. The Senator has seen efforts on the floor to increase the appropriations greatly above what the committee recommended.

Mr. President, this bill deals with every conceivable activity of the human family. There are 1,867 separate activities under the bill. It deals not only with agriculture and horticulture, but with every form of flora and fauna on this continent. I am often amazed, in listening to witnesses who appear before the committee, at the great variety of activities represented. As an example, I mention the gladiolus industry. I had no idea that it was a $100,000,000 business, and that it was a source of livelihood to hundreds of small producers all over the Nation, small farmers who operate greenhouses and produce gladioli. There are literally thousands of them. A disease has attacked that flower and has destroyed about half the production, thereby threatening the employment of thousands of people. Representatives of that industry came before us and testified, and, of course, we put in a little pittance to try to find the means to deal with that disease.

Mr. President, there should not be applied to this bill, reduced as it already is, the same rule which is sought to be applied to other bills, some of which are greatly swollen.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. The Senator referred to Forest Service, and made the general statement that agriculture had taken the greatest reduction since 1940.

Mr. RUSSELL. I did not say that the Forest Service had. I said that the agricultural appropriation bill had.

Mr. TAFT. That statement apparently does not apply. I have the 1940 appropriation bill before me. I find, for example, that $190,000,000 of it represented Public Roads. That activity is no longer in the agricultural bill.

Mr. RUSSELL. All those items are eliminated from the figures which I gave. I gave comparable figures. They were prepared under the direction of the staff. The items which were transferred from the Department under the reorganization are not taken into consideration. That would not be a fair comparison.

Mr. TAFT. I notice $225,000,000 for parity payments, which apparently now are being taken out of the Commodity Credit Corporation. Last year it paid $200,000,000, which is not in the agricultural bill.

Mr. RUSSELL. The figures which I gave include all appropriations for activities of the Department of Agriculture that are now in the Department.

Mr. TAFT. I notice that the appropriation for the Forest Service has been increased from $20,000,000 in 1940 to $53,000,000 in the pending bill. Is that correct?

Mr. RUSSELL. I am not familiar with the figures, but I suspect that that is approximately correct. Since that time the Congress has increased the salaries of employees of the Forest Service, along with the salaries of all other employees of the Government, by approximately 60 percent. We enacted a law under which no Federal employee may work more than 40 hours a week. The Forest Service implored Congress to give them an exception, along with the lighthouse keepers, but the Congress enacted the 40-hour week for the Forest Service and the lighthouse keepers, without taking into consideration the fact that neither forest fires nor storms at sea can be confined by legislative edict to the 40-hour week which those employees work. So we have had to expend a great deal more money as a result of the enactment of that act of Congress. But if the Senator will check, I am sure he will find that there are few, if any, additional employees in the Forest Service today, as compared to the number of its employees in 1940. I shall obtain the figures for the Senator from Ohio in a moment.

As a matter of fact, I find, upon checking the figures, that, although due to the act of the Congress in increasing wages and applying a 40-hour workweek the Forest Service appropriation is larger, yet the men who work and live in the forests are fewer in number today than they were in 1940. Although the appropriation has increased, today the employment in the Forest Service is 10,242, as compared with 11,050 in 1943.

Mr. TAFT. Yet the appropriation for the Forest Service has increased from $20,294,000 to $53,854,000; is that correct?

Mr. RUSSELL. Yes; it is because the Congress has increased the salaries and has passed a law putting the Forest Service on a 40-hour week.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LANGER in the chair). Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. I notice that in 1940 the appropriation for the office of the Secretary was $883,000, whereas this year it is $2,143,000. That is a fairly large increase, is it not, in the appropriation for the Secretary's Office?

Mr. RUSSELL. Yes; but if the Senator will check into that item, I think he will find that since the 1940 appropriation bill was passed, the Congress has passed an act known as the Marshall Plan Act, and the Department of Agriculture has been the great procurement agency in connection with the Marshall plan aid and program, and that work has been handled through the Office of the Secretary. I think I am correct in saying that that increase in the appropriation can be attributed very largely to the additional duties imposed upon the Department of Agriculture since 1940, in that way.

Mr. President, I am sorry that the distinguished Senator from New Mexico is not now in the Chamber, for he could answer that question categorically.

Mr. TAFT. I notice that the 1940 appropriation for the Office of Solicitor was $232,000, whereas in the pending measure that item is $2,235,000. Is not that a substantial increase in the appropriation for the lawyers in the Department of Agriculture?

Mr. RUSSELL. I am glad the Senator from Ohio mentions that item, because I happen to remember it. Since the 1940 appropriation bill was passed, there have been changes in the Solicitor's Office in the Department of Agriculture. At that time there were three or four Solicitors' offices in the Department—one for the Rural Electrification Administration, one for the Commodity Credit Corporation, and one or two others. I happen to remember the one for the Rural Electrification Administration, because it was a large one. At the present time all of them have been consolidated into one, and today there are fewer lawyers in the Department of Agriculture than there were in 1940, although the responsibilities are much greater. I am glad the Senator from Ohio has mentioned that matter, for I intended to refer to it.

The Senator from Michigan harped upon the fact that the appropriation for the Office of Solicitor has been increased.

Mr. TAFT. Yes; under the pending bill the appropriation for the Office of Solicitor is $2,235,000—in other words, $2,235,000 worth of lawyers in the Office of the Solicitor, Department of Agriculture.

Mr. RUSSELL. In that connection, I point out that at the peak, in 1941, there were 389 lawyers in the Department of Agriculture, whereas by 1948 that number had been decreased to 209, or a reduction of 180.

Senators may smile very slyly when speaking of the lawyers in the Department of Agriculture and the appropriation of approximately $2,500,000 for them——

Mr. TAFT. No; I am only trying——

Mr. RUSSELL. But I wish to say that there is no private enterprise on earth which, if it had developed into a big business concern, as the Department of Agriculture has, would undertake to get along with a legal department costing less than $20,000,000. After all, $1,000,000,000 of Federal funds, for which every citizen is obligated to pay taxes, is handled through the Rural Electrification Administration alone, which makes loans to approximately 963 farmers' cooperatives scattered throughout every State of the United States, every one of which must be checked by the legal staff of the Department of Agriculture. If we had nothing else for those lawyers to do, we would still be getting a great deal of highly important work done very cheaply, with lawyers and a legal staff costing $2,500,000 handling $1,000,000,000 worth of loans in 1 year.

Mr. TAFT. Of course, every local cooperative has its own lawyer, entirely outside the Government, I assume.

Mr. RUSSELL. Of course it has. Probably every borrower who applies for a loan at a bank has a lawyer, but the bank does not let the borrower's lawyer pass on the legality of the paper. To the contrary, the bank has its own lawyer pass upon it.

Where would we get, Mr. President, if the lawyer of the local cooperative or association were permitted to pass upon the legality of funds thus proposed to be taken from the Treasury of the United States? The fiscal condition of the United States today is bad enough, but it would be a catastrophe too horrible to contemplate if we were to turn all legal questions in regard to loans of that sort over to the lawyers of the borrowers. For instance, would we let a railroad's lawyers pass on the legality of loans applied for by the railroad?

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, from the statement the Senator has made, I am under the impression that he takes the position that the Department of Agriculture, more than any other department or agency of the Government, has suffered greatly from very heavy reductions.

Mr. RUSSELL. It has.

Mr. TAFT. But I notice that in 1940 the library of the Department of Agriculture received an appropriation of $109,000, whereas now its appropriation is stated as being $722,400.

Mr. RUSSELL. That is correct.

Mr. TAFT. That is a substantial increase, I assume.

Mr. RUSSELL. It is, because the Senator from Ohio, in common with other Senators, voted to increase the salaries of Government employees greatly above what they were in 1940. I have before me a statement or compilation showing the change.

In 1943 the Library of the Department of Agriculture had 193 employees. Today it has 176 employees.

If the Senator from Ohio will examine the situation respecting the libraries of other departments of the Government, I do not believe he will be able to show me one which has fewer employees than has or had the Library of the Department of Agriculture, either in 1948, 1943, or 1940.

I still insist that this Department has taken its cut. It has taken its beating. It was almost extinguished by the Eightieth Congress; and today we are making a few feeble efforts to get it back on its feet, so that it can operate and can save the great agricultural industry upon which all of us are dependent for the food we eat and the fiber we wear.

Mr. TAFT. I notice that in 1940 the appropriation for the Bureau of Animal Industry, Department of Agriculture, was $16,663,000, whereas in the pending measure its appropriation is $22,729,000.

Mr. RUSSELL. That is correct. It is the agency which is charged with the responsibility of inspecting all the meat we eat. A great many persons are engaged in that inspection service, and the Congress has voted to increase their salaries approximately 60 percent. Therefore, inasmuch as Congress has issued a mandate that the employees of that agency be paid that much more, it is necessary to pay them accordingly, if we wish to have the meat inspected.

Mr. TAFT. I notice that the 1940 appropriation of the Bureau of Plant Industry was $5,183,000, whereas under the pending bill its appropriation is $8,750,000.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, when we consider the great responsibilities with which that agency is charged, I have never known how it could get along with the appropriations it has had, in view of the way the Congress has increased the salaries of its employees. That agency is charged with the duty and responsibility of protecting the crops of the United States from destruction by fungus and insects, such as grasshoppers, and so forth. Yet that agency has managed to get along with the very modest increase in appropriations which it has received, although the Congress has directed it to increase the pay of its employees by 60 percent.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I do not wish to question for a moment the fact that the general scale of expenditures had to be increased and should be increased. I am only trying to rebut the general impression which I thought the Senator from Georgia was giving, namely, that here is a Department which, more than any other department or agency of the United States Government, has taken a tremendous decrease in its appropriations. It seems to me that the 5-percent cuts which have been made in its appropriations since 1940 will not result in crippling this Department any more than any other department.

I fully agree with the Senator's statement about the importance of each of these activities, but I do not believe a case is made for treating this Department differently from the way other departments of the Government are treated.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, the Senator from Ohio said he thought I was trying to create the impression that this Department should be treated differently. I am very happy if I have succeeded in creating that impression in the mind of at least one Senator, because I have been trying to present facts and figures to show that the personnel of the Department of Agriculture is substantially less than it was in former years.

I assert further that in 1947 and 1948 the agricultural bill, in those two economy drives, took an undue cut, and that the pending bill does not restore all the activities which should be restored, and which are essential to the health and the welfare and the lives of the American people.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. ANDERSON. Would the 5-percent cut, in the Senator's opinion, if adopted, apply to the $300,000,000 soil-conservation appropriation?

Mr. RUSSELL. As the Senator will remember, in 1947 the House of Representatives cut out all the soil-conservation payments, but after a desperate struggle in the Senate we were able to restore $150,000,000. I want to pay tribute to the junior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. YOUNG]. The Republican Congress, which had come into control, flush with its victory and bent on economy, did not pursue its efforts toward economy much further than the Department of Agriculture, and the Department would have been absolutely paralyzed beyond all hope of redemption if the Senator from North Dakota, a dirt farmer, had not appeared and made plain what the soil-conservation system meant, although I had tried to tell them. We finally got $150,000,000. That represents payments which were made the year the farmers voted to change the complexion of the Senate from a majority of Republicans to a majority of Democrats and to change the House of Representatives in the same way. Those payments were made last summer, just before the election, and the farmers could not understand why, if the party that had control of the Congress was a friend of the farmers, they found it necessary to take away funds to repay the farmer the one-third that is recompensated to him for carrying on soil-conservation practices.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I am glad to yield the floor.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, it is with a good deal of regret that I have listened to my very good friend the Senator from Georgia with respect to certain of the inferences he draws and certain of the impressions he has left. The Senator from Georgia, I hope, will refer to the table, a copy of which I think he has before him. It is obviously true that agricultural appropriations have decreased since 1940; so have certain payments decreased—parity payments, for example. Some payments have been added.

Mr. RUSSELL. Where have the payments been added? I should like to know where they have been added.

Mr. REED. The scale of soil-conservation payments——

Mr. RUSSELL. We had $500,000,000 for that purpose up to the war. We had to reduce them somewhat then in order to get the farmers to plant more food and fiber. But the soil-conservation payments were never less than $300,000,000 until 1947, when the Congress undertook to eliminate them entirely.

Mr. REED. The Rural Electrification Administration has had increased appropriations—not payments, but appropriations.

Mr. RUSSELL. That is for loans to farmers; yes.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. I am overdue at a committee meeting. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. I wonder whether the Senator will yield in order that I may request confirmation of three high officers in the armed services. There are several vacancies in the armed services.

Mr. REED. I shall finish very shortly.

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator will not be able to finish quickly, because he will be interrupted. I shall wait in the meantime. It will be nice to have these offices filled.

Mr. REED. I may ask the Senator from Georgia whether the largest decrease in the agricultural appropriation bills was not from 1942 to 1943, under a Democratic administration, and whether it was not a decrease of $400,000,000, the largest decrease ever made?

Mr. RUSSELL. To answer categorically, without explanation, that is true, but, of course, that was the year we took out the parity payments, amounting to $250,000,000.

Mr. REED. Were the Republicans responsible for that?

Mr. RUSSELL. They were as much responsible as anybody else. That was for 1943, and I can give the Senator the explanation. That is the year when the section 32 funds, because of import duties falling off to practically nothing, were reduced about $200,000,000, and that cut section 32 funds about that much. The section 32 funds are included in these figures. Why the Department of Agriculture put them in, I do not know, but they prepared the figures and put them in.

Mr. REED. Very well. There has been a very great variation in the figures, there is no doubt about that. The criticism does not all belong to the Republican Party.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. RUSSELL. Did not the Republican Party cut soil-conservation payments to $150,000,000 in 1947?

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator from Georgia yield for a question?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. REED. Is it not true that appropriation made for the Department of Agriculture in 1947, for the fiscal year ending in 1948, in the sum of $816,000,000, is the largest agricultural appropriation made by any Congress since 1944?

Mr. RUSSELL. Of course the reason for that lies not in the appropriation itself, but in the fact that revenue increased, world trade was reviving, and section 32 funds, which were not utilized during the previous years the Senator mentions increased. During the war there were no section 32 funds. There were few imports into the United States.

I want the Senator to continue, and I shall not interrupt him. I know the argument he intends to make. I shall endeavor in my own time to explain it. The Senator, if he were merely looking at the decrease, might make that statement. I can give the items the Eightieth Congress cut. I had not intended to go into that in detail, although I can show where that Congress cut the heart out of the agricultural appropriation bill.

Mr. REED. I should like to ask the Senator from Georgia whether the lowest appropriation made for the Department of Agriculture since 1942, with one exception—1944—was not the $720,000,000 appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 1945?

Mr. RUSSELL. That is true, if we are to eliminate section 32 funds, of which there were practically none. But, so far as the funds appropriated from the Treasury are concerned, the appropriation bill of 1948 was far below any bill we have had. The section 32 funds were "all off" during the war, and they did not start coming in again in any substantial amount until 1947. But the actual amount appropriated from the Treasury by the 1948 agricultural appropriation bill, passed in 1947, was substantially below the amount of any other agricultural appropriation bill that had been passed since 1940.

Mr. REED. Not in the total figures.

Mr. RUSSELL. Oh, that is true, if section 32 funds are included, as the Senator is doing. I am talking about funds appropriated from the Treasury, not the funds which go to section 32, which in some years are not used at all, and in other years there is very great necessity of their use.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I want to conclude as soon as I can. I am overdue at a committee meeting. I hope I may have the attention of the Senator from Georgia in stating that I took the floor, or intended to take it, in order to express regret that we had to include the agricultural bill in the test of economy that those on this side are trying to make.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, if the Senator will indulge me, I should like to say, while he has the floor, that the Senator from Kansas, while he happened to be engaged with the duties of the chairmanship of another subcommittee on appropriations, was good enough in 1947 to suspend hearings on the bill of which he had charge, in order to come to the agricultural subcommittee and try to save some of the items which had been eliminated completely by the House of Representatives. I happen to recall that. So he certainly has as much familiarity with what has been done to the pending bill, in that respect, as any Senator present. He contributed greatly to preserving at least the framework of the agricultural system which was set up under the local committees for farmers throughout the United States. I want to bear testimony to that. I am sure the Senator knows the condition the bill was in when he came into the committee room.

Mr. REED. I thank the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. President, what I want to say to my colleagues on both sides of the aisle is that, as bills go, under the rules of the Senate, this is a good bill as compared with the stream of bills which have come and are yet to come before the Senate. It is a model bill. I am going to vote for the motion of the Senator from Michigan only because I think the test of economy should be applied without favor to any group. If I were to vote the other way, I should be inconsistent. My farmer friends, whose confidence I hope I have, would be able to point the finger of scorn at me for making an exception of an appropriation bill in the test of economy, because it was a farmer's bill. I do not think they would want me to do that. Let me say to my colleague what I have said before, that I do not think there is a committee or a subcommittee of the Senate which operates more efficiently, with more common sense, with more courtesy, and with less partisan friction, than the Agricultural Subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations, under the chairmanship of the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. RUSSELL. I wish sincerely to thank the Senator from Kansas, and I also wish to thank the Senators who sit on the other side of the aisle for having made this an absolutely nonpartisan bill. If there has ever been the slightest hint of partisanship in our approach to the problems, I have never been aware of it. I know the members of the committee have worked with the sole objective of doing the best possible for this very important element of our Nation.

Mr. REED. I regret that the Senator from Georgia dragged in some inferences which I thought he should have omitted, and he left some impressions which I fear were not entirely accurate.

Mr. RUSSELL. I hope they are accurate. I do not think this bill should be subject to the same rule as that which would apply to other bills. While I do not think the Eightieth Congress was the worst Congress that ever assembled, for in some respects it did some very valuable work, so far as the agricultural appropriation bill was concerned, if there had not been certain Senators on the committee, we would be at this time trying to pick up the pieces. Agriculture could not have gotten along under the bill as it came to us in the Senate Subcommittee on Appropriations. I do not think there would have been a county committee anywhere in the Nation, for there was nothing to plan in the way of a farm program.

Mr. REED. As I have stated, I regard the Senator from Georgia as an able chairman, and I regard his subcommittee as probably the best working subcommittee there is in the Senate. My only purpose, as I informed the Senator from Georgia last evening, is to vote to subject every appropriation bill to the test of economy as the bills come forward. It is an awkward way; it is not very effective. I want to say to the Senator from Georgia, as well as to the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT], that if they and their associates can work out any formula whereby we can reduce appropriations according to the character of the appropriation and service, I shall join with them, and I authorize them to use my name.

Mr. RUSSELL. I shall be happy to see that the name of the Senator from Kansas appears as sponsor on the amendment.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I think this country is in a desperate situation. I think we must cut appropriations. We must either do that, or return to deficit financing or increase taxes. The desirable thing to do is to cut appropriations, which I am certain can be done if there is a will so to do.

I yield the floor, Mr. President.

Mr. REED subsequently said: Mr. President, when I addressed the Senate a few minutes ago, I had in my hand a table which I intended to ask consent to have printed in the RECORD. I now ask unanimous consent that the table may be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of the remarks which I made today.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Total direct appropriations, fiscal years 1939 to 1949, and budget estimates, 1950 [1]

1939	$1,135,800
1940	1,333,900
1941	1,124,600
1942	1,247,900
1943	859,400
1944	1,027,100
1945	720,800
1946	769,900
1947	747,900
1948	816,100
1949	733,900
Budget estimate, 1950	867,500
House bill, 1950	841,900
Senate bill, 1950	863,800

[1] Amounts for years 1939 to 1949 adjusted for comparability with the appropriation structure in the 1950 estimates.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE—ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills and joint resolution, and they were signed by the President pro tempore:

S. 326. An act to amend the War Claims Act of 1948;

S. 392. An act authorizing the issuance of a patent in fee to Thomas A. Pickett;

S. 683. An act to relieve certain employees of the Veterans' Administration from financial liability for certain overpayments;

S. 716. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to sell the land of George Peters under existing regulations;

S. 1152. An act for the relief of certain officers and employees of the Office of United States High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands who suffered losses of personal property by reason of war conditions; and

S. J. Res. 18. Joint resolution for the relief of the First Citizens Bank & Trust Co., administrator of the estate of C. A. Ragland, Sr.

NOMINATIONS IN THE ARMY AND NAVY

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, as in executive session, I send to the desk three nominations unanimously reported this morning from the Committee on Armed Services. They are as follows:

Francis P. Matthews, of Nebraska, to be Secretary of the Navy; Dan A. Kimball, of California, to be Under Secretary of the Navy; Gordon Gray, of North Carolina, to be Under Secretary of the Army.

In view of the fact that these positions have been unfilled for some time, and in view of the fact that the recommendations come unanimously from the Committee on Armed Services, I ask unanimous consent, as in executive session, that these three nominations be confirmed and that the President be notified.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, reserving the right to object—and I shall not object—I should like to ask the able chairman of the Armed Services Committee, for the RECORD, whether there were any objections with reference to these nominations brought to the attention of the committee.

Mr. TYDINGS. There was one telegram signed by a single individual, whom I do not know, against one of the nominees, but it was perfunctory and did not contain any specific character of charge, so I did not bring it to the attention of the committee.

Mr. KNOWLAND. As the able Senator has pointed out, the report comes from the committee unanimously.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is correct. Two of the men named have been before the committee previously and have been confirmed. The nomination of Mr. Matthews to be Secretary of the Navy has the support of both the minority leader and his colleague, as Mr. Matthews comes from the State of Nebraska.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MARTIN in the chair). Without objection, the nominations are confirmed, and, without objection, the President will be notified.

NOMINATIONS IN THE MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, as in executive session, I ask for the immediate confirmation of various routine promotions in the Military Establishment, most of which are in minor rank, with the exception of one, which I shall report to the Senate, namely, the nomination of Gen. Lucius D. Clay, to be placed on the retired list in the grade of general. Inasmuch as this is one of the higher ranks in the Military Establishment, I felt that, in addition to the usual announcement, I should bring it to the attention of the Senate.

These nominations likewise come from the Committee on Armed Services unanimously. No objection with respect to any of them, so far as I know, has been filed with any person.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed, and, without objection, the President will be immediately notified.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Downey	Holland
Anderson	Eastland	Humphrey
Baldwin	Ecton	Ives
Brewster	Ellender	Jenner
Bricker	Ferguson	Johnson, Colo.
Bridges	Frear	Johnson, Tex.
Butler	Fulbright	Johnston, S. C.
Byrd	Gillette	Kefauver
Cain	Graham	Kem
Chapman	Green	Kilgore
Chavez	Gurney	Knowland
Connally	Hayden	Langer
Cordon	Hendrickson	Lodge
Donnell	Hill	Long
Douglas	Hoey	Lucas
McCarran	Myers	Taylor
McCarthy	Neely	Thomas, Okla.
McClellan	O'Conor	Thomas, Utah
McFarland	O'Mahoney	Thye
McGrath	Pepper	Tobey
McKellar	Reed	Tydings
McMahon	Robertson	Vandenberg
Martin	Russell	Watkins
Maybank	Saltonstall	Wherry
Miller	Schoeppel	Williams
Millikin	Smith, Maine	Withers
Morse	Sparkman	Young
Mundt	Stennis
Murray	Taft

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A quorum is present.

THE ATOMIC ENERGY COMMISSION—LOSS OF URANIUM 235

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. President, yesterday afternoon, a 3-hour session was held by the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy with the members of the Atomic Energy Commission and its staff, relating to the loss of some uranium 235 in the Argonne laboratories in Chicago.

At 8 o'clock last night I issued a statement which I ask to be printed at this point in my remarks.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR M'MAHON

The Joint Committee on Atomic Energy has gone over with the Atomic Energy Commission and staff the matter of the reported loss of enriched uranium oxide at the Argonne National Laboratory.

The facts reported by the Commission at this time show that this shortage of uranium oxide was first discovered by the laboratory on February 8, 1949. The item missing was a small container of uranium oxide which had been produced by oxidation, or burning, or machine turnings from a bar of uranium.

This is an important point because it indicates the care which must be taken with all the process residues. Machine turnings, scraps, waste, sweepings, drainings, and all forms of residues from machine and chemical operations, are collected and treated to recover and reuse the uranium. The small container of oxide was to have been sent to a vault for safekeeping. It was recorded as being part of a shipment to the storage vault on September 16, 1948, when a section of the laboratory was moved. When the material in this shipment was to be used again, one container containing approximately 1 ounce of U-235 in uranium oxide was missing. This was determined on February 8, 1949.

The laboratory started a search for this material and being unable to find it, notified the Commission representatives at Chicago on February 14. An intensive investigation was begun at that time into the handling of the receptacle prior to its placement in the safe. When the container itself was not found, the FBI was notified on March 28.

In the meantime the Commission reports samples were taken from all the containers for residues in the section of the laboratory where the material had been used. The samples had to be purified, concentrated, and put into the pile and tested in order to determine the presence of U-235. The container which was thus found to contain some of this material was sent to Oak Ridge for detailed analysis. A preliminary report by the Commission shows that six-sevenths of the missing material was contained in this drum.

The Commission is continuing analysis and tests to eliminate doubts as to the identity of this material. The Commission reports, however, that the degree of enrichment permitted identification of the material since there was no other material of this exact composition in the laboratory. While the analyses and investigation are not complete, it appears from the report of the Commission that the material was not surreptitiously removed from the premises. The FBI has indicated that in its opinion no espionage is involved in this case. As matters now stand, one-seventh of an ounce of material is not accounted for. A seventh of an ounce of U-235, should it not be accounted for, would be of value in chemical and physical research. However, it is of no value for use in an atomic weapon.

The investigation is continuing and the joint committee is determined to get a full and satisfactory accounting of this matter, particularly with respect to the accounting system which would permit such a situation to develop.

The chairman of the joint committee was notified of the shortage on April 27 in a top-secret report. Action by the committee was deferred pending completion of the FBI investigation and submission of a final Commission report.

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. President, the statement was a report to the people of the United States of the facts as given to us by the Atomic Energy Commission. I now call particular attention to the fact that I stated that it was my intention to conduct a most searching and intensive investigation of their report and every aspect of this matter as quickly as possible.

Quite frankly, there are several aspects of the matter with which I am not satisfied, and which obviously need vigorous attention. Members of the staff of the joint committee have been and are now engaged in gathering first-hand facts on this matter. Some of the staff are now in the field.

When our investigation is completed, it is my belief that open hearings on the matter should be held. The matters developed in the executive session were largely not of a secret nature. This is the public's business, and we must, as the watch-dog committee of the Congress, keep the public informed as to the facts on the management of the Commission. Obviously, this does not include information which must be kept secret in the interest of national security.

The committee will meet in executive session on Monday, and at that time I intend to take up with the committee the matter of holding public hearings.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, first of all I desire to commend the Senator from Connecticut, the chairman of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, for the statement he has made at this time. I wish to say, as one of the members of the joint committee, that I am not satisfied with the explanation which was given by members of the Atomic Energy Commission at our meeting yesterday.

I believe there has been a woeful lack of proper precaution in notifying agencies which should have been notified, and also in the matter of even the most elementary types of security that should have been taken in regard to a shipment of this importance. Certainly I feel that the joint committee will not be discharging its full responsibility to the Congress of the United States unless it vigorously pursues this matter, as it has been indicated by the chairman that they will pursue it, and I think that neither Congress nor the committee should feel satisfied until they run the matter down to the very end.

THE ATOMIC ENERGY COMMISSION—SCHOLARSHIPS TO COMMUNISTS

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. President, with regard to the matter of one Freistadt, who was heard by the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy yesterday, it is, I think, the unanimous opinion of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy that public funds should not be used to make gifts to members of the Communist Party. It is quite possible that Freistadt is not the only case, and I propose to see to it that we shall continue our investigation until we become satisfied that there are no Communists in the atomic-energy program.

VISIT TO THE CONGRESS BY GEN. EURICO GASPAR DUTRA, PRESIDENT OF BRAZIL

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I am certain I speak for every Member of the United States Senate and the Nation as a whole when I say that upon this eventful day we were all delighted to have as our guest in the Joint Session of Congress, Gen. Eurico Gaspar Dutra, President of Brazil.

It is more than significant that this great South American leader should pay this Nation a friendly visit at this momentous hour in the world history. On the eve of the fateful meeting of the Four-Power Foreign Ministers it is hoped that all world powers will understand the true mission of General Dutra's hemispheric journey.

The President of Brazil is not here for the purpose of conspiracy or intrigue. He does not come here incognito behind some iron curtain. He is not here seeking to disrupt or destroy the sovereign rights of other nations.

General Dutra is here on a good-will mission. He journeys from his beloved Brazil to this, the greatest of all Republics, to further cement and point up to the world the firm alliance which has existed between these two countries in the New World for more than a century.

Mr. President, the growth, the wisdom, and the strength of this Republic has astonished the world. Though we are ladened with enormous power and fearful responsibilities, we are at peace with all our American neighbors and have been for more than a hundred years. In this New World, with the aid of powerful friends like Brazil, we hope that we may be able to prove to the people of the Old World that a peaceful and prosperous life can only be maintained over a long period of time under the rule of liberty, justice, and equality.

It was for these eternal rights that in two world wars Brazil and the United States, along with her gallant allies, stood shoulder to shoulder and poured forth their blood and treasure. It is for these same inherent principles of right that today America makes huge international commitments to aid in the rehabilitation of war-torn nations. In all of these undertakings we ask only that a free people may continue to live under the inalienable and divine rights guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. President, the time has arrived when the peoples of the world everywhere, irrespective of the flag under which they live, or the ideology which they pursue, must realize once and for all that war is civilization's greatest crime and that peace is humanity's greatest virtue.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATIONS, 1950

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3997) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, and for other purposes.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MARTIN in the chair). The Senator will state it.

Mr. KNOWLAND. I inquire what is now pending before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion made by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON], for himself and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], to suspend paragraph 4 of rule XVI, pursuant to notice previously given, to offer the amendment heretofore proposed by him, which was ruled out on a point of order.

Mr. KNOWLAND. On that question I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

GUARANTEED DOLLAR PAYMENT TO AMERICAN SMALL BUSINESS FOR EXPORTS TO WESTERN HEMISPHERE COUNTRIES

Mr. MAYBANK. Mr. President, on behalf of the Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY], the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER], the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY], and myself, I ask unanimous consent to introduce for appropriate reference a joint resolution to provide for guaranteeing dollar payment to American small business for exports to Western Hemisphere countries, and in order to expedite action on the agricultural appropriation bill, I request that a statement I had intended to read in connection with the introduction of the joint resolution be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the joint resolution will be received and appropriately referred, and the statement will be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 93) to amend the Export-Import Bank Act of 1945 so as to provide for guaranteeing dollar payment to American small business for exports to Western Hemisphere countries, introduced by Mr. MAYBANK (for himself, Mr. MURRAY, Mr. PEPPER, and Mr. TOBEY), was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

The statement presented by Mr. MAYBANK is as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR MAYBANK

This joint resolution is introduced as a substitute for S. 1093, now pending before the Banking and Currency Committee. The committee proposes to hold prompt hearings upon this measure. Of course, this does not preclude the committee from adding to this resolution one or more features now present in S. 1093 and related legislation.

This measure is designed to assist small-business enterprises effectively and quickly under present postwar economic conditions which have fostered the concentration of business and industry and the growth of monopoly in this country, and which have created most difficult problems which are threatening the survival of small business.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATIONS, 1950

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3997) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, and for other purposes.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. President, I wish I may have the attention of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] and also the attention of the Senator from Ohio for a moment. I was attending a conference on the Commodity Credit Corporation charter when some questions were asked about the agricultural appropriation bill. I think the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] has done, as he always does, an excellent job. I understand that a question was asked about the office of the Secretary. Very few questions could have been asked I could have answered, but that is one I could have answered. I understand it was pointed out that in 1940——

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ANDERSON. I yield.

Mr. RUSSELL. While I was addressing the Senate, I looked around for the distinguished Senator from New Mexico and expressed my extreme regret that he was not present to answer that question, but it so happened that the answer I gave the Senator from Ohio was in error when I said that the increase was due to the war activities being imposed upon the Office of the Secretary. I have already gone over and told the Senator from Ohio I was in error in the statement I made. I should like to have the Senator from New Mexico state—and he can do so better than I can—just what is the significance of the difference between the figures for 1940 and 1948.

Mr. ANDERSON. I do not say that the Senator from Georgia was in error. He was perhaps partially in error. When I became Secretary I discovered that the budget was very much higher than it had been only a few years before. I tried to find out places where I might eliminate employees in order to get back to the former figure, and then I discovered that prior to 1944 a part of the expenses of the library, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, the Secretary's office, and possibly one other office, were charged to specific projects, and funds were allotted from those projects, which were under way. I think the funds came from procurement, parity payments, from soil conservation, and other projects in the Department. It was insisted that in the interest of proper budgeting it was not fair, not proper to list as BAE expense items which were actually under the Secretary, and so beginning with 1944 all those items were consolidated into the appropriation for the Office of the Secretary. And while the amount was increased from $800,000 to slightly more than $2,000,000, the composite amount was actually lower than it had been previously.

Mr. RUSSELL. I thank the Senator from New Mexico for making that statement. It is merely a question of transfer of funds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion made by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] for himself and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] to suspend paragraph 4 of rule XVI, pursuant to notice previously given, to offer the amendment heretofore proposed by him which was ruled out on a point of order.

Mr. KNOWLAND. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. ANDERSON. Is it possible to have a quorum call without any business having been transacted since the last quorum call, and in view of the fact that the yeas and nays were ordered? I make that point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A joint resolution has been introduced since the yeas and nays were ordered, which would be an item of business.

Mr. ANDERSON. Since the last quorum call.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina introduced a joint resolution, which would be an item of business.

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Hoey	Murray
Anderson	Holland	Myers
Baldwin	Humphrey	Neely
Brewster	Ives	O'Conor
Bricker	Jenner	O'Mahoney
Bridges	Johnson, Colo.	Pepper
Butler	Johnson, Tex.	Reed

Graham	Martin	Wherry
Green	Maybank	Williams
Gurney	Miller	Withers
Hayden	Millikin	Young
Hendrickson	Morse
Hill	Mundt

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A quorum is present.

The question is on agreeing to the motion made by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] for himself and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] to suspend paragraph 4 of rule XVI pursuant to notice previously given, in order that he may offer a certain amendment. On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GILLETTE (when his name was called). On this question I have a pair with my able colleague the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. HICKENLOOPER] and the junior Senator from Vermont [Mr. FLANDERS]. I am informed that each of those Senators, if present and voting, would vote "yea." If I were at liberty to vote I would vote "nay." I therefore withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. MYERS. I announce that the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. KERR] has a pair with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART] and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH]. I am informed that, if present and voting, the Senator from Oklahoma would vote "nay," and the Senator from Indiana and the Senator from New Jersey would vote "yea."

I announce that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] and the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Wyoming [Mr. HUNT] and the Senator from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON] are absent on public business.

The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. KERR] is absent by leave of the Senate on public business.

If present and voting, the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. HUNT], the Senator from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON], and the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] would vote "nay."

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I announce that the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART], who is necessarily absent, and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH], who is absent because of illness, are paired with the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. KERR]. If present and voting, the Senator from Indiana and the Senator from New Jersey would vote "yea," and the Senator from Oklahoma would vote "nay."

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. FLANDERS] and the Senator from Iowa [Mr. HICKENLOOPER] are absent by leave of the Senate. Their pair with the Senator from Iowa [Mr. GILLETTE] has been previously announced.

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. MALONE] and the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY] are detained on official business. If present and voting, the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MALONE] would vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 32, nays 52, as follows:

YEAS—32

Baldwin	Hendrickson	Reed

NOT VOTING—12

Capehart	Hickenlooper	Malone
Flanders	Hunt	Smith, N. J.
George	Kerr	Wagner
Gillette	Magnuson	Wiley

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Two-thirds of the Senators present not having voted in the affirmative, the motion is not agreed to.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, I submit a motion, which I send to the desk, to recommit House bill 3997 with instructions; and I ask that the motion be read, and I also ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion will be read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

MOTION TO RECOMMIT

I move that the bill (H. R. 3997) be recommitted to the Committee on Appropriations with instructions to report the same back to the Senate with amendments providing for a reduction equivalent to that provided in the amendment offered by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] for himself and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], and requiring that the appropriations under title I of this act shall be reduced in an aggregate of five percentum of the total amounts appropriated therein: Provided, That no item of appropriation contained in title I shall be reduced more than 20 percent: Provided further, That any such reduction shall be based on the amount of the appropriations contained in title I of the bill as amended by the Senate at the time of its recommittal.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. TAFT. Would a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate passed House bill 3333, the Labor-Federal Security Appropriation bill, be in order?

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, that bill is now in conference. It would have to be returned from the conference, before it could be reconsidered, I should think.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed by the Parliamentarian that a motion of that sort can be filed at any time, including today.

Mr. TAFT. If the motion is filed, do I correctly understand that it must be accompanied by a motion requesting the House of Representatives to return the bill to the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It must be accompanied by a motion requesting the House of Representatives to return the bill to the Senate, and that motion must be determined without debate.

Mr. TAFT. Would that vote be taken immediately, despite any pending business?

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry: Would not that have the effect of laying aside the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No; the Parliamentarian informs the Chair that that would be a privileged matter.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, perhaps I can relieve the Senator's mind: I only wish to state that if the motion to recommit the pending bill is adopted—I refer to the motion made by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON]—I then propose to file a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Labor-Federal Security appropriation bill passed the Senate.

On the other hand, if the motion filed a few minutes ago by the Senator from Michigan is not adopted, I do not know whether I shall offer a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Labor-Federal Security bill was passed. In any event, I do not intend to offer such a motion before the vote is taken on the motion of the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. RUSSELL. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. RUSSELL. The Chair has ruled that a motion to reconsider can be made at any time. I understood that such a motion had to be made within 2 days.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair should have stated that today would be the last day on which that could be done.

Mr. RUSSELL. The Chair stated "at any time," I believe.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is sorry; he meant to make that matter plain.

The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON].

Mr. FERGUSON. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, my vote on the Federal Security Agency and related independent agencies bill of a few days ago was favorable to a 5-percent reduction in the over-all appropriations carried by that bill.

Since the vote—or rather votes—on that amendment and related motions, I have further considered the subject of the propriety of application of a reduction of a given percentage to an over-all appropriation consisting of numerous items, some of which may be too high, others of which are sufficiently low. There may be some instances in which that procedure should be adopted, though at the moment I do not think of any such instance. I have concluded that as a general rule the procedure of applying a reduction of a given percentage to an over-all appropriation consisting of numerous items, some of which may be too high, others of which are sufficiently low, is not sound. To compute the amount of an advisable reduction by taking a percentage of the sum derived by adding together not only those items of the appropriation bill or title which are too high but also those items of the bill or title which are not too high is, in my present judgment, fallacious. For example, if there are 20 items in an appropriation bill which are not too high, and 20 items of the same bill which are too high, it seems to me clear that it is neither logical nor proper in determining the amount of reduction which should be made in the items which are too high to take a percentage of the items which are not too high. The proper way, if I may submit this very humbly as an opinion, is to level any reduction deemed proper solely at the specific items deemed to be too high. The proper way, in my judgment, is not to take a percentage of both items which are too high and items which are not too high.

In view of this conclusion, Mr. President, I have determined to vote adversely on the motion made by the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I am not a member of the Appropriations Committee, but I want to endorse most sympathetically what the Senator from Missouri has just said, on the basis of my previous service on that committee. I am very much in favor of making a reduction in the appropriations. I believe that within a week a way can be found of doing it intelligently along the lines indicated by the Senator from Missouri. Certain legislation is now being prepared which, in my opinion, will be efficacious to accomplish the result and it will not be of the meat-ax variety.

Inasmuch as we are on the subject, I should like to ask those who are offering these amendments and motions what efforts they made in committee to bring about the reductions which they are asking for on the floor. I should be glad to yield in order that I may be enlightened.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, I am glad to advise the Senator that a similar motion was made in the subcommittee and also in the full committee.

Mr. TYDINGS. But were there any motions made with respect to the specific items that could best be reduced, or that could have been eliminated perhaps entirely while preserving those items which have universal support and about whose validity and merit there is rather wide agreement.

Mr. FERGUSON. Certain motions were made.

Mr. TYDINGS. It does not seem to me, if I may be frank about it, as if the work was done in the committee on these items that might have been done, if we are to have these economy drives. It is one thing to come upon the floor and ask for a 2-percent or a 5-percent reduction. It makes wonderful headlines in the newspapers, and it makes those who do not vote for it look as if they were in favor of spending and those who support it look as though they are for economy. I submit that if there is a real effort for economy in the Committee on Appropriations, item by item, where the items can be pared down, then I think it lies more appropriately in the mouths of those who come on the floor and make sweeping motions to cut to ask for the support of those of us who are in sympathy with the general purpose.

I do not believe a case has been made out on the floor that there was such an effort made in the Committee on Appropriations either by the minority who have taken the lead in the movement, or by those on this side who are supporting the minority in the effort to reduce appropriations. Until that sort of effort is made in the Committee on Appropriations I think one may question whether there is as much sincerity and purpose back of the proposals as would appear to those who may read of them in the press. If we had testimony on the floor by Members of the Appropriations Committee who are supporting the point of view of a broadside cut that they tried in committee to reduce this item which was not necessary, or to cut 10 percent that item which was not necessary, or to eliminate entirely another item which was not necessary, we then should be getting some place. But, as one Member of the Senate, I am becoming a little tired of sitting here and witnessing these sham battles fought out for the newspapers, when the place to fight them is in the Appropriations Committee, where items which ought to be eliminated can be singled out, attention can be focused on them, and a vote obtained thereon.

Mr. BREWSTER rose.

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield to the Senator from Maine for a question.

Mr. BREWSTER. The Senator from Maine is not a member of the Committee on Appropriations, so he has no prejudices in its favor. But I am sure the Senator from Maryland will recognize that both individually and collectively we are obliged to take into account the changing conditions with respect to the national income.

Mr. TYDINGS. I agree thoroughly with that; and the place to take into account the changing conditions is in the Committee on Appropriations, where specific items are under review, where testimony is taken to support them, where opposition to them is heard, and where a considered and sound and judicious approach to the merit of the appropriation can be had; and not here on the Senate floor, where no testimony is available, where no hearings have been had, and where it would appear it is inadvisable, as has been pointed out by the able Senator from Missouri, to make a horizontal cut as if all the items were equal in their merits, when all of us know they are not.

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Maryland yield to the Senator from Maine?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. BREWSTER. Have we not all learned, and do we need any testimony to convince us, that we are facing a budgetary deficit of what our tax experts in the Finance Committee estimate as $3,000,000,000?

Mr. TYDINGS. I am thoroughly in favor of eliminating appropriations to the extent of making income and outgo balance. But the place to do that is in the Appropriations Committee of the United States Senate, and the thing to do is to bring measures to the floor of the Senate that do not appropriate more money than is available to the Government.

I say this with no intention of reflection on any Senator, because I do not mean it that way; but the procedure suggested smacks, I think, a little bit of demagoguery, of being all things to all men, of being for the appropriations in the committee and being against them en masse on the floor. We should be able to single out the appropriations we want to reduce, and not go through this senseless procedure with every appropriation bill which comes up.

I say to my friends on the other side of the aisle, who seem to want to carry on this procedure, and with which I am in general sympathy as to the objective sought, that I shall feel more like joining with them when I know they have tried to accomplish the result in committee and have failed, not in a general, slashing, over-all manner, but as to specific items, so that we may know that appropriations have been reduced 5 percent, if that is the intention and the wish of those who support that philosophy.

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. BREWSTER. Is it not possible that the Appropriations Committee, which has been laboring for some 3 months on this question, was somewhat misled by the very optimistic views presented to the Chamber at its opening, that conditions were quite normal, whereas the deepening depression drawing near upon us has led us all to realize that some percentage reduction in all our expenditures is as essential for the Government as it is for the 3,000,000 unemployed persons or the 10,000,000 part-time employees in this country? I do not suppose those gentlemen and their families are worrying about the procedure; they are worrying about how they are going to make both ends meet. This change has come about in the past 3 months. We were told in January that all would be serene. I say that a 5-percent or a 10-percent reduction in our over-all expenditures is the only way we can accomplish the objective which the Senator from Maryland says he has in view.

Mr. TYDINGS. I agree with the Senator from Maine; but if it has come upon us in the past 3 months that all is not lovely, and that we shall not have sufficient money to balance the budget, then the place to make the reduction is in the Appropriations Committee. It is absolutely essential not to bring bills onto the floor that will make a deficit of two or three billion dollars in the National Treasury if we do not want such a deficit. The place to do the fighting is where the enemy is, namely, in the Appropriations Committee, where we can fight facts with facts and ideas with ideas, not on the floor, where we can take a second guess or can say, "We do not have to be specific on the floor; we do not have to make anyone angry; we can just go along and take 5 percent off everything."

I should like to take it off as the Senator from Missouri wants to take it off. The place to do it is in the Appropriations Committee. That is the purpose of the Appropriations Committee. It is not established to appropriate money which is not in the Treasury.

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. BREWSTER. Does the Senator from Maryland understand that the purpose of the motion is to send the bill back to the committee with instructions to make a 5-percent reduction in items which it is possible to reduce? Is not that the very objective? The Appropriations Committee is asked to do that in the light of the catastrophe which we now face.

Mr. TYDINGS. Why did not the committee do it before the bill came to the Senate?

Mr. BREWSTER. Because it did not know there would be such a depression as we are now facing.

Mr. TYDINGS. Tell it to the marines. It is good politics to bring it out here, and then have this exhibition of economy propaganda and send the bill back. The bill has not been out of the committee more than a week.

Mr. BREWSTER. That is the trouble.

Mr. TYDINGS. We have had hearings for a month. The Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] has been one of the most diligent and patient chairmen in the whole Congress. He has sat day after day, for more than a month—I think, for approximately 6 weeks. The committee is the place in which to make the motion to reduce this and every other appropriation bill. Every Senator here knows that is correct. We should not come out on the floor with this sort of proposition. The place to make economies is where we make someone mad.

Mr. BREWSTER. The enemy now seems to be on the other side of the aisle.

Mr. TYDINGS. Oh, yes, of course; but the public is not being fooled one iota.

Mr. BREWSTER. What is troubling the Senator from Maryland, then?

Mr. TYDINGS. If the Senators who advocate 5-percent reductions on the floor will try to eliminate, item by item, expenditures in the committee, sufficient to create a 5-percent reduction in the whole bill, then, in my judgment, they will deserve the support of all economy-minded persons when they offer specific amendments which, taken together, will reduce the expenditures 5 percent.

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. BREWSTER. If the Senator will simply join us in sending the bill back to the committee, exactly the objective which he so vehemently says he has in mind will be accomplished.

Mr. TYDINGS. I am a little wary of the Greeks bearing gifts. What I want to know is why Senators who may now support this proposition did not do the very same thing when they had a month within which to do it? They sat like clay pigeons, or like Egyptian mummies. They were as silent as the tomb. They might as well have been built out of marble. They never offered a single specific motion to cut down a single specific expenditure such an amount as would aggregate 5 percent. They had an opportunity to do so day after day, week after week, almost month after month. Now, with the press sitting up in the gallery drinking in every word, they plead to high Heaven for economy, knowing all the time that they have run out on the real job when they had an opportunity to make a saving. That is what I call demagoguery.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield to my friend from Illinois.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I should like to ask my good friend from Maryland whether, although what he says may be correct——

Mr. TYDINGS. It is correct.

Mr. DOUGLAS. It may be correct, with reference to Senators who serve on the Appropriations Committee not making a protest in the committee but later making a protest on the floor. I should like to ask my good friend from Maryland what he thinks those of us who did not sit on the Appropriations Committee, who did not have a chance to examine the items, should do. What is our ethical duty under those circumstances? Is it to give a blind vote of confidence to recommendations of the Appropriations Committee, or is it to try to use our judgment to bring the budget of the United States into balance?

Mr. TYDINGS. I know that the Senator from Illinois is eminently wise and fair in the votes he will cast. He is not a member of the Appropriations Committee; but some of the Senators who are making motions are members of that committee, and the thought must occur to the Senator, as it occurs to me, why, if a 5-percent reduction can be made in the whole bill, they did not try to make it when the bill was before the committee, rather than try to make it on the floor, with the press sitting up in the gallery manned to its full capacity, carrying the news of how these economy-minded men are sitting up nights trying to save the taxpayers from this waste of money, when they had opportunity after opportunity. The Sphinx on the Sahara Desert was 50,000 times as vocal as they were when sitting in the Appropriations Committee.

Mr. MAYBANK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. MAYBANK. Mr. President, in connection with what the distinguished Senator from Maryland has said, in answer to the Senator from Illinois, I should like to say that many of the Members of this body who are not on the Appropriations Committee went before the Appropriations Committee, not to ask for a 5-percent cut, but to ask for additional funds.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, I should like to say to the Senator that I am one of the clay pigeons, one of the Egyptian mummies, of which the Senator from Maryland has spoken as having been as quiet as the Sphinx on the Sahara Desert. I cannot make so much noise, I cannot wave my arms as wildly as does the Senator from Maryland, but I want to say that we did our best to cut appropriations wherever we thought they could be cut. I personally voted for the motion of the Senator from Michigan the first time he proposed a 5-percent cut. As a member of the Appropriations Committee, I think that there is always room for an administrator or an executive to cut here or there if he has the will and is anxious to try to be as efficient as possible.

We know that the Government today is $6,000,000,000 worse off than it was on

May 12, a year ago. Those are the last figures I have seen. We know that we must cut down expenditures or we will have to raise more revenue or we will run into deficit financing.

The Senator from Maryland was a member of the Committee on Appropriations, a valuable one. Now he is the chairman of the Armed Services Committee, a valuable one, and he is a member of the Committee on Foreign Relations. The work of those committees depends upon a sound Federal Government. The country depends upon a sound Federal Government. If this body will send the appropriations bills back with orders to cut them, it will be an affirmative step to keep our Government sound. It will be the next best thing we can do.

I should like to address the Senate for a moment, as an Egyptian mummy, on what we are trying to do. How can we make the Senator from Maryland conscious of the fact that the Government's expenditures have to be cut down, unless we bring these motions forward on every appropriation bill that comes before the Senate?

I will agree with the Senator from Georgia, the Senator from Tennessee, and others, on a bipartisan motion, to cut Government expenditures when the final appropriation bill is bought up, whether the reduction hits New England, Maryland, or Tennessee. But the only way we can get the attention of the Senator from Maryland, who is not on the committee, of the other Members of the Senate, and the people generally, is to make them conscious of the fact that expenditures must be reduced.

If the Senator fails us by voting against us on a reasonable motion to amend the bill so that we can order an administrator to cut where he can cut efficiently, and without injury to the work of his department by at least 5 percent in an administration that is of the opposite party; an administration which we hope may cut expenditures, then we will have to do the next best thing, recommit the bill to the Appropriations Committee.

I am confident that if the bill does go back to the Committee on Appropriations it will be cut 5 percent.

As one Egyptian mummy, sitting on the committee, I want the Senator to know—and I am confident the Senator from Georgia will back me up—that I have made motions, as have other Senators, not on the pending bill, but on other bills, to cut this and that expenditure, and they have been made on both sides of the aisle. These bills have been brought out in a clean, nonpartisan spirit, to the best of our ability. But that does not mean they cannot be cut when the Senate believes that they must be cut.

I know the Senator from Maryland raises hogs, and I am sure he raises the best hogs there are. If the hog market goes down, he is going to cut the number of hogs, because he is a successful man, an able man, and he is not going to play an Egyptian mummy when he is cutting the number of hogs on his place. I hope he will look at the matter we are discussing in the same spirit. I say to him, as a member of the Senate Committee on Appropriations, that in collaboration with the members of the Senator's own party we are trying to bring out just as clean bills as possible; we are trying to keep the Government sound, and I hope we will be able to keep it sound.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, the Senator from Massachusetts and I serve on one committee together, the Armed Services Committee, and I am aware of the fact that he serves on the Committee on Appropriations. Now that he has scratched my back, let me scratch his. I should like to say, without any arm waving, although I should like at least to clench my fist and hit downward to emphasize my point, that the Senator from Massachusetts is a very eminent and able member of that committee, and would be an adornment, both sartorially as well as mentally, to any other committee of the Senate during his tenure.

The Senator says he has done his best, that the committee has done its best, to cut down the appropriations 5 percent. Then it seems to me to be foolish to compel it to do less than its best, which would be the only result if the bill went back a second time.

The Senator has been rather circumspect. I should like to ask him how many motions were made which, in sum, would cut down the appropriations 5 percent, except a general motion.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I answer that question as to the bill handled by the subcommittee of which I was a member, the Labor-Federal Security bill, which the Senator from Ohio desires to have brought back to the Senate. I can speak only for myself. I made one motion to cut the appropriation 10 percent, and another to cut it 5 percent, and that could have been done without hurting any activity. If the bill comes back I believe there is a way by which the appropriations can be cut 5 or 10 percent without hurting the appropriation for heart research or the appropriation for cancer research. I admit it is a bookkeeping proposition, but so far as reducing appropriations this year is concerned, $120,000,000 could be saved without hurting anybody.

Mr. TYDINGS. I am glad the Senator at least made a motion which, if adopted, would have saved a considerable sum of money in a specific item. I had rather a long service on the committee, some 20 years, before I left it, and I know that there are very few motions made to eliminate an entire activity, or even to cut down an entire activity. There are some cuts here and there, but I am talking about the kind of pruning which the motion to recommit has in mind.

Let us be perfectly candid about it. There is a real need for economy. There is not the slightest doubt about it. The Senator from Maine [Mr. BREWSTER] is as right as he can be when he says we must have more economy in the conduct of our Government. I am thoroughly in sympathy with him. I am not finding fault with anyone who wants to bring that about, but I submit that where there is an opportunity in a committee, where a bill is being formulated, and Senators do not take the opportunity there, or cannot take it, or cannot find the procedure to enable them to take it, and then come on the floor and say, "Send the bill back and give us a second try," it makes some of us on this side a little weary.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator from Maryland yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield to the Senator from California.

Mr. KNOWLAND. I am not sure that I understand the able Senator from Maryland, but if I do understand him correctly, he appears to be for the theory of economy, but not for the practice of it. Is that correct?

Mr. TYDINGS. No; that is not correct. Just the opposite is correct. The Senator from Maryland is in favor of the practice of it, and not the theory of it, as is the Senator from California. In other words, the Senator from California is in favor of the theory of it, because that is all there is in this motion. The Senator from Maryland wants the cuts made in the Committee on Appropriations, where they should be made and where they can be made, where they should have been made, but where they were not made. The same Senators who could have made them have come on the floor of the Senate asking us to send the bill back and give them a second crack at it. I should say that the Senator from California is the one who is for theoretical economy and the Senator from Maryland wants practical economy. That is the burden of his song here this afternoon.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield to the Senator from California.

Mr. KNOWLAND. I will say to the able Senator from Maryland that the junior Senator from California does not happen to be privileged to serve on the Committee on Appropriations this year, though he did serve on it for a period of 2 years, along with the Senator from Maryland. I know that during the time of my service the members of the committee worked probably harder than the members of any other committee of the Senate. I think the statement which has been made by the Senator from Massachusetts here today is correct. We have had new factors coming into the picture. We are 96 Members of the Senate, and I do not think we as Senators can abdicate our responsibility or can surrender our responsibility to the Committee on Appropriations, or to any other committee of the Senate. In the final matter of setting policy for this country the responsibility is on each one of us, whether we are on the Committee on Appropriations or not. I see nothing inconsistent when the Joint Committee on Taxation, on which the able Senator from Georgia and other Members of this body serve, told the Congress and the country last Saturday that, in their judgment, the President's revenue estimates which he submitted to the Congress some time ago were about $3,000,000,000 higher than now appear to be justified. I believe that brings a new fact and a new factor to all of us as Senators. There is certainly nothing inconsistent, if we believe in the practice of economy as well as the theory of economy, in giving instructions to the Committee on Appropriations, and telling them that, in our judgment, we are not willing to levy $4,000,000,000 of new taxes on the people of this country as advocated by the President of the United States, that we are not willing to embark upon 16 years of deficit financing, as was done by the party of the Senator from Maryland, but rather that we want a balanced budget, and we want it without new taxation. The only way the country can get it is by a reduction of expenditures. Regardless of what the Senator from Maryland says, he is merely giving lip service to the idea of economy if he is not willing to exercise his responsibility here and vote for economy in the only place where he can vote for economy, which is on the floor of the United States Senate.

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator from Maryland will make a proposal very shortly which, in the judgment at least of the Senator from Maryland, and I hope in the judgment of the majority of the Senate, may accomplish the desired result, the result which the Senator has in mind, without all the theatrics that have accompanied this so-called economy fight.

Mr. GURNEY, Mr. BRIDGES, and Mr. KNOWLAND addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NEELY in the chair). Does the Senator from Maryland yield; and if so, to whom; and does he yield for a question or for a speech?

Mr. TYDINGS. When I have completed my statement I shall yield. As I said, I hope to have ready very shortly a proposal which I trust will enlist the support of a majority of the Senators, which will accomplish the desired economy, and bring the Federal budget into balance. When it comes down to real economy, the place to start it is with new proposals which have not been in being and for which there is not a real need. When the Senate was considering the housing bill, which we should have limited to only the things we had to do, I supported the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICKER], but there were very few who stood together with us to hold that appropriation within the limits of real need. I stood for the same things when we had the Federal-aid-to-education bill before the Senate for consideration. I tried to confine that bill only to the States that were below the average and were in need of Federal aid. How much support did we receive?

That is where economy begins. When the Senate authorizes tremendous expenditures for entirely new projects, they must not come here after having voted for such expenditures, as the Senator from California [Mr. KNOWLAND] did in both cases, I believe, and as the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL] did in both cases, I believe, and then pose as advocates of economy. That simply does not make sense.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield first to the Senator from New Hampshire, and then I shall yield to the Senator from California.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I want to say to the Senator from Maryland that the only opportunity he has as an individual—and it is to his conscience that he is responsible for economy—is on the floor of the Senate. Is that not so? I ask the Senator that question.

Mr. TYDINGS. No; because as I just finished saying a moment ago, I am going to bring to the floor of the Senate shortly a proposal which Senators may not think is wise, even though they agree with its objective, but I hope they will think it is wise, and if they will vote for it the budget will be in balance at the end of this year.

Mr. BRIDGES. Yes; but the only thing the Senator——

Mr. TYDINGS. Just a moment. And that will be real economy. It will require only one operation to effect over-all economy.

Mr. BRIDGES. When will that appear?

Mr. TYDINGS. Tomorrow at the latest.

Mr. BRIDGES. And the troubles will always be there.

Mr. TYDINGS. Oh, there will always be trouble whenever there are two parties, one of which is out of power and trying to get in.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator again yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes; I yield.

Mr. BRIDGES. Has the Senator from Maryland voted for or against every proposal that has been made on the floor of the Senate to date to reduce appropriations?

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator from Maryland is going to vote against every broadside 5-percent appropriation cut in this form, knowing in advance that those who are voting for it on the floor in many cases made no adequate attempt to accomplish the purpose desired in the committee of which they were members, where they had all the facts and could have performed the operation had they been desirous of doing it.

Mr. BRIDGES. In other words, the Senator from Maryland, whenever he has an opportunity to vote on the floor of the Senate, is going to vote against economy. That is how the Senator has voted today. Is that how he says he is going to vote in the future?

Mr. TYDINGS. I do not want to take that broken limb away from the Senator from New Hampshire. If he wants to crawl back to the trunk of the tree on that broken limb, he is welcome to it.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. KNOWLAND. I hope the rest of the Senator's statements are a little more accurate than the one he made with respect to the Senator from California.

Mr. TYDINGS. That goes double. Let me say, since I have the floor, that I hope the Senator from California will in the future vote to cut down authorizations for schools we do not have to have and that he will vote to cut down authorizations for rural housing we do not have to have before he makes these tear-jerking economy speeches on the floor of the United States Senate. And that is accurate.

Mr. KNOWLAND. I should like, if the Senator will yield to me——

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes; I yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Maryland yield for a question? If he yields for more than that, or for a broadside, he loses the floor.

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield for a question, and the Senator from California can make it as long as he wants to.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Does the Senator from Maryland realize that he was 50 percent inaccurate when he was trying to state the position taken by the Senator from California relative to the housing bill and the aid-to-education bill? It is true that the Senator from California voted for the Federal aid-to-education bill, but the Senator from California happened to be one of the Senators who voted against the public-housing legislation. So the Senator from Maryland in that regard, if in no other, was 50 percent in error.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is 50 percent less of error than the members of the Appropriations Committee have to their credit in not having brought out a 5-percent reduction in the bill before it came to the Senate for action.

Mr. KNOWLAND. The junior Senator from California merely wishes to state that he is delighted to hear that the able Senator from Maryland has such confidence in the action of a committee of the Senate, and I hope that he will continue to have confidence in actions which the committee takes in the future, and aid the Appropriations Committee or any other committee of the Senate.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I now yield to the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. GURNEY], who asked me to yield to him a moment ago.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, does the Senator know that in the subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee and in the full committee, the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] made repeated motions to cut down the appropriations for individual items, and that at the end of the subcommittee hearings the Senator from Michigan in the subcommittee and later in the full committee offered his motion to cut the total 5 percent? Does the Senator from Maryland know that?

Mr. TYDINGS. No I did not know that a motion to make a cut of 5 percent was made in committee. But my question was: Were enough intermediate motions made on specific items to total 5 percent?

Mr. GURNEY. I do not know whether they would total 5 percent.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is where the horse gets out of the stable.

Mr. GURNEY. No. The Senator from Michigan repeatedly made motions to cut down the amounts.

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes, but the Senator from South Dakota says he does not know whether the motions aggregated a total of 5 percent.

Mr. GURNEY. I can inform the Senator on that subject. The total increase represented by the appropriations made by the Senate committee, as shown in the report which is on the Senator's desk, was only 3 percent over the House figures.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, perhaps this little exchange of shots across the aisle, all in good form, and all, I hope, in the country's interest, may have at least brought us to the realization that we do need economy. I am hopeful that by common counsel we can find the means to effect economies, and I hope when the time comes it will have a bipartisan tinge, an American tinge, in the interest of a free and a solvent and a strong country, rather than that either party should try too much to steal the show.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. I resent very much the statement of the Senator from Maryland that anybody is insincere in the efforts made to secure economy in the Congress of the United States. That is the Senator's statement, and it is not true. We have here as difficult a problem as I know of with which to deal. We have the effort to secure over-all economy. The Senator has just said a vast majority of the Senators are in favor of over-all economy. Very well, I agree with him. I think they are for the moment. But I say that our experience has shown that if we ever attempt to do what he says, that is cut this item and cut that item, we are almost certain to lose. Practically 40 percent of the Members of the Senate votes for all spending measures, and then for each item there are enough other Senators interested in the particular thing so they will not vote to cut it. When the Republicans were in control last year we had the same difficulty the Democrats have today. I care not how strong the effort may be, there are always a dozen Senators who want economy, but with respect to a particular thing they do not want economy. The difficulty is that in the Senate we deal with these things one at a time, and each one is a good thing. Everyone likes it. The question is, Is it meritorious to appropriate so much for this particular project? The majority of the people say, "Yes, it is"; and, of course, "Yes" it is.

How can we get all the appropriations together and look at them as one picture? There was a provision in the legislative reorganization bill for the establishment of a legislative budget. The legislative budget committee would presumably say, "You may want to spend more, but this is all you can spend." At least some public sentiment would be created behind the Appropriations Committee to hold appropriations down, even though the particular project might look very good indeed.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TAFT. I decline to yield for the moment.

We had that plan. It has not worked. I do not know whether the fault is with the plan, or what it is. In any event, the present control of the Congress has disregarded it altogether. They have not paid any attention to it. They have not made the legislative budget which they are directed by the statute to make. I do not believe that we did a very good job, although we did enact legislation last year with that object in view. However, the follow-up was not as good as it should have been.

The distinguished Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] proposes that we have one legislative appropriation bill, so that when we reach a certain point, say the first of June, we can say, "We are going to devote the entire month of June to one thing." We would see all the appropriations at once. I think that is a good proposal.

If the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. MCKELLAR] introduces a bill to repeal the Legislative Reorganization Act, I think we ought to consider whether, instead of repealing it, we ought to continue the legislative budget committee, and have one appropriation bill. That is a method of dealing with the problem, if we want to practice economy. I do not think we can do it by considering projects one by one in committee or in the Senate. As a practical matter, I do not think such a plan will be adopted.

Mr. President, I believe that the approach suggested is reasonable. The proposal is that we say to the Appropriations Committee, "We see all the appropriation bills. Standing by themselves, they are all right, but why not cut each of them 5 percent, and obtain at least that much saving?" No one would be vitally injured by it, whether we do it by directing the Appropriations Committee to do it, and presumably standing by the result of the action of the committee, or whether we do it by giving the executive officer the power to take off 5 percent after we have done the best we can do. I think every executive officer can find a way to make a 5-percent reduction. That does not avoid our function. We say, "We are not sure enough to reduce all the items 5 percent, but we are sure that the head of an executive agency can find somewhere in the bill to bring about a reduction of 5 percent."

That is what a businessman would do with his departments. He would say to the selling department, "You must take 10 percent out of the budget. You determine where the 10-percent reduction is to be made." The president of a company would not know exactly in detail where to save in his selling department or manufacturing department. He would simply know that savings must be made, and he would pass the job on to the next fellow to do.

The proposal for a 5-percent reduction is perfectly reasonable. The Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] says, "I do not like this method," or "I do not like that method. I have a method of my own which I shall propose next week, which is the proper way to do it." When he brings forth his proposal there will be a dozen Senators who will say, "That plan is not right." The chances are 100 to 1 that there will be enough Senators who will say, "That is not the right plan" so that it cannot be carried out.

There is only one way to get economy, and that is to vote for economy whenever the opportunity is presented in the Senate. I started this particular effort in connection with the ECA authorization bill. We tried to take 10 percent off that authorization. That was not satisfactory. The distinguished Senator from Maryland voted "no" on that proposal. We have tried various others methods. I think I have voted for economy at every opportunity.

The Senator from Maryland says that I was for housing and education. In connection with the housing bill I made a motion to reduce the total number of houses a year from 250,000 to 200,000, a 20-percent cut. If anyone had suggested a further 10-percent cut, I would probably have gone along with that. As a matter of fact, the bill which I joined in introducing called for considerably lower appropriations than did the bill finally passed by the Senate. I stated on the floor of the Senate that if it was desired to cut the education bill 10 percent, that would be perfectly satisfactory to me.

No matter how good a project is, we can obtain some economy in connection with it. I am perfectly willing to take cuts, like everyone else—a little more in some respects than in others. But I do not believe that we are going to get anywhere unless we vote for economy whenever we have the opportunity to do so, and not try to find some excuse for saying, "This is not the way I want to economize. I want to economize in some other way."

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, as a member of the Committee on Appropriations I wish to make a few remarks on the subject which has been discussed in the past few minutes. I realize that the able Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] has been in good form today. He is in top voice, and in splendid form. The difficulty is that I think he is not familiar with the facts.

There is an old saying in the law business to the effect that, "When the facts are with you, talk about the facts. When the law is with you, talk about the law. If neither the facts nor the law are with you, just talk—and the louder you talk the more effective it will be."

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. Just a moment.

Mr. TYDINGS. I wonder if the Senator is going to emulate that example, as he has so often done in the past.

Mr. FERGUSON. The fact is that the Senator from Michigan attempted to bring about reductions in the subcommittee, at the time of the marking up of the bill, and also in the full committee. Instead of being a mummy in the Appropriations Committee he became a pest to the Appropriations Committee because of the number of motions he was making.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield for a question.

Mr. TYDINGS. I think the Senator from Michigan is to be commended for his industry and consistency. I should like to ask him how much support he got for those motions. Was it considerable, or was it scattered?

Mr. FERGUSON. It was scattered.

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator from Michigan should have had more support in the Appropriations Committee. He should have had as much support in the committee as these broad proposals receive on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, every Senator has his individual responsibility, aside from the responsibility of the committee. Yesterday we heard a committee criticized because it laid a nomination on the table. We heard it said that that was not the way to do business, that the full Senate had the right to vote. Today we hear it said that the Senate should not consider these reductions, but that that is a question for the committee.

Mr. President, we cannot vote as Members of the Senate unless a matter comes to the floor of the Senate; and when it comes to the floor of the Senate, so far as the Senator from Michigan is concerned, he will vote on the floor of the Senate as he sees the question at the particular time.

The facts are changing daily on the question of whether or not we should be economically minded, and whether we should vote at every opportunity for economy. I have before me a statement which came over the news ticker today, dealing with Government expenses and receipts for the current fiscal year, through May 17, compared with a year ago. I shall read only the millions.

Expenses this year are $31,000,000,000; last year they were $29,000,000,000. In other words, expenses are up $2,000,000,000. Receipts this year are $32,000,000,000; last year they were $36,000,000,000. In other words, receipts are down $4,000,000,000, and expenses are up $2,000,000,000, or a difference of $6,000,000,000.

The surplus last year was $7,000,000,000. This year it is $1,000,000,000. The cash balance last year was $5,000,000,000. This year it is $3,000,000,000. The public debt this year is $251,000,000,000. Last year it was $252,000,000,000.

Gold reserves: This year, $24,000,000,000; last year, $23,000,000,000.

In other words, Mr. President, the amount of gold which we have buried has increased, but the amount of income to our citizens and the amount of income to our Government is much less.

So today and every day as we go along we are getting a changed picture.

I do not know what more I can do but advocate economy in the committees and do the best I can in endeavoring to make cuts in these appropriation items. At the present moment this matter is exactly where I think the Senator from Maryland has been arguing it should be; in other words, we have a motion to send the bill back to the committee, with instructions by the Senate, composed of 96 Senators who are responsible for the control of the purse strings of the Government of the United States, that in the opinion of the Senate the committee should make a 5-percent reduction in the appropriations.

The able Senator from Missouri [Mr. DONNELL] has discussed this problem. He is unable to see how we should include the items which we do not want cut with the items which we wish to have cut, in order to get an over-all picture.

However, Mr. President, that is a simple matter. I know of no businessman, no workingman, or anyone else who does not determine what his expenses should be by the amount of money he is earning, or the amount of money he has on hand, unless he wishes to go into the red. Therefore, it is a question of determining how much money we have to spend.

At the time when this motion was prepared—on the tenth day of this month—it looked as if it would be necessary to cut expenditures $2,000,000,000, by means of a 5-percent cut straight across the board, not on the average. A reduction of $2,000,000,00 would be about the amount of reduction necessary in order to avoid having the Government go into the red or avoid an increase in taxes in the amount of approximately $4,000,000,000.

It may be that when we reach the last appropriation bill it will be necessary to make a greater reduction—not merely a 5-percent reduction but a reduction in an even larger percentage—just as the ordinary person would do if he was trying to live within his income.

That is exactly the situation we face today, Mr. President.

I hope the Senate will vote to recommit the bill, with instructions to the committee to perform certain services, namely, to make reductions in the appropriations carried by the bill.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield.

Mr. AIKEN. I am seeking information. As the Senator from Michigan read the Treasury report of May 17, I noticed that the United States had about $1,000,000,000 worth more gold on hand at that time than it did a year ago.

Mr. FERGUSON. Yes.

Mr. AIKEN. Can the Senator from Michigan tell me where that gold came from and how it was acquired?

Mr. FERGUSON. I am not able to state that exactly, but my information is that it comes as a result of purchases of gold which the United States Government makes in foreign countries, giving United States dollars for the gold, which we, in turn, store at Fort Knox.

Mr. AIKEN. Where does the Treasury get the money with which to buy the gold? It must have had money in order to buy a billion dollars' worth more gold.

Mr. FERGUSON. There are Government corporations which can use our money to purchase gold.

Mr. AIKEN. Is it necessary for the United States to buy such huge amounts of gold—apparently in unlimited quantities?

Mr. FERGUSON. No; it is not necessary.

Mr. AIKEN. Then what is the purpose of acquiring all that gold, at such great expense to the United States? I am simply seeking information on that subject.

Mr. FERGUSON. Quite a number of years ago the United States Government undertook to obtain all the gold it could, all over the world. That program of buying gold has been carried on for some time by our Government. I understand that it is a part of the program of getting United States dollars into other countries, by buying their gold.

Mr. AIKEN. We do not need the gold. Such a program almost amounts to furnishing our dollars to other countries; does it not?

Mr. FERGUSON. When we do not use the gold as a standard of currency, certainly we do not need the gold.

Mr. AIKEN. What would happen if the United States stopped buying a billion dollars' worth of gold a year?

Mr. FERGUSON. Nothing would happen to the United States. To the contrary, I think it would be very beneficial to us, but it would stop the circulation of our dollars in foreign countries.

Mr. AIKEN. Could not we circulate our goods in foreign countries, rather than our dollars for their gold? Could not the transaction be made in some other way than by swapping our dollars for gold? Are there not possibilities of reducing the Federal Government's expenses, in connection with the matter of purchasing all the gold that any country in the world desires to produce and offer to us?

Mr. FERGUSON. I think there certainly is a means of doing that, namely, by purchasing goods, rather than merely purchasing the gold which other countries consider to be a part of their goods.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I did not hear all the debate or discussion or colloquy entered into between the distinguished Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] and other members of the Appropriations Committee. This afternoon I returned to the floor of the Senate from an Appropriations Committee hearing on appropriations for the independent offices, and as I returned I heard the distinguished Senator from Maryland say that the way for the Senate to cut appropriations is for it not to authorize the various projects when the authorization measures for them are submitted to the Senate.

I heard further colloquy as to whether the members of the Appropriations Committee are sincere in offering a proposal for a 5-percent cut in appropriations, under the pending motion.

Mr. President, I am speaking only for myself; but I wish to say that as a Senator, regardless of the party I represent, I am sincere in feeling that each and every Member of the Senate should do everything he can to economize, to the extent that we shall not have to raise taxes or embark upon a course of deficit spending.

In keeping with that position—which I took away back in January—I wish to say that I believe I have met the qualifications which have been stated by the distinguished Senator from Maryland, because I have voted against each and every one of the authorization measures as they have been presented on the floor of the Senate. I do not believe we can compromise one-sixteenth of an inch in that respect; I do no believe we can authorize programs which will cost three hundred or four hundred million dollars and subsequently defeat appropriations for the projects authorized and in the amount of the authorizations. It seems to me then when the toe of such an authorization gets under the door, the appropriation is started and is on its way.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. I wish to confirm what the Senator from Nebraska has said. I am sure his position on numerous propositions here in the Senate has been as consistently in favor of economy as has that of any other Member of the Senate, and I think he deserves to have that statement made about him.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I deeply appreciate that observation on the part of the able Senator from Maryland, because I always respect his judgment, and I respect him when he takes the floor, because his remarks are always informative.

But I wish all Members of the Senate to know that I have said before on this floor that the question of making the necessary economies in the expenditures of the United States Government is not a partisan issue. If we are to stabilize the economy of the United States of America and keep our country strong, we must have the courage to take the necessary steps. Of course, the popular thing to do is to vote for every demagogic measure which comes before us. Certainly, I should like to vote for this group and that group and the other group; naturally, that is the popular thing to do. But if our Nation is to be maintained in a strong position, if its economy is to be stabilized, we must have the courage to do the unpopular thing of voting against proposals for additional expenditures, even though all such proposals have much merit and are most attractive.

So much for that.

As for the question whether we can reduce the budget, let me say I know the distinguished Senator from Maryland served for a number of years on the Appropriations Committee, and I know that some of the criticisms he has made about the failure to offer in committee motions or amendments calling for reductions in appropriations are quite justified. There is no doubt about that.

But, Mr. President, I want to say—and I particularly invite the attention of the Senator from Maryland, who I know will believe me when I say it—that I have been sitting as a member of the Appropriations Committee and its subcommittees time and time again when motions have been made either for or against certain items. Motions have been made to reduce the amounts of bills. They have been made not only by the Senator from Michigan but by the Senator from New Hampshire and other members of the committee, sometimes by minority members, sometimes by members of the majority. Other committee members went along. I agree we did not find the strength in the committees to cut the appropriations. I agree further that it should be done in committee if at all possible. Senators on the committee have the information. They know where cuts are to be made. They can say in what respect the reductions can be made.

I was deeply interested in the colloquy with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL]. I have had in mind the possible result in the event motions of this kind do not prevail. I do not know just what the Senator from Maryland has in mind. Perhaps he has in mind an entirely different procedure. But the pending motion is in the form of a rescission, to permit certain percentages to be deducted from specific appropriations, here and there. I think that is all very good.

I believe if we are sincere, if we say what we mean and if we mean what we say, we must eliminate partisan considerations, we must eliminate theatrical performances, and must vote to effect economies whenever and wherever we can.

I think there is merit in the contention that a cut across the board is not the best way of doing it. I can see much merit in that argument. But, Mr. President, it is no longer a question of whether one method is better than another. If we are to do what we feel we should do, we should vote each and every time an opportunity is afforded to try to effect a saving, and, finally, if necessary, to try something else. The Senate and Congress must eventually come to a conclusion either to keep within our income, raise taxes, or engage in deficit spending.

Other proposals are to come before the Senate, such as the so-called Brannan plan. I have not seen it. I do not know how much money it calls for. But it affects the people of my State. It affects me. Again, we have the program of socialized medicine or compulsory health insurance which will have to be considered. All sorts of plans are being presented. We must limit authorizations. We must cut expenses to such a point that we can keep within our income.

I want to say to the distinguished Senator from Maryland, the distinguished Senator from Georgia, and the distinguished Senator from Oregon [Mr. CORDON], who had a similar idea, that the agricultural bill peculiarly affects the people of my State, in the manner so forcefully described by the Senator from Georgia. Naturally, I should like to vote to retain the appropriations. But I am going to pursue the policy with which I started. I began by favoring a 15-percent reduction on ECA. Other Senators did not agree with me then, and there were only 15 or 16 votes in favor of my amendment. I believe a larger number of Senators would agree with me today. Possibly they would not favor so large a reduction, but I believe they would favor some reduction. When the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] moved to cut appropriations 10 percent, his proposal received a few more votes—perhaps 21 or 22.

We are all beginning to think the appropriations could be cut a little more. What we must do is cut them wherever possible. From the gleam in the eye of the distinguished Senator from Maryland, I feel sure he will have something further to say on the subject before we vote. I hope he will take the floor. I hope that in some way he may see his way clear to take advantage of every opportunity to aid in bringing about a reduction in Federal expenditures. I guarantee to him that if a motion is presented either by himself, the Senator from Georgia, or the Senator from Oregon, which will make it possible for us to cut our cloth to fit the pattern, by keeping appropriations within income, so that it will be unnecessary either to increase taxes or to engage in deficit spending, I shall support such a motion. I care not who makes the motion, or whether it is made on this side of the aisle or the other side; in fact, the finest thing we could hope to have would be a resolution presented jointly by Senators on both sides of the aisle.

Just one more thing, and I conclude. I know the distinguished Senator from Maryland did not intend any reflection upon members of the Appropriations Committee when he said something about clay pigeons and Egyptian mummies. I was not present when he said it.

Mr. TYDINGS. That was merely a figure of speech.

Mr. WHERRY. I know the Senator. I know he did not intend to cast any reflection upon Senators. He would not do that. All he meant to say was that the place to cut appropriations is in the committee. With that I am sure we all agree. I want the Senator to know that I think there was a genuine desire on the part of Senators on both sides of the aisle to recommend appropriations which they felt could be justified. I am not sure that every item is as it should be. Some items have been increased. One or two changes were made at my suggestion.

There is not a Member of the Senate for whom I hold a higher regard than the distinguished Senator from Tennessee. Without any reflection upon him, I may say that I am perfectly willing to effect an economy whenever possible. I am willing to vote for the motion. If it is defeated, I shall be willing to vote for any reasonable motion that may be made. I hope there may be a bipartisan motion in the nature of a rescission, or whatever else may be desired, so long as it will effect a sufficient saving to keep us within our income.

There is another way of doing it. The distinguished chairman of the committee offered Senate Resolution 33, which, in the last analysis, called for repeal of the legislative-budget provision of the law. I understand the Senator wanted to investigate to see whether some better form of legislation could be devised. I think if the resolution which was offered jointly by some of us, not only to retain the provision for a budget ceiling, but also to enable each of the appropriation bills to be cut, if it can be worked out mechanically, will accomplish the very thing the Senator from Maryland has told us about this afternoon. I suggest to the majority leader that if possible such a measure be introduced, perhaps by a Democrat, if you please. If that can be done, and if it can be presented to the Senate for consideration, it might be one way of accomplishing what has been so ably described this afternoon by the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I think that any of us on either side of the aisle, on an examination of the entire record, would likely find that the Senator from Nebraska has been as resolute in his desire to effect economy, insofar as his own vote is concerned, as any other Member of the Senate. Indeed, on certain occasions, when it impinged somewhat on the field of our own security, I have thought he carried it a little too far. But, be that as it may, what he says cannot be questioned by anyone, for his actions are in complete consonance with his votes.

If the proposition that is now pending before the Senate is a good one, there is no reason why it should not apply to all legislation. There is no reason why we should pursue this course every time an appropriation bill is considered. If it is going to be followed anyway as each bill comes out before the Senate, and if 5 percent is assumed to be the magic percentage, we might as well take one swallow and get it over with, or go to the operating room and have the operation performed, convalesce, and get out as soon as we can, rather than nurse ourselves along with continued legislative opiates which leave us always in a state of uncertainty, and which leave questions of economy hanging in the air.

If I may have the attention of all Members of the Senate who are now on the floor, I hope they will follow me as I read a joint resolution, which I think has some merit. Perhaps it is not perfect, and there may be some suggestions made which will improve it; but I should be delighted, if the Senator from Nebraska thinks well of it, when I read it, to have him join with me as a cosponsor. I should be delighted to have the prestige of his position and his valued support. The resolution more or less takes the existing situation and applies it to all appropriation bills which will come before the Congress at this session.

A joint resolution to provide for economy in government by reducing expenditures for the fiscal year 1950 consistent with the public interest.

That is the title.

The body of the resolution reads as follows:

That the President—

In this case we could have used the Secretary of Agriculture. I cannot name the head of each of the departments, so I name the President. The inference is that we are ordering each department to be in the same position as that which the resolution provides for in a particular instance.

I continue reading:

That the President is authorized and directed to make such reductions in the amounts to be expended from any and all appropriations made for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, as will in the aggregate equal at least 5 percent of the total amounts so appropriated for such year. The President shall cause the reduction in each appropriation account to be certified to the Secretary of the Treasury, and the amounts so certified shall not be expended, but shall be impounded and returned to the Treasury.

SEC. 2. Such reduction shall be made in a manner calculated to bring about the greatest economy in expenditure consistent with efficient operation of the Government.

SEC. 3. No reduction of expenditures authorized herein shall have the effect of reducing any item of appropriation for such fiscal year more than 20 percent.

That is the percentage set forth in the pending motion of the Senator from Michigan.

SEC. 4. A statement of each reduction hereunder, including the amount thereof, shall be included in the annual budget for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1951.

Mr. President, we may as well face the facts. If we give the President the authority, the salary of every Senator may be cut as much as 20 percent. I do not think the President will do that. But we give him authority to reduce the salaries of judges as much as 20 percent. I think he can do that, if there is not sufficient money to pay them. This is not an illegal reduction forbidden by the Constitution. It is a way of getting around the Constitution in that respect.

Mr. President, I referred this resolution to the Legislative Drafting Service. I am conscious of the fact that the compensation of certain officials cannot be reduced during their tenure of office; but if there is not sufficient money to pay them, it is difficult to see how they can draw their full salaries. I want to picture all the things that might be done, not merely to make the picture beautiful so as to try to evoke the least opposition, but I want everyone concerned to know what can happen.

The resolution provides for economy in all appropriations we shall make for the fiscal year 1950. It provides for 5 percent over-all economy in all appropriations. It allows any item to be reduced as much as 20 percent. It will save, I believe, approximately $2,500,000,000 minimum, counting the deficiency appropriation bills. If, rather than doing it in this way, we make a 5-percent reduction in each bill, in this general language, why not place it on the statute books here and now, so that we can eliminate these contests in the future?

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to present this joint resolution out of order for reference to such committee as the Chair shall direct. The reason why I am asking for its reference to a committee is that, while I had hoped to have it lie on the table so that, under the old rule, it could be brought up after 1 day, without reference to a committee, yet because the Reorganization Act provides that all bills have to be referred to committees, I had no option but to do it in this way.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield to the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. FERGUSON. It is a straight-out joint resolution, so that unless unanimous consent can be obtained, it must go to a committee.

Mr. TYDINGS. It has to go to a committee. The Appropriations Committee, the Finance Committee, or whatever committee shall consider it can meet and report it, and, if the Senate adopts it, we shall have the consciousness that the President is directed to reduce appropriations in the aggregate 5 percent, that he can reduce any one item as much as 20 percent and not reduce some other item at all, but that the net result must bring about a 5-percent economy in all appropriations.

Mr. President, here is the issue drawn fairly and squarely, not as to one bill, but as to every appropriation for the fiscal year 1950. If we are to have a deficit of two and one-half or three billion dollars, and this resolution is adopted in substantially the form in which it is introduced, we shall have a balanced budget. We shall have ordered it, directed it, and provided the machinery with which to carry it out. If we are to have economy, let us stand up and be counted.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. As I see it now, it would do exactly what we have heretofore attempted to do by piecemeal.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is correct.

Mr. FERGUSON. The only fear I have that we might not be able to accomplish it in that way is that we may not be able to get it out of committee and onto the floor. Therefore, if we should fail, we should not be able to accomplish what is essential to be accomplished.

I felt, and I am sure other Senators who joined in the motions and voted for them likewise felt, that the thing to do was to strike the iron while it was hot, to consider the matter when it was before the Senate. As I see it, we shall accomplish the same thing if we can get the resolution on the floor. In theory, I am wholeheartedly in support of the Senator's resolution. I should like to think it over tonight, and I may want to join with the Senator from Maryland tomorrow morning.

Mr. TYDINGS. I shall be glad to have the Senator's name on it.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. ANDERSON. Is the resolution of the Senator from Maryland similar to the one which has been heretofore presented?

Mr. TYDINGS. No.

Mr. ANDERSON. Is it not a matter of drinking the bottle of medicine in its entirety instead of taking it spoonful by spoonful?

Mr. TYDINGS. The other way would be rubbing the medicine on the outside of the abdomen. My method is taking the medicine internally, where it will do some good. It may be that the resolution will not be adopted. It may be that the opposition will be sufficient to defeat it. If it is adopted, there will be a 5-percent reduction in the total amount of money appropriated for 1950. No one on earth can successfully dispute that statement. The point is that I do not know whether we can get it out of the committee, but I shall be delighted to have all Senators who wish to join with me in introducing the resolution, do so. I am hopeful that we can get the resolution out of committee, and I am hopeful that it will be passed. If we cannot accomplish the objective in one fell swoop, with guaranties that every bill will be treated exactly alike under a policy for the whole Government, how can we expect to get reductions?

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. I think the able Senator does have a plan which, politically, may taste better when it is taken all at once, as the Senator from New Mexico has indicated, rather than——

Mr. TYDINGS. In homeopathic doses.

Mr. FERGUSON. Yes. Then no one can say we voted against any particular appropriation, because we voted on the over-all measure. Politically it may taste a little better, but I doubt whether we can get it out of the committee, because the committee would have a taste of it before it would report it.

Mr. MAYBANK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield for a question.

Mr. MAYBANK. I wanted to say to the Senator from Michigan that I would rather take the bitter dose—or however the Senator from New Mexico may have expressed it—and let the people know how I vote, because I voted to cut ECA appropriations. But I shall not vote to cut agricultural appropriations.

Mr. FERGUSON. I would rather take it in small doses.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, there are Senators here from agricultural States, from industrial States, and from great urban areas. If we consider a 5-percent reduction in expenditures in one bill at a time, the Senator who is for economy and who comes from an agricultural State, if he votes for a cut in a particular bill, the agricultural appropriation bill, for instance, may be faced with the fact that the policy later on has been abandoned. Therefore it seems to me we would allay that feeling, and give a degree of assurance that everyone will be treated alike, regardless of the economic background, if we have a straight-out policy applicable to each and every bill in which the Congress appropriates money.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator from Maryland yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield to the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. REED. I wish to be the first Senator to authorize the Senator to put my name on his joint resolution.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. The joint resolution would be subject to veto by the President.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is correct.

Mr. TAFT. Furthermore, I assume that under the terms of the joint resolution the President could cut 20 percent from the agricultural appropriation, and nothing from the Treasury appropriation.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is correct, and likewise under the pending motion, the Secretary of Agriculture could cut 20 percent from an appropriation which the Senate wanted most to retain in full, and nothing at all in the others.

Mr. TAFT. However, under the motion to recommit to the committee, the committee will have the discretion to cut such appropriations as they wish to cut.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is true.

Mr. TAFT. So that the Senator's objection does not apply to the motion to recommit to the committee.

Mr. TYDINGS. No, it would not apply in full. But let me say that here is a chance to establish a policy for economy. I am going to be perfectly candid. I would much rather pass a resolution authorizing the Committee on Appropriations to appropriate no more money, in the aggregate, than the estimated receipts, and stop right there, and let the Appropriations Committee do the job. But, as said by the Senator from Ohio, there is no way of funneling all the bills together unless there is one budget. So I do not think that is practicable. While it is theoretically desirable, it is not practicable.

Mr. TAFT. I will vote for the Senator's joint resolution.

Mr. TYDINGS. I appreciate the Senator's support.

Mr. TAFT. My only suggestion is that it may be vetoed, and since it does give a wider discretion than is contained in the motions, I cannot see why the Senator is not for the motion to recommit.

Mr. TYDINGS. I am not for that sort of motion. First of all, I do not believe there would be any cut as a result of it. We have already had one example—if I may have the attention of the Senator from Ohio. The Senator from Ohio makes a statement involving the Senator from Maryland and then turns his back and walks out of the Chamber. I am sure the Senator from Ohio is tolerant enough to assume that he has not the last word on all these things, and that some slight mental contribution might be made on some of these subjects, if he will give me the courtesy at least of remaining for a reply when he makes an assertion involving the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. TAFT. I have listened to the Senator all afternoon, and I am glad to listen to him all evening.

Mr. TYDINGS. No, the Senator has not; he has been off the floor most of the time.

Mr. TAFT. What question does the Senator wish to ask?

Mr. TYDINGS. I wish to say to the Senator from Ohio that it is very doubtful if under the recommittal motion, if adopted, there will be a 5-percent reduction. Already we have had reconsideration voted, there has been one bill that was recommitted with instructions to the committee to reduce the appropriations, but the vote was reconsidered and we are right back where we started. That procedure is going on back and forth through this whole session. It is time-wasting. It is not businesslike. It is not the way to define a national policy for ecenomy, and it is very doubtful if it will work.

In my opinion, if the proposal I have presented fails and we rely upon the procedure now being followed, we are going to get very little economy, because in the last analysis in my opinion, the Committee on Appropriations is not likely to make a 5-percent reduction in all bills, if in any of them.

Under the policy set forth in the joint resolution, if the President vetoes the joint resolution, we will have done our part, will we not?

Mr. TAFT. I am willing to do my part, but I am interested in avoiding a budget deficit.

I do not understand the Senator. The Senator says we must not vote for the 5-percent-reduction motion offered by the Senator from Michigan because we will lose it.

Mr. TYDINGS. No; I did not say that.

Mr. TAFT. If the Senator will vote for it, probably we will carry it, then we can go back to the Labor-Federal Security bill and add the amendment to that, and to all the other appropriation bills. I do not quite understand the Senator's argument. I do not object to voting for the Senator's joint resolution, but it seems to me it goes much further in the direction of our motion than the proposals against which he is voting. I do not see how the Senator can consistently be for his joint resolution and not be for these amendments, one by one. I can understand that if the amendment is beaten on three or four bills, the Senator may say it will not work. I would say that myself, if the Senator will vote for the motion to recommit the bill, we can reconsider the vote on the Labor-Federal Security bill, and the Post Office bill stands on its own feet in a rather peculiar way. It seems to me the Senator, according to his own principle, should vote for the motion offered by the Senator from Michigan. I will vote for the Senator's joint resolution in return.

Mr. TYDINGS. Let me say to the Senator from Ohio that I am a little astounded at his choice of words. Here he is, the greatest economy advocate in the Congress, in many minds, at least on the appropriating but not on the authorizing end of legislation, and yet he says he is willing to vote for my joint resolution. Heavens above, I should think he would want to grab the standard out of my hands and rush out in front of the troops and proclaim, "Here at last is a policy which will affect not only one bill, but all bills." He says he is willing to vote for it as if he is reluctant, as if he would have to have a hypodermic before he could get himself in position to support the proposition.

Mr. TAFT. The reason why I am not enthusiastic is that President Truman has asked the Congress to levy $4,000,000,000 more taxes. That is his position. He wants to spend the money, he has asked for it in the budget, and I assume that in accordance with the principles he has laid down, he will veto the Senator's joint resolution, whereas the motion cannot be vetoed. That is why I am not enthusiastic for the Senator's joint resolution; but I will vote for it.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is a good explanation. I hope the Senator will vote for it, even with some slight degree of apprehension. I hope the Senators on the other side of the aisle who would like to become coauthors of the joint resolution will go to the desk and affix their names. I should be honored to have them do so.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland has asked unanimous consent to introduce a joint resolution. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the joint resolution will be received and referred to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 94) to provide for economy in government by reducing expenditures for the fiscal year 1950 consistent with the public interest, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON], for himself and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], to recommit to the Committee on Appropriations with instructions House bill 3997, the agricultural appropriation bill. On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GILLETTE (when his name was called). On this vote I have a pair with my colleague, the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. HICKENLOOPER] who, if present, would vote "yea." If I were at liberty to vote I would vote "nay." I withhold my vote.

Mr. MYERS. I announce that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] and the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Wyoming [Mr. HUNT] and the Senator from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON] are absent on public business.

The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. KERR] is absent by leave of the Senate on public business.

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN] is detained on official business in a meeting of a Senate committee. If present and voting, the Senator from Nevada would vote "nay."

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. MILLER] is absent on official business. If present and voting, the Senator from Idaho would vote "nay."

The Senator from Wyoming [Mr. HUNT] is paired on this vote with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. FLANDERS]. If present and voting, the Senator from Wyoming would vote "nay," and the Senator from Vermont would vote "yea."

The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. KERR] is paired with the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH]. If present and voting, the Senator from Oklahoma would vote "nay," and the Senator from New Jersey would vote "yea."

The Senator from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON] is paired with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART]. If present and voting, the Senator from Washington would vote "nay," and the Senator from Indiana would vote "yea."

If present and voting, the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] would vote "nay."

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I announce that the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART], who is necessarily absent, is paired with the Senator from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON]. If present and voting, the Senator from Indiana would vote "yea" and the Senator from Washington would vote "nay."

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. FLANDERS] who is absent by leave of the Senate is paired with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. HUNT]. If present and voting, the Senator from Vermont would vote "yea" and the Senator from Wyoming would vote "nay."

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH], who is absent because of illness is paired with the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. KERR]. If present and voting, the Senator from New Jersey would vote "yea" and the Senator from Oklahoma would vote "nay."

The Senior Senator from Kansas [Mr. REED] and the junior Senator from Kansas [Mr. SCHOEPPEL] are detained on official business.

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HICKENLOOPER] is absent by leave of the Senate, and his pair has been previously announced by his colleague.

The result was announced—yeas 32, nays 50, as follows:

So Mr. FERGUSON's motion (on behalf of himself and Mr. BRIDGES) to recommit House bill 3997 with instructions was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment. If there be no further amendments to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill (H. R. 3997) was read the third time and passed.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, request a conference with the House of Representatives thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. RUSSELL, Mr. HAYDEN, Mr. O'MAHONEY, Mr. MCCARRAN, Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma, Mr. REED, Mr. GURNEY, and Mr. FERGUSON conferees on the part of the Senate.

EXTENSION OF RECIPROCAL TRADE AGREEMENTS ACT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 1211) to extend the authority of the President under section 350 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, and for other purposes.

APPROPRIATIONS FOR CIVIL FUNCTIONS OF DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 3734, a bill making appropriations for civil functions administered by the Department of the Army.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed by the Parliamentarian that the motion of the Senator from Tennessee should be in the form of a unanimous-consent request.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. LUCAS. As I understand, the Senate automatically reverts to the consideration of the bill for the extension of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act. Am I correct in my understanding that that is now the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. LUCAS. The Senator from Tennessee will have to ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 2734, a bill making appriations for the civil functions of the Department of the Army.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, if I corecctly understand the majority leader, the unfinished business is the reciprocal trade agreements legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. The distinguished Senator from Tennessee is asking that it be temporarily laid aside, and that the pending business be made the so-called civil functions appropriation bill.

Mr. McKELLAR. That is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Tennessee?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 3734) making appropriations for civil functions administered by the Department of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations, with amendments.

NATION-WIDE PRAYER FOR PEACE

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 61, a joint resolution requesting the President to issue a proclamation designating Memorial Day, 1949, as a day for a Nation-wide prayer for peace. I think there will be no controversy over the joint resolution. Memorial Day is rapidly approaching. The joint resolution has been on the calendar for a considerable time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, may I propound an inquiry to the able Senator from Michigan?

Mr. FERGUSON. Certainly.

Mr. LUCAS. Was the joint resolution unanimously reported by the Judiciary Committee?

Mr. FERGUSON. It was.

Mr. LUCAS. And there is no question whatever about it?

Mr. FERGUSON. There is no question whatsoever about it.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, the Senator from Michigan has discussed this subject with me. I see no reason why the joint resolution cannot be passed without interfering with the bill now before the Senate.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I should like to ask the distinguished Senator from Michigan a question. I am very much interested, as is the majority leader, in expediting consideration of the civil-functions bill. Does the Senator anticipate any difficulty with the joint resolution?

Mr. FERGUSON. None whatever. I take it for granted that it will be passed unanimously. I should like to read it. It is only one page in length.

Mr. WHERRY. If it is not possible to dispose of the joint resolution within a reasonable time, will the Senator withdraw his request?

Mr. FERGUSON. Yes. I should like to have the joint resolution read, so that Senators may be informed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Michigan?

There being no objection, the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 61) requesting the President to issue a proclamation designating Memorial Day, 1949, as a day of Nation-wide prayer for peace, was read, considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe Memorial Day, 1949, by praying, each in accordance with his religious faith, for permanent peace, designating a period during such day in which all the people of the United States may unite in prayer for a permanent peace; calling upon all the people of the United States to unite in prayer at such time; and calling upon the newspapers, radio stations, and all other mediums of information to join in observing such day and period of prayer.

APPROPRIATIONS FOR CIVIL FUNCTIONS OF DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill (H. R. 3734) making appropriations for civil functions administered by the Department of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, and for other purposes.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I ask that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with, that it be read for amendment, and that the committee amendment be first considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will proceed to state the committee amendments.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the heading "Civil functions, Department of the Army—Corps of Engineers—Rivers and harbors and flood control," on page 4, line 18, after the word "each", to strike out "Provided further, That the various appropriations for rivers and harbors and flood control may be used for the purchase (for replacement only) in the current fiscal year of not to exceed four hundred and eighty-six passenger motor vehicles and ten motorboats" and in lieu thereof to insert "Provided further, That the various appropriations for rivers and harbors and flood control may be used for the purchase in the current fiscal year of five hundred and sixty-one passenger motor vehicles (of which four hundred and eighty-six shall be for replacement only) and ten motorboats (to be acquired from surplus stock where practicable) and the purchase (not to exceed five, to be acquired from surplus stocks), maintenance, repair, and operation of aircraft."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Rivers and harbors," on page 6, line 19, after the word "law," to strike out "$176,034,270" and insert "$229,098,290"; in line 24, after the word "of" where it occurs the second time, to strike out "the act of October 15, 1940 (Public Law 857, 76th Cong.) and insert "section 11, act of March 3, 1925 (Public Law 585, 68th Cong., 43 Stat. 1157)"; on page 7, line 19, after the word "exceed," to strike out "$1,000,000" and insert "$1,360,000", and in line 23, after "(69 Stat. 1080)", to insert a colon and the following additional proviso: "Provided further, That the maintenance funds appropriated herein under this heading may be used for realinement of the authorized channel of the Hudson River in the vicinity of Kingston, N. Y., at an estimated cost of $400,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 8, after line 16, to insert:

Alteration of bridges over navigable waters: For payment of the share of the United States of the cost of alteration of bridges over navigable waters in accordance with the provisions of the act of June 21, 1940 (Public Law 647), $100.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Flood control," on page 9, line 7, before the word "Provided," to strike out "$321,000,000" and insert "$415,084,300"; and in line 24, after the word "project", to strike out the colon and the following additional proviso: "Provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be available or used to maintain or operate the Garrison (North Dakota) Reservoir at a higher maximum normal pool elevation than 1,830 feet, or for constructing dikes or levees which would be required by a higher maximum normal pool elevation than 1,830 feet for operating such dam."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 10, line 9, after the word "project", to insert a colon and the following additional provisos: "Provided further, That the planning funds included for the Millwood Reservoir shall also be used for the survey and study of alternate sites: Provided further, That funds allocated to the Garrison Reservoir project may be expended for acquisition of any property within the incorporated village of Van Hook, and the adjacent area known as Legion Park, North Dakota: Provided further, That none of the appropriations for the Isabella Reservoir in California shall be used for the construction of the irrigation features of that project until the Secretary of the Army has received reports as to the division of costs between flood control, navigation, and other water uses from the Bureau of Reclamation and local organizations and, with the concurrence of the Secretary of the Interior, shall have made a determination as to what the allocation shall be: Provided further, That the reports from these studies shall be made not later than 6 months from the date of the enactment of this act and that the agreement of concurrence shall be made not later than 9 months from the date of the enactment of this act."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 11, line 10, after the word "appropriation", to strike out "$63,000,000" and insert "$73,500,000."

The amendment was agreed to

The next amendment was, on page 11, line 21, after "55 Stat. 638–651)", to strike out "$3,500,000" and insert "$4,000,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "General provisions," on page 17, after line 20, to strike out section 2, as follows:

SEC. 2. Notwithstanding the provisions in the act approved August 11, 1939 (53 Stat. 1409), limiting employment in certain positions to citizens of the United States, citizens of Panama may be employed in such positions.

And in lieu thereof to insert a new section 2, as follows:

SEC. 2. No part of any appropriation contained in this act shall be used directly or indirectly, except for temporary employment in case of emergency, for the payment of any civilian for services rendered by him on the Canal Zone while occupying a skilled, technical, clerical, administrative, executive, or supervisory position unless such person is a citizen of the United States of America or of the Republic of Panama: Provided, however, (1) That, notwithstanding the provision in the act approved August 11, 1939 (53 Stat. 1409), limiting employment in the above-mentioned positions to citizens of the United States from and after the date of approval of said act, citizens of Panama may be employed in such positions; (2) that at no time shall the number of Panamanian citizens employed in the above-mentioned positions exceed the number of citizens of the United States so employed, if United States citizens are available in continental United States or on the Canal Zone; (3) that nothing in this act shall prohibit the continued employment of any person who shall have rendered fifteen or more years of faithful and honorable service on the Canal Zone; (4) that in the selection of personnel for skilled, technical, administrative, clerical, supervisory, or executive positions, the controlling factors in filling these positions shall be efficiency, experience, training, and education; (5) that all citizens of Panama and the United States rendering skilled, technical, clerical, administrative, executive, or supervisory service on the Canal Zone under the terms of this act (a) shall normally be employed not more than 40 hours per week, (b) may receive as compensation equal rates of pay based upon rates paid for similar employment in continental United States plus 25 percent; (6) this entire section shall apply only to persons employed in skilled, technical, clerical, administrative, executive, or supervisory positions on the Canal Zone directly or indirectly by any branch of the United States Government or by any corporation or company whose stock is owned wholly or in part by the United States Government: Provided, further, That the President may suspend from time to time in whole or in part compliance with this section in time of war or national emergency if he should deem such course to be in the public interest.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 21, line 2, after "(5 U. S. C. 55a)", to insert "in amounts not exceeding $6,000 for the Panama Canal and not exceeding $150,000 for the Corps of Engineers, Department of the Army: Provided, That the rates for individuals shall not exceed $100 per diem."

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That completes the committee amendments.

NOTICE OF MOTION TO SUSPEND THE RULE—AMENDMENT

Mr. DOUGLAS submitted the following notice in writing:

In accordance with rule XL of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby give notice in writing that it is my intention to move to suspend paragraph 4 of rule XVI for the purpose of proposing to the bill (H. R. 3734) making appropriations for civil functions administered by the Department of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, and for other purposes, the following amendment, namely: At the end of the bill insert the following:

"SEC. 406. (a) The Secretary of the Army, with respect to appropriations made in this act, is authorized and directed to make such reductions in the total appropriations contained in this act as will cause the total so appropriated to be not greater than $450,000,000, making a reduction of $301,440,690 in the amounts recommended by the Senate Committee on Appropriations. The Secretary of the Army, with approval of the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, shall have the power to eliminate completely appropriations for certain projects and to reduce others by such amounts as he may deem proper."

Mr. DOUGLAS also submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to House bill 3734, making appropriations for civil functions administered by the Department of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

(For text of amendment referred to, see the foregoing notice.)

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I desire to make a brief announcement before Senators leave the Chamber.

When the Senate takes a recess today, it is the purpose to take a recess until 11 o'clock a. m. tomorrow. I make that announcement in the hope that we can conclude consideration of the civil-functions bill tomorrow. I dislike to call the Senate back at 11 o'clock, but we hope to be able to finish the bill tomorrow. By beginning at 11 o'clock in the morning and perhaps running a little later than we shall be in session today, it is hoped that we can get this appropriation bill out of the way.

I do that primarily for this reason: There is a committee scheduled by the Agriculture Department to leave on Monday for Mexico. Arrangements have been made for some time. Members on both sides of the aisle are going. They do not wish to leave at that time in the event the civil-functions bill is still before the Senate. However, if we cannot conclude consideration of the bill tomorrow, it is the purpose to take a recess until Monday. There will be no Saturday session.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. The Senator has already answered one question which I had in mind, with respect to recessing until Monday. I also ask the distinguished majority leader if he contemplates recessing until 11 o'clock a. m. tomorrow. The reason I ask is that two or three committees are at work, one of which is a subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations considering the appropriations for the Atomic Energy Commission. The chairman of that subcommittee is the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY]. The subcommittee will convene at 10 o'clock. Inasmuch as there will not be a Saturday session, I am wondering if the Senator feels that perhaps 11:30 would be agreeable. Eleven o'clock is all right with me, but I know that three or four committees are at work.

Mr. LUCAS. Eleven-thirty seems almost as bad as eleven. I think perhaps 11 is a little better. As I understand, that is agreeable to the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. McKELLAR. It is entirely agreeable to me.

Mr. President, I have not yet made a statement about the civil-functions bill. Tomorrow I shall make a brief statement concerning the bill. I see no reason why there should be extended debate on the bill. I hope we can easily pass it tomorrow.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Illinois a question. As I understand, it is not planned to complete consideration of the civil-functions bill tonight.

Mr. LUCAS. No. We hope to be able to finish it tomorrow. We may remain in session a little late tomorrow evening, if necessary.

Mr. LODGE. The bill is still open to amendment; is it not?

Mr. LUCAS. Oh, yes; we have just adopted the committee amendments only.

Mr. McKELLAR. All the committee amendments have been adopted.

Mr. LUCAS. The bill is open to further amendment, from now on.

Mr. President, for the benefit of the Senators now present and also those who may read the RECORD in the morning, I wish to make a further statement in respect to the business of the Senate on Monday. In the event that the Senate concludes action on the civil functions appropriations bill tomorrow, the Senate will automatically return to the consideration of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Extension Act, which in reality has been the unfinished business for some time.

But in the event the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], the chairman of the Finance Committee, is not then in a physical condition to lead the fight in behalf of that bill, we shall then take up the armed services unification bill, which has been reported from the Committee on Armed Services. I make this statement in order that those who are interested in the armed services unification bill may be prepared to debate it on Monday.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. Can the Senator give me information as to when or whether he expects the Senate to take up the labor bill?

Mr. LUCAS. I can only say to the able Senator from Ohio that the labor bill will definitely be taken up before we adjourn this session of Congress. At the present time, there is some question with respect to the deadline in regard to the reciprocal trade agreements extension bill. We are trying to dispose of that bill as quickly as possible. We estimate that consideration of the armed services unification bill probably will not require more than 2 days; and by that time we hope the senior Senator from Georgia will have returned to the Senate, so that we can then take up the reciprocal trade agreements extension bill.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. The Senator from Illinois has just said that the Senate will definitely take up the labor bill before the adjournment of this session. Does the Senator believe that the Senate will take up that bill in time for the House of Representatives also to act on it before the adjournment of this session of Congress?

Mr. LUCAS. I am certain that both the Senate and the House of Representatives will act on the labor bill before the adjournment of this session. I say that in all frankness.

Mr. TAFT. I thank the Senator.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. I should like to ask the able majority leader whether it is also his purpose to bring up the minimum wage and hour proposed legislation, similarly.

Mr. LUCAS. I sincerely hope the minimum wage and hour proposed legislation will be reported in the very near future by the Committee on Education and Labor; and I certainly wish to have that bill considered also before this session is adjourned.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. In order to help clarify the understanding of Senators about the program, and to have the statement in the RECORD, in addition to the statement made by the able majority leader, may I state that the armed services unification bill or amendment, as I understand it to be, is number 356 on the calendar, Senate bill 1843. Am I correct as to that? It seems to me that if that statement appears in the RECORD immediately after the announcement regarding the bill which has been made by the Senator from Illinois, Senators will be notified about the bill which will be made the pending business on Monday.

Mr. LUCAS. The Senator from Nebraska is correct. It is Senate bill 1843, Calendar 356.

Mr. WHERRY. That is correct.

Mr. LUCAS. We speak of it as a "unification bill," but the title is "A bill to convert the National Military Establishment into an Executive Department of the Government, to be known as the Department of Defense; to provide the Secretary of Defense with appropriate responsibility and authority, and with civilian and military assistance adequate to fulfill his enlarged responsibility; and for other purposes."

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a further question?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. In the event that the bill is disposed of prior to the return of the distinguished senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], will the majority leader comment on whether the so-called basing-point freight-rate bill might be taken up then?

Mr. LUCAS. The basing-point bill will not be taken up at that time. Following the disposition of Calendar No. 356, Senate bill 1843, if the senior Senator from Georgia is not then in a position to participate in the consideration of House bill 1211, a bill to extend the authority of the President under section 350 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, and for other purposes, it is anticipated that the Senate will then proceed to the consideration of House bill 2663, Calendar No. 90, a bill to provide for the administration of the Central Intelligence Agency, which measure has been reported by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] from the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for one more question?

Mr. LUCAS. Yes; and that is about as far as I can go in that respect.

Mr. WHERRY. In the event that Calendar No. 90, House bill 2663, is then disposed of, and in the further event that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] has not returned to the Senate at that time, will the majority leader state whether we might then take up the basing-point bill?

Mr. LUCAS. I say to my good friend the Senator from Nebraska that there is a possibility that the bill of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. MYERS] on the basing-point issue might be taken up.

Mr. WHERRY. That is Senate bill 1008.

I thank the distinguished Senator.

Mr. MYERS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. MYERS. I am very happy to hear the majority leader indicate that there is a possibility that the basing-point bill may be brought up on the floor of the Senate in the near future.

Mr. LUCAS. Let me ask the able Senator from Pennsylvania whether that bill was reported unanimously by the committee.

Mr. MYERS. I think there was one vote in the committee against reporting the bill, and I think there is a statement of minority views, signed by one member of the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. O'CONOR. I happen to be the one who reported the bill from the Judiciary Committee. It was reported favorably by all members of the committee, with one exception; and, in addition, there were reservations on the part of another member of the committee as to some technical objection; and minority views were submitted, as the able Senator from Pennsylvania has stated.

Mr. LUCAS. Let me inquire from any member of the committee how long it might take to pass that bill.

Mr. O'CONOR. I should think it would not take very long—possibly a few hours.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield to me, let me say the bill provides for a moratorium for only a few months.

Mr. O'CONOR. Until July 1, 1950.

Mr. LUCAS. I understand the principles of the bill and its purpose.

I appreciate that assurance, and it may have a good deal to do with the majority leader's disposition to attempt to have that bill taken up.

Mr. MAYBANK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. MAYBANK. I wonder whether the Senator from Illinois has any idea when a call of the calendar will be had.

Mr. LUCAS. I hope a call of the calendar will be had following the disposition of the civil functions appropriations bill, and before the Senate takes up the armed services unification bill.

Mr. MAYBANK. I thank the Senator for the information.

RECESS

Mr. LUCAS. I move that the Senate stand in recess until 11 o'clock a. m. tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 40 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Friday, May 20, 1949, at 11 o'clock a. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, MAY 19, 1949

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Reverend Dr. Joseph F. Thorning, honorary fellow of the Historical and Geographic Institute of Brazil and associate editor of the Americas and World Affairs, offered the following prayer:

Heavenly Father, our strength and our consolation, look down with favor upon the President of our country, the Speaker of this House, and all the Members of the Congress.

Grant wisdom and light to our minds, determination to our wills, and the grace of perseverance in nobility and goodness, despite provocations and failures.

On this day of congressional welcome to the President of one of the most loyal good-neighbor republics, the United States of Brazil, help us to understand the virtue of Brazil's glorious motto, "Order and Progress."

We beg Thy blessing upon the Brazilian people, whose President represents them here today.

Vouchsafe to maintain our friendship, dear Saviour, on the firm foundations of freedom and democracy.

Above all, let us seek the truth and strive for fairness in all our dealings with other nations and peoples.

All this we implore in the name of our Redeemer. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McDaniel, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate agrees to the amendments of the House to bills of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 326. An act to amend the War Claims Act of 1948; and

S. 1152. An act for the relief of certain officers and employees of the Office of United States High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands who suffered losses of personal property by reason of war conditions.

RECESS

The SPEAKER. The House will stand in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

Accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 3 minutes p. m.) the House stood in recess, subject to the call of the Chair.

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker at 12 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.

JOINT SESSION OF THE HOUSE AND SENATE (HELD PURSUANT TO THE PROVISIONS OF H. CON. RES. 59) TO HEAR AN ADDRESS BY HIS EXCELLENCY, EURICO GASPAR DUTRA, PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF BRAZIL

The SPEAKER of the House of Representatives presided.

The Doorkeeper announced the President pro tempore and Members of the United States Senate, who were escorted to the seats reserved for them, the President pro tempore of the Senate taking the chair at the right of the Speaker.

APPOINTMENT OF COMMITTEE OF ESCORT

The SPEAKER. On the part of the House, the Chair appoints as members of the committee to escort our distinguished visitor to the Chamber the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK], the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN], the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. KEE], and the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. EATON].

The PRESIDENT pro tempore of the Senate. On the part of the Senate, the Chair appoints as members of the committee of escort the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. LUCAS], the senior Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. WHERRY], and the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG].

The Doorkeeper announced the Chief Justice of the United States and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, who were escorted to the seats reserved for them.

The Doorkeeper announced the Members of the President's Cabinet, who were escorted to the seats reserved for them.

At 12 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m., the Doorkeeper announced the President of the United States and the President of the United States of Brazil.

The President of the United States and the President of the United States of Brazil, accompanied by the committee of escort, entered the Chamber and took the seats reserved for them at the Clerk's desk. [Applause, the Members rising.]

The SPEAKER. Members of the Congress, I am happy indeed today that I have the privilege of presenting our distinguished guest. If there ever has been a time in this Nation's history and in the history of the world when these Americas should be friendly and stand together, that time is now. [Applause.]

It affords me peculiar pleasure to present the head of a friendly government, a man who presides over the destinies of a great and proud people, our neighbor, our friend. I present to you the President of the United States of Brazil. [Applause, the Members rising.]

ADDRESS OF HIS EXCELLENCY, EURICO DUTRA, PRESIDENT OF BRAZIL

President DUTRA. Mr. Speaker, Mr. President, Members of the Congress of the United States, I appreciate the signal honor which you have conferred upon me in inviting me to address this joint session of the Congress of the United States. I realize full well that in so doing you have wished to render a significant tribute to my country. You may be assured that your cordial gesture will have a widespread repercussion in Brazil, whose people are ever sensitive to manifestations of regard coming from this great Nation, held by them in such high estcem.

I want at this time to tender my thanks to you for the splendid opportunity which you have accorded me of bringing to this respected institution my heartiest salutations.

As I stand in this meeting place erected by the people and for the people, I feel that I am in the presence of the hundred and fifty million Americans whom you so ably represent, and I am fully aware of the responsibilities which rest upon your shoulders.

Democracy, like all other human institutions, is not cultivated alike throughout the world. The strength of this great Nation arises out of its democratic existence featured by a strict respect for the fundamental rights of man and limited alone by norms decreed in the common interest. Your concern is the well-being of the community. Only its authentic aspirations guide your deliberations. We are aware of the interchange of ideas which goes on constantly between the people and yourselves, and we realize how great are the benefits that accrue from this communion of objectives between the voters and their rightful mandatories.

In this moment fraught with ordeals for humanity we accompany, with real interest, your fight for the preservation of the people of the United States of America—and with them the world—from renewed bloodshed. The efforts of the Congress of the United States to prevent possible aggression further evidence your care for your people and the purpose to maintain them secure from another conflict. To preserve peace means to guarantee the happiness of the men and women of this country, the holders of an immense moral and material heritage, which is being applied with dignity and generosity toward the restoration of war-devastated countries.

The democracy which flourishes with so much vigor in this country is one of the signs of the high degree of civilization which you have achieved and in which respect for the law and for the rights of others is a main factor, obeying the moral and juridical criteria on which the prevailing order is based. You come, to be sure, of a race in which immemorable usage and the record of past judgments intertwine for the definition of that which can be done as of that which cannot. We, too, have inherited, from our Portuguese forefathers, the same respect for law and order and the taste for legal science which are causal circumstances of the high quality of Brazilian legal talent and its universal recognition. [Applause.]

The Government of Brazil is proud of its dignifying subordination to the dictates of law and of its fidelity to the standards of international morality.

Insofar as concerns me personally, I absorbed from my military training the valuable teaching that obedience to law is the only norm of action for the chief. Ever in compliance with constitutional principles, rigidly adhering to the decisions of the judiciary, giving execution to the proposals of the legislative, within the powers vested in me by the bill of rights, I fulfill in accord with our national traditions a civil magistrature, unbiased by the interests in play, as President of all Brazilians. [Applause.]

Upon taking office it became clear to me that the cooperation of the political parties was an indispensable measure for national well-being and the strengthening of democratic processes in the country. I did not hesitate therefore to bring into my administration prominent members of opposing political parties. And ever since I have striven to devote all my efforts toward the achievement of harmony among Brazilians in order that the country as a whole, with such teamwork and in an atmosphere of mutual understanding and tolerance, would face the national problems to the advantage of all.

I met with a spirit of open-mindedness on the part of the democratic parties, in which they displayed an attitude of constructive cooperation dedicated to the highest national interests, having gone so far as to approve the interparty agreement. This was accomplished without sacrifice to party principle and independence, but rather with a broader view of helping the Government and lending strength and unity to the country and its institutions, during a moment of stress in its national and international turning-point.

I said, on that occasion, that—

> The truce between parties, the disarmament of spirits and political peace should replace permanent friction, fruitless struggle, and militant antagonism. The Nation can no longer be the plaything of contending factions, if not of intolerant ones, but must become the great moral entity that compels joint effort of the consciences of all its citizens.

Thanks to this fact, Brazil enjoys the benefit of internal harmony and can devote itself to the cultivation of pacific relations with the other nations. Those which exist between Brazil and the United States of America, perfect from the beginning, offer, through their development and continuity, a rare example of a fraternal association of two peoples which has prevailed over a period of more than 120 years. [Applause.] As we are accustomed to this century-old friendship, we consider it a natural phenomenon in our political life. Of this fact the great Chancelor Baron Rio Branco had a precise notion, when he referred, in a tone of counsel, to "the ancient friendship which happily joins Brazil and the United States and which it is incumbent upon the present generation to nourish with the same devotion which our forefathers displaced in its cultivation."

In this connection, I wish to recall the visit to this country of Emperor Pedro II, at the time of the celebration of the first centennial of its independence; the Secretaries of State Elihu Root and Charles Evans Hughes, who visited us in 1906 and 1922; and there were others: the Baron Rio Branco, John Bassett Moore, Joaquim Nabuco, all of whom contributed in a decisive manner to the strengthening of the ties of friendship, understanding, and cooperation between Brazil and the United States of America. In our time the efforts of Presidents Herbert Hoover, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, and Harry S. Truman, dedicated toward the same goal, have a far-reaching significance and our heartfelt appreciation.

The visit of President Truman to Brazil constituted a memorable event in the relations between the two countries. The manifestations of regard which were tendered to him by the people and by the Government of Brazil were an eloquent token of the great affection which we devote to you and to your great men.

The friendship between Brazil and the United States of America is founded upon their identity of purposes and harmony of interests. Our highest aspiration is to forge ahead guarded by institutions which insure man the free exercise of his rights, in an atmosphere of tolerance and justice. In the international field this friendship, through its practical manifestations and by virtue of its example, is the greatest guaranty of good understanding and comprehension among the other sister nations in this hemisphere. This reciprocal sentiment, from which stems a coincidence of views in the appreciation of the great problems of the moment, has already led us to fight shoulder to shoulder in the two World Wars. [Applause.]

While on this subject, may I be permitted to affirm that my country anticipated by many years the policy of continental solidarity consecrated by the Treaty of Rio de Janeiro.

This highly important statute for continental peace and security absorbed the Monroe Doctrine and it not only broadened the courageous promise of the famous President, but it likewise established the reciprocity of the American Republics in common bond against aggression. Now, Brazil, without written law nor express agreement, already considered herself morally obligated not to consider as a free gift the guaranties of the famous American warning to the holy alliance. It was thus—and I have vivid pleasure in recollecting it at this time—that on June 2, 1917, on announcing in a circular note to foreign governments the revocation of neutrality in the war declared between the United States of America and the German Empire, the Brazilian Chancellery stated:

> The Republic recognized thus that one of the belligerents is an integral part of the American Continent and that we are bound to that belligerent by a traditional friendship and by the same political thought in the defense of the vital interests of America and of the principles accepted by international law.
> If until now the relative lack of reciprocity in the part of the American Republics had taken away from the Monroe Doctrine its true character, permitting a less well-grounded interpretation of the prerogatives of its sovereignty, the present occurrences, by placing Brazil even now at the side of the United States of America in a critical moment in the history of the world, continue to give to our external policy a practical feature of continental solidarity, a policy which, as a matter of fact, was also that of the old regime, whenever one of the sister friendly nations on this continent has been involved.

On the two great planes, world and continental, we offer our integral and unselfish cooperation to the United Nations and to the Organization of American States. On the continental plane we have not withheld our efforts on behalf of the ever-growing vigor of the inter-American system, which safeguards the security of the continent and fosters the well-being of the peoples on this hemisphere. In supporting without reservations the Organization of American States, we strengthen this regional organism for the discharge of its important coordinating function.

On the world plane, we collaborate with frankness and loyalty for the prestige of the United Nations, and with our participation in its specialized agencies we seek to put into execution the purposes of that institution which aim at the establishment of a better understanding among nations as the only means to ensure world peace. [Applause.]

This common task is the reflection of the perfect understanding which prevails between us and which is rendered more solid each moment through so many other manifestations of close understanding.

If even before my first visit to this country, in 1943, I had already understood the reason for existence of our friendship, this stay among you, of which I shall keep an undying recollection, has revealed to me, in all its depth, the decisive influence which this communion of thoughts will have on our destinies.

I shall take back to Brazil with me an unforgettable recollection of the warm welcome which the Government and the people of the United States of America have accorded me. I shall return with a spirit fortified by the example of your achievements within a regime of freedom, which assures the indispensable conditions for the development of the creative faculties of the human personality. I believe and hope that the friendship between our two countries will become ever stronger in the daily treatment of our problems, as on the common road in the quest for the ideals of humanity and justice. [Applause, the Members rising.]

At 12 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m., President Truman and President Dutra, accompanied by the committee of escort, retired from the Chamber.

The Doorkeeper escorted the invited guests from the Chamber in the following order:

The members of the President's Cabinet.

The Chief Justice of the United States and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court.

JOINT SESSION DISSOLVED

The SPEAKER. The Chair declares the joint session of the two Houses now dissolved.

Thereupon (at 12 o'clock and 52 minutes p. m.) the joint session of the two Houses was dissolved.

The Members of the Senate retired to their Chamber.

RECESS

The SPEAKER. The Chair declares a recess until 2:15 p. m.

Thereupon (at 12 o'clock and 53 minutes p. m.) the House stood in recess until 2 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m.

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker at 2 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m.

PAYMENT OF CERTAIN CLAIMS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES

Mr. LYLE, from the Committee on Rules, reported the following privileged resolution (H. Res. 221) providing for the consideration of the bill (S. 937) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to effect the payment of certain claims against the United States (Rept. No. 628), which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed:

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (S. 937) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to effect the payment of certain claims against the United States. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

INVESTIGATION BY COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS

Mr. DELANEY, from the Committee on Rules, reported the following privileged resolution (H. Res. 206) authorizing the Committee on Foreign Affairs to conduct thorough studies and investigations of all matters coming within the jurisdicton of such committee (Rept. No. 629), which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed:

Resolved, That the Committee on Foreign Affairs, acting as a whole or by subcommittee, is authorized and directed to conduct thorough studies and investigations of all matters coming within the jurisdiction of such committee.

SEC. 2. For the purposes of this resolution, the committee, or any subcommittee thereof, is authorized to hold such hearings; to sit and act during the present Congress at such times and places as the committee may determine, whether or not the House is in session, has recessed, or has adjourned; to require the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents, by subpena or otherwise; and to take testimony as it deems necessary. Subpenas may be issued under the signature of the chairman of the committee and shall be served by any person designated by such chairman. The chairman of the committee or any member designated by him may administer oaths to witnesses.

COMPREHENSIVE PLANNING FOR SITE ACQUISITION

Mr. COLMER, from the Committee on Rules, reported the following privileged resolution (H. Res. 222) providing for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3662) to provide for comprehensive planning for site acquisition in and outside the District of Columbia, and for the design of Federal building projects outside the District of Columbia; to authorize the transfer of jurisdiction over certain lands between certain departments and agencies of the United States, and to provide certain additional authority needed in connection with the construction, management, and operation of Federal public buildings; and for other purposes (Rept. No. 630), which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed:

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3662) to provide for comprehensive planning, for site acquisition in and outside of the District of Columbia, and for the design of Federal building projects outside of the District of Columbia; to authorize the transfer of jurisdiction over certain lands between certain departments and agencies of the United States, and to provide certain additional authority needed in connection with the construction, management, and operation of Federal public buildings; and for other purposes. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 2 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Committee on Public Works, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion, except one motion to recommit.

HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION 196 LAID ON TABLE

The SPEAKER. Without objection, House Joint Resolution 196, creating a joint committee on lobbying activities, will be laid on the table, a similar concurrent resolution having been passed on yesterday.

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. VINSON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include an address made by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. BATES] at the ceremonies incident to the commissioning of the U. S. S. Salem, at Boston, Mass., on May 14, 1949.

Mr. PRICE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD in two instances and to include a statement before the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Mr. JENKINS asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include an editorial.

Mr. JUDD asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD in two separate instances and in each to include extraneous matter.

Mr. HOEVEN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include a newspaper article.

Mr. ELLSWORTH asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include an editorial.

Mr. McDONOUGH asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD.

Mr. McCULLOCH asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include an editorial from the Cleveland Plain Dealer of May 17.

Mr. YOUNG asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD.

Mr. O'HARA of Illinois asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include a resolution by the city council of Chicago.

PERMISSION TO EXTEND REMARKS AT THIS POINT

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, under leave to extend my remarks, I wish to announce that the House Radio Correspondents' Gallery will celebrate its tenth anniversary tomorrow.

On April 20, 1939, the House amended its rules—rule XXXV—extending privileges to reporters of news to be disseminated by radio, wireless, and similar means of transmission.

On May 20, 1939, the facilities made available to this group were officially opened.

The first committee of radio correspondents was composed of Fulton Lewis, Jr., Albert L. Warner, William R. McAndrew, and Fred Morrison. The original membership was 26—today it is 185, the majority of that membership representing correspondents of independent stations and regional networks throughout the country. Television-news correspondents were admitted to membership in 1947. As a result of the increased membership the number serving on the executive committee has been enlarged to have representation from correspondents representing independent radio stations, regional networks, and radiowire services.

Since their establishment, the radio galleries have been called to accredit radio correspondents to various governmental events including the three national selective-service lottery drawings, the drafting of the United Nations Charter at San Francisco, and the Presidential inaugurations at the east front of the Capitol. In 1940, both political parties recognized the radio galleries and has turned over to them the accreditation of all radio and television, correspondents to their national conventions.

The present committee of the Radio Correspondents' Gallery is combined of the following:

Elmer Davis, American Broadcasting Co., chairman; William R. McAndrew, National Broadcasting Co., vice chairman; Francis W. Tully, Jr., Washington Reporters, Inc., secretary; Willard F. Shadel, Columbia Broadcasting System, treasurer; Howard L. Kany, Associated Press Radio, member at large; George E. Reedy, the Arrowhead Network, member at large; Rex R. Goad, Transradio Press Service, member at large; Albert L. Warner, Mutual Broadcasting System, member ex officio.

The following newscasters will broadcast from the House Radio Gallery as part of the celebration of the gallery's tenth anniversary: Bill Coyle, Dave Brinkley, H. R. Baukhage, Robert McCormack, Leif Eid, Bill Shadel, Albert L. Warner, Earl Godwin, George Reedy, Elmer Davis, Gil Kingsbury, Charles Farmer, Richard Eaton, and others—between the hours of 12 noon and 7:30 p. m.

I am glad at this time to congratulate the members of the radio correspondents' gallery and to express my appreciation for their work.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. LODGE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include extraneous matter.

Mr. MICHENER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial.

Mr. HARVEY asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include an editorial.

Mr. BEALL asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an article.

Mr. SHAFER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD to include an editorial.

PAY, ALLOWANCES, AND PHYSICAL DISABILITY RETIREMENT FOR MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES

Mr. LYLE, from the Committee on Rules, reported a privileged resolution (H. Res. 223, Rept. No. 631), which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

Mr. LYLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of House Resolution 223.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 4591) to provide pay, allowances, and physical disability retirement for members of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, Public Health Service, the reserve components thereof, the National Guard, and the Air National Guard, and for other purposes. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 3 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Armed Services, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill, and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Obviously a quorum is not present.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

PAY, ALLOWANCES, AND PHYSICAL DISABILITY RETIREMENT FOR MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LYLE]?

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I understand this bill contains 101 pages and the report 118 pages, and the bill calls for something like $400,000,000.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Yes.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I object. I think the Members ought to have an opportunity to read the report.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Michigan object?

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. I do, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The question is, Will the House consider the resolution?

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio is recognized.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McSWEENEY. I yield.

AMENDING THE COMMODITY CREDIT CORPORATION CHARTER ACT—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the managers on the part of the House may have until midnight tonight to file a conference report on the bill S. 900, the Commodity Credit Corporation legislation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE]?

There was no objection.

PAY, ALLOWANCES, AND PHYSICAL DISABILITY RETIREMENT FOR MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, this resolution makes in order H. R. 4591, which is designed to raise the pay of certain officers in the armed forces of our country.

Those of us who have had an opportunity to serve in the armed forces realize that there will be many men who have devoted their lives to this service and are underpaid, and at all times subject to the lure of going out into private industry and there giving their splendid talents at a much higher compensation. Many of us know what has been done by the Army engineers, for example. Men who, like Goethals, could build the Panama Canal, as you know, would be at great premium in private industry; yet these men because of their devotion to their country, because of their love of service for their country, have stayed in the armed forces. The effort of this committee now is to try to make some adjustments, if possible in the pay levels in the armed services. So, Mr. Speaker, we are asking the membership to consider this bill on its merits. It was voted out unanimously by the committee.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McSWEENEY. I yield.

Mr. JAVITS. I have had a great many letters from men, especially enlisted men, who feel that the enlisted man has been overlooked in this bill, that in some respects, it might be to their disadvantage.

Mr. McSWEENEY. In reality there are changes and adjustments in this bill to equalize compensation for the enlisted man and to eliminate some of the inequalities that have existed in the past. I am sure that the enlisted man, especially the married enlisted man, will have a better opportunity to continue his Army life and have a better opportunity to spend time with his family in a decent manner and not have to live entirely separated from them.

Mr. JAVITS. But in the main the bill does not affect the enlisted man especially.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Not as much, possibly, as the officers.

Mr. KILDAY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McSWEENEY. I yield.

Mr. KILDAY. This bill deals with the enlisted men and officers. I think it is the first pay revision covering all grades and ranks since 1908. When we get into the merits of the bill I think it will be shown that the percentagewise increase is almost identical for both enlisted men and officers.

Mr. McSWEENEY. May I add that there has been a constant effort to encourage men to give their lives to the service; and this bill does provide, as I have stated, better conditions for the married personnel.

Mr. Speaker, I yield one-half hour to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BROWN].

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JENKINS].

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed out of order.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, the testimony given yesterday before the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy by Communist Hans Friestadt has shocked the Nation.

This young Communist is not as culpable as those who placed him in such a strategic position.

Mr. Speaker, David Lilienthal is responsible for the appointment of this, the son of an internationally known Communist.

Several years ago I was a member of the joint committee of the House and the Senate appointed to investigate the TVA, of which Lilienthal was then one of its chief executives. From several months' association with him, I think I know him. I would not have appointed him to any position in the Government requiring patriotic loyalty.

I would not have confirmed his appointment to the Atomic Energy Commission. If I were a member of the joint committee now making this investigation, I would demand his immediate resignation.

If I were the President of the United States I would accomplish his immediate separation from any connection with our atomic energy activities.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Ohio yield me 1 minute?

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California [Mr. HOLIFIELD].

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Ohio who just addressed the House is in error, because Mr. Lilienthal is not responsible for the appointment of this young man to a scholarship. The National Research Council Advisory Board is a completely separate board from Mr. Lilienthal's organization. They choose fellowships for the Rockefeller Foundation and for many other research positions; and, therefore, in this particular instance, the gentleman is not aware of his facts.

This National Research Council is a nonprofit organization composed of about 30 professors and deans from the largest colleges in the United States. They choose qualified students for fellowships for the Rockefeller Foundation, Merck & Co., RCA, American Cancer Society and the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis as well as for the Atomic Energy Commission. That is said in no way as an excuse for this young man receiving a fellowship, but the gentleman is in error in putting the blame on Mr. Lilienthal, that is not according to the facts.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. JENKINS. Does not the gentleman recognize that the press all over the country has blamed this on Mr. Lilienthal?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Does the gentleman realize that the press has made many mistakes such as stating that three-fourths of a pound of uranium is missing when it is only 4.5 grams?

Mr. JENKINS. Does the gentleman recognize the fact that Mr. Lilienthal has stepped into the responsibility and has never availed himself of the opportunity to deny it and to step out of it?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I may say to the gentleman that this matter has been taken into consideration by the House and Senate Joint Committee on Atomic Energy. I believe the gentleman should ascertain the facts before he takes the well of the House.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK].

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, if this bill is completed today, and I hope it will be, it is my intention to ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

In view of that probability, I am prompted to make a few remarks at this time, purely nonpolitical and of a commendatory nature on the House Radio Gallery and the members of that gallery, who tomorrow will celebrate the tenth anniversary of the establishment of this particular gallery, functioning under authority of the House and of the Senate, giving and transmitting to the people of the country and the world valuable news of the proceedings in the Congress and the proceedings in the various departments and agencies of our Government.

I think special mention might be made of Robert M. Menaugh, Superintendent of the House Radio Gallery, who was the prime mover in having the House establish this gallery 10 years ago tomorrow, and also the prime mover in connection with the establishment of the same gallery in the Senate of the United States.

The original membership was 26; today it is 185. The majority of that membership represents the correspondents of the independent stations and regional networks throughout the country. Television correspondents were admitted to membership in 1947.

The following newscasters will broadcast from the House Radio Gallery as part of the celebration of the gallery's tenth anniversary: Bill Coyle, Dave Brinkley, H. R. Baukhage, Robert McCormack, Leif Eid, Bill Shadel, Albert L. Warner, Earl Godwin, George Reedy, Headline Edition, Elmer Davis, Gil Kingsbury, Charles Parmer, Richard Eaton, and others, between the hours of 12 o'clock noon and 7:30 p. m.

We of the House are glad that we caused this gallery to be established 10 years ago, and we have been very happy in our association with the members of the gallery during this 10-year period. I know I speak the sentiments of my colleagues in expressing to the gallery our congratulations on its tenth anniversary and our confidence in it. We know that in the years to come the members of the radio gallery will continue to give to the people of the country the straight news as they have during the past 10 years.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I join with my distinguished friend from Massachusetts, the majority leader, in commemorating this tenth anniversary of radio broadcasting from the Nation's Capitol. As minority leader, I remember back in 1939 the early struggle of this little group to become a part of the news transmission system of our country. At that time it was a little difficult for them to secure the tiny foothold they did in this House. But they were persistent and they were happily successful. In those days I remember there were pioneers like Fulton Lewis, Albert Warner, William McAndrew, Frank Morrison and others who kept the people through the Nation informed as to what was going on in the Congress of the United States. The number now engaged in this service is 185. I can readily see, with the coming of television, that this is going to be an even mightier service than in the past. I am sure that we will all join with our broadcasters tomorrow in this anniversary which they will celebrate. We join in their commemoration of a notable event and we are sure that there is greater growth and a greater opportunity for radio ahead.

Mr. McCORMACK. I thank my friend from Massachusetts for his timely observation.

I now yield to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HALLECK].

Mr. HALLECK. I was glad to hear the majority leader mention the name of my very able and friendly and fine fellow Hoosier, Bob Menaugh, who has labored so diligently and so efficiently and so well to make the House Radio Gallery the great success that it has been. I just could not pass up this moment without adding my words of commendation for that great Hoosier, Bob Menaugh.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KEEFE].

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate the distinguished majority leader for calling attention to the fact that tomorrow marks the tenth anniversary of the founding of the House Radio Gallery under the rules of this House. I think it is important for all of us to know and understand that the radio broadcasters who are members of the House Radio Gallery, which gallery is now under the supervision of the distinguished gentleman just referred to by the gentleman from Indiana, are required, under the rules of this House, to subscribe to certain very definite regulations. With the permission of the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts, may I say that before membership is accredited to any radio broadcaster he must make application to the House Radio Gallery, and in that application sign this statement:

I am not engaged in the prosecution of claims, or the promotion of legislation pending before the Congress, the departments, or independent agencies, and I will not become so engaged without resigning from the galleries. I am not employed in any legislative or executive department or independent agency of the Government, or by any foreign government or representative thereof. I do not receive, directly or indirectly, remuneration from, nor am I engaged in, any lobby activities for nor furnish any special information to any organization, individual, or group of individuals for the influencing of prices on any commodity or stock exchange; nor will I do so during the time I retain membership in the galleries.

I think it is a remarkable and significant thing that every accredited representative in the House Radio Gallery is a man who is committed, by reason of his membership in that gallery, to the dissemination of news of real value to the people of this country. I congratulate the founder and the promoter of this House Radio Gallery upon achieving such remarkable success in the 10 years that it has been in operation.

Mr. McCORMACK. I appreciate the timely and proper remarks made by my friend from Wisconsin, and particularly the promise that each Member makes upon being admitted to membership in the House Radio Gallery. They are a great body of men and we, in the House, can well be proud of the fine character of service that they render to the public. We may disagree with them at times, but that is their right. They are all honorable men living up to the tradition of their profession to the highest extent humanly possible.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HALLECK].

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed out of order.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, earlier this week the House was scheduled to consider H. R. 782, a bill which would reorganize the Federal Security Agency into a Department of Welfare. Action on the measure was postponed, presumably because of passage in the Senate of the basic Federal Reorganization Act. From this I assume that at least certain parts of the Welfare Department bill will be the object of reorganization plans which will be submitted to the House later.

I must vigorously insist that the recommendations of the Hoover Commission on Reorganization of the Government be given immediate consideration and action.

A great work has been done by the Hoover Commission. The splendid accomplishments of the Commission must not be wasted. The interests of the taxpayers and all the citizens of the Nation must not be sacrificed by the failure of Congress to act on the various proposals.

Now to get back to this welfare bill which has been sidetracked. There may be other reasons for laying it aside. Because this bill H. R. 782 flies right in the face of Hoover Commission recommendations.

The Hoover Commission proposes that matters pertaining to education, social security, and social insurance be consolidated into a new Department of Welfare. And then the Hoover Commission recommends that public health, medical care, and medical research shall also be consolidated and established in an independent agency to be known as the United Medical Administration.

The Hoover Commission does not want public health, medical care and medical research in the new Department of Welfare as is proposed in H. R. 782. In its report the Commission gives sufficient and compelling reasons for insisting that the vital matters of health and medical research not be engulfed in a Welfare Department.

In order that the common-sense recommendations of the Hoover Commission be followed, and in contemplation of action on H. R. 782, I have prepared amendments to the bill which will set up an independent agency in the Executive Branch of the Government to be known as the United Medical Administration. I attach them hereto.

The purpose of these amendments is to bring squarely before the Executive Branch of the Government, the Congress and the people, the specific recommendations of the Hoover Commission—made for the good of the Nation—that an entirely separate and independent agency be created for health matters.

The Hoover Commission was set up and did its fine job with the backing of not only the Government but all the people. The Commission was composed of high-minded, conscientious persons with a singleness of purpose—to better the functions of government.

The recommendations of the Commission must not be lightly cast aside because of the notions or whims of some bureaucrats who do not like the reorganization proposals.

I shall insist with every force at my command that the recommendations of the Hoover Commission be carried out.

My amendments to H. R. 782 will fulfill the Commission's recommendations and will set up a health administration which can function efficiently for the good of all and not be hamstrung by being under the jurisdiction of a welfare secretary and buried in a maze of other unrelated departments.

Amendment to section 1 of H. R. 782: Page 2, line 4, strike out "health."

Amendment to section 3 of H. R. 782:

Page 3, in line 1, strike out "SEC. 3. All" and insert in lieu thereof "SEC. 3. (a) Except as provided in subsection (b), all"; and after line 12 insert the following subsection:

"(b) (1) There is hereby established, as an independent agency in the executive branch, the United Medical Administration, at the head of which shall be the Administrator of the United Medical Administration, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall receive compensation at the rate of $———— per annum.

"(2) All powers, functions, and duties of the Federal Security Administrator, of the Federal Security Agency, and of all officers and constituent units of the Federal Security Agency, with respect to medical care, public health, and medical research shall be vested in and exercised by the Administrator of the United Medical Administration.

"(3) The records, property, and personnel relating primarily to the powers, functions, and duties transferred under paragraph (2) of this subsection shall be transferred, and the funds relating primarily to such powers, functions, and duties shall be transferred or otherwise made available, to the United Medical Administration for carrying out such powers, functions, and duties. Such measures and dispositions as may be determined by the Director of the Bureau of the Budget to be necessary to effectuate the provisions of this paragraph shall be carried out in such manner as such Director may determine.

"(4) Any rule, regulation, order, or other action prescribed or taken in the exercise of any power, function, or duty transferred under paragraph (2) of this subsection, and in effect at the time of such transfer, shall continue in effect after such transfer, according to its terms, unless amended or revoked under proper authority."

Amendment to the committee amendment on page 3 of H. R. 782: Page 3, beginning with line 24, strike out down through line 3 on page 4, and insert in lieu thereof the following: ", and the provisions of subsection (b) (1) of section 3, shall take effect upon the date of the enactment of this act. The remaining provisions of this act shall take effect on the day after the day upon which the Secretary of Welfare first appointed takes office, except that the provisions of subsection (b) (2), (3), and (4) of section 3 shall take effect on the day after the day upon which the Administrator of the United Medical Administration first appointed takes office. If such Secretary takes office prior to the date on which such Administrator takes office, the powers, functions, and duties referred to in subsection (b) (2) of section 3 shall be exercised by such Secretary after the day on which such Secretary takes office and until such powers, functions, and duties are vested in such Administrator pursuant to the provisions of this act."

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE].

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I was astounded to hear the distinguished majority leader state that this bill might be passed today. The report and the bill are each over 100 pages. My own feeling is that if some Members of the House want to write finis to their political careers, they should vote for this bill on a couple hours' consideration and then vote against some of the other bills that are coming along which have a great deal more significance to the average man. It seems to me inconceivable that the administration leadership would want to take the responsibility of trying to carry this bill through, starting on it at midafternoon, a bill that involves as many revisions of existing law as this does. Fifty pages of the report deal with changes in existing pay laws. If the Members want to do it, that is their responsibility, but they ought to know what they are doing.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. McCORMACK. I think the gentleman, who is always fair, misinterpreted my remarks, or the intent of them. Nobody is trying to drive anything through. I simply said that if this bill is completed today, and that is in the wisdom of the Committee of the Whole, I expect to ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I certainly did not want to misinterpret the remarks of the distinguished majority leader, but I do think the House should be on notice as to the possible implications of hasty action on a bill of this character.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is a different proposition from what I said.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 10 minutes and ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, this resolution would make in order the consideration of H. R. 4591, a bill introduced by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILDAY], to provide pay, allowances, and physical disability retirement for members of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, Public Health Service, the Reserve components thereof, the National Guard, and the Air National Guard; and to also provide for the carrying out of several other purposes.

The rule provides for general debate of not more than 3 hours on this very important measure.

If I may, I wish to take just a few minutes of your time to discuss what, in my opinion, is one of the most important measures this House will be called upon to consider at this session of Congress.

In the discussion on this measure I want to be absolutely fair, but I believe it is of great import to the Nation and to every individual Member of the Congress that we should know exactly what the bill provides and what it contains. I will not attempt to explain the entire measure to you, but only to touch upon a few of the high lights. However, I hope you will listen to the general debate as it is conducted on the bill, and to the different members of the powerful Committee on Armed Services who will undoubtedly explain the measure in detail.

In the beginning, let me say this bill was reported from the Committee on Armed Services by a unanimous vote. Whenever the chairman of the Committee on Armed Services, the distinguished gentleman from Georgia, and one of the ablest men in the House, and the ranking member of the Committee on Armed Services, the distinguished gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHORT] agree on a legislative bill, it is usually reported out of the Armed Services Committee by a heavy majority, at least. I have the highest respect and the highest regard for both of these gentlemen, as well as for the author of the legislation, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILDAY], and for every other member of the Committee on Armed Services. Yet we all must finally pass upon their legislative handiwork.

I want the membership of the House to understand that the passage of this bill will require an annual expenditure, over and above present expenditures, of about $360,000,000 per year. It is true, however, as will be explained to you by the proponents of the bill, that some $400,000,000 is provided in the present military budget for the carrying out of any pay-increase legislation which may be enacted by this Congress. It is also true, as I am sure the author or the proponents of this bill will point out, that the net cost or increased cost of this legislation to the country will not in the end be the full $360,000,000 as originally estimated, but a somewhat lesser amount, because, over a period of time, or because of provisions in this bill, there will be a reduction in some of the retirement-pay costs.

I also think each Member should know that this bill applies primarily to increasing pay for the officers of the armed services, and that while this bill does, as has been stated on the floor, give some benefits to the enlisted men, such benefits are indeed very small. In some instances, there is no pay increase whatsoever for enlisted men. I point to the fact that the increase provided in this legislation for the recruit is absolutely nothing. For the private, the increase in pay is 3.3 percent, or $2.50 a month, while the increase for instance, for a brigadier general, and this is the other extreme—is 49.58 percent, or in money, $353 per month. I also want to call to your attention that the pay schedules as outlined in the legislation does not tell a complete story—although I am certainly not charging this committee with attempting to mislead anyone.

It must be remembered, in considering pay legislation for officers in the armed services, that the base pay is not everything; that in addition to the base pay, as has been outlined in this bill and in the committee report, the officers of our armed services receive other benefits. They receive allowances for sustenance and for housing, and in many instances housing is furnished to them. I am sure most of you have seen some of the homes occupied by our higher officers in the armed services. They are nice homes. Usually along with these homes go a little help about the house; perhaps a gardener for the flower or vegetable garden, a nice automobile and chauffeur in uniform to take the officer or his lady here and there; and every now and then an airplane, according to rank, to take the officers wherever they want to go, not always on military duty, but too often on private pleasure jaunts as well.

I would like to point out that each of the officers affected by this legislation receives all of medical attention and hospitalization free. Each also has the opportunity and benefit of purchasing his needs and those of his family, and sometimes of his friends, at post exchanges, at about cost, and sometimes at less than the same products would cost the retailer in your community at wholesale. The items which can be purchased by those officers at post exchanges are not limited by any means to military necessities, but include everything in the way of commodities, from television sets up or down. About everything we can buy in civilian life can be purchased at special prices from post exchanges by the officers who come under this pay schedule.

I would also like to point out, if I may, so you may have the complete picture before you, because you have to make the decision as to what you want to do about this legislation, that this bill does change, and I think very much for the better, the present retirement system, the method of retirement, and the amount of retirement pay which officers can receive in the future. Of course, it does not affect any of the thousands of officers who are now enjoying retirement pay, quite a number of whom are also receiving rather heavy remuneration from private industry, in spite of the fact they were retired for complete disability for which they now receive 75 percent of their base pay. I also call attention to the fact that under the provisions of this bill and the present law all of the retirement pay of officers formerly in the armed services is granted without any contribution whatsoever on their part. Under our Social Security System set up for the common man, the ordinary worker, he, along with his employer, must contribute some of each pay to his retirement benefit fund. Those under civil service must contribute to the fund from which benefits are paid to them when they retire. Members of Congress, who come under a retirement plan must, of course, pay the cost of their own retirement benefits, with a slight contribution only from the Federal Government for administrative purposes. The same system pertains to almost every other public servant, Federal, State, and local, with the exception of judicial officers. So when you look at the pay schedule in this bill it cannot be considered exactly the same as other pay schedules would be considered.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BROWN] has expired.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself five additional minutes.

Instead, you must take into consideration the fact that these officers do receive many other perquisites, many other benefits, in addition to their actual pay as outlined in this bill.

It is true that the military budget does contain an item of $400,000,000 to take care of the pay increase and benefits provided in this legislation, if enacted into law. But of course that $400,000,000 has not yet been spent. It is a question you have to decide for yourselves, whether or not, by the enactment of this legislation, you want the Federal Government to obligate itself to pay—and I am sure it will never get any less than this amount—an additional $360,000,000 a year to the officers of the armed services as compensation, less whatever can be saved as a result of the changes in the retirement provisions of the present law. I wish to be fair to these officers in our armed services, by saying to you, as the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MCSWEENEY] pointed out so very ably, that there is no question but that many of these officers can earn a great deal more money in private life.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. In just a minute.

However, I am not certain we can always properly compensate the best officials we have in the Government service, whether they be in the military or the civil branch. I doubt we can fix any rule by which each can be paid what he fairly earns. We can attempt to decide only what the average man is worth for a certain sort of service. I have acquaintance with a great many officers. I know colonels who served in the recent war whom I think were terribly underpaid. They could have made five or ten times as much in private life. Then, too, I know a colonel or so who served in the war who are now very happy to work in private employment for about one-half or one-third what they received in the armed services, and they are now being paid every dime they are worth. So we cannot legislate for the best or the poorest. We can only endeavor to fix a fair compensation for the average officer, taking into consideration all of the perquisites, all of the benefits, each will enjoy.

Another great question before us is, Can we proceed to increase heavily the pay of the officers of the armed services and not give further consideration to the pay of our enlisted men, greater consideration than is contained in this bill? To be fair to the committee, I wish to point out that in previous Congresses we did raise the pay of the enlisted men and of the noncommissioned officers in the armed services.

So I wish to caution you again, and to suggest with all the sincerity at my command, that this is a piece of legislation you had better look over twice. Be certain you understand it and know what you are doing before you vote. It is a very complex bill, of 101 pages. It is hard to understand. I doubt if there are many Members here, except those on the Committee on Armed Services, who understand the bill completely. Perhaps it will be charged a little later that even I do not understand it; but I sincerely believe every word I said is absolutely true, and if you will study the bill you will find it so.

I now yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH].

Mr. RICH. The gentleman mentioned the grade of brigadier general, where the salary was increased $362.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Three hundred and fifty-three dollars.

Mr. RICH. That is an increase over and above what they are getting now per month?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Yes; that raises their compensation from $712 per month to $1,055 per month.

Mr. RICH. Did the Committee on Armed Services make any recommendation in connection with this increase, which will cost the country $360,000,000, where we are going to get the money?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Yes; as I have attempted to say, that is included in the present budget. Whether we can meet that budget without additional finances or raising taxes I cannot tell. Certainly, I know what the gentleman has in mind, and I will agree with him that unless we soon call a halt on this continuous spending, on the continuous increase in the budget, and the ever-growing cost of government, that this Nation of ours is headed into serious trouble—trouble from which we may not survive.

Mr. RICH. We are headed for bankruptcy unless we treat it differently than we are doing.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILDAY], the author of the bill.

Mr. KILDAY. Mr. Speaker, we are now, of course, engaged in the consideration of the rule to determine whether we will take up this bill and consider it on its merits.

I listened with a great deal of interest to my good friend, the gentleman from Ohio. I am not going to say, as he predicted, that he does not understand the bill. I am forced to say that he has apparently misread the bill in the principal point which he makes. The increase to which he referred of something over $300 in one rank is not an increase in basic pay. It is an over-all increase in pay and the allowances. In other words, it is the total.

I know there are a great many who labor under the impression that in military compensation there are some hidden elements. This bill is so drawn, and the report is such that you can understand very definitely the over-all compensation of an officer. I am sure we were all impressed with Gen. Lucius Clay when he appeared here day before yesterday. I asked the members of the Rules Committee if they had any idea what we pay General Clay. I think they were quite surprised to learn what his total compensation is. His base pay is $8,800 a year, his money allowance is $2,200 a year, and when you take his quarters allowance and his rations allowance, his total over-all pay is $12,449 a year. We pay some of the employees of the House and even employees of the individual Members of the other body practically that amount of money.

These pay scales were not recommended by military men. They were recommended by a commission of businessmen and the head of Notre Dame University who was on that commission. They have recommended here a pay scale which is comparable to the pay in private industry.

Here is another thing we do in this bill. I do not believe that you think a major general ought to get $4,400 a year for flying. But that is what he is getting now. Under this bill we cut him down to $1,200 a year.

At the present time every officer retired for physical disability draws 75 percent of his base pay for life. He is never reexamined. We could afford to do that when we had only 16,000 officers in the service, but we certainly cannot afford to do that when there are over 100,000 officers in the service. This bill revises that physical disability retirement. Each officer is going to be retired on a percentage of disability according to the rates of the Veterans Administration. He is going to be subject to reexamination for a period of 5 years.

We are paying now $314,000,000 a year to enlisted members of the armed forces not on the basis of the responsibility they have nor the service they perform but on the basis of how many children they have. Of course, that was necessary when we were drafting men into the service and taking them regardless of whether or not they had families. But we cannot afford to continue such a method of compensation here. A man with four or five children who is a private and driving a truck draws as much as $200 a month. That is unconscionable and we have put a stop to that in this bill.

When we get to the merits of this matter, I am not going to ask anybody to vote for this bill if we cannot convince them that it is what should be done for the armed services and in the interest of the economy of our country. We have here very definitely revised the scales of disability retirement and pay, doing away with family allowance and things of that kind which in years to come will result in the savings of many millions of dollars. The physical disability retirement provision in the event of another mobilization would save us millions and millions of dollars.

We have 32,000 officers now certified to the Veterans' Administration because of disabilities incurred during the last war. They are drawing 75 percent. But we cannot go on with an officer corps of over 100,000 and keep building up things of that kind.

Mr. COLE of New York. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KILDAY. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. COLE of New York. I suggest that the gentleman at this point indicate to the Members of the House that the net eventual cost of this bill is between 8 and 10 percent over what the same phase of our military costs are today.

Mr. KILDAY. That is correct. The net increase is about 8 percent.

Mr. KUNKEL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KILDAY. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. KUNKEL. Can the gentleman give us any definite estimate of the amount which will be saved by these provisions which are inserted in the bill and to which the gentleman has just referred?

Mr. KILDAY. We will save, in fiscal 1950, $191,000,000 on family allowances alone. I am not able to say what the physical disability is going to be because we have no way of determining it. We do not know how many are going to qualify for physical disability retirement.

Mr. KUNKEL. Where does the net cost of $353,000,000 come from which was referred to by the gentleman from Ohio? Is that taking into account a saving of $191,000,000 and other savings to which the gentleman referred?

Mr. KILDAY. The figure is $360,000,000, with the bill becoming effective on the first day of October.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KILDAY. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Of course, I think the gentleman from Texas will agee, for the benefit and knowledge of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, that I said the over-all cost of this bill would be $360,000,000 a year, against which credit should be taken for the amount of savings which the gentleman's committee has outlined.

Mr. KILDAY. That is the net figure, $360,000,000. Since the first of the year your military personnel have not had a tax exemption to which they were entitled during the war, so they have now suffered a net reduction in take-home pay. But, it is estimated that in fiscal 1950, with the recapture that is now being withheld from their pay, it will be approximately $200,000,000. That is not figured in arriving at the figure of $360,000,000.

Mr. KUNKEL. Is the $191,000,000 deductible from the $360,000,000?

Mr. KILDAY. No; it is not.

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KILDAY. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. In addition to family allowances savings, we have a saving in foreign-duty pay of $77,000,000 and flight and submarine pay of $13,000,000, making a total of $281,000,000. The gentleman also said that while the men in the service have not been tax-exempt since the first of this year, on the basis of the new pay bill the tax that they will have to pay will be about $200,000,000 more than what they paid in 1948.

Mr. KILDAY. That is correct.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KILDAY. I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. If I understood the gentleman correctly, in response to the gentleman from New York, the gentleman from Texas indicated that the net effect of this bill in pay would be an increase of about 8 or 10 percent over the pay component of present appropriations for the armed services; is that correct?

Mr. KILDAY. That is the net after you take into consideration the income tax which is paid and the revision of hazard-duty pay, and things of that kind. It comes out about 8 percent.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. If the total cost of this bill is $400,000,000 for fiscal 1951, then 10 times that would be what, about 4 billion?

Mr. KILDAY. $4,600,000,000.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Does that mean that the gentleman contemplates that the size of the Army and the Navy and the Air Force will remain at about the present level?

Mr. KILDAY. That is going to be up to the gentleman's committee. He is on the Committee on Appropriations, and that strength is going to be determined by the funds made available through appropriations. But, I think you will find at the present time the pay of the service is probably a little less than 4 billion, but it is up there in the bigger brackets all right.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. The gentleman also spoke of these allowances. In the letter from the Director of the Bureau of the Budget dated May 11, a week ago, I note there the comment of the Director is that if this were to be brought in conformity with the President's program, that there should be some revision in the matter of these allowances, for he points out that the bill perpetuates an unsound concept with respect to personal money allowances.

Mr. KILDAY. The difficulty is that the Director of the Budget from the beginning has attempted to write this bill. I do not think the Director of the Budget has been in any wise too pleased at the report of the Hook Commission, and the Committee on Armed Services did not see matters as they saw them.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. The committee did not permit it to conform to the Budget's suggestions?

Mr. KILDAY. Not in that respect.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KILDAY. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I think the gentleman from Texas will agree with me as to what I said to the effect that this is a very important piece of legislation. I attempted to give both sides of the argument as we heard it in the Committee on Rules, so that the Members of the House would have some knowledge of what is in this bill and how important it is to consider it fully, and to listen to the debate. The gentleman from Texas has no objection to that statement, has he?

Mr. KILDAY. No. I have not had the opportunity to explain this bill to a man yet who remained opposed to it after he understood what we are doing in this bill. I am sure the gentleman from Ohio, if he will do as he is urging others to do, stay here and listen to the consideration of this bill, will be for it.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. If I cannot understand this bill after the gentleman explained it before the Committee on Rules, I doubt that I ever will, because he made a very clear explanation and has not refuted any of the statements made.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH].

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I confess that I have had a very, very keen interest in this problem for many, many years. It is not important and probably is not interesting, but in 1922 I happened to be the chairman of a joint congressional committee which revised the pay schedules of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Public Health Service, and the Coast and Geodetic Survey. I learned at that time that this is a most intricate problem. We did our best in 1922, following the end of World War I, to solve the problem. We did make some progress, yet it was apparent to me at the time that we had not entirely succeeded. In fact, there were one or two elements in that bill in 1922 to which I objected personally, but with respect to which I was overruled. One of those elements was the family allowance and dependency allowance feature. I am glad to know that the Committee on Armed Services has taken cognizance of that particular phase of this problem, and important steps have been taken in this bill to greatly improve it, if not entirely correct an error which I think was committed years ago for the first time in 1922.

It is not my purpose nor have I the time to engage in a discussion of the details of this bill. The thing that concerns me most with respect to the future of our military services is, how are we going to get able young men to go into them and make them their careers?

We all admit that the men of very high rank today in the Army, Navy, and Air Force are exceedingly able men. Certainly they have distinguished themselves to an extraordinary degree in the last 10 years. So did the youngsters within their service spheres during the late war. But now with the war 4 years or more behind us, how is the officer personnel to be recruited for the future? I confess I have been greatly disturbed about this, especially when I read the figures presented in the committee's report with respect to the acceptance of commissions in the Regular service by youngsters who have graduated from what we call the ROTC college courses.

You will recollect that for many years both the Army and the Navy, and more recently the Air Force, in accordance with statutes passed by the Congress, have maintained courses in our colleges and universities called the ROTC. Some of them have a different name, but the objective of all of them is the same. From those graduates, those youngsters, we, of course, expect to get the great majority of our Reserve officers for the future. But when we remember that neither West Point nor Annapolis can graduate enough men to meet the commissioned personnel requirements of the Army, the Air Force, or the Navy, it is apparent that we must rely upon the best of these ROTC graduates to select a military career as their life's career. We are failing desperately in this respect—desperately. Let me remind you, for example, with respect to the Army, that when a class graduates from an ROTC course all those graduates are entitled to commissions in the Reserve forces. But the most distinguished amongst them are picked out and are offered commissions in the Regular forces. For example, in 1948, 899 distinguished graduates were designated for commissions. In other words, they were offered commissions. Only 110 accepted. That looks pretty bad. But, in 1949, out of 1,003 men who have been designated, only 7 have accepted thus far. Why do they not come in? They cannot afford to—or they think they cannot. The service does not present to them an attractive future, or at least sufficiently attractive to entice them into the Regular Army or Air Force. I think every Member here will recognize that that is an exceedingly serious situation, because it is today that we must get the officers of tomorrow. The chap who starts in as a second lieutenant or an ensign is the man who, if he proceeds upward by the process of selection, becomes the general or admiral 25 years from now. We must have good men coming up.

Consider the case of the Navy. The Naval Academy cannot produce enough graduates annually to fill the needs of the Navy and the Navy has resorted, of course, to the same procedure or approximately the same procedure as the Army, through its Naval ROTC courses and of picking out the best-equipped men and offering them commissions.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I yield.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Of course, most of these ROTC boys that the gentleman has mentioned come into the Army as second lieutenants.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Yes.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I note that under the provisions of this bill the second lieutenant's pay is increased from $180 per month to $225 per month.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Yes; but that is not the end of it.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I know. He gets better pay as he goes up.

Mr. WADSWORTH. He has a much better future ahead of him.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. But, I wonder if you would not get more second lieutenants and more men coming in from the ROTC if the starting pay was made just a little bit better.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I am not concerned with exactly what the pay should be. What I am interested in or concerned about is the prospect of the future for the boy and not what he is going to get as a second lieutenant or an ensign. They may be able to stand that for a while. Perhaps the pay under this bill is sufficient for the responsibilities that he carries as second lieutenant or ensign, but what I am concerned about is whether the young man is going to be encouraged to come in in the first instance and decide that he is going to climb the ladder step by step by his own good work. He will not do that unless the prospects for his future are good.

Now, what is happening in Annapolis? To me it is exceedingly disturbing. The total number of resignations from the Naval Academy graduates has reached 643 since 1946, as contrasted with only 62 such resignations between the years 1937 and 1940. Ten times as many Annapolis graduates are resigning from the Navy as were resigning before the war. There is a reason for it. This, to my mind, is the most important problem that the Congress has to face—the problem of where to get the officers of the future. I have examined this report to the best of my ability. I examined it in great detail and have read it over a couple of times. In my humble judgment, this legislation, if passed, might properly be called economy legislation. You will get your money's worth. If only second- or third-class men are content to stay in the service, you will not get your money's worth because, after all, these youngsters must be the leaders of the future. They may grow up, and will grow up, if crises arise, to the stature of the men who led us in this last war. It is an important thing.

Personally, I am in favor of the enactment of this bill, in the interest of the country and in the interest of actual military economy.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I yield.

Mr. RICH. With reference to these boys who enter Annapolis, I have never appointed a boy to Annapolis that I did not ask whether he wanted to make that his life's work. Unless he gave me his word that he would do that, I did not appoint him because it costs the Government $24,000 or $25,000 to educate him. They get the value and the benefit of that education, and when they receive that appointment they are supposed to remain in the service and work for Uncle Sam, regardless of whether this bill goes through or not. I think the Members of Congress, in selecting boys to go to Annapolis or West Point, ought to assume that responsibility and obligation.

Mr. WADSWORTH. The statement of the gentleman from Pennsylvania does not disturb the fact which I have recited.

Mr. RICH. It might if Members of Congress would make that request.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] has expired.

WHY RAISE GENERAL'S PAY?

Mr. TOWE. Mr. Speaker, the question has been asked, "Why raise generals' pay if it is outstanding second lieutenants you want to attract to the service?" It is an important point and merits careful consideration. The man of promise, the man with future potentialities as a leader, is obviously a thinking man. He ordinarily is not attracted by some short-lived monetary reward. He is attracted by long-range opportunities. The distinguished college graduate who declines a regular commission does so not so much because of the low pay of the second lieutenant but because he feels that the rewards after 20, 30, or 40 years of successful service are too small compared to the rewards which equal success in business or the professions would give.

He looks at the men who commanded our armies and fleets in this last war—the outstanding military leaders of our time—and he says to himself, "Those are the most successful men in the Army, Navy, and Air Force. Only a small handful could achieve their positions. Yet their pay is now just about what it was two generations ago. The service is no place for me."

Is it absolutely necessary to raise generals' and admirals' pay to retain those we now have? Probably not. The generals and admirals would undoubtedly stay because they have already earned retirement benefits. But refusal to grant adequate increases to the top successful grades now would have devastating effect on future leadership. What young man of promise would be interested in a military career if we did that. If this country refused now to recognize the leadership that brought us victory in this last war, what could the potential young officer expect in the future. This bill is aptly called the Career Compensation Act of 1949. The type of men we want to command our sons in battle are the type who are attracted by a career. Adequate pay for colonels and generals now is important because it cannot help but aid in attracting outstanding young men in accepting appointments as second lieutenants.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to a man who served both as a private and came out with the rank of lieutenant colonel, the distinguished gentleman from Ohio [Mr. YOUNG].

Mr. YOUNG. Mr. Speaker, it is my intention to support this rule so that this proposal may be fully debated. Unless this bill is amended and unless I am convinced of the necessity for its passage at this time and that its provisions are absolutely fair to the enlisted men, I will vote against it.

First, may I thank the distinguished gentleman from Ohio [Mr. McSWEENEY], who served in combat in both World Wars, for the very kindly personal reference he made to me. It is a fact that I served in the Field Artillery in World War I, the same as President Truman, except there was this difference: He was a captain and I was a private. It also happens that I served for 37 months in World War II as an officer. I regard our armed services as offering fine opportunities to our young men. I dislike to have the dollar sign affixed to any young men who start on their career as Army, Navy, Marine, or Air Force officers. I am sure that the young men we Congressmen appoint to the service academies are motivated not by dollars, not by desire for financial gain, but by an earnest desire to dedicate their lives to the welfare of their country and the defense of their country, making a career in the service they love. Those of us who are not privileged to be members of the Armed Services Committee may be somewhat confused by what we hear today on the floor. It appears to me, in view of the tremendous importance of this bill, that all of us should remain here throughout the debate and listen intently to all that is said upon this extremely technical bill of more than 100 pages, and on this measure that will cost the taxpayers of our country somewhere around $400,000,000 per year if it should be enacted into law in its present form.

We talk about the weather in Washington and the humidity. Nothing is done about it. We talk about reducing appropriations and economy in Government. Nothing much is done about that. Economy in Government, like economy anywhere else, means going without something you would like to have but for which there is not an absolute need.

At this time is there an absolute need for this legislation involving millions of dollars additional expenditures?

Furthermore, who is there who can say with assurance that the dollar will not be worth much more and buy much more in a few years from now? Once salaries and allowances are increased, who is there who can say with assurance that they will ever be reduced?

In this bill subsistence allowances and quarters allowances for officers are increased; and in many instances, if not all, retirement pay benefits are increased. These increases are tremendous when one considers the increase of base pay and the increase in subsistence and quarters allowances. For example: The base pay and allowance of a major is increased from $275 minimum to $405 minimum per month; and from that minimum it goes to $540. The present base pay of a colonel is $360 to $550 per month. This bill proposes to increase this from $600 to $735 each month plus quarters and plus subsistence allowances. So it is that the increases are proposed all along the line for commissioned officers, but no increases whatever are proposed for the "rookie" or recruit. Bear in mind, please, that those officers serving in our armed forces, the young men we send to the service academies, those who dedicate their lives to the service of their country have no worries whatever regarding a slack season in industry, regarding layoffs or business failures. They enjoy absolute security and continuity in highly honorable employment in positions where they are respected and admired by their fellow Americans.

Mr. Speaker, every citizen should charge himself with the obligation and responsibility of waging a vigorous campaign to reduce Government costs. The menace of Federal waste, excessive Government spending and extravagance is here; it is evident. Congressmen who work hard scrutinizing appropriation bills, scrutinizing bills of this character, who listen intently to the debate pro and con throughout the 4 hours and more on this bill, and who oppose all questionable and unnecessary spending are performing a real and a needful public service helping that too often forgotten man—the taxpayer.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CHURCH].

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, it is becoming increasingly clear to the American people that what the President termed a "red herring" is a grave Red menace. Every day there comes to light some new Communist activity, all of which demonstrates how far-reaching and how dangerous this movement is to our national security and our freedom.

Today's edition of the Washington Times-Herald contains the following stories: "Commie student, pet of AEC, doubtful of his loyalty to United States"; "Berlin trucks halted in new Red blockade"; "Pole tries to force debate over Eisler"; "Commies tighten Shanghai ring"; "Quill condemns Commie bid to seize control of air lines"; "Uranium loss still mystery as probers delve"; "Red oath tiff ejects ALP head"; "FBI man comes to court from Commie meeting"; and "CIO heads seek ouster of leftist union's charter."

The liberty-loving American people are disturbed, Mr. Speaker. They demand that our Government deal effectively and firmly with this threat within our borders. Instead the administration officials continue to coddle, even aid and defend, Communists.

I refer to the case of Hans Friestadt, beneficiary of a $1,600 Atomic Energy Commission graduate fellowship at the University of North Carolina. He admits he is a Communist. But the Chairman of the Commission defends his right to the fellowship.

Mr. Speaker, I call upon the President of the United States to cause this Government fellowship to be promptly terminated and to take such action as will cause all such practices of the executive branch of helping Communists to be stopped. I call upon the President to insist that the officials of his administration deal firmly with this growing menace.

In trying to defend their action in awarding a graduate fellowship to a Communist, the Atomic Energy Commission emphasizes the ability and scholarship of Hans Friestadt. That is a mere cloak. This is what Dr. Henry Smyth, chairman of the physics department at Princeton University and author of the famous report on the atom bomb, said:

I feel that membership in the Communist Party indicates, at best, a fuzziness of mind, a lack of mental maturity, and, at worst, a loyalty to another government.

Mr. Speaker, it would be reassuring to the people of the United States if the President would take affirmative action in this case.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently no quorum is present.

Mr. PRIEST. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

PAY, ALLOWANCES, AND PHYSICAL DISABILITY RETIREMENT FOR MEMBERS OF THE ARMED SERVICES

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

HOUR OF MEETING TOMORROW

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock tomorrow.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. BUCKLEY of Illinois asked and was granted permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. PHILBIN asked and was granted permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include two or three newspaper articles.

MINIMUM-WAGE LEGISLATION

Mr. COMBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. COMBS. Mr. Speaker, today I introduced a bill for the amendment of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, the minimum-wage law. I obtained recognition to ask unanimous consent that a copy of the bill be printed in the RECORD and to make a brief explanation of the bill itself.

It would provide:

First. A 75-cent minimum wage adjustable downward to meet emergency conditions such as a depression.

Second. The coverage would be limited to industries and businesses engaged in interstate commerce; in that connection it defines interstate commerce in the terms of the Constitution as being "commerce among the several States." This and certain other amendments of the existing law would have the effect of exempting from the minimum wage-and-hour law all purely local and intrastate industries and businesses, including such service institutions as laundries, pressing establishments, cafes, retail establishments, and farming operations.

Third. The bill would specifically exempt certain industries and segments of industries engaged in interstate commerce, but which because of the nature of their operation and the local conditions they cannot successfully operate under a high minimum wage.

H. R. 4782

A bill to provide for the amendment of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, and for other purposes

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "Fair Labor Standards Amendments of 1949."

SEC. 2. The Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, as amended (29 U. S. C. 201-219), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SHORT TITLE

"SECTION 1. This act may be cited as the 'Fair Labor Standards Act of 1949'.

"FINDING AND DECLARATION OF POLICY

"SEC. 2. (a) The Congress hereby finds that the existence, in industries engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce, of labor conditions detrimental to the maintenance of the minimum standard of living necessary for health, efficiency, and general well-being of workers (1) causes commerce and the channels and instrumentalities of commerce to be used to spread and perpetuate such labor conditions among the workers of the several States; (2) burdens commerce and the free flow of goods in commerce; (3) constitutes an unfair method of competition in commerce; (4) leads to labor disputes burdening and obstructing commerce and the free flow of goods in commerce; and (5) interferes with the orderly and fair marketing of goods in commerce.

"(b) It is hereby declared to be the policy of this act, through the exercise by Congress of its power to regulate commerce among the several States to correct and as rapidly as practicable to eliminate the conditions above referred to in such industries without substantially curtailing employment or earning power.

"DEFINITIONS

"SEC. 3. As used in this act—

"(a) 'Person' means an individual, partnership, association, corporation, business trust, legal representative, or any organized group of persons.

"(b) 'Commerce' means trade, commerce, transportation, transmission, or communication among the several States or from any State to any place outside thereof.

"(c) 'State' means any State of the United States or the District of Columbia or any Territory or possession of the United States.

"(d) 'Employer' includes any person acting directly or indirectly in the interest of an employer in relation to an employee but shall not include the United States or any State or political subdivision of a State, or any labor organization (other than when acting as an employer), or anyone acting in the capacity of officer or agent of such labor organization.

"(e) 'Employee' includes any individual employed by an employer.

"(f) 'Agriculture' includes (1) farming in all its branches and among other things includes the cultivation and tillage of the soil, dairying, the production, cultivation, growing, and harvesting of any agricultural or horticultural commodities (including commodities defined as agricultural commodities in section 15 (g) of the Agricultural Marketing Act, as amended), the raising of livestock, bees, fur-bearing animals, or poultry, and any practices (including any forestry, or lumbering operations) performed by a farmer or on a farm as an incident to or in conjunction with such farming operations, including preparation for market, delivery to storage or to market or to carriers for transportation to market; and (2) forestry in all its branches and among other things includes planting, tending, cruising, surveying, and felling trees, preparing logs, and other forestry products for market, delivering logs and other forestry products to storage or to market or to carriers for transportation to market, and all other processing of forestry products prior to the processing thereof in and about a sawmill or similar facility.

"(g) 'Employ' includes to suffer or permit to work.

"(h) 'Industry' means a trade, business, industry, or branch thereof, or group of industries, in which individuals are gainfully employed.

"(i) 'Goods' means goods (including ships and marine equipment), wares, products, commodities, merchandise, or articles or subjects of commerce of any character, or any part or ingredient thereof, but does not include goods after their delivery into the actual physical possession of the ultimate consumer thereof other than a producer, manufacturer, or processor thereof.

"(j) 'Produced' means actually produced, manufactured, mined, handled, or in some other manner actually worked on in any State. For the purposes of this act an employee shall not be deemed to have been engaged in the production of goods unless such employee was employed in actually producing, manufacturing, mining, handling, transporting, or in some other manner actually working on such goods in any State.

"(k) 'Sale' or 'sell' includes any sale, exchange, contract to sell, consignment for sale, shipment for sale, or other disposition.

"(l) 'Oppressive child labor' means a condition of employment under which (1) any employee under the age of 16 years is employed by an employer (other than a parent or a person standing in place of a parent employing his own child or a child in his custody under the age of 16 years in an occupation other than manufacturing or mining or an occupation found by the Secretary to be particularly hazardous for the employment of children between the ages of 16 and 18 years or detrimental to their health or well-being) in any occupation, or (2) any employee between the ages of 16 and 18 years is employed by an employer in any occupation which the Secretary shall find and by order declare to be particularly hazardous for the employment of children between such ages or detrimental to their health or well-being; but oppressive child labor shall not be deemed to exist by virtue of the employment in any occupation of any person with respect to whom the employer shall have on file an unexpired certificate issued and held pursuant to regulations of the Secretary certifying that such person is above the oppressive child-labor age. The Secretary shall provide by regulation or by order that the employment of employees between the ages of 14 and 16 years in occupations other than manufacturing and mining shall not be deemed to constitute oppressive child labor if and to the extent that the Secretary determines that such employment is confined to periods which will not interfere with their schooling and to conditions which will not interfere with their health and well-being.

"(m) 'Wage' paid to any employee includes tips received by such employee for which records are kept by the employer in accordance with regulations of the Secretary, and includes the reasonable cost, as determined by the Secretary, to the employer of furnishing such employee with board, lodging, or other facilities, if such board, lodging, or other facilities are customarily furnished by such employer to his employees: Provided, That the cost of board, lodging, or other facilities shall not be included in the wage paid to any employee if the furnishing of such facilities is an incident of and necessary to his employment and such facilities are practicably available only from the employer.

"ADMINISTRATION

"SEC. 4. (a) The provisions of this act shall be administered by the Secretary of Labor (in this act referred to as the "Secretary") and, subject to his direction and control by such officers and agencies of the Department of Labor as the Secretary may designate. The Wage and Hour Division created by the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 is hereby continued in the Department of Labor as the Bureau of Wages and Hours. The Bureau shall be administered under the direction and control of the Secretary by an Administrator, to be known as the Administrator of Wages and Hours, who shall be appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The Administrator of the Wage and Hour Division under the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 shall be the Administrator of Wages and Hours under this act unless and until a successor is appointed pursuant to this section. The Administrator of Wages and Hours shall receive compensation at the rate of $15,000 a year.

"(b) The Secretary may, subject to the civil-service laws, appoint such employees as he deems necessary to carry out his functions and duties under this act and shall fix their compensation in accordance with the Classification Act of 1923, as amended. The Secretary may establish and utilize such regional, local, or other agencies, and utilize such voluntary and uncompensated services, as may from time to time be needed. Attorneys appointed by the Secretary may appear for and represent the Secretary in any litigation, but all such litigation shall be subject to the direction and control of the Attorney General. In the appointment, selection, classification, and promotion of officers and employees of the Department of Labor for the administration of this act, no political test or qualification shall be permitted or given consideration, but all such appointments and promotions shall be given and made on the basis of merit and efficiency.

"(c) The Secretary shall have power to make, issue, amend, and rescind such regulations and orders as are necessary or appropriate to carry out any of the provisions of this act, to prevent the circumvention or evasion thereof, and to safeguard the minimum wage rates, the maximum hours, and the child-labor provisions thereof. The provisions of section 10 of the Portal-to-Portal Act of 1947 shall apply with respect to any such regulation or order.

"(d) The Secretary or his duly authorized representative may exercise any or all of his powers under this act in any place.

"(e) The Secretary shall submit annually in January a report to the Congress covering his activities for the preceding year and including such information, data, and recommendations for further legislation in connection with the matters covered by this act as he may find advisable.

"INDUSTRY COMMITTEES

"SEC. 5. (a) (1) The Secretary shall as soon as practicable appoint an industry committee for each industry engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce, such committee to recommend the minimum rate or rates of wages to be paid under section 6 to employees in such industry. In determining the minimum rate or rates of wages to be paid, and in determining classifications, such industry committees and the Secretary shall be subject to the provisions of section 8.

"(2) No industry committee appointed under paragraph (1) of this subsection shall have any power to recommend the minimum rate or rates of wages to be paid under section 6 to any employees in Puerto Rico or in the Virgin Islands. The Secretary shall as soon as practicable appoint a special industry committee to recommend the minimum rate or rates of wages to be paid under section 6 to all employees in Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands, or in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce, or the Secretary may appoint separate industry committees to recommend the minimum rate or rates of wages to be paid under section 6 to employees therein engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce in particular industries. An industry committee appointed under this paragraph shall be composed of residents of such island or islands where the employees with respect to whom such committee was appointed are employed and residents of the United States outside of Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. In determining the minimum rate or rates of wages to be paid, and in determining classifications, such industry committees and the Secretary shall be subject to the provisions of section 8; and no such committee shall recommend, nor shall the Secretary approve, a minimum wage rate which will give any industry in Puerto Rico or in the Virgin Islands a competitive advantage over any industry in the United States outside of Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

"(b) An industry committee shall be appointed by the Secretary without regard to any other provisions of law regarding the appointment and compensation of employees of the United States. It shall include a number of disinterested persons representing the public, one of whom the Secretary shall designate as chairman, a like number of persons representing employees in the industry, and a like number representing employers in the industry. In the appointment of the persons representing each group, the Secretary shall give due regard to the geographical regions in which the industry is carried on.

"(c) Two-thirds of the members of an industry committee shall constitute a quorum, and the decision of the committee shall require a vote of not less than a majority of all its members. Members of an industry committee shall receive as compensation for their services a reasonable per diem, which the Secretary shall by rules and regulations prescribe, for each day actually spent in the work of the committee, and shall in addition be reimbursed for their necessary traveling and other expenses. The Secretary shall furnish the committee with adequate legal, stenographic, clerical, and other assistance, and shall by rules and regulations prescribe the procedure to be followed by the committee.

"(d) The Secretary shall submit to an industry committee from time to time such data as he may have available on the matters referred to it, and shall cause to be brought before it in connection with such matters any witnesses whom he deems material. An industry committee may summon other witnesses or call upon the Secretary to furnish additional information to aid it in its deliberations.

"MINIMUM WAGES

"SEC. 6. (a) Except as otherwise provided in this act, every employer shall pay to each of his employees who is engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce wages at the following rates—

"(1) not less than 75 cents an hour, or the rate prescribed in the applicable order of the Secretary issued under section 8, whichever is lower;

"(2) if such employee is a home worker in Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands, not less than the minimum piece rate prescribed by regulation or order; or, if no such minimum piece rate is in effect, any piece rate adopted by such employer which shall yield, to the proportion or class of employees prescribed by regulation or order, not less than the applicable minimum hourly wage rate. Such minimum piece rates or employer piece rates shall be commensurate with, and shall be paid in lieu of, the minimum hourly wage rate applicable under the provisions of this section. The Secretary, or his authorized representative, shall have power to make such regulations or orders as are necessary or appropriate to carry out any of the provisions of this paragraph, including the power without limiting the generality of the foregoing, to define any operation or occupation which is performed by such homework employees in Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands; to establish minimum piece rates for any operation or occupation so defined; to prescribe the method and procedure for ascertaining and promulgating minimum piece rates; to prescribe standards for employer piece rates, including the proportion or class of employees who shall receive not less than the minimum hourly wage rate; to define the term 'home worker'; and to prescribe the conditions under which employers, agents, contractors, and subcontractors shall cause goods to be produced by home workers.

"(b) The provisions of paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of this section shall be superseded in the case of any employee in Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce only for so long as and insofar as such employee is covered by a wage order heretofore or hereafter issued pursuant to the recommendations of a special industry committee appointed pursuant to section 5,

"MAXIMUM HOURS

"SEC. 7. (a) Except as otherwise provided in this act, no employer shall employ any of his employees who is engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce for a workweek longer than 40 hours, unless such employee receives compensation for his employment in excess of the hours above specified at a rate not less than one and one-half times the regular rate at which he is employed.

"(b) No employer shall be deemed to have violated subsection (a) by employing any employee for a workweek in excess of that specified in such subsection without paying the compensation for overtime employment prescribed therein if such employee receives compensation for employment in excess of 10 hours in any workday, or for employment in excess of 50 hours in any workweek, as the case may be, at a rate not less than one and one-half times the regular rate at which he is employed, and if such employee is so employed—

"(1) in pursuance of an agreement made as a result of collective bargaining by representatives of employees certified as bona fide by the National Labor Relations Board, which provides that no employee shall be employed more than 1,040 hours during any period of 26 consecutive weeks, or

"(2) in pursuance of an agreement, made as a result of collective bargaining by representatives of employees certified as bona fide by the National Labor Relations Board, which provides that during a specified period of 52 consecutive weeks the employee shall be employed not more than 2,240 hours and shall be guaranteed not less than 1,840 hours (or not less than 46 weeks at the normal number of hours worked per week, but not less than 30 hours per week) and not more than 2,080 hours of employment for which he shall receive compensation for all hours guaranteed or worked at rates not less than those applicable under the agreement to the work performed and for all hours in excess of the guarantee which are also in excess of 40 hours in the workweek or 2,080 in such period at rates not less than one and one-half times the regular rate at which he is employed, or

"(3) for a period or periods of not more than 14 workweeks in the aggregate in the calendar year (a) in any industry found by the Secretary to be of a seasonal nature, or (b) in any other industry engaged in the handling or packing or storing or preparing or in the first processing or canning of agricultural or horticultural commodities in their raw or natural state or of fish or other aquatic form of animal or vegetable life or in the processing of cottonseed or the ginning or compressing of cotton, or in the slaughtering and dressing of poultry or in the making of dairy products, if such industry is found by the Secretary to be characterized by marked annually recurring seasonal peaks of operation: Provided, That when the Secretary finds that in an industry engaged in the handling or packing or storing or preparing, or in the first processing or canning of fresh fruits and vegetables an additional number of weeks of exemption are required to prevent the spoilage of such perishable fresh fruits and vegetables, he is authorized to extend the exemption for additional weeks not to exceed a total of six.
